Allegations-

Description of Women

Hindu texts’ description of Women is an insult to all women. It insults women in the following way,

Mahabharata 13.40 “Bhishma said, ‘It is even so as thou sayest, O thou of mighty arms. There is nothing untrue in all this that thou sayest, O thou of Kuru’s race, on the subject of women. In this connection I shall recite to thee the old history of how in days of yore the high-souled Vipula had succeeded in restraining women within the bounds laid down for them. I shall also tell thee, O king, how women were created by the Grandsire Brahman and the object for which they were created by Him. There is no creature more sinful, O son, than women. Woman is a blazing fire. She is the illusion, O king, that the Daitya Maya created. She is the sharp edge of the razor. She is poison. She is a snake. She is fire. She is, verily, all these united together. It has been heard by us that all persons of the human race are characterised by righteousness, and that they, in course of natural progress and improvement, attain to the status of deities. This circumstance alarmed the deities. They, therefore, O chastiser of foes, assembled together and repaired to the presence of the Grandsire. Informing Him of what was in their minds, they stood silent in his presence, with downcast eyes. The puissant Grand sire having ascertained what was in the hearts of the deities, created women, with the aid of an Atharvan rite. In a former creation, O son of Kunti, women were all virtuous. Those, however, that sprang from this creation by Brahman with the aid of an illusion became sinful. The grandsire bestowed upon them the desire of enjoyment, all kinds of carnal pleasure. Tempted by the desire of enjoyment, they began to pursue persons of the other sex. The puissant lord of the deities created Wrath as the companion of Lust. Persons of the male sex, yielding to the power of Lust and Wrath, sought the companionship of women. Women have no especial acts prescribed for them. Even this is the ordinance that was laid down. The Sruti declares that women are endued with senses the most powerful, that they have no scriptures to follow, and that they are living lies.”

Srimad Bhagavatam 9.14.36-38 "Urvasi said: My dear King, you are a man, a hero. Don't be impatient and give up your life. Be sober and don't allow the senses to overcome you like foxes. Don't let the foxes eat you. In other words, you should not be controlled by your senses. Rather, you should know that the heart of a woman is like that of a fox. There is no use making friendship with women. Women as a class are merciless and cunning. They cannot tolerate even a slight offense. For their own pleasure they can do anything irreligious, and therefore they do not fear killing even a faithful husband or brother. Women are very easily seduced by men…"

The description of women given by another Apsara to a Sage named Narada is also an insult, I won't highlight those ugly words,

Shiva Purana, UmaSamhita 5.24.16-36 "There is none more sinning and more sinful than women. Women are at the root of all sins…Women usually do not observe the limitations of conventional decency. If at all they stand by them with their husbands it is because no man makes advances to them or because they are afraid of their husbands…They carry on their dalliances with any man ugly or beautiful…Even women of noble families aspire for the life of lascivious women who in their prime of youth adorned with lovable ornaments and beautiful wearing garments move about frivolously…Women become desperate when they do not get men…women are not satiated with the number of men they cohabit with. O excellent sage, there is another secret of all women that immediately on seeing a man their vaginal passage begins to exude slimy secretions. On seeing a man fresh and clean from his bath with his body perfumed with sweet scents, the vaginal passage of women begins to exude like water dripping from a leather bag…on hearing her words Narada was satisfied in his mind. Considering it to be the truth." Tr. Board of Scholars, Edited by Jagdish Lal Shastri

The entire chapter 24 of Shiva Purana is dedicated in insulting women. Had this been the personal views of Apsara there wouldn't be an entire chapter for this and even Sage Narada considered it to be truth and was satisfied by her words.

Mahabharata 5.39.67 "The fruits of the Vedas are ceremonies performed before the (homa) fire; the fruits of an acquaintance with the scriptures are goodness of disposition and conduct. The fruits of women are the pleasures of intercourse and offspring." Tr. K.M. Ganguli

Refutation-

Mahabharat 13.40.8-9 clarifies that in the beginning (in the previous sarga) all woman were righteous (Sadhvis) and that ferocious woman (Krityas) were created by Prajapati only later (new sarga) . In The Next sloka 10 its clarified that only Krityas are the ones who delude and disturb men and are filled with lust and who have been condemned in Mahabharat 13.40 and not all woman

कुन्तीनन्दन ! सृष्टिके प्रारम्भमें यहाँ सब स्त्रियाँ पतिव्रता ही थीं। कृत्यारूप दुष्ट स्त्रियाँ तो प्रजापतिकी इस नूतन सृष्टिसे ही उत्पन्न हुई हैं। प्रजापतिने उन्हें उनकी इच्छाके अनुसार कामभाव प्रदान किया ।। ८-९ ।।

वे मतवाली युवतियाँ कामलोलुप होकर पुरुषोंको सदा बाधा देती रहती हैं। देवेश्वर भगवान् ब्रह्माने कामकी सहायताके लिये क्रोधको उत्पन्न किया। इन्हीं काम और क्रोधके वशीभूत होकर स्त्री और पुरुषरूप सारी प्रजा परस्पर आसक्त होती है १०

"O son of Kunti!
At the beginning of creation, all women here were chaste and devoted to their husbands.
The wicked women, in the form of Krityas (harmful, destructive beings), were produced only later by Prajāpati from this newly created world.
Prajāpati granted them, according to their own desire, the passion of lust. (Verses 8–9)

Those intoxicated young women, filled with lust, always keep obstructing and disturbing men.
For the sake of aiding desire (Kāma), the Lord of the gods, Lord Brahmā, created Anger (Krodha).
Under the sway of these two—desire and anger—the whole creation, in the form of men and women, becomes attached to one another." (Verse 10)

पूर्वसर्गे तु कौन्तेय साध्व्यो नार्य इहाभवन् ।। ८ ।।
असाध्व्यस्तु समुत्पन्नाः कृत्याः सर्गात् प्रजापतेः ।
ताभ्यः कामान् यथाकामं प्रादाद्धि स पितामहः ।। ९ ।।
कुन्तीनन्दन! सृष्टिके प्रारम्भमें यहाँ सब स्त्रियाँ पतिव्रता ही थीं। कृत्यारूप दुष्ट स्त्रियाँ तो प्रजापतिकी इस नूतन सृष्टिसे ही उत्पन्न हुई हैं। प्रजापतिने उन्हें उनकी इच्छाके अनुसार कामभाव प्रदान किया ।। ८-९ ।।
ताः कामलुब्धाः प्रमदाः प्रबाधन्ते नरान् सदा ।

क्रोधं कामस्य देवेशः सहायं चासृजत् प्रभुः ।। १० ।।
असज्जन्त प्रजाः सर्वाः कामक्रोधवशं गताः ।
वे मतवाली युवतियाँ कामलोलुप होकर पुरुषोंको सदा बाधा देती रहती हैं। देवेश्वर भगवान् ब्रह्माने कामकी सहायताके लिये क्रोधको उत्पन्न किया। इन्हीं काम और क्रोधके वशीभूत होकर स्त्री और पुरुषरूप सारी प्रजा परस्पर आसक्त होती है ।। १०½ ।।

In Mahabharat Anushasan Parva Adhyay 11 its told that Lakshmi resides in the righteous woman

जो स्त्रियाँ सत्यवादिनी और अपनी सौम्य वेश-भूषाके कारण देखनेमें प्रिय होती हैं, जो सौभाग्यशालिनी, सद्गुणवती, पतिव्रता एवं कल्याणमय आचार-विचारवाली होती हैं तथा जो सदा वस्त्राभूषणोंसे विभूषित रहती हैं, ऐसी स्त्रियोंमें मैं सदा निवास करती हूँ ।। १३

"In those women who are truthful in speech, whose gentle attire and appearance make them pleasant to behold;
who are fortunate, endowed with noble qualities, devoted to their husbands, and whose conduct and thoughts are auspicious; and who are always adorned with garments and ornaments – in such women I ever abide." (Verse 13)

सत्यासु नित्यं प्रियदर्शनासु
सौभाग्ययुक्तासु गुणान्वितासु ।। १३ ।।
वसामि नारीषु पतिव्रतासु
कल्याणशीलासु विभूषितासु ।
जो स्त्रियाँ सत्यवादिनी और अपनी सौम्य वेश-भूषाके कारण देखनेमें प्रिय होती हैं, जो सौभाग्यशालिनी, सद्गुणवती, पतिव्रता एवं कल्याणमय आचार-विचारवाली होती हैं तथा जो सदा वस्त्राभूषणोंसे विभूषित रहती हैं, ऐसी स्त्रियोंमें मैं सदा निवास करती हूँ ।। १३½ ।।

Mahabharta 13.43.19 -20 says that there are woman with both bad and Good Qualities

अतः कुन्तीनन्दन ! मैं तुमसे कहता हूँ कि तुम्हें स्त्रियोंकी सदा ही रक्षा करनी चाहिये। स्त्रियोंमें भली और बुरी दोनों बातें हमेशा देखी जाती हैं ।। १९ ।। राजन्! यदि स्त्रियाँ साध्वी एवं पतिव्रता हों तो बड़ी सौभाग्यशालिनी होती हैं। संसारमें उनका आदर होता है और वे सम्पूर्ण जगत्की माता समझी जाती हैं। इतना ही नहीं, वे अपने पातिव्रत्यके प्रभावसे वन और काननोंसहित इस सम्पूर्ण पृथ्वीको धारण करती हैं ।। किंतु दुराचारिणी असती स्त्रियाँ कुलका नाश करनेवाली होती हैं, उनके मनमें सदा पाप ही बसता है। नरेश्वर ! फिर ऐसी स्त्रियोंको उनके शरीरके साथ ही उत्पन्न हुए बुरे लक्षणोंसे पहचाना जा सकता है ।।

Therefore, O son of Kunti, I tell you: women must always be protected.
In women both good and bad qualities are always to be found. (19)

O King! If women are virtuous and devoted to their husbands, they become greatly fortunate.
They are honored in the world and regarded as the mothers of the entire creation.
Not only this—they, by the power of their chastity, support and uphold this entire earth together with its forests and groves.

But immoral, unchaste women bring ruin upon their family; sin always resides in their hearts.
O Lord of men! Such women can be recognized by the evil signs and marks that are born along with their very bodies."

तस्माद् ब्रवीमि पार्थ त्वां स्त्रियो रक्ष्याः सदैव च ।
उभयं दृश्यते तासु सततं साध्वसाधु च ।। १९ ।।
अतः कुन्तीनन्दन! मैं तुमसे कहता हूँ कि तुम्हें स्त्रियोंकी सदा ही रक्षा करनी चाहिये। स्त्रियोंमें भली और बुरी दोनों बातें हमेशा देखी जाती हैं ।। १९ ।।

Coming to Allegations on Srimad Bhagavatam 9.14.36-38

Interestingly, these words are spoken by a woman herself —Urvashi.
At that time, King Purūravas, overcome by desire for Urvashi, was unwilling to let her go.
In order to guide him onto the right path and free him from his infatuation, Urvashi spoke these words, pointing out the faults and dangers associated with attachment to women—herself included.
These statements, therefore, were not made as a general condemnation of women, but specifically as a means to dissuade Purūravas from his lust and attachment.

29 A. Let me befree! Leave me immediately! Take away your arm that clasps around me. He is too timid to leave me, and unning, and addicted to licentious sexual pleasure only."

30. Being pierced with these verbal shafts, and like an elephant pricked with goads, he caught hold of his sword and sallied forth in rage, in the dead of night, even though he was naked.

31. The Gandharvas let go the two rams, but flashed out light like lightning, when she caught a glimpse of her husband in a nude state, coming with the two rams (and thus left him).

32. Not finding his wife in the bed, Purūravas, the son of Ilā, became despondent. His heart being fixed on her, he was beside himself (with affliction). He ranged over the world (in search of her), like a mad man.

33. (In the course of his wanderings, one day) he happened to see her along with her five female companions with their countenances blooming with delight, on the bank of the Sarasvati, in Kuruksetra. Purūravas addressed her the following (persuasive) charming words (recorded in the Sūkta, RV 10.95 which is adapted here as follows):

34. "Oh my beloved wife! Do stop awhile, wait. Oh cruelhearted one! It does not behove you to abandon me without giving me pleasure of your company to my satisfaction (or unsated as I am of the pleasures of your company, you ought not to relegate me to terrible misery). Let us (at least) have some (heart to heart) talk.[1]

35. If this beautiful body of mine which has been drawn away to such a far off distance by you, be not the recipient of your favours, it will fall down dead here only

36. and wolves and vultures will prey upon it, Oh my queen (Oh goddess).

37. Urvaśi replied:

38. Do not die. You are a man (as such you must be courageous). Let not these wolves (in the form of passionately craving senses) devour you today (Control your senses). The heart of women like the heart of wolves is friendly to none.1

39. Women are merciless, cruel, jealous and mind no risk for the object of their love. Even for a trifling matter, they will kill their trustful husband or unsuspecting brother.

40. After inspiring confidence in gullible persons (through deceitful behaviour), they snap asunder all friendly relations. The unchaste women, being wantonly wayward in behaviour, hunt (long) after a new lover (every now and then).

41. My lord, at the end of the year, you will stay with me for one night. You will have other children also, (in addition to the one I carry).

42. Noticing that the queen was pregnant, he returned to his capital. At the end of the year, he came back again to find Ürvaśī, as the mother of a hero.

43. Full of delight to have her again, he spent that night with her. Then finding him disheartened at the prospect of impending separation, Urvaśī advised him :

44. You propitiate these Gandharvas (by praise), and they will be pleased to give me unto you."

45. Being pleased with his laudatory prayer, the Gandharvas donated him a fire-vase (for fire-worship which will lead him to the region of Orvaśī) Oh King. (Being blinded with passion) he believed that fire-vessel to be (the means of securing) Ürvaśī, and roved in the forest with it, only to discover it to be a vase for carrying fire, and not Ürvaśī.

Coming to his allegations on Shiva Purana Uma Samhita chapter 24

The context of Shiva Purana Uma Samhita chapter 24 is vairagya/ Renunciation . The objective of the katha is to achieve dispassion towards woman . Dispassion occurs only by perceiving futility of that particular thing . Therefore a Woman has been criticized here . We can understand this by another way –

Suppose your mother wants to rid you of your smartphone ad-diction. She will tell you lots of things as to how these devices are harmful, cause distractions in studies, may cause opthalomological disorders etc. But do they not know the benefits of smartphone usage? Yes they do! But they intentionally don't mention those so as to detatch you from smartphones. Such similar thing can be seen in our shaastras when only specific negatives of something/someone are highlighted to make the listener detach oneself from them. This doesn't mean that those negativities are universal in nature and are seen in everything they speak of. This is also the case in Nāri Ninda because the description mentioned by them only qualify a certain class of women.

सनत्कुमार बोले- हे विप्र ! सुनिये, मैं स्त्रियोंके स्वभावका यथार्थरूपमें वर्णन कर रहा हूँ, जिसके सुनने मात्रसे उत्तम वैराग्य हो जाता है॥ २॥
हे मुने ! क्षुद्रचित्तवाली स्त्रियाँ सदा दोषोंकी जड़ होती हैं। इसलिये सावधान मुमुक्षुओंको उनमें आसक्ति नहीं करनी चाहिये ॥ ३॥
इस विषयमें व्यभिचारिणी पंचचूडाके साथ नारदजीके संवादरूप इस प्राचीन इतिहासको लोग उदाहृत करते हैं। पूर्वकालमें सम्पूर्ण लोकोंमें विचरण करते हुए बुद्धिमान् देवर्षि नारदने सुन्दरी बाला पंचचूडा नामक अप्सराको देखा ॥ ४-५॥

Vyāsa said – O sage! If you are pleased with me, then please briefly tell me about the evil tendency in women that is referred to as Pañcachūḍā. ॥1॥

Sanatkumāra said – O Brāhmaṇa! Listen, I shall describe to you the true nature of women, merely hearing which produces supreme detachment. ॥2॥

O sage! Women of petty minds are always the root of faults. Therefore, vigilant seekers of liberation should not develop attachment to them. ॥3॥

On this subject, people narrate an ancient story in the form
f a dialogue between the unchaste woman Pañcachūḍā and Nārada. In former times, while traversing all the worlds, the wise divine sage Nārada beheld a beautiful young maiden named Pañcachūḍā, an Apsarā. ॥4–5॥

PROHIBITION AND PUNISHMENT FOR RAPE AND ADULTERY AND LUSTFUL ACTIVITIES AND ALL OTHER SUCH ACTIVITIES IN ANY FORM AS PER SANATAN DHARMA

In Sanātana Dharma, rape, adultery, and all other forms of lustful acts or lust-driven thoughts are unequivocally forbidden and regarded as grievous transgressions, deserving of strict condemnation and punishment in every circumstance.

Matsya Purana chapter 227 slokas 124-126 says

जो व्यक्ति किसी कुमारी
कन्याके साथ बलात्कार करता है, वह तुरंत ही मार डालने योग्य है। यदि कोई किसी कामुकी कुमारी कन्याके साथ व्यभिचार करता है तो उसे दो सौ पणका दण्ड देना चाहिये और वहाँ जो संरक्षणकर्ता पुरुष है, उसे भी यही दण्ड देना चाहिये ॥ १२४-१२५ ॥
जो ऐसे व्यभिचारोंको सम्भव बनानेमें अवकाश देता है, उसे परायी स्त्रीके साथ व्यभिचार करनेवालेके समान ही दण्ड देना चाहिये। जो मनुष्य दूसरेकी स्त्रीके साथ बलात्कार करता है, उसे प्राणदण्ड देना चाहिये और इसमें उस स्त्रीका कोई भी अपराध नहीं मानना चाहिये

“A man who commits rape on an unmarried maiden (kumārī kanyā) deserves to be put to death immediately.
If anyone has illicit intercourse with a lustful (consenting but unprotected) maiden, he should be fined two hundred paṇas, and the guardian or protector who failed to safeguard her should be punished with the same fine.
Whoever allows such adulterous acts to happen through negligence shall be punished in the same way as the one who committed adultery with another man's wife.

A man who rapes another man's wife must be punished with the death penalty, and in this case, the woman herself is not to be considered guilty in any way."

The wise made seven boundaries, a man going beyond even one of them becomes distressed. They are theft, adultery, killing of a learned man, abortion, drinking, habitual addiction to wickedness, and false accusation of heinous crime.[5]

Rig Veda 10/5/6 says that anyone who commits any of the seven Moral Restraints (Sapta Maryada) becomes a Big Sinner

मेधावियों ने सात मर्यादाओं को छोड दिया है. इन कार्यों में से एक को करने वाला भी पाप को प्राप्त करता है. मनुष्यों को पाप से रोकने वाले अग्नि समीपवर्ती मानवलोक में, सूर्यकिरणों के विचरने के स्थान में एवं जलों में रहते हैं

The wise have abandoned the seven moral restraints. Even one who commits any one of these actions incurs sin. Those who restrain humans from sin dwell near the sacred fire, in the realm of humans close to it, in the regions where the sun's rays roam, and in the waters.

Sāyaṇācārya, in his commentary on Ṛgveda 10.5.6, has clearly explained that the 'seven maryādās' (moral restraints) are not injunctions meant to be practiced or indulged in, but rather prohibitions—boundaries never to be crossed. These maryādās represent sinful acts that the seers strongly condemned, and Sāyaṇa explicitly interprets them as practices that are to be rejected and renounced, not observed."

"The wise seers, the intelligent Ṛṣis, have declared seven restraints (moral boundaries): desires born of lust, wrath born of anger, indulgence in intoxicating drink, gambling, women (i.e., illicit relations), hunting, punishment (i.e., violence/oppression), harsh speech, and other forms of abuse—these are called the seven restraints (मर्यादाः).

Or alternatively, (the seven restraints are explained as): theft, adultery with the teacher's wife (गुरुतल्पारोहण), killing of a Brāhmaṇa, drinking liquor, repeatedly engaging in wicked deeds, and false undertakings—these are the sins mentioned in the Nirukta (6.27).

These restraints (मर्यादाः) have been firmly established. They (the wise) cut them off, meaning: they (the virtuous) gave them up, abandoned them. Of these restraints, if even one alone is transgressed by a man, he becomes sinful. Whoever commits such an act is indeed sinful.

Moreover, the pillar (स्कम्भः), the upholder of the life of that man, is Agni, who restrains (as Nirodhaka). In the blue place of the sky, near the abode of the paths, in the region of the sun, at the point of release of its rays, in the midst of the atmosphere, in the supporting waters—there Agni abides in the form of lightning. By this (it is shown) that Agni ervades the three worlds."

Katha Upanishad 1.2.24 Geeta Press Gorakhpur-

जो पापकर्मोंसे निवृत्त नहीं हुआ है, जिसकी इन्द्रियाँ शान्त नहीं हैं और जिसका चित्त असमाहित या अशान्त है वह इसे आत्मज्ञानद्वारा प्राप्त नहीं कर सकता है॥ २४॥

“One who has not renounced sinful actions, whose senses are not tranquil, and whose mind is not composed or peaceful—such a person cannot attain this (Self-realization) through knowledge of the Self.” (Verse 24)

Sankara Bhasya-

जो दुश्शील – प्रतिविद्ध कर्म यानी श्रुति – स्मृतिसे अविहित पापकर्मसे अविरत – अनुप्रत है वह नहीं, जो इन्द्रियोंकी चंचलताके कारण अशान्त यानी उपरतिस्थ है वह भी नहीं, जो असमाहित अर्थात् जिसका चित्त एकाग्र नहीं है – जो विक्षिप्तचित्त है वह भी नहीं, तथा समाहितचित्त होनेपर भी उस एकाग्रताके फलका इच्छुक होनेके कारण जो अशान्तचित्त है – जिसका चित्त निरन्तर व्याप्त करता रहता है वह पुरुष भी इस प्रस्तुत आत्माको केवल आत्मज्ञानद्वारा नहीं प्राप्त कर सकता। अतः जो पापकर्म और इन्द्रियोंकी चंचलता हटाकर हुआ तथा समाहितचित्त होकर भी उस समाहितचित्तताके फलकी उपेक्षाकरके जो उपरतिस्थ है वह आत्मज्ञान साधक ही ब्रह्मविद्या उपयुक्त आत्माको प्राप्त कर सकता है॥ २४॥

One who is immoral—engaged in sinful actions not prescribed by the scriptures (Shruti and Smriti)—cannot attain the Self. Nor can one who is restless due to sensory distractions. Even one whose mind is scattered and lacks concentration cannot attain it. Moreover, even if the mind is concentrated, if the person desires the fruits of that concentration, and the mind remains constantly occupied, such a person too cannot attain the Self through mere knowledge. Therefore, only the seeker who has renounced sinful actions and sensory distractions, whose mind is concentrated yet detached from the fruits of concentration, and who is truly tranquil—such a person alone can attain the Self suitable for Brahmavidya (knowledge of Brahman). ॥ 24॥

यह पृथ्वी ब्रह्मचारी की पहली समिधा है. द्युलोक अर्थात् स्वर्ग ब्रह्मचारी की दूसरी समिधा है. ब्रह्मचारी स्वर्ग और पृथ्वी के मध्य अर्थात् अंतरिक्ष को अग्नि में डाली गई समिधा के द्वारा पूर्ण करता है. इस प्रकार ब्रह्मचारी समिधा, मेखला, श्रम और तप के द्वारा लोकों को पूर्ण करता है अर्थात् भर देता है. (४)

"This Earth is the Brahmachārī's first sacrificial fuel-stick (samidhā). The heavenly realm (Dyuloka) is his second. The Brahmachārī completes the space between heaven and Earth—that is, the atmosphere—through the offering of the samidhā into the sacred fire. In this way, the Brahmachārī fills and sustains the worlds through his offerings, girdle (mekhalā), labor (śrama), and austerity (tapas)."

Abstaining from illicit sexual conduct, practicing celibacy, living a life free from sin, and maintaining control over the senses are all integral aspects of Brahmacharya, diligently observed by every true Brahmachārī.

Mahabharat Ashwamedhika Parva Adhaya 46 sloka 25 Geeta Press Gorakhpur on Brahmacharya

(A Brahmachari) Control his senses, behave friendly with everyone, be forgiving and keep a beard, moustache and hair on the head. Perform Agnihotra on time and study the Vedas and follow the true religion.

Mahabharat Ashwamedhika Parva Adhaya 46 sloka 29-31 on Brahmacharya

Non-violence, celibacy, truth, simplicity, absence of anger, renunciation of fault-finding, restraint of the senses and not to gossip- these eight vows should always be observed with caution. Keep the senses under control He should always behave free from sin, deceit and crookedness. One should take the food that is automatically obtained daily, but one should not have a desire for it either

परस्त्रीसे तो वाणीसे क्या, मनसे भी प्रसंग न करे, क्योंकि उनसे मैथुन करनेवालोंको अस्थि-बन्धन भी नहीं होता [अर्थात् उन्हें अस्थिशून्य कीटादि होना पड़ता है] ॥ १२५ ॥

Condemnation of relations with another's wife:
"There is no other act in this world that shortens a man's lifespan as much as associating with another man's wife.
Therefore, it must always be completely avoided."
(Verse 134)

परस्त्री-निन्दा—

इसीप्रकार जो व्यक्ति अपनी स्त्री को छोड़कर परस्त्री (वेश्यादि) गमन करे, तो उस पापी को अग्नि से तप्त लोहे के पलङ्ग पर लिटाकर सबके समक्ष जला डाले। साथ ही आसपास खड़े हुए लोग उस पर जलती हुई लकड़ियां फेंकें, जिससे वह पापी पूर्णरूप से भस्म हो जाए ।। ३७२ ।।

Verse 371 (Summary): A woman who, out of pride in her caste or beauty, abandons her husband and commits adultery is to be punished by the king. The punishment prescribed is brutal: she should be torn apart by dogs in a public place before many witnesses.

Verse 372 (Summary): Similarly, a man who abandons his wife and engages in sexual relations with another woman (such as a prostitute) is to be laid on a bed of red-hot iron and burned alive in front of others. Onlookers are instructed to throw burning wood upon him until he is completely reduced to ashes.

Anyone who has sex with a man or woman other than own husband or wife, suffers the pāpa of aborting the embryo.

तथा इस भूमण्डलमें जो पुरुष कुमारी ब्रह्मचारिणी तथा पतिव्रता प्यारी स्त्रीको तजकर परायी नारीसे मिलेगा उसके भी वैसा ही पाप लगेगा ।। १८ ।।

"O noble one! We have heard that from that time onward, this rule was firmly established in human society;
it does not apply to other living beings."

Śvetaketu established this rule:
From today, any woman who abandons her husband and commits adultery

will incur the grievous sin equivalent to the destruction of a fetus (embryo).”

And likewise, in this world, any man who, forsaking a maiden observing brahmacharya (celibacy) or a faithful, devoted wife, engages with another’s wife, will incur the same sin.”

In Mahabharat 13/141/25-26 Maheshwar Shiva himself told to avoid the contact of other men wives as a sign of Dharma

Shri Maheshwara (Lord Shiva) said –
O Devi! Not causing harm to any living being, speaking the truth, showing compassion to all creatures, controlling the mind and senses, and giving charity according to one’s capacity — these are the noble duties of a householder (Grihastha Ashrama). (Verse 25)

Maintaining these duties of household life —
Staying away from relations with another’s wife, protecting entrusted goods and the honor of women, not taking anything without giving in return, and renouncing meat and alcohol — these are five types (aspects) of Dharma that lead to happiness.
Each of these Dharmic principles has many branches.
Those who consider Dharma to be supreme should certainly follow this virtuous and meritorious path.

   In the previous stanza a true seeker is advised to give up all covetousness for the wealth of the world, and here he is advised to give up lusty passions for women. From the days of the Upanishads to our own times, we find in all masters this constant warning against wealth (kaanchana) and woman (kaaminee). But no insult is meant to either; this is a state-ment of a scientific truth. All intelligent living creatures have these two irresistible urges, 'to possess more' (wealth) and 'to enjoy' (woman).

Commentary by Swami Chinmayananda

Biologically, nature has made man and woman, with a natural affinity for the charms of the opposite sex. This natural urge is to be controlled, disciplined, purified, sub-limated. An intelligent intellect alone can achieve this. An animal cannot; to act according to its instincts and impulses is but its privilege. The glory of man is that he can, by his rational intellect, curb and control the flow of his instincts for carnal pleasures and redivert them, thus ultimately sublimat-ing himself into something nobler and more divine.

O King, on festival days, union with a woman causes loss of wealth; if done during the daytime, it brings sin; if upon the bare ground, it brings disease; and if in a body of water, it results in misfortune.

With another man's wife, one should not engage—not even in speech, nor in thought—for those who commit intercourse with her are not even granted bone-formation [meaning, in rebirth they become boneless creatures such as worms, etc.].

Attachment to another man's wife is a source of fear in both this world and the next; in this life, it shortens one's lifespan, and upon death, one goes to hell.

Knowing this, a wise man should unite only with his own wife, free from the above-mentioned faults, during her season of fertility; and if she especially desires it, he may do so even outside her season.

Scriptural knowledge; intelligence endowed with eight qualities; fortitude (absence of agitation); skill (absence of laziness); boldness (absence of fear or hesitation in speaking or acting in an assembly); retentiveness (not forgetting what has been heard or learned); enthusiasm (qualities like valor); eloquence (ability to expound and speak well); firmness (capacity to endure hardships in times of calamity); influence (commanding authority); purity (purity of conduct and thought, proven through various tests); friendliness (the quality of drawing others toward oneself); generosity (giving charity to a worthy recipient); truthfulness (keeping one's word); gratitude (never forgetting a favor); noble lineage; good character; and self-control (restraint of the senses and endurance of hardship) – these are the virtues that serve as the causes of prosperity. (4–5)

One should control others with the goad of knowledge. Lust (kāma), anger (krodha), greed (lobha), delight (harṣa), pride (māna), and arrogance (mada) – these are called the sixfold enemies (ṣaḍ-varga). A king should completely renounce them. When all these are abandoned, he becomes happy. (6–7)

A king, endowed with the virtue of humility, should deliberate upon the four sciences – Ānvīkṣikī (the science of the self and logic), the triple Veda (Vedic knowledge), Vārttā (agriculture, commerce, and cattle-rearing), and Daṇḍanīti (science of governance and law enforcement) – together with learned scholars and capable men who practice these sciences according to their respective fields (so that they are properly propagated and spread among the people). From Ānvīkṣikī comes knowledge of the self and understanding of the true nature of things. Knowledge of righteousness (dharma) and unrighteousness (adharma) rests upon the triple Veda. Wealth and misfortune depend upon the proper use of Vārttā. Justice and injustice are based upon the proper or improper application of Daṇḍanīti. (8–9)

Sūta said — Accepting the request of Kali Yuga, King Parīkṣit granted him four places to reside: gambling, intoxication, illicit relations with women, and violence. In these places dwell, respectively — falsehood, intoxication, attachment, and cruelty. (38)

He (Kali) asked for more places. Then the capable Parīkṣit granted him one more place — gold (wealth). Thus, Kali Yuga came to have five abodes: falsehood, intoxication, lust, enmity, and passion (rajo-guṇa). (39)

Abiding by the command of Parīkṣit, Kali Yuga, the root cause of irreligion, took up residence in these five allotted places. (40)

Therefore, a person seeking self-welfare should never indulge in these five. Especially religious kings, leaders of the people, and spiritual preceptors who instruct in dharma must give them up with great care. (41)

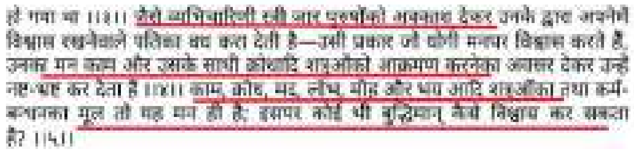
This mind itself is the root of enemies like lust, anger, pride, greed, delusion, and fear, as well as of the bondage of karma. How could any wise person ever place trust in it? (5)



Srimad Bhagvatam Skanda 6 Adhaya 1 Geeta Press Gorakhpur

O perfected beings! In this body, the jīva uses the five organs of action (karmendriyas) to perform activities such as taking, giving, moving, and walking. With the five organs of knowledge (jñānendriyas) he experiences the five sense-objects such as form and taste. Along with the mind as the sixteenth factor, and himself as the seventeenth, he alone enjoys the subjects of the mind, the sense organs, and the organs of action. (50)

This subtle body (liṅga-śarīra), consisting of sixteen parts and the three guṇas such as sattva, is without beginning. It is this which casts the jīva repeatedly into the cycle of birth and death, causing him joy, sorrow, fear, and suffering. (51)

The jīva who, out of ignorance, does not conquer the six enemies — lust, anger, greed, delusion, pride, and envy — is forced, even against his will, to perform many actions according to his various desires. In that condition, he binds himself in the web of karma just like a silkworm entangles itself in its own cocoon, thus becoming a victim of delusion by his own doing. (52)

No embodied being can remain even for a moment without action. The natural guṇas of every creature compel him to act by force. (53)

According to the pious and sinful impressions (saṃskāras) from his past lives, the jīva obtains both gross and subtle bodies. His inherent and powerful desires sometimes make him assume a mother-like (female) form, and at other times a father-like (male) form. (54)

It is only through contact with material nature that the soul mistakenly identifies himself with a body of the opposite nature to his true self. This false identification is quickly removed by the worship of the Supreme Lord. (55)

Those who have not first conquered these six sense-organs, which are like robbers plundering all their wealth, yet think, "We have conquered all the ten directions," are fools. शास्त्रोंमें जितने भी नियमसम्बन्धी आदेश हैं, उनका एकमात्र तात्पर्य यही है कि काम, क्रोध, लोभ, मोह, मद और मत्सर- इन छः शत्रुओंपर विजय प्राप्त कर ली जाय अथवा पाँचों इन्द्रिय और मन- ये छः वशमें हो जायँ। ऐसा होनेपर भी यदि उन नियमोंके द्वारा भगवान्के ध्यान-चिन्तन आदिकी प्राप्ति नहीं होती, तो उन्हें केवल श्रम-ही-श्रम समझना चाहिये ।। २८ ।।

All the injunctions found in the scriptures have but one purpose — that one should conquer the six enemies: lust, anger, greed, delusion, pride, and envy; or, that the five enses and the mind — these six — should come under control. Even if this is achieved, yet if through those rules one does not attain meditation and contemplation on the Lord, then such observances should be regarded as nothing but labor wasted. (28)

(1) Medhātithiḥ's Commentary:

The essential message of the śāstra here is that one must make an effort to restrain the senses. The additional elaboration (arthavāda) supports this. In the context of scriptural duties such as sandhyā (daily rituals), restraint means refraining from indulging in forbidden sense-objects. It also includes avoiding excessive attachment even to objects not explicitly forbidden.

Hence, the prohibition here extends not just to forbidden objects but also to over-attachment to permitted ones. Sense objects are naturally attractive—they seem to steal the mind and draw it in. This leads to dependence. Those who remain unaffected by such allure are considered wise.

So, when the senses move freely among objects, if they are not particularly active or indulging, then those objects are rendered harmless. But if the senses are unrestrained, they will lead one astray—even if the objects themselves are not tempting.

Therefore, one must make effort to restrain the senses, just as a charioteer tries to control the horses, which are by nature restless. If left unchecked, they pull the chariot off-course. So too the senses must be made obedient."

(2) Sarvajña Nārāyaṇaḥ's Commentary:

जप्ये अवश्योपसंहार्यमङ्गंदर्शयति इन्द्रियाणामित्यादिना । अपहारिग्विन्द्रियावकर्ष-केषु यन्तेवेत्येकाग्रतार्थ दृष्टान्तः ॥ ८८ ॥

"This verse emphasizes that even during japa (recitation of sacred mantras), the senses must be restrained. It shows that sense-restraint is an essential auxiliary part of such spiritual practice.

The senses are described as apahāri — that is, 'stealers' or 'distracters'. They draw the mind away.

The analogy of the charioteer is used to illustrate the need for one-pointed concentration (ekāgratā) — just as a driver controls the horses, one must control the wandering senses."

(3) Kuṭukaḥ's Commentary:

इदानींसर्ववर्णानुष्ठेयंसकलपुरुषार्थोपयुक्तमिन्द्रियसंयममाह इन्द्रियाणामिति ।
इन्द्रियाणांविषये-प्वपहरणशीलेषु
वर्तमानानांक्षयित्वादिविषयदोषाञ्जानन्संयमेयत्नं कुर्यात्सारथिरिवर
भनियुक्तानामश्वानाम् ॥ ८८ ॥

Now the topic of sense-restraint, which is applicable to all classes of society (sarva-varṇa) and necessary for all goals of life (puruṣārthas), is taken up.

Even when the senses are engaged in contact with sense-objects, knowing their defects—like causing decay, delusion, and bondage—a wise person should strive to control them.

Like a charioteer controlling the horses yoked to a chariot, one must discipline the senses."

(4) Rāghavānandaḥ's Commentary:

अनुपसंव्हतेन्द्रियाणांजपोपिनफला येति तदर्थप्रत्याहारमाह । इन्द्रियाणामिति ।
अपहारिषुई-न्द्रियाणि स्वमवणंकर्तुशीलेषु यन्ताअश्वनियमनसारथिरिव
संयमनंकुर्यात् ॥ ८८ ॥

"If the senses are not restrained, even japa (repetition of sacred mantras) will bear no fruit.

This verse is meant to support that view by encouraging sense-withdrawal (pratyāhāra). The senses are said to be 'stealers' (apahāriṣu)—they have a tendency to pull the mind outward.

Just like a charioteer restrains horses from going wild, one must control the senses to prevent inner dissipation."

(5) Nandanaḥ's Commentary:

एवंतावद्ब्रह्मचारिणोवेदाध्ययनधर्माउक्ताः प्रसङ्गात्मणवव्या
दृतिसावित्रीमाहात्म्यंचोक्तं इदानीं तस्येन्द्रियसंयममाह इन्द्रियाणामिति । अपहारिष्विन्द्रियापहारिषु ॥ ८८ ॥

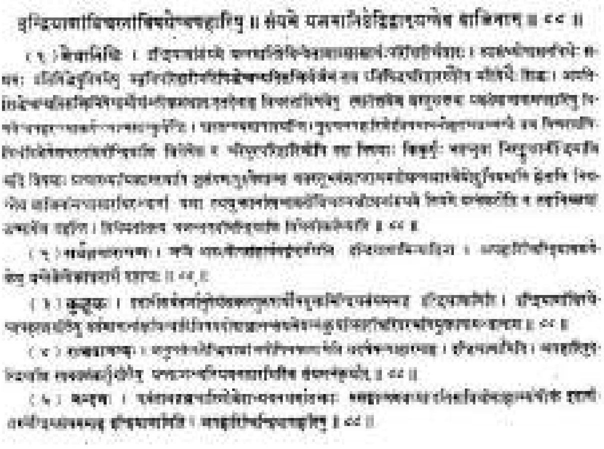
"After explaining the duties of a brahmacārī such as Vedic study and the glory of the Gāyatrī mantra, now the importance of sense-restraint is described.

'Apahāriṣu indriyeṣu' — the senses are like thieves that carry the self away. The mind must be guarded from them, just as a charioteer restrains his horses.



Gautama-Dharmasūtra, 3.9—'One who behaves like this keeps the senses under control attains the regions of Brahman.'

Gautama-Dharmasūtra, 11.4.—'Pure, with senses under control, equipped with fully qualified-aids.'

English Translation:

“Attachment (prasanga) here means an intense involvement with sense-objects. Through such attachment, one attains both visible (drishta) and invisible (adrishta) faults or negative consequences. There is no doubt about this.

However, after restraining those very senses (through discipline), one reaches perfection — namely, the complete fruition of Vedic (śrauta) and Smriti-based (smārta) duties. This includes attaining the ultimate goal (like moksha). Thus, control over the senses leads to complete success.”

(2) सर्वज्ञनारायणः (Sarvajña-Nārāyaṇaḥ):

Sanskrit Commentary:

प्रसङ्गेन विषयेषु संगेन दोषं पापं ऋच्छति प्रामोति। तेषां नियमनात् सिद्धिं मोक्षं नियच्छति लभते॥

English Translation:

“Through attachment (prasanga) to sense-objects, one incurs sin or fault (doṣa, pāpa). But by restraining those senses, one attains siddhi, which here means liberation (mokṣa).”

तस्मात् इन्द्रियसंयमं कुर्यात् इति शेषः॥

English Translation:

"Since the senses are rooted in the mind's tendency to imagine and desire (saṅkalpa), and act based on it, why should their control be emphasized?
In response, this verse says that by engaging the senses freely with their objects, one undoubtedly incurs both seen and unseen faults.

But by properly restraining the same senses, one attains siddhi, i.e., eligibility for moksha and other puruṣārthas (goals of life).
Hence, sense-restraint should be practiced."

सिद्धिं — मनःशुद्धिद्वारा मोक्षाख्यां।
तथा च गीतायां — 'सिद्धिं आप्नोति यथा ब्रह्म, तथाप्नोति निबोध मे' इति॥

English Translation:

"This verse states the fault that arises when the senses are not withdrawn, and then declares the fruit of restraint.

Through attachment (prasanga) to sense-objects, one falls into worldly bondage (saṁsāra). But through control, one attains mental purity and thus liberation (moksha).

As the Gītā says: 'One attains perfection (siddhi), and then Brahman — understand that from Me.'"

(6) रामचन्द्रः (Rāmachandraḥ):

Sanskrit Commentary:

पुरुषः इन्द्रियाणां प्रसङ्गेन संयोगेन दोषं ऋच्छति प्राप्नोति। असंशयं तानि इन्द्रियाणि संनियम्य जित्वा सिद्धिं नियच्छति प्राप्नोति॥

English Translation:

"A person, by the connection (saṅga) of the senses with their objects, certainly acquires fault (doṣa).

There is no doubt: after properly restraining and conquering those senses, he surely attains siddhi (perfection).”

Vyāsa-ṣmrti (4.13), (also Vṛddha Śātātapa, 61).—‘Having brought his senses under control, wherever a man may live,—that place is Kurukṣetra, Naimiṣa and Puṣkara.’

Vyāsasmṛti (4. 60-61).—‘One does not become heroic by obtaining victory in battle; nor does he become learned by study; nor an orator by mere eloquence; nor liberal by making gifts of wealth; by conquering the organs does one become heroic; by following Dharma, learned,—by truthfulness, an orator; and liberal, by doing good to all beings.’

Vaśiṣṭha-smṛti (25. 8).—‘Wisdom is attained by Yoga; Yoga is the characteristic of Dharma; Yoga is ever the highest penance; therefore one should be always addicted to Yoga.’

Manu Smriti 2.100-

(इसलिए) इन्द्रियों के समूह को वश में करके, मन को भलीप्रकार नियन्त्रित करके तथा योग द्वारा शरीर को सुरक्षित रखता हुआ व्यक्ति सभी प्रयोजनों को सिद्ध कर लेता है।।

“(Therefore,) by bringing the group of senses under control, properly restraining the mind, and preserving the body through yoga, a person accomplishes all objectives (goals of life).” — Verse 100

Traditional Commentaries on Manu Smriti 2.100

(1) मेधातिथिः (Medhātithiḥ):

Sanskrit Commentary:

> उपसंहरति। सत्यपि इन्द्रियत्वे मनसः प्राधान्यात् पृथकुपादानं। 'ग्रामः' इत्यनेन संघातः — विधेहि कृत्ये इन्द्रियाणि तथा मनः। सर्वानर्थान् श्रौतस्मार्तकर्मसाध्यान् संसाधयेत्। तनुं शरीरम् अक्षिण्वन् अपीडयन् योगतः। युक्त्या सहसा कस्यचित् कठिनासनकृष्णाजिनादिप्रावरणपीडा भवति... तस्मात् योगतः इत्युक्तम्... योगस्तृतीयायोगस्तृतीयार्थे तसिः तात्पर्येण शरीरं रक्षेत्।

English Translation:

> "This verse summarizes the prior teachings. Though the mind is technically part of the senses, it is here mentioned separately due to its prominence.
> 'Grāma' means the collective group of senses. Both mind and senses must be disciplined.
>
> With the help of the body, one can accomplish all goals connected to Vedic and Smriti duties — i.e., dharma, artha, kāma, mokṣa.
> But while doing so, one must protect the body — not wearing it down or torturing it unnecessarily.
>
> Some postures or ascetic practices (e.g., sitting on hard seats, using black-deer skin coverings, etc.) can hurt delicate-bodied persons. Hence, 'through yoga' here implies proper method and balance.
> Yoga must protect the body, not destroy it. That is the intended sense."

---

(2) सर्वज्ञनारायणः (Sarvajña-Nārāyaṇaḥ):

Sanskrit Commentary:

> इन्द्रियग्रामं बाह्यं सर्वान् अर्थान् — स्वर्गादीनपि — योगतः अपेक्षितदेवतादि ध्यानतः। न च इन्द्रियसंयममात्रात् तनुं देहम् अक्षिण्वन् अपीडयन् अपि।

English Translation:

> "The external group of senses should be controlled. Even higher goals like heaven (svarga) can be attained through yoga, especially through meditation on the desired deity.
>
> But it is not merely sense-control that matters — one must also preserve the body, not emaciate or torment it."

(3) कुट्टूकः (Kuṭūkaḥ):

Sanskrit Commentary:

> इन्द्रियसंयमस्य सर्वपुरुषार्थहेतुतां दर्शयति — 'वशे कृत्वेति'। बहिरिन्द्रियगणम् आयत्तं कृत्वा, मनः च संयम्य, सर्वान् पुरुषार्थान्

> सम्यक् साधयेत्। योगतः – उपायेन – स्वदेहम् अपीडयन् यः सहजसुखी, संस्कृतान्नादिकं भुङ्क्ते, सः क्रमेण तं त्यजेत्।

English Translation:

> "This verse shows that sense-control is the means to all puruṣārthas (goals of life).
>
> One should restrain the external senses and the mind, and thereby successfully achieve dharma, artha, kāma, and mokṣa.
>
> 'Through yoga' means by suitable methods, without harming the body.
>
> One who enjoys simple comforts like clean food and soft bedding should gradually move toward austerity — not abandon everything suddenly."

(4) राघवानन्दः (Rāghavānandaḥ):

Sanskrit Commentary:

> प्रकरणार्थं निगमयतः, पुमर्थपर्यवसायितां आह – 'वशी' इति। अर्थान् धर्मादीन्, अक्षिण्वन् अपीडयन् योगतः – योगोपायेन – अवर्जनीयविषयसेवया इत्यावत्।

English Translation:

> "Bringing the section to a conclusion, this verse asserts that all puruṣārthas end in self-mastery.
> By controlling the senses and not harming the body, and through yoga as a method, one may even engage with necessary objects (like food, duties, etc.) without fault."

(5) नन्दनः (Nandanaḥ):

Sanskrit Commentary:

> इन्द्रियसंयमफलम् आह – 'वशे' इति। योगतः – योगेन समाधिलक्षणेन। अर्थान् – पुरुषार्थान्। संसाधयेत् – सम्यक् साधयितुं शक्नुयात्। तनुं अक्षिण्वन् – तपोभिः शरीरम् अपीडयन्।

English Translation:

> "This verse describes the fruit of sense-control.
>
> Through samādhi-based yoga, one may accomplish the four puruṣārthas.
>
> While doing so, the body should be preserved, not harmed by excessive austerity or penance."

---

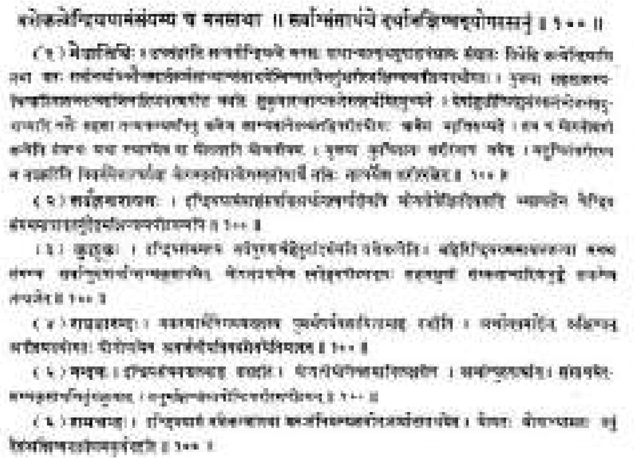
6) रामचन्द्रः (Rāmachandraḥ):

Sanskrit Commentary:

> इन्द्रियग्रामं वशे कृत्वा तथा मनः संनियम्य सर्वान् अर्थान् असाधयेत्।
> योगतः — योगाभ्यासतः तनुं देहं अक्षिण्वन् — क्षीणं अकुर्वन् इति।

English Translation:

> “By bringing the senses under control and restraining the mind, one accomplishes all goals.
>
> Through regular yogic practice, the body is maintained — not allowed to become weak or emaciated.”



Srimad Bhagwat Geeta 5.28 Shankar Bhasya – Geeta Press Gorakhpur

“One whose senses, mind, and intellect are brought under control, who through contemplation of the Supreme has become a sage (muni or renunciate), who — though residing in the body — is devoted solely to liberation, who considers moksha to be the supreme goal and refuge, and who is free from desire, fear, and anger — such a sage is always liberated. He does not have to attain any other liberation; he is ever free.” — Verse 28

“In the context of the marriage sacrament, the word dāra (wife) is used. When a man engages in another’s wife with desire — through intercourse, embrace, or other acts that stir pleasure and affection — beginning with touch and ending in sexual union, even sending a messenger or inciting the woman — this is considered adultery. Such a man should be marked with distressing instruments like sharp weapons, spears, etc., and then punished with mutilation of the nose, etc., and banishment.
As this is not a case of a general punishment, but a specific one, harsher penalties may apply if the act is repeated. In the case where another punishment (like exile) cannot be implemented, fines and exile together may be enforced, and this will be explained later.”

(2) Sarvajña Nārāyaṇa:

Āpastamba (2-26.18-19).—'A young man who, decked with ornaments, enters unintentionally a place where a married woman or a maiden sits, must be reprimanded;—if he does it intentionally, with an evil purpose, ho must he fined.'

Baudhāyana (2.4.1-2).—'Anybody but a Brāhmaṇa shall suffer corporal punishment for Adultery;—the wives of men of all castes must be guarded more carefully than wealth.'

Āpastamba (2.26.20).—'If a man has actually committed adultery, his organ shall be cut off together with the testicles.'

Bṛhaspati (23.10-12).—'If a man violates an unwilling woman, the King shall confiscate his entire property, have his penis nd scrotum cut off and have him paraded on an ass. When a man enjoys a woman by fraud, bis punishment shall be confiscation of his entire wealth; and afterwards he shall be branded with the mark of the female organ and banished from the town. The highest fine shall be inflicted for connexion with a woman of equal caste; half that for connexion with a woman of a lower caste; and a man who has connexion with a woman of a higher caste shall be put to death.'

Yājñavalkya (2.287-218).—'A man who carries away a decorated maiden, of the same caste as himself, shall pay the highest amercement; but the lowest amercement, if she is not decorated; if she belongs to a higher caste, corporal punishment shall be inflicted. If the man has earned away a maiden of a caste lower than himself, there is no offence, if she has gone with her consent; otherwise, the fine inflicted shall be of the lowest degree. If the maiden has been defiled, the hands of the man shall he cut off; and he shall he killed if the maiden is of a higher caste.'

Śaṅkha-Likhita (Aparārka, p. 859).—'If the man has intercourse with an unwilling maiden, he shall have two of his fingers cut off, and he shall also pay a fine. If the maiden is of a higher caste, he shall he killed. If the maiden belongs to the same caste and has been willing, he shall pay the nuptial fee and also give her ornaments and a double dowry, and then accept her as wife.'

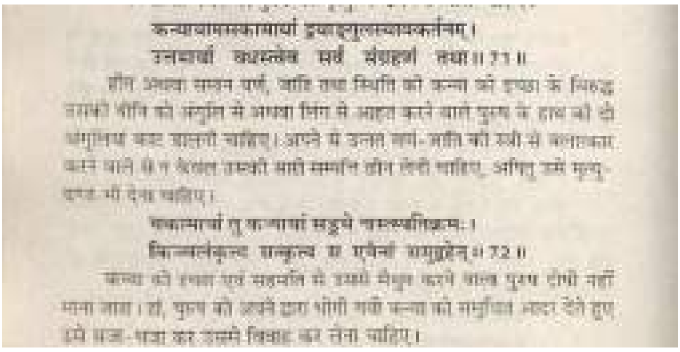
Bṛhaspati (23.10).—'The King shall confiscate the entire property of one who violates an unwilling woman; and having his penis and scrotum cut off, shall cause him to he paraded on an ass.'

Āpastamba (2.26-21).—'If one has intercourse with a maiden, his porperty shall he confiscated and he shall be banished.'

Narada Smriti 12.71-72

हीन अथवा समान वर्ण, जाति तथा स्थिति की कन्या की इच्छा के विरुद्ध उसकी योनि को अंगुलि से अथवा लिंग से आहत करने वाले पुरुष के हाथ की दो अंगुलियां काट डालनी चाहिए। अपने से उन्नत वर्ण-जाति की स्त्री से बलात्कार करने वाले से न केवल उसकी सारी सम्पत्ति छीन लेनी चाहिए, अपितु उसे मृत्यु-दण्ड भी देना चाहिए। कन्या की इच्छा एवं सहमति से उससे मैथुन करने वाला पुरुष दोषी नहीं माना जाता। हां, पुरुष को अपने द्वारा भोगी गयी कन्या को समुचित आदर देते हुए उसे सजा-धजा कर उससे विवाह कर लेना चाहिए।

A man who injures the vagina of a girl of equal or lower caste, social status, or birth — against her will — by using his finger or penis, should have two fingers of his hand cut off.A man who rapes a girl of a higher caste or social rank should not only be deprived of all his wealth but should also be punished with the death penalty.However, if a man engages in sexual intercourse with a girl with her willing consent, he is not considered guilty.
In such a case, the man should treat the girl with due respect, adorn and dress her properly, and marry her.



Allegations-

Swami Prabhupada the founder of ISKCON writes,

"...In this regard, the word vikhyātam is very significant. A man is always famous for his aggression toward a beautiful woman, and such aggression is sometimes considered rape. Although rape is not legally allowed, it is a fact that a woman likes a man who is very expert at rape." A.C. Bhaktivedanta Swami Prabhupada on Srimad Bhagavatam 4.25.41 [http://vanisource.org/wiki/SB_4.25.41]

Readers are requested to read the commentary on next verse also after going to the above given link. Swami Prabhupada also writes,

"Both man and woman desire one another; that is the basic principle of material existence. Women in general always keep themselves beautiful so that they can be attractive to their lusty husbands. When a lusty husband comes before his wife, the wife takes advantage of his aggressive activities and enjoys life. Generally when a woman is attacked by a man-whether her husband or some other man—she enjoys the attack, being too lusty..."A.C. Bhaktivedanta Swami Prabhu on Srimad Bhagavatam 4.26.26

Refutation-

This Halala Putra Pedophile follower whose Pedophile prophet raped a 9 year old did Adultery with female sex slaves war captives and owned many sex slaves concubines and killed many innocent jews and committed many such heinous crimes and sins is alleging on Srila Prabhupada commentary . Srila Prabhupada is founder of Iskcon and his commentary and Statements are only valid and authoritative for the followers of Iskcon and not all the Sampradayas of Sanatan Dharma . Moreover Many followers of Iskcon have already clarified and explained this statement of Srila Prabhupada .

I am sharing the slides of instagram post of Woke_vaishnav sometimes women likes rape statement ✅

disclaimer:this post contains adult language,so it can't be suitable for all..
let's talk about A very common controversial query, people who hate iskcon (especially shaivas , shaktas) those who can't accept the phylosophy of gaudiya vaishnavism ,so they try to malign image of srila Prabhupada. and mostly cherrypics that statement "sometimes women likes rape" they force the evidences to comfirm the already imagined conclusion.
so here we will end up their whole propeganda.. and prove that whatever srila Prabhupada had said it was totally right ..

HDC shrila prabhupad said that two times that 'sometimes women likes a man who is very expert at rape', one time in the shrimad bhagwatam 4th canto purport and second in a morning walk conversation .
in that post we'll talking about these topics :
1. srila Prabhupad's srimad bhagwatam purport: where he said 'women likes a man who is expert in rape '
2. shrila prabhupad's morning walk conversation where he said 'sometimes women likes rape
3. what is researchers and scientists view on srila Prabhupad's statement.

Firstly, it should be obvious that Srila Prabhupada repeatedly condemned illicit sex of any sort and hence, cannot say that rape is acceptable.

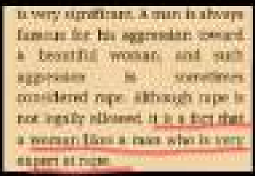
To smash the claim against Srila Prabhupada, we already have some of his own statements →

Innocent women, they are very much harassed after the war by the victorious party. You know, the soldiers are given freedom to rape the women.

-Lecture on BG 1.36 -- London, July 26, 1973

BG 16.7 purport :
Actually, a woman should be given protection at every stage of life. She should be given protection by the father in her younger days, by the husband in her youth, and by the grownup sons in her old age.

1. now see bhagwatam's canto 4 commentary:



is very significant. A man is always famous for his aggression toward a beautiful woman, and such aggression is sometimes considered rape. Although rape is not legally allowed, it is a fact that a woman likes a man who is very expert at rape.

Now the fourth canto of Shrimad Bhagwatam describes the story of king puranjan and a young lady.

King puranjana directly approached the lady and the lady was also lusty towards him and said"O killer of the enemy, you have somehow or other come here. This is certainly great fortune for me. I wish all auspicious things for you. you have a great desire to satisfy your senses ,I shall try in all respect to fulfill your desires. oh my dear hero ,who is in this world will not accept a husband like you ?you are so famous,so magnanimous, so beautyful and so easily gotten,"

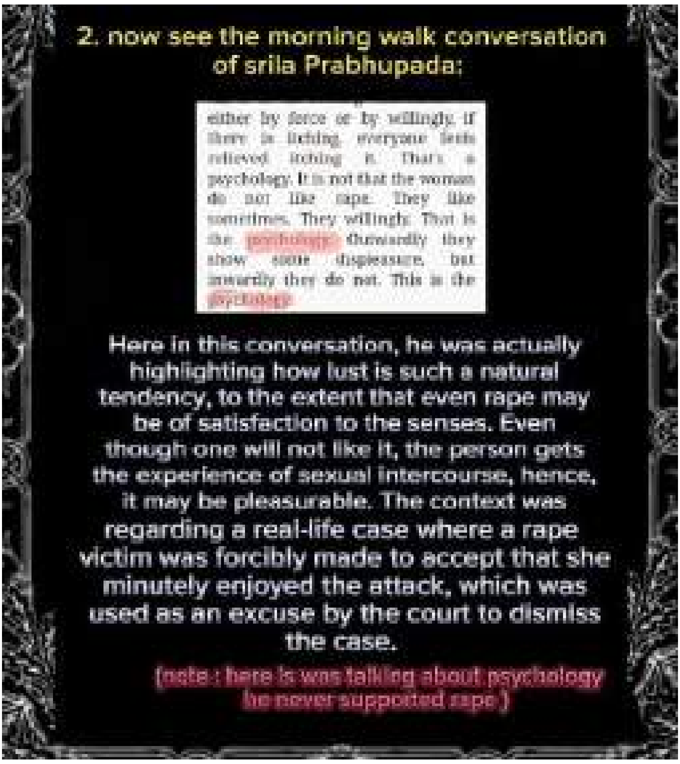
However, the definition that Srila Prabhupada is actually using is evident through the story itself and lends itself well to the definitions and descriptions of rape elucidated by Srila Prabhupada in this passage of the Srimad-Bhagavatam.
the king was agressive in his display of sexual interest . even though they were not married , did not know each other ,had not courted the beautiful women responded favourably to his advantage.she loved his long beautiful arms and how he used them to embrace her.
to srila Prabhupad's defination king puranjana was very expert at rape' .in time the couple married and lived together for 100 years .
From this we can clearly understand that what srila Prabhupada meant when he wrote "that a woman like a man who is very expert at rape"
Rape = agression



2. now see the morning walk conversation of srila Prabhupada:
either by force or by willingly. If there is itching, everyone feels relieved itching it. That's a psychology. It is not that the woman do not like rape. They like sometimes. They willingly. That is the psychology. Outwardly they show some displeasure, but inwardly they do not. This is the psychology
Here in this conversation, he was actually highlighting how lust is such a natural tendency, to the extent that even rape may be of satisfaction to the senses. Even though one will not like it, the person gets the experience of sexual intercourse, hence, it may be pleasurable. The context was regarding a real-life case where a rape victim was forcibly made to accept that she minutely enjoyed the attack, which was used as an excuse by the court to dismiss the case.
(note : here is was talking about psychology he never supported rape)

आधिभौतिक

'पद्म-पुराण' में इस आख्यायिका का जो कथानक (Plot) अङ्कित किया है वह भौतिक विज्ञान से सम्बन्ध रखता है। तुलसी नामक प्रसिद्ध औषधि विषैलीजन्य अनेक ज्वरों एवं मलेरिया के कीटाणुओं (Germs) को समूल नष्ट कर देती है यह बात आजकल की नई खोज से भी सिद्ध हो चुकी है। प्राचीन महर्षियों ने 'ऋतम्भरा' प्रज्ञा द्वारा इस रहस्य की साङ्गोपाङ्ग अन्वेषणा की थी, इसीलिए हमारी दैनन्दिनी दिनचर्या में तुलसी के सेवन का पर्याप्त उपयोग पाया जाता

जल को धारण करने वाला बादल ही 'जलंधर' है और उस बादल में सर्वोत्तभाव से रहने वाली 'विद्युत्-शक्ति' ही वृन्दा है। साध्वी स्त्री का सर्वस्व जिस प्रकार उसका एकमात्र पति ही होता है इसी प्रकार मेघान्तर्वर्ती विद्युत् का भी अनन्य आश्रय बादल ही है। वह मेघ क्षण क्षण में नये नये रूप बदलकर आकाश में विचरता है। कई बार तो यह 'कुन्द-इन्दु-तुषार-हार-धवल-देह-द्युति' धारण कर एवं बीच बीच में नीलकण्ठ की छटा दिखाता हुआ—'अत्र, तत्र विविध परायण कारिणी ! विश्वविमोहिनी, स्वयंविहारिणी—प्रकृतिरूप पार्वती देवी को भी विमुग्ध कर डालने को उद्यत होता है। सूर्य चन्द्रादि ग्रह, नक्षत्र, तारे, सितारे और सैयारे अपनी अपनी कान्ति रूप मालाओं को इस घनघमण्ड के तिरोधान से मानो व्याकुलित सी देख पाते हैं। यह जलन्धर दैवी-सम्पदा रूप प्राणीमात्र के जीवन आधार जलों को आत्मसात् कर के मानो उनके जीवन को मुट्ठी में ले लेता है अतएव वे सब विचलित हो उठते हैं। परन्तु मेघान्तर्वर्ती विद्युत् की प्रवाह धारा जब तक अविछिन्न रूप से

यद्यपि इस कथानक में पात्रों के नाम तक भी ऐसे चुने गये हैं कि जिनके कहने मात्र से उक्त रूपक का ढाँचा सहसा मन में बैठ जाता है, जैसे—असुर का नाम 'जलन्धर' होना ही अक्षरार्थ के अनुसार उसे मेघ सिद्ध करता है, और संश्लिष्ट जलवृन्द की नियामक शक्ति को वृन्दा के अतिरिक्त और कुछ कहा ही क्या जा सकता है। तथापि किसी अन्यथा सिद्ध को अप्रामाणिकता के पचड़े में पड़ने का अवसर न मिल सके, एतदर्थ यहाँ तादृश प्रमाणों का कुछ संकेत करना अनावश्यक न होगा, यथा—

(क) [प्रजापतिः] तं पाप्मानं मवृश्चत्। यदवृश्चत् तस्माद्वृष्टिः। (तैत्तिरीय ३।१०।६।१)

(ख) वृष्टिर्वै याज्या विद्युदेव। विद्युद्धीदं वृष्टिमन्नाद्यं संप्रयच्छति। (ऐतरेय २।४१)

(घ) तस्माद्यां दिशं वायुरेति तां दिशं वृष्टिरन्वेति। (शतपथ ८।२।३।५)

अर्थात्—(क) प्रजापालक विष्णु भगवान् ने उस 'पाप्मा' नामक असुर को छेदन कर डाला। क्योंकि उसका व्रश्चन (छेदन) किया गया था अतएव इस क्रिया को वृष्टि कहते हैं (ख) यजन योग्य विद्युत् ही वस्तुतः वृष्टि है क्योंकि यह विद्युत् ही वर्षा और अन्न आदि पदार्थों के

इस प्रकार तुलसी विटप के अलौकिक चमत्कार का परोक्षपद्धति से निर्देश करने वाला यह कथानक, 'पौराणिक-वनस्पति-विज्ञान' का ज्वलन्त उदाहरण है । इसका हम आधिभौतिक निरूपण करने के बाद अब आधिदैविक विवेचन करते हैं ।

First of all we have to understand the real Tatparya and Meaning behind Vishnu Vrinda story in Puranas . We have to remember that Stories in Puranas are nothing but personified Aakhanyan of आदिदैविक Prakaran in Vedas .Śri Mādhavācārya alias Swami Anandatirtha has quoted passages From Vedic texts and Puranas at certain places in his commentary on the Brahmasūtra and he has clearly specified:-पुराणस्योपजीव्यश्च वेद एव न खापरः ।तद्विरोधे कथं मानं तत्सत्र न भविष्यति ॥ This basis of Puranas is Veda and nothing else. As such, how an they be taken as authentic against Vedic provisions ? Traditional Sri Vaishanva Acharya in his grantha Purana Digdarshan also explained the same thing and explained आदिदैविक and real meaning of Puranic Stories based on Vedas – Reference – Purana Digdarshan Page 432

“Lord Vishnu, the protector of beings, pierced (or severed) the demon named ‘Pāpmā’. Since this act was a cutting (vṛścana), therefore this act is called ‘vṛṣṭi’ (rain). (ख) वृष्टिर्वै याज्या विद्य देव । विद्युद्धीदं वृष्टिमन्नाद्य संप्रयच्छति ।

(घ) तस्माद्या दिशं वायुरेति तां दिशं वृष्टिरन्वेति ।

The cloud that holds water is Jalandhar and the विद्युत residing in this cloud in its entirety is Vrinda. Just as a pious wife is devoted only to her husband, similarly, the only refuge of the cloud-borne विद्युत is the cloud itself. The cloud [Jalandhar] frequently changes shape in the sky, sometimes appearing white as snow with hints of blue, reminiscent of the goddess Parvati’s form, enticing and omnipresent, charming the universe and traversing with free will. Planets, stars, and constellations look on as this mass of clouds absorbs water, seemingly taking life in its grasp. However, as long as the flow of विद्युत [Vrinda] within the cloud[Jalandhar] remains uninterrupted, not a single drop of vapor condenses to fall to Earth.

. Following Parvati's suggestion as Prakriti , Vishnu, as air, approaches the विद्युत [Vrinda] in the cloud as it flows in all directions. As soon as this विद्युत[Vrinda], energized by the air[Vishnu], begins to vibrate, the vapor condenses and falls to Earth in droplets. Not every air current brings rain; even modern science identifies only specific types of air currents, like the monsoon, as rain-producing. In this allegory, Air (Vishnu) has to disguise itself as a cloud to approach Vrinda . Only then does she disperse and fall to Earth, symbolizing the fact that only particular winds cause rain. The divine Vidyut within the clouds, which has been referred to in scriptures as Divya Agni derived from electric energy, mixes with water particles, following the principle "Adbhyah Prithvi, Prithvibhyah Oshadhayah" (from water comes Earth, and from Earth, the herbs), resulting in the Tulsi plant.

This is why the Tulsi plant is imbued with extraordinary powers, inherited from the divine विद्युत within clouds. To convey this mystical aspect, Vedavyasa shows Vrinda, a pure devotee, reincarnating as the Tulsi plant after her curse. Vrinda cursed Lord Vishnu to become a stone, the Shaligram, which is essentially an embodiment of condensed air. Just as air intensifies even a small spark of fire, similarly, the divine fire within Tulsi leaves is enhanced when in contact with the Shaligram, symbolizing the unlimited power of Tulsi.

According to Nirukta (10/10) the Rishis prefer to explain the Deeper Vedic Philosophical and Metaphysical meaning with the help of आख्यान and stories . Through this Vishnu Vrinda story in Shiva Purana the Science of Rainfall and Watercycle as mentioned in Shruti has been explained through आख्यान and personification and hence should be understood in its original Vedic Swaroop

INDRA AHILYA

Indra is called the जार (Destroyer) of Ahalya (Night) in these sections of Shruti :

ShadVimsa Brahmana 1.1: -अहल्यायै जारोऽसी।अहलायाया ह मैत्रेय्या जार आस that is Indra is Destroyer of Ahilya

Shatpath Brahmana 3.3.4.18: -अहल्यायै जारोऽसी that is Indra (Sun) is destroyed of Ahilya (Night)

Satapatha Brahmana 4.5.9.4 says वै शुक्रो य एष तपत्येष उ वेन्द्रस्तस्माच्छुक्राग्रान्गृह्णाति that is Sun is Indra

Taittriya Aranyaka Prapathak 1 Anuvak 12 says इन्द्राऽऽगच्छ हरिव आगच्छ मेधातिथेः । मेष वृषणश्वस्य मेने (३) । गौरावस्क-न्दिन्नहल्यायै जार that is Indra (sun) is the destroyer of Ahilya (night) and Indra comes to the sacrifice of Medhatithi

Drahyāyaṇa Śrautasūtram Patala 1 khanda 3 says इन्द्रागच्छ हरिव आगच्छ मेधातिथेर्मेषवृषणश्वस्य मेने गौरावास्कन्दिन्नहल्यायै जारकौशिकब्राह्मण गौतमब्रुवाणेति that is Indra comes to the Sacrifice of Medhatithi and Indra (Sun) is the destroyer of Ahilya (night)

In Nirukta 3.16, 3.3.4- सूर्य (Sun) is clearly called the जार (destroyer) of रात्रि (Night).

You might be wandering what is the meaning of गौतम (gautam) then? "उत्तमा गावो रश्मयो यस्य सः" That which has Excellent rays is Gautam. Here "चंद्रमा (moon) is Gautama

And Gautama means चन्द्र i.e. kaanta of Ahilya रश्मी गै उच्यते, गौ with तम meaning who shines bright. here because of Surya from whom the moon shines, has been called गौ (Gautam) The meaning that has to be taken as "Sun(Indra) is the

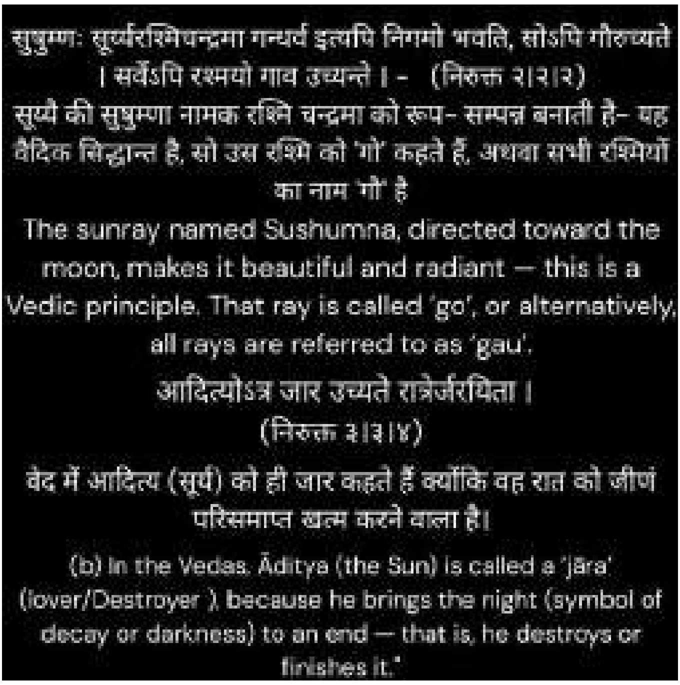
सूय्यै की सुषुम्णा नामक रश्मि चन्द्रमा को रूप- सम्पन्न बनाती है- यह वैदिक सिद्धान्त है, सो उस रश्मि को 'गो' कहते हैं, अथवा सभी रश्मियों का नाम 'गौ' है

The sunray named Sushumna, directed toward the moon, makes it beautiful and radiant — this is a Vedic principle. That ray is called 'go', or alternatively, all rays are referred to as 'gau'.

वेद में आदित्य (सूर्य) को ही जार कहते हैं क्योंकि वह रात को जीणं परिसमाप्त खत्म करने वाला है।

(b) In the Vedas, Āditya (the Sun) is called a 'jāra' (lover/Destroyer), because he brings the night (symbol of decay or darkness) to an end — that is, he destroys or finishes it."



Ancient Acharya Sri Kumarilla Bhatta had explained in his book Tantra Vartika 11.3.7

It cannot be interpreted as an illicit connection with a woman (न तु परस्त्रीव्यभिचारात्).

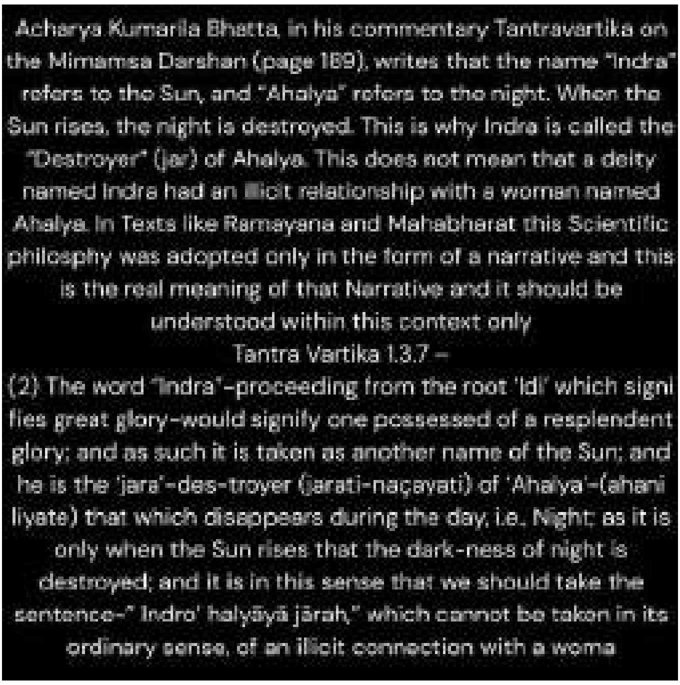
(2) The word "Indra"—proceeding from the root 'Idi' which signifies great glory—would signify one possessed of a resplendent glory; and as such it is taken as another name of the Sun; and he is the 'jāra'—destroyer (jarati-naçayati)—of 'Ahalyā'—(ahani līyate) that which disappears during the day, i.e., Night; as it is only when the Sun rises that the darkness of night is destroyed; and it is in this sense that we should take the sentence—" Indro' halyāyā jārah,"—which cannot be taken in its ordinary sense, of an illicit connection with a woman.

According to Ancient Acharya Kumarila Bhatta, in his commentary Tantravartika on the Mimamsa Darshan (page 189), writes that the name "Indra" refers to the Sun, and "Ahalya" refers to the night. When the Sun rises, the night is destroyed. This is why Indra is called the "Destroyer" (jar) of Ahalya. This does not mean that a deity named Indra had an illicit relationship with a woman named Ahalya. In Texts like Ramayana and Mahabharat this Scientific philosphy was adopted only in the form of a narrative and this is the real meaning of that Narrative and it should be understood within this context only

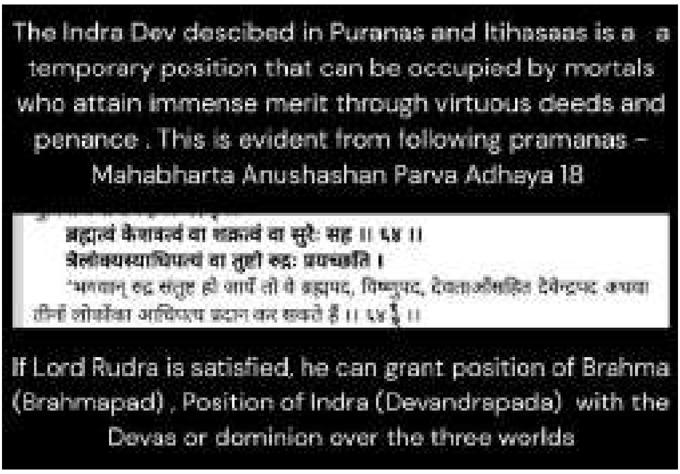
Tantra Vartika 1.3.7 –

(2) The word "Indra"-proceeding from the root 'Idi' which signi fies great glory-would signify one possessed of a resplendent glory; and as such it is taken as another name of the Sun; and he is the 'jara'-des-troyer (jarati-naçayati) of 'Ahalya'-(ahani liyate) that which disappears during the day, i.e., Night; as it is only when the Sun rises that the dark-ness of night is destroyed; and it is in this sense that we should take the sentence-" Indro' halyāyā jārah," which cannot be taken in its ordinary sense, of an illicit connection with a woman.



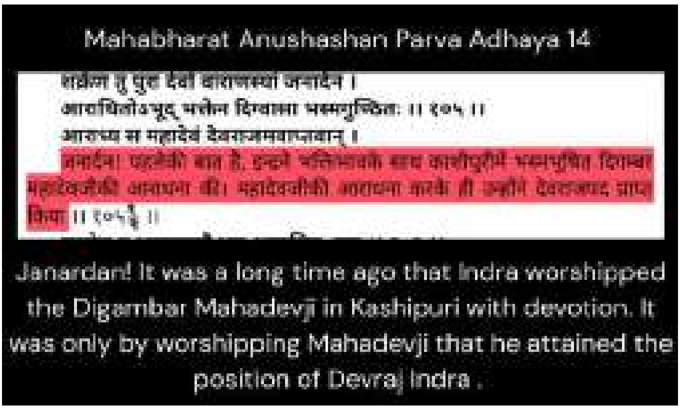
The Indra Dev descibed in Puranas and Itihasaas is a a temporary position that can be occupied by mortals who attain immense merit through virtuous deeds and penance. This is evident from following pramanas Mahabharta Anushashan Parva Adhaya 18

'भगवान् रुद्र संतुष्ट हो जायँ तो वे ब्रह्मपद, विष्णुपद, देवताओंसहित देवेन्द्रपद अथवा तीनों लोकोंका आधिपत्य प्रदान कर सकते हैं ।। ६४ ।।
If Lord Rudra is satisfied, he can grant position of Brahma (Brahmapad), Position of Indra (Devandrapada) with the Devas or dominion over the three worlds



Mahabharat Anushashan Parva Adhaya 14

जनार्दन ! पहलेकी बात है, इन्द्रने भक्तिभावके साथ काशीपुरीमें भस्मभूषित दिगम्बर महादेवजीकी आराधना की। महादेवजीकी आराधना करके ही उन्होंने देवराजपद प्राप्त किया ।। १०५३ ।।
Janardan! It was a long time ago that Indra worshipped the Digambar Mahadevji in Kashipuri with devotion. It was only by worshipping Mahadevji that he attained the position of Devraj Indra.



Atharva Veda 11/7/11 states only By Brahmacharya one can become Devas including Devraj Indra इस स्वर्ग के नीचे एक सूर्यात्मक अग्नि है और दूसरी पृथ्वी के ऊपर है. इस स्वर्ग और धरती के मध्य दोनों अग्नियां आपस में मिल कर उदय होती हैं. उन सूर्य और अग्नि से संबंधित किरणें धरती और स्वर्ग के मध्य आश्रय लेती हैं. ब्रह्मचारी अपने तप की महिमा से उन का देवता बनता है.

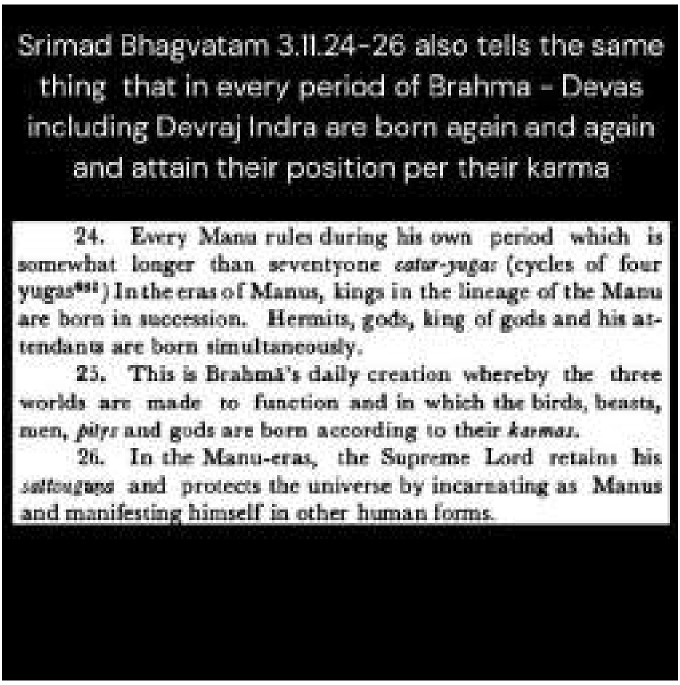
Beneath this heaven, there is a solar fire, and another exists above the earth. Between heaven and earth, these two fires unite and rise together. The rays associated with that sun and fire take refuge in the space between earth and heaven. Through the greatness of his austerity (tapas), the Brahmachari becomes the Devas

Srimad Bhagvatam 3.11.24-26 also tells the same thing that in every period of Brahma – Devas including Devraj Indra are born again and again and attain their position per their karma

24. Every Manu rules during his own period which is somewhat longer than seventyone catur-yugas (cycles of four yugas682) In the eras of Manus, kings in the lineage of the Manu are born in succession. Hermits, gods, king of gods and his at-tendants are born simultaneously.
25. This is Brahma's daily creation whereby the three worlds are made to function and in which the birds, beasts, men, pitrs and gods are born according to their kaimas.

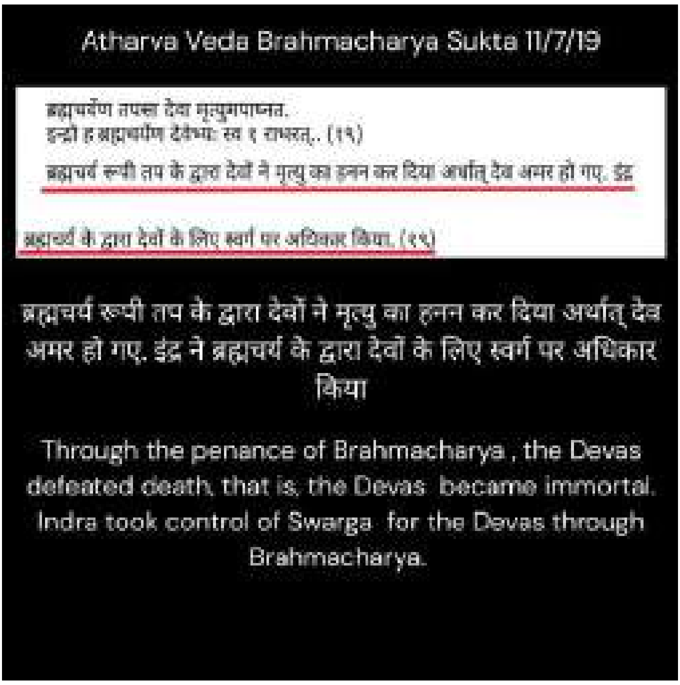
26. In the Manu-eras, the Supreme Lord retains his sattvaguna and protects the universe by incarnating as Manus and manifesting himself in other human forms.



Atharva Veda Brahmacharya Sukta 11/7/19 says Indra Deva (A temporary position) is a Brahmachari

ब्रह्मचर्य रूपी तप के द्वारा देवों ने मृत्यु का हनन कर दिया अर्थात् देव अमर हो गए. इंद्र ने ब्रह्मचर्य के द्वारा देवों के लिए स्वर्ग पर अधिकार किया

Through the penance of Brahmacharya , the Devas defeated death, that is, the Devas became immortal. Indra took control of Swarga for the Devas through Brahmacharya.



Abstraining from Illicit sexual intercourse , following celibacy , behaving free from Sin and keeping your senses under control are all essential parts of Brahmacharya which are followed by All Devas including Devraj Indra

(A Brahmachari) Control his senses, behave friendly with everyone, be forgiving and keep a beard, moustache and hair on the head. Perform Agnihotra on time and study the Vedas and follow the true religion.

Non-violence, celibacy, truth, simplicity, absence of anger, renunciation of fault-finding, restraint of the senses and not to gossip- these eight vows should always be observed with caution. Keep the senses under control He should always behave free from sin, deceit and crookedness. One should take the food that is automatically obtained daily, but one should not have a desire for it either

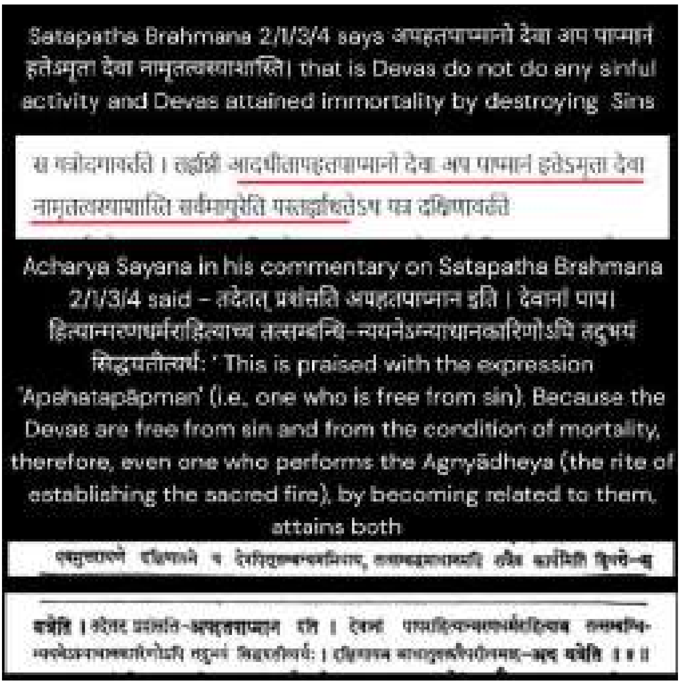
Satapatha Brahmana 2/1/3/4 says अपहतपाप्मानो देवा अप पाप्मानं हतेऽमृता देवा नामृतत्वस्याशास्ति। that is Devas do not do any sinful activity and Devas attained immortality by destroying Sins

Acharya Sayana in his commentary on Satapatha Brahmana 2/1/3/4 said – तदेतत् प्रशंसति अपहतपाप्मान इति । देवानां पाप। हित्यान्मरणधर्मराहित्याच्च तत्सम्बन्धि-न्ययनेऽग्न्याधानकारिणोऽपि तदुभयं िद्धयतीत्यर्थः ' This is praised with the expression

'Apahatapāpman' (i.e., one who is free from sin). Because the Devas are free from sin and from the condition of mortality, therefore, even one who performs the Agnyādheya (the rite of establishing the sacred fire), by becoming related to them, attains both



A Short description on prohibition and punishment for Rape and such activities as per Vedic Scriptures

Same Matsya Purana chapter 227 slokas 124-126 says

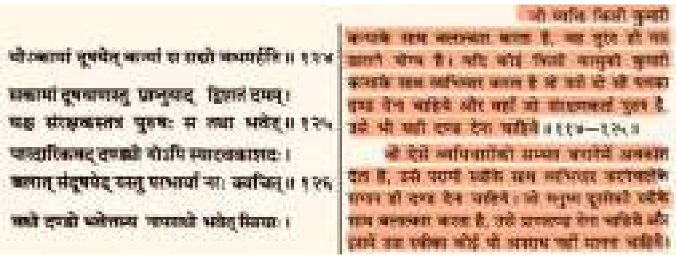
कन्याके साथ बलात्कार करता है, वह तुरंत ही मार डालने योग्य है। यदि कोई किसी कामुकी कुमारी कन्याके साथ व्यभिचार करता है तो उसे दो सौ पणका दण्ड देना चाहिये और वहाँ जो संरक्षणकर्ता पुरुष है, उसे भी यही दण्ड देना चाहिये ॥ १२४-१२५ ॥
जो ऐसे व्यभिचारोंको सम्भव बनानेमें अवकाश देता है, उसे परायी स्त्रीके साथ व्यभिचार करनेवालेके समान ही दण्ड देना चाहिये। जो मनुष्य दूसरेकी स्त्रीके साथ बलात्कार करता है, उसे प्राणदण्ड देना चाहिये और इसमें उस स्त्रीका कोई भी अपराध नहीं मानना चाहिये

"A man who commits rape on an unmarried maiden (kumārī kanyā) deserves to be put to death immediately.
If anyone has illicit intercourse with a lustful (consenting but unprotected) maiden, he should be fined two hundred paṇas, and the guardian or protector who failed to safeguard her should be punished with the same fine.
Whoever allows such adulterous acts to happen through negligence shall be punished in the same way as the one who committed adultery with another man's wife.
A man who rapes another man's wife must be punished with the death penalty, and in this case, the woman herself is not to be considered guilty in any way."



Manu Smriti 8.364

जो व्यक्ति सम्भोग की इच्छा न करती हुई कन्या को दूषित करता है, वह उसी क्षण लिङ्गच्छेदादि के योग्य होता है, किन्तु कन्या की इच्छा से गमन करने वाला सजातीय व्यक्ति वध के योग्य नहीं होता है।। ३६४ ।।

"A man who violates a maiden who has no desire for sexual union becomes, at that very moment, deserving of punishment such as the cutting off of his organ; however, if a man of the same caste unites with a maiden with her consent, he is not considered deserving of death."

Allegations-

Matsya Purana not only allows sex with a prostitute and concubine, but also allows gang rape of a concubine/prostitute, the fine is her payment.

Matsya Purana 227.142-6 "…a twice born indulging with a whore should be made to pay her wages…If a man after bringing a harlot does not indulge with her, the king should make him pay her twice as much and should levy a similar amount of fine for himself. Dharma will not thereby be upset. If a number of people forcibly indulge with a concubine, the king should make each one of them pay her double the amount of her wages." Tr. Taluqdar of Oudh, edited by B.D. Basu

Tell me where does it mention any Gang Rape of Concubines Lier Halala Putra Pedophile followers .

। इन सबके साथ समागम करनेवाले व्यक्तिके लिंगको कटवाकर तत्पश्चात् उसे प्राण-दण्ड देना चाहिये। इसी प्रकार चाण्डालकी स्त्री तथा कुत्तेको खानेवालोंकी स्त्रीके साथ व्यभिचार करनेवालेको प्राण-दण्ड देना चाहिये। गौको छोड़कर अन्य तिर्यग् योनियोंमें सम्भोग करनेवाले व्यक्तिको मुण्डनका दण्ड देकर उस पशुके लिये घास तथा जल देनेका दण्ड देना चाहिये मानवश्रेष्ठ । गौके साथ भोग करनेवाले व्यक्तिको सुवर्णका दण्ड लगाना चाहिये। वेश्याके साथ समागम करनेवाले ब्राह्मणको वेश्याको दिये गये शुल्कके बराबर अर्थ-दण्ड देना चाहिये। वेश्या यदि वेतन स्वीकार करनेके उपरान्त लोभवश अन्यत्र चली जाती है तो उसे दुगुना दण्ड देनेके उपरान्त लिये हुए शुल्कका दूना अर्थ-दण्ड भी देना चाहिये। राजन् । यदि कोई वेश्याको दूसरेके बहानेसे किसी दूसरेके पास लिया जाता है तो उसे एक मासा सुवर्णका दण्ड देना चाहिये। जो वेश्याको लानेके बाद उसके साथ सम्भोगादि नहीं करता, उसे दूना दण्ड देकर उस वेश्याको दूना शुल्क दिलाना चाहिये। ऐसा करनेसे राजाका धर्म क्षीण नहीं होता। यदि अनेक व्यक्ति एक वेश्याके साथ समागम करनेको उपस्थित हों तो राजा उनको दूना दण्ड दे और वे सब पृथक् पृथक् उस वेश्याको दूना द्रव्य दण्डरूपमें अधिक दें। माता, पिता, स्त्री, पुरोहित और यजमान- ये पतित होनेपर भी नहीं छोड़े जाते, पर यदि कोई मनुष्य इनमेंसे किसीको छोड़ता है तो वह छः सौ सुवर्ण-मुद्राओंका दण्डभागी होता है। पतित होनेपर गुरुजन भी त्याज्य हो सकते हैं, किंतु माता नहीं छोड़ी जा सकती। गर्भकालमें धारण-पोषण करनेके कारण माताका गौरव गुरुजनोंसे भी अधिक है ॥ १३९- १५० ॥

"The man who has sexual intercourse with all these (forbidden women) should have his genitals cut off, and thereafter he should be given the death penalty. Similarly, one who commits adultery with a Caṇḍāla woman or with the wife of one who eats dog's flesh should be punished with death.

A person who has intercourse with animals (other than a cow) should be punished by having his head shaved and then made to give grass and water to that animal, O best of men.

One who has intercourse with a cow should be fined in gold.

A Brāhmaṇa who has intercourse with a prostitute should be fined an amount equal to the fee paid to the prostitute.

If a prostitute, after accepting payment, out of greed goes to someone else, then she should first be fined double and then be made to pay double the received fee as a penalty. O King!

If someone takes a prostitute to another man under some pretext, then he should be fined one māṣa of gold.

If, after bringing a prostitute, one does not have intercourse with her, then he should be fined double and the prostitute should be given double her fee. Doing so does not diminish the king's righteousness.

"If several men come together to have intercourse with the same prostitute, the king should impose on them double the fine, and each of them must separately pay that prostitute twice the normal fee as an additional penalty.

A fallen person (patita) is not to be spared even if he happens to be one's own mother, father, wife, family priest, or yajamāna (the patron for whom one performs sacrifices). If someone spares or protects any of these despite their fallen state, he becomes liable to a fine of six hundred gold coins.

Even respected teachers and elders may be cast off if they have fallen, but the mother can never be abandoned. Because of the honour due to her for carrying and nourishing the child in her womb, the mother's dignity is considered even greater than that of the teacher."

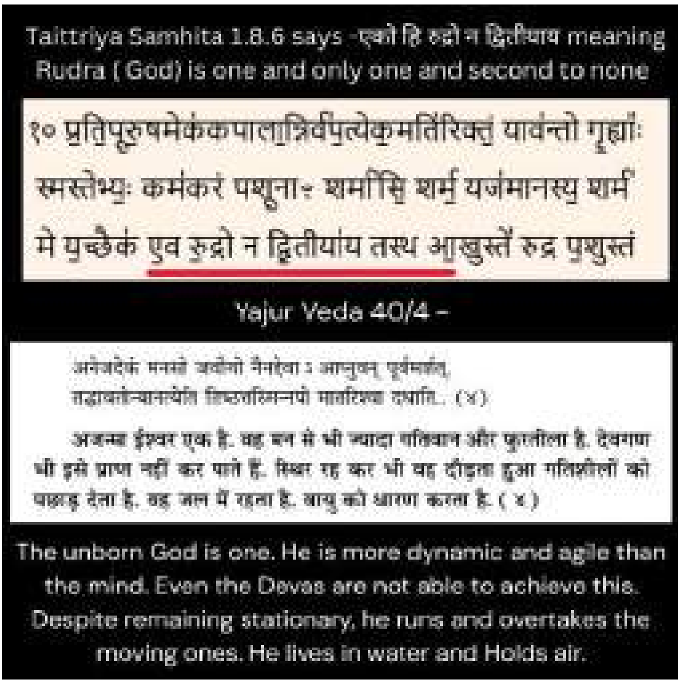
Before Beginning the Debunk there are many basic things which i will like to clarify which forms the base of our debunks

A FEW BASIC THINGS TO UNDERSTAND AND REMEMBER

First of all let me state that in Sanatan Dharma Ishwar (God) is one and only without a second . This is evident from the following Pramans

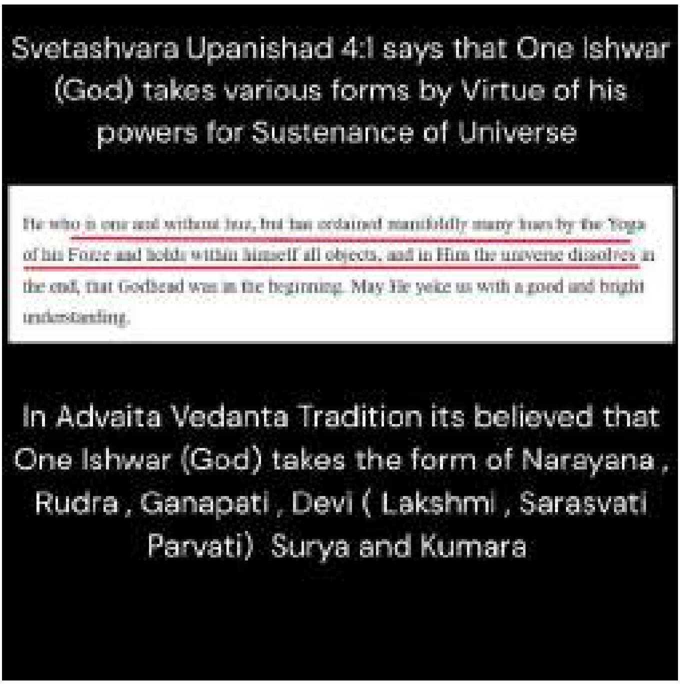
Taittriya Samhita 1.8.6 says -एको हि रुद्रो न द्वितीयाय meaning Rudra (God) is one and only one and second to none

Yajur Veda 40/4 -The unborn God is one. He is more dynamic and agile than the mind. Even the Devas are not able to achieve this. Despite remaining stationary, he runs and overtakes the moving ones. He lives in water and Holds air.



Svetashvara Upanishad 4:1 says that One Ishwar (God) takes various forms by Virtue of his powers for Sustenance of Universe

He who is one and without hue, but has ordained manifoldly many hues by the Yoga of his Force and holds within himself all objects, and in Him the universe dissolves in the end, that Godhead was in the beginning. May He yoke us with a good and bright understanding.
In Advaita Vedanta Tradition its believed that One Ishwar (God) takes the form of Narayana, Rudra, Ganapati, Devi (Lakshmi, Sarasvati Parvati) Surya and Kumara



Nature of Ishwar as per Sukla Yajur Veda 40.8

वह परमपिता सर्वव्यापक, चमकीला, (दीप्तिमान), काया रहित, नाड़ियों से रहित है. वह घावों से रहित, पवित्र, पाप रहित, विद्वान्, मननशील, सर्वव्यापक व स्वयंभू (स्वयं उत्पन्न होने वाला) है. उस ने सृष्टि के आरंभ से ही सब के लिए यथायोग्य साधन सुविधाओं की व्यवस्था की है. (८)

He is पर्यगात्- Omnipresent शुक्रम् – Radiant अकायम्- Material Bodiless अव्रणम्- “Woundless” – Free from any imperfections or injuries अस्नाविरम्- Without flesh, nerves, or tissues , immaterial शुद्धम्- Pure -Untouched by impurities or defects अपापविद्धम् -“Untainted by sin” – Free from any trace of evil karma कविः with divine wisdom and foresight मनीषी-with supreme intellect परिभूः-Beyond all limits and boundaries स्वयंभूः- Self Existent याथातथ्यतः- Supreme Truth शाश्वतीभ्यः unchanging and समाभ्यः-Eternal

He, the Supreme Father, is all-pervading, radiant (luminous), without a body, and free from nerves (nāḍīs).
He is without wounds, pure, sinless, wise, contemplative, all-pervading, and self-existent (self-born).
From the very beginning of creation, He has arranged appropriate means and resources for all beings. (8)

Sukla Yajur Veda 40.8 is enough to debunk all types of Allegations on Ishwar “Thus is the fruit of one who knows the Self.” He who perceives the Self in this manner attains (paryagāt) such a Brahman. What kind of Brahman?

- Shukra: Pure, luminous, and radiant.
- Shuddha: Free from impurity.
- Of the nature of knowledge and bliss (vijñāna-ānanda-svabhāva).
- Possessing inconceivable power (acintya-śakti).
- Akāya: Bodiless—having no physical form.

- Avraṇa: Woundless—cannot be injured.
- Asnāvira: Without sinews or veins—free from physiological structure.
- Pure and untouched by the three guṇas (sattva, rajas, tamas).
- Unpierced by sin—unaffected by afflictions, karma, its results, or latent impressions.

The repetition of akāya, avraṇa, asnāvira is not redundant—it emphasizes Brahman's transcendence. As Yāska says in Nirukta 10.42: "Repetition strengthens meaning."

Further fruit of such realization is described:

The one who worships in this way:

- Kavi: Seer, one with deep insight.
- Manīṣī: Wise and discerning.
- Medhāvī: Possessing intellect and memory.
- Paribhūḥ: One who transcends all—by the power of knowledge, he becomes all forms.
- Svayambhūḥ: Self-born—he becomes Brahman itself.

Such a person also attains the previously described Brahman—pure, bodiless, and radiant.

Alternate interpretation of the verse:

The Self described in earlier mantras is one who pervades all (paryagāt), like space, encompassing everything. Having pervaded all, he organizes duties and responsibilities (arthān vyadadhāt) for eternal beings (śāśvatībhyaḥ samābhyaḥ) and for the attainment of infinite time (ananta-varṣa-prāpti), based on the true nature of karma and its results.

Qualities of Brahman:

- Shukra: Pure and luminous.
- Akāya: Without body—free from even subtle forms.
- Avraṇa: Unwounded.
- Asnāvira: Without sinews or veins.
- Shuddha: Spotless.
- Apāpa-viddha: Untouched by sin or unrighteousness.
- Kavi: All-seeing—"There is no other seer than this," says the Upaniṣad.
- Manīṣī: All-knowing—directed by the mind.
- Paribhūḥ: One who exists above all.
- Svayambhūḥ: One who exists by himself, above all others.

He is the eternal Lord (nitya īśvaraḥ)—the one who has done all, created all.

Such a Brahman is attained by the knower of the Self.

Brihadaranayak Upanishad 3.9.2 says that there are 33 Devas and many manifestations of these 33 Devas

उस याज्ञवल्क्यने कहा, 'ये तो इनकी महिमाएँ ही हैं। देवगण तो तैंतीस ही हैं।' [शाकल्य—] 'वे तैंतीस देव कौन से हैं?' [याज्ञवल्क्य-] 'आठ वसु, ग्यारह रुद्र, बारह आदित्य – ये इकतीस देवगण हैं तथा इन्द्र और प्रजापतिके सहित तैंतीस हैं' ॥ २ ॥

Yājñavalkya said, “These (larger numbers) are merely their manifestations. The Devas are truly only thirty-three.” [Shakalya asked,] “Which are those thirty-three Devas?” [Yājñavalkya replied,] “The eight Vasus, the eleven Rudras, and the twelve Ādityas—these are thirty-one Devas; and along with Indra and Prajāpati, they make thirty-three.” ॥2॥

Yājñavalkya said, ‘These are but the manifestations of them, but there are only thirty-three gods.’ ‘Which are those thirty-three?’ “The eight Vasus, the eleven Rudras and the twelve Adityas-these are thirty-one, and Indra and Prajapati make up the thirty-three.’

Ishwar created Devas

Svetasvatara Upanishad chapter 4 Mantra 12 says

Atharva Veda 11/7/11 states only By Brahmacharya one can attain the postion of Devas including Devraj Indra and other Devas

इस स्वर्ग के नीचे एक सूर्यात्मक अग्नि है और दूसरी पृथ्वी के ऊपर है. इस स्वर्ग और धरती के मध्य दोनों अग्नियां आपस में मिल कर उदय होती हैं. उन सूर्य और अग्नि से संबंधित किरणें धरती और स्वर्ग के मध्य आश्रय लेती हैं. ब्रह्मचारी अपने तप की महिमा से उन का देवता बनता है.

Beneath this heaven, there is a solar fire, and another exists above the earth. Between heaven and earth, these two fires unite and rise together. The rays associated with that sun and fire take refuge in the space between earth and heaven. Through the greatness of his austerity (tapas), the Brahmachari becomes the Devas

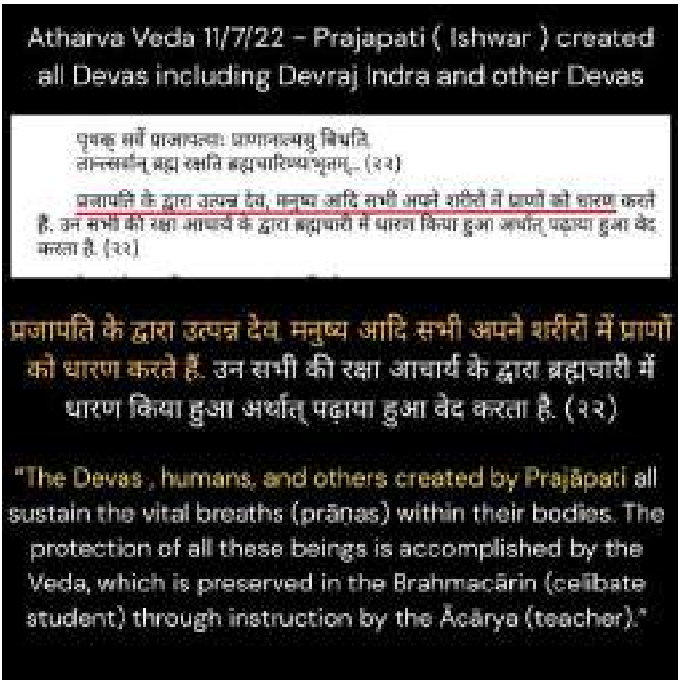
Atharva Veda 11/7/22 – Prajapati (Ishwar) created all Devas including Devraj Indra and other Devas

प्रजापति के द्वारा उत्पन्न देव, मनुष्य आदि सभी अपने शरीरों में प्राणों को धारण करते हैं. उन सभी की रक्षा आचार्य के द्वारा ब्रह्मचारी में धारण किया हुआ अर्थात् पढ़ाया हुआ वेद करता है. (२२)

"The Devas , humans, and others created by Prajāpati all sustain the vital breaths (prāṇas) within their bodies. The protection of all these beings is accomplished by the Veda, which is preserved in the Brahmacārin (celibate student) through instruction by the Ācārya (teacher)."



Srimad Bhagavatam 3.11.24-26 tells that in every period of Brahma – Devas including Devraj Indra and other Devas are born again and again and attain their position per their karma

॥ प्रत्येक मनु इकहत्तर चतुर्युगीसे कुछ अधिक काल (७१ ६/१४ चतुर्युगी) तक अपना अधिकार भोगता है। प्रत्येक मन्वन्तरमें भिन्न-भिन्न मनुवंशी राजालोग, सप्तर्षि, देवगण, इन्द्र और उनके अनुयायी गन्धर्वादि साथ-साथ ही अपना अधिकार भोगते हैं ।॥ २४ ॥ यह ब्रह्माजीकी प्रतिदिनकी सृष्टि है, जिसमें तीनों लोकोंकी रचना होती है। उसमें अपने-अपने कर्मानुसार पशु-पक्षी, मनुष्य, पितर और देवताओंकी उत्पत्ति होती है ॥ २५ ॥ इन मन्वन्तरोंमें भगवान् सत्त्वगुणका आश्रय ले, अपनी मनु आदि मूर्तियोंके द्वारा पौरुष प्रकट करते हुए इस विश्वका पालन करते हैं॥ २६

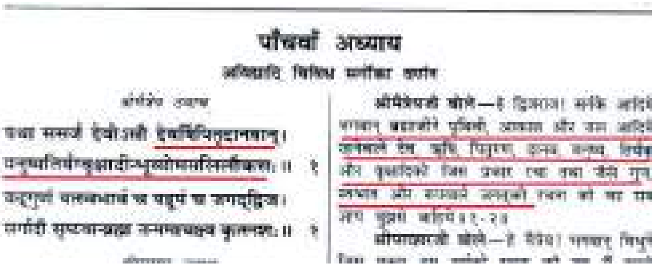
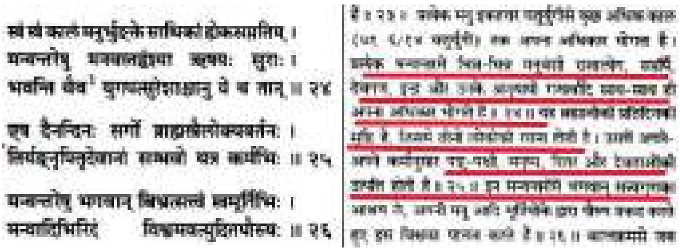
Maitreya said:
O chief among the twice-born (Brahmins), at the beginning of creation, Brahma ji created the Devas, sages, ancestors (Pitṛs), demons (Dānavas), humans, animals, birds, and trees, who dwell in the earth, sky, water, and other realms. Please describe to me how he created them, and how he gave them their qualities, natures, and forms. (Verses 1–2)

Verse 24:
Each Manu enjoys his rule for a period slightly longer than seventy-one Chaturyugas (specifically, 71 6/14 Chaturyugas). In each Manvantara (the reign of a Manu), different kings of the lineage of that Manu, the seven great sages (Saptarishis), groups of Devas , Indra, and their followers like the Gandharvas exercise their respective authorities.

Verse 25:
This is the daily creation (naimittika sṛṣṭi) of Lord Brahma, in which the three worlds are formed. According to their individual karmas, beings such as animals, birds, humans, ancestors, and Devas come into existence.

Verse 26:
In these Manvantaras, the Lord, taking refuge in the quality of Sattva (purity), manifests his divine energy (Pauruṣa) through forms like Manu and sustains the universe.





Taittriya Aranyaka 5.14.8 as well as Taittriya Upanishad 2.8.1 of Krishna Yajurveda clearly says devatas such as Indra, wind god, Agni, and Yama perform their duties because they are afraid of the Supreme Brahman.

भीषाऽस्माद्वातः पवते । भीषोदंति सूर्यः । भीषाऽस्मादग्निंश्चेन्द्रश्च । मृत्युर्धावति पञ्चंम इति
Meaning: From the fear of Him, Vatah (the wind) blows, from fear of Him the sun rises. From fear of Him the five divinities such as Agni (fire), Indra, and Mrityu (death) work.

> Through the fear of Him the Wind bloweth; through the fear of Him the Sun riseth; through the fear of Him Indra and Agni and Death hasten in their courses. Behold this exposition of the Bliss to which ye shall hearken. Let there be a young man, excellent & lovely in his youth, a great student; let him have fair manners and a most firm heart

Katha Upanishad 2.3.3 of Krishna Yajurveda also clearly says how devatas perform all their duties out of fear of the Supreme Brahman.
भयादस्याग्निस्तपति भयात्तपति सूर्यः । भयादिन्द्रश्चाग्निश्च मृत्युर्धावति पंचमः ॥
Meaning: Out of fear of God, the fire burns, the sun heats, and Indra, Vayu as well and Yama function briskly

> For fear of Him the fire burneth, for fear of Him the sun groweth hot, for fear of Him Indra and Vayu and Death hasten in their courses.

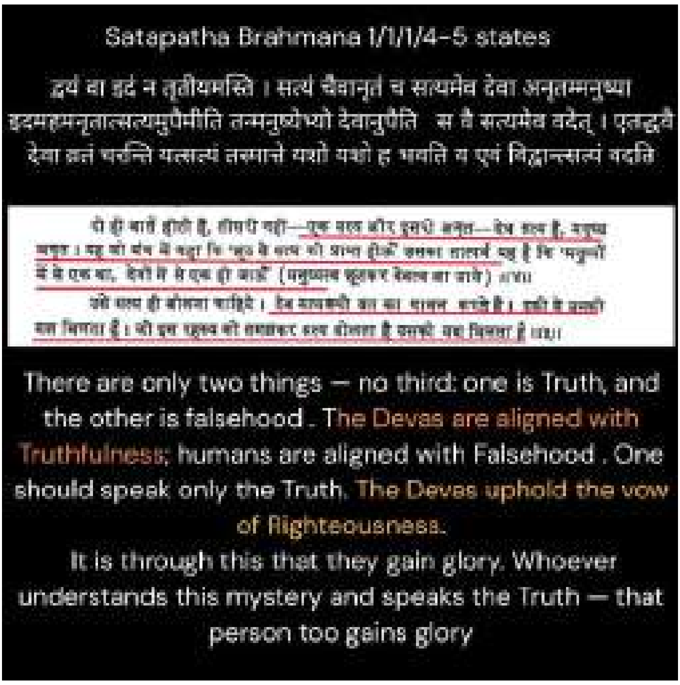
Nature and Qualities of Devas

Satapatha Brahmana 1/1/1/4-5 states

द्वयं वा इदं न तृतीयमस्ति । सत्यं चैवानृतं च सत्यमेव देवा अनृतम्मनुष्या इदमहमनृतात्सत्यमुपैमीति तन्मनुष्येभ्यो देवानुपैति स वै सत्यमेव वदेत् । एतद्धवै देवा व्रतं चरन्ति यत्सत्यं तस्मात्ते यशो यशो ह भवति य एवं विद्वान्त्सत्यं वदति

There are only two things — no third: one is Truth, and the other is falsehood . The Devas are aligned with Truthfulness; humans are aligned with Falsehood . One should speak only the Truth. The Devas uphold the vow of Righteousness.

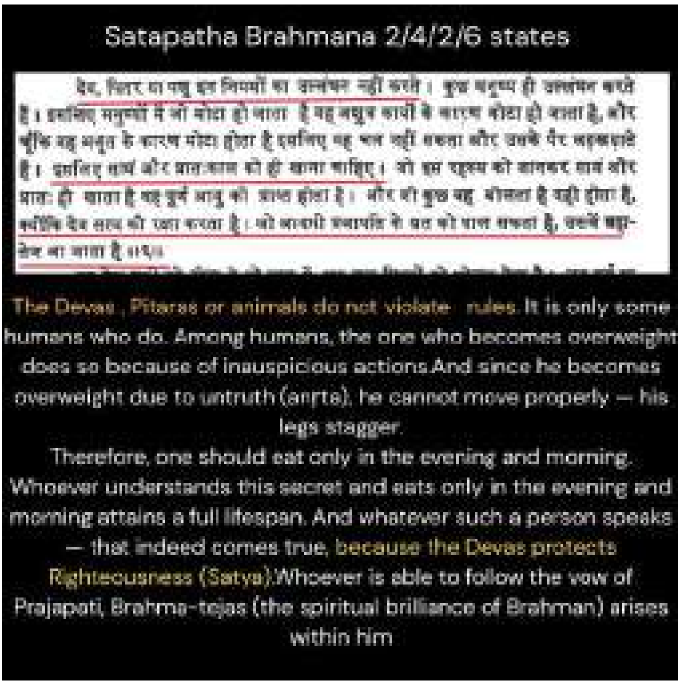
It is through this that they gain glory. Whoever understands this mystery and speaks the Truth — that person too gains glory



Satapatha Brahmana 2/4/2/6 states

The Devas , Pitaras or animals do not violate rules. It is only some humans who do. Among humans, the one who becomes overweight does so because of inauspicious actions.And since he becomes overweight due to untruth (anṛta), he cannot move properly — his legs stagger.

Therefore, one should eat only in the evening and morning. Whoever understands this secret and eats only in the evening and morning attains a full lifespan. And whatever such a person speaks — that indeed comes true, because the Devas protects Righteousness (Satya).Whoever is able to follow the vow of Prajapati, Brahma-tejas (the spiritual brilliance of Brahman) arises within him



Aitraya Brahmana 1.6 states

सत्यसंहिता वै देवाः ।that is the Devas are righteous

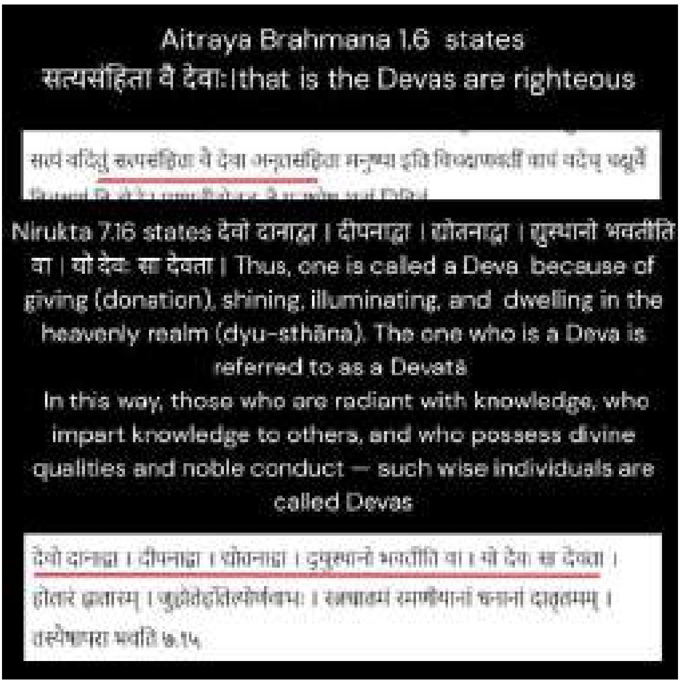
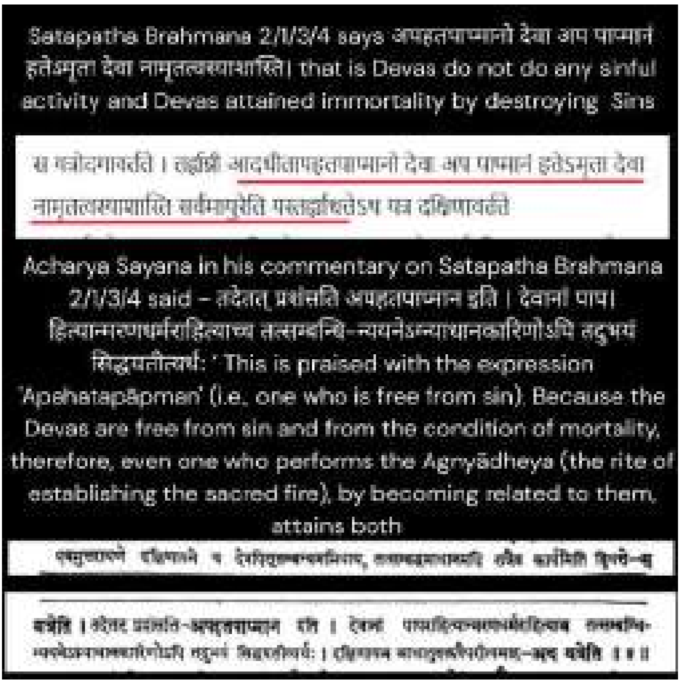
Nirukta 7.16 states देवो दानाद्वा । दीपनाद्वा । द्योतनाद्वा । द्युस्थानो भवतीति वा । यो देवः सा देवता । Thus, one is called a Deva because of iving (donation), shining, illuminating, and dwelling in the heavenly realm (dyu-sthāna). The one who is a Deva is referred to as a Devatā

In this way, those who are radiant with knowledge, who impart knowledge to others, and who possess divine qualities and noble conduct — such wise individuals are called Devas



Satapatha Brahmana 2/1/3/4 says अपहतपाप्मानो देवा अप पाप्मानं हतेऽमृता देवा नामृतत्वस्याशास्ति। that is Devas do not do any sinful activity and Devas attained immortality by destroying Sins

Acharya Sayana in his commentary on Satapatha Brahmana 2/1/3/4 said – तदेतत् प्रशंसति अपहतपाप्मान इति । देवानां पाप। हित्यान्मरणधर्मराहित्याच्च तत्सम्बन्धि-न्ययनेऽग्न्याधानकारिणोऽपि तदुभयं सिद्धयतीत्यर्थः ' This is praised with the expression 'Apahatapāpman' (i.e., one who is free from sin). Because the Devas are free from sin and from the condition of mortality, therefore, even one who performs the Agnyādheya (the rite of establishing the sacred fire), by becoming related to them, attains both



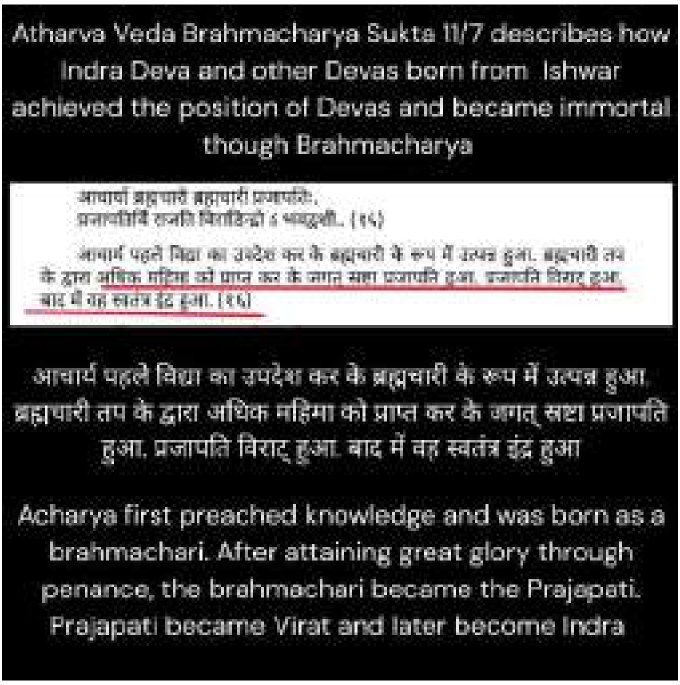
These evidences from Vedic Literature are enough to debunk all sorts of allegations on Devas

Devas follow Strict Brahmacharya

Atharva Veda Brahmacharya Sukta 11/7 describes how Indra Deva and other Devas born from Ishwar achieved the position of Devas and became immortal though Brahmacharya

आचार्य पहले विद्या का उपदेश कर के ब्रह्मचारी के रूप में उत्पन्न हुआ. ब्रह्मचारी तप के द्वारा अधिक महिमा को प्राप्त कर के जगत् स्रष्टा प्रजापति हुआ. प्रजापति विराट् हुआ. बाद में वह स्वतंत्र इंद्र हुआ

Acharya first preached knowledge and was born as a brahmachari. After attaining great glory through penance, the brahmachari became the Prajapati. Prajapati became Virat and later become Indra



Atharva Veda Brahmacharya Sukta 11/7/19

ब्रह्मचर्य रूपी तप के द्वारा देवों ने मृत्यु का हनन कर दिया अर्थात् देव अमर हो गए. इंद्र ने ब्रह्मचर्य के द्वारा देवों के लिए स्वर्ग पर अधिकार किया

Through the penance of Brahmacharya , the Devas defeated death, that is, the Devas became immortal. Indra took control of Swarga for the Devas through Brahmacharya.

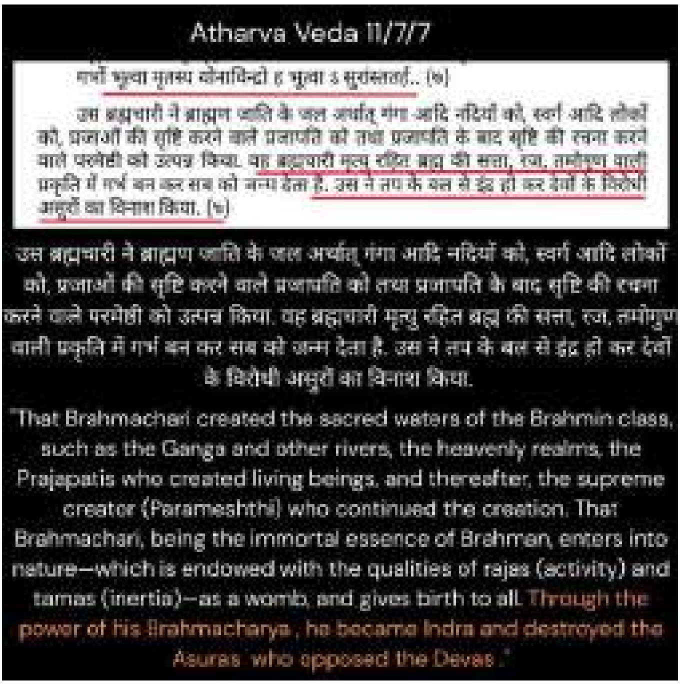
उस ब्रह्मचारी ने ब्राह्मण जाति के जल अर्थात् गंगा आदि नदियों को, स्वर्ग आदि लोकों को, प्रजाओं की सृष्टि करने वाले प्रजापति को तथा प्रजापति के बाद सृष्टि की रचना करने वाले परमेष्ठी को उत्पन्न किया. वह ब्रह्मचारी मृत्यु रहित ब्रह्म की सत्ता, रज, तमोगुण वाली प्रकृति में गर्भ बन कर सब को जन्म देता है. उस ने तप के बल से इंद्र हो कर देवों के विरोधी असुरों का विनाश किया.

"That Brahmachari created the sacred waters of the Brahmin class, such as the Ganga and other rivers, the heavenly realms, the Prajapatis who created living beings, and thereafter, the supreme creator (Parameshthi) who continued the creation. That Brahmachari, being the immortal essence of Brahman, enters into nature—which is endowed with the qualities of rajas (activity) and tamas (inertia)—as a womb, and gives birth to all. Through the power of his Brahmacharya , he became Indra and destroyed the Asuras who opposed the Devas ."



Atharva Veda 11/7/11 states only By Brahmacharya one can become Devas including Devraj Indra and other Devas इस स्वर्ग के नीचे एक सूर्यात्मक अग्नि है और दूसरी पृथ्वी के ऊपर है. इस स्वर्ग और धरती के मध्य दोनों अग्नियां आपस में मिल कर उदय होती हैं. उन सूर्य और अग्नि से संबंधित किरणें धरती और स्वर्ग के मध्य आश्रय लेती हैं. ब्रह्मचारी अपने तप की महिमा से उन का देवता बनता है.

Beneath this heaven, there is a solar fire, and another exists above the earth. Between heaven and earth, these two fires unite and rise together. The rays associated with that sun and fire take refuge in the space between earth and heaven. Through the greatness of his austerity (tapas), the Brahmachari becomes the Devas

Atharva Veda 11/7/14 states all Devas including Devraj Indra and other Devas follow Strict Brahmacharya and live in Brahmacharya

ब्रह्मचर्य का पालन करने वाला पुरुष दीप्ति वाले वेदरूपी ब्रह्म को धारण करता है. उस वेद से सभी देव संबंधित हैं. देवों का निवास बना हुआ ब्रह्मचारी प्राण और अपान के बाद ज्ञान को, मन, वाणी, हृदय और मेधा को उत्पन्न करता है

A man who practices Brahmacharya attains the Brahm in the form of the Veda which is full of light. All the Devas are related to that Veda. Brahmacharya is the abode of the Devas it produces knowledge, mind, speech, heart and intelligence after Prana and Apan.

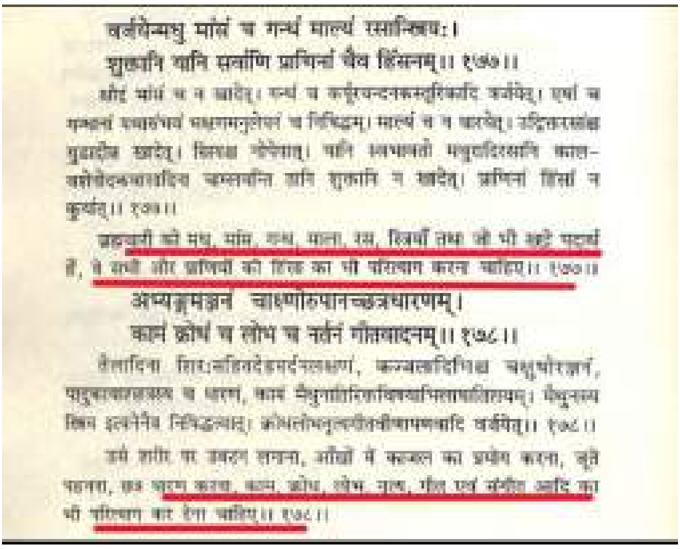
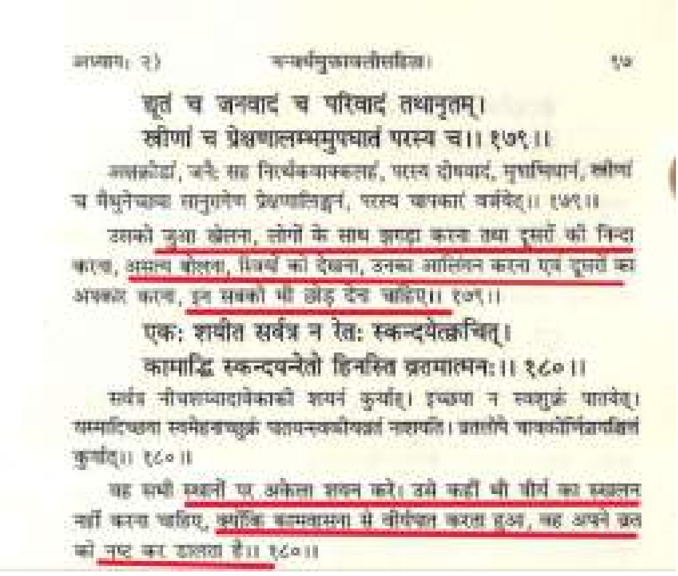
Brahmachari should avoid intoxicants, meat, perfumes, garlands, and pleasurable foods, as well as all fermented substances and violence towards living beings. He should abstain from massaging with oils, applying collyrium (eye-liners), using footwear, or carrying umbrellas.One should renounce lust, anger, greed, dancing, singing, playing musical instruments, gambling, slandering, lying, and gossiping .He should avoid looking at or touching women, harming others, and should sleep alone.A Brahmachari must never waste his semen due to lust, as it destroys his vow of celibacy.





All these Rules and Restrictions like behaving free from sin , Non-violence, celibacy, truth, simplicity, absence of anger, renunciation of fault-finding, restraint of the senses and not to gossip and keeping senses under control and behaving friendly with everyone, forgiving and avoiding intoxicants, meat, perfumes, garlands, and pleasurable foods, as well as all fermented substances and violence towards living beings

NOW I WILL DEBUNK HIS ALLEGATIONS OF RAPE ONE BY ONE

Allegations-

Vishnu

Vishnu is said to have raped Tulsi/Vrinda by assuming the guise of her husband. What can be more disgusting than a god raping a chaste lady? And much worse is the celebration of this rape as a festival, yes you read it right. Hindus proudly celebrate the rape of Vrinda by Vishnu as a festival called Tulsi Vivah.

Shiva Purana, Rudra Samhita 2, Yudha Khanda 5, Ch 23.38-45 "On seeing her husband, Vrnda too was delighted. She forgot her sorrow. She considered everything a dream. Delighted in the heart and with all the dormant passions kindled up, she sported with him for many days in the middle of that forest. Once at the end of the sexual intercourse she realised that it was Visnu. Vrnda rebuked him angrily and spoke thus. Vrnda said:—Fie on this misdeed of Visnu in outraging the modesty of another man's wife. I have now realised you as the wielder of illusion, appearing in the guise of an ascetic. Sanatkumara said:—O Vyasa, saying thus in great anger she showed her brilliant powers as a staunch chaste lady by cursing Visnu. "O base foe of the Daityas, defiler of other people's virtue, O wicked one, take this curse from me, greater in force than all persons. The two persons whom you made to appear in front of me shall become Raksasas and abduct your wife. You will be distressed on account of separation from your wife roaming about with Sesa 'lord of snakes' who posed as your disciple here. You will seek the help of monkeys in the forest." Tr. Board of Scholars, Edited by Jagdish Lal Shastri

This story is also supported by Skanda Purana II.iv.21-10-24, Shiva Purana, Rudra Samhita 2, Yudha Khanda 5, Ch 41 verses 1-35, Brahma Vaivarta Purana, Prakriti Khanda 21.18-31 and also mentioned in Devi Bhagavatam 9.24.14-22 with a slight variation, readers can check Devi Bhagavatam verses which are available online at Sacred-texts.com. I will avoid posting the same story from different scriptures as I don't want to flood this article with several passages. The variation of this story is in only in names, the name of Tulasi also appears as Vrinda and her husband Shankachuda's name is replaced by Jalandhar.

This poor lady named Vrinda/Tulasi was a devotee of Vishnu, it must have been so disheartening for her to be raped by the man whom she worshipped so devotedly every day. As per Shiva Purana, Rudra Samhita section 5, Ch 41.3-5 Vishnu assumed the form of her husband and raped her on the behest of Shiva. It was Shiva who ordered such a heinous act. This was done with an intention to kill her husband on the battlefield, it is said that her husband Shankachuda/Jalandhar couldn't be killed unless the chastity of his wife is outraged. Shiva is part of Trimurti and is considered the Destroyer but Shiva the so-called Destroyer couldn't destroy Jalandhar/Shankachuda so he commanded Vishnu to go and rape Vrinda/Tulsi. She cursed Vishnu to become a rock and that in his next incarnation (as Rama

'पद्म-पुराण' में इस आख्यायिका का जो कथानक (Plot) अङ्कित किया है वह भौतिक विज्ञान से सम्बन्ध रखता है। तुलसी नामक प्रसिद्ध औषधि विषैलेजन्य अनेक ज्वरों एवं मलेरिया के कीटाणुओं (Germs) को समूल नष्ट कर देती है यह बात आजकल की नई खोज से भी सिद्ध हो चुकी है। प्राचीन महर्षियों ने 'ऋतम्भरा' प्रज्ञा द्वारा इस रहस्य की साङ्गोपाङ्ग गवेषणा की थी, इसीलिए हमारी दैनन्दिनी दिनचर्या में तुलसी के सेवन का पर्याप्त उपयोग पाया जाता

जल को धारण करने वाला बादल ही 'जलंधर' है और उस बादल में सर्वाङ्गभाव से रहने वाली 'विद्युत्-शक्ति' ही वृन्दा है। साध्वी स्त्री का सर्वस्व जिस प्रकार उसका एकमात्र पति ही होता है उसी प्रकार मेघान्तर्वर्ती विद्युत् का भी अनन्य आश्रय बादल ही है। यह मेघ क्षण क्षण में घोर रूप बनकर आकाश में विचरता है। कई बार तो यह 'कुन्द-इन्दु-धवल-कमल-देह-द्युति' बन कर एवं कभी नील में नीलकण्ठ को लजा दिखाता हुआ—'अथ, एष विमल पराभव कारिणी! त्रिदशविमोहिनी, स्वयमविहारिणी'—प्रकृतिरूप पार्वती देवी को भी विमुग्ध कर डालने को उद्यत होता है। सूर्य चन्द्रादि ग्रह, नक्षत्र, तारे, सितारे और सीतारे अपनी अपनी कान्ति रूप मालाओं को इस घनघमण्ड के प्रतिरोध से मानो व्याकुलित सी देख पाते हैं। यह जलन्धर दैवी-सम्पदा रूप प्राणीमात्र के जीवन आधार जलों को आत्मसात् कर के मानो उनके जीवन को मुट्ठी में ले लेता है अतएव वे सब विचलित हो उठते हैं। परन्तु मेघान्तर्वर्ती विद्युत् की प्रवाह धारा जब तक अविच्छिन्न रूप से

प्रवाहित होती है तब तक वाष्पभूत जलन्धर का एक कण भी पृथ्वी पर नहीं टपक सकता। अतएव पार्वती रूप प्रकृति के परामर्श से व्यापनशील वायुरूप विष्णु—तरलता से प्रवाहित होता हुआ मेघान्तर्वर्ती विद्युत् रूप वृन्दा का सर्वतोभावेन सम्मर्दन करता है, बस! इस वायु के संघर्ष से ज्योंही मेघान्तर्वर्ती विद्युत् में स्पन्दन-क्रिया का संचार हुआ कि वाष्पभूत जलराश सिमट सिमट कर क्रमशः पृथ्वी पर गिर जाता है।

इसीप्रकार तुलसीदल में जो परम्परागत दिव्य शक्ति है वह वायुसंघात-भूत शालिग्राम शिला के संसर्ग से और भी अनन्त गुण हो जाती है, यही इसका आशय है।

यद्यपि इस कथानक में पात्रों के नाम तक भी ऐसे चुने गये हैं कि जिनके कहने मात्र से उक्त रूपक का ढाँचा सहसा मन में बैठ जाता है, जैसे—असुर का नाम 'जलन्धर' होना ही अक्षरार्थ के अनुसार उसे मेघ सिद्ध करता है, और संचीभूत जलवृन्द की नियामक शक्ति को वृन्दा के अतिरिक्त और कुछ कहा ही क्या जा सकता है। तथापि किसी अन्यथा सिद्ध को अप्रामाणिकता के चक्कर में पड़ने का अवसर न मिल सके, एतदर्थ यहाँ तादृश प्रमाणों का कुछ संकेत करना अनावश्यक न होगा, यथा—

(क) [प्रजापतिः] तं पाप्मानं व्यवृश्चत्। यदवृश्चत् तस्माद्वृष्टिः। (तैत्तिरीय ३ । १० । ६ । १)

(ख) वृष्टिर्वै याज्या विद्युदेव। विद्युद्धीदं वृष्टिमन्नाद्यं संप्रयच्छति। (ऐतरेय २ । ४१)

(ग) अयं वै वर्षस्येष्टे योऽयं [वायुः] पवते। (शतपथ १ । ८ । ३ । १२)

(घ) तस्माद्यां दिशं वायुरेति तां दिशं वृष्टिरन्वेति। (शतपथ ८ । २ । ३ । ५)

अर्थात्—(क) प्रजापालक विष्णु भगवान् ने उस 'पाप्मा' नामक असुर को छेदन कर डाला। क्योंकि उसका व्रश्चन (छेदन) किया गया था अतएव इस क्रिया को वृष्टि कहते हैं (ख) यजन योग्य विद्युत् ही वस्तुतः वृष्टि है क्योंकि यह विद्युत् ही वर्षा और अन्न आदि पदार्थों के

इस प्रकार तुलसी विटप के अलौकिक चमत्कार का परोक्षपद्धति से निर्देश करने वाला यह कथानक, 'पौराणिक-वनस्पति-विज्ञान' का ज्वलन्त उदाहरण है। इसका हम आधिभौतिक निरूपण करने के बाद अब आधिदैविक विवेचन करते हैं।

First of all we have to understand the real Tatparya and Meaning behind Vishnu Vrinda story in Puranas . The cloud that holds water is Jalandhar and the विद्युत residing in this cloud in its entirety is Vrinda. Just as a pious wife is devoted only to her husband, similarly, the only refuge of the cloud-borne विद्युत is the cloud itself. The cloud [Jalandhar] frequently changes shape in the sky, sometimes appearing white as snow with hints of blue, reminiscent of the goddess Parvati's form, enticing and omnipresent, charming the universe and traversing with free will. Planets, stars, and constellations look on as this mass of clouds absorbs water, seemingly taking life in its grasp. However, as long as the flow of विद्युत [Vrinda] within the cloud[Jalandhar] remains uninterrupted, not a single drop of vapor condenses to fall to Earth.

. Following Parvati's suggestion as Prakriti , Vishnu, as air, approaches the विद्युत [Vrinda] in the cloud as it flows in all directions. As soon as this विद्युत[Vrinda], energized by the air[Vishnu], begins to vibrate, the vapor condenses and falls to Earth in droplets. Not every air current brings rain; even modern science identifies only specific types of air currents, like the monsoon, as rain-producing. In this allegory, Air (Vishnu) has to disguise itself as a cloud to approach Vrinda . Only then does she disperse and fall to Earth, symbolizing the fact that only particular winds cause rain. The divine Vidyut within the clouds, which has been referred to in scriptures as Divya Agni derived from electric energy, mixes with water particles, following the principle "Adbhyah Prithvi, Prithvibhyah Oshadhayah" (from water comes Earth, and from Earth, the herbs), resulting in the Tulsi plant.

This is why the Tulsi plant is imbued with extraordinary powers, inherited from the divine विद्युत within clouds. To convey this mystical aspect, Vedavyasa shows Vrinda, a pure devotee, reincarnating as the Tulsi plant after her curse. Vrinda cursed Lord Vishnu to become a stone, the Shaligram, which is essentially an embodiment of condensed air. Just as air intensifies even a small spark of fire, similarly, the divine fire within Tulsi leaves is enhanced when in contact with the Shaligram, symbolizing the unlimited power of Tulsi.

According to Nirukta (10/10) the Rishis prefer to explain the Deeper Vedic Philosophical and Metaphysical meaning with the help of आख्यान and stories . Through this Vishnu Vrinda story in Shiva Purana the Science of Rainfall and Watercycle as mentioned in Shruti has been explained through आख्यान and personification and hence should be understood in its original Vedic Swaroop

Shiva Purana, Uma Samhita 5, chapter 4, verse 17 "O great sage, Viṣṇu was deluded by Kāma by the power of Śiva's Māyā. He outraged the modesty of other men's wives many times." Tr. J.L. Shastri

Refutation-

According to R.C. Hazra, the Uma Saṁhitā of the Shiva Purāṇa is a very late addition. He notes that it draws heavily from the Jñāna Saṁhitā, which itself is dated to around 950 CE. Based on this, it can be reasonably inferred that the Uma Saṁhitā was incorporated into the Shiva Purāṇa sometime after the 10th century CE.

IV. The Bhaumasaṃhitā,[79] also called Auma/Umāsaṃhitā, is represented in the class B editions only. The text introduces Kṛṣṇa on a visit to Kailāsa and performing penance there to Śiva, in order to obtain a son. He meets Upamanyu, and requests him to tell him about the greatness of Śiva. Upamanyu complies, and praises Śiva and his trident; he extols Śiva's power to save his devotees from hell. This discussion leads into several chapters on different types of sins, and on the description of hell and the suffering in it. Ways to avoid this suffering include gifts of food, performing penances, listening to the purāṇas, etc. The saṃhitā subsequently describes the seven dvīpas of the earth, and other component parts of the universe. It ends with discourses on a variety of topics, such as the development of man, from the foetus, through childhood, youth, marriage, old age, etc.; creation and wars, etc. In Hazra's opinion the text borrows most of its chapters from the Jñānasaṃhitā.

XIII. The Jñānasaṃhitā[87] has already been referred to on several occasions in this description of the Śiva', because, in Hazra's opinion, other saṃhitās borrowed verses and even chapters from it. The text recognizes the Vedas as the highest authority, but it was Śiva, as pañcabrahmarūpin, who communicated them to Viṣṇu. Śiva shall be worshiped with Vedic mantras, even though the saṃhitā does not, therefore, reject the authority of the Tantras and eventual Śiva worship with Āgamic rather than Vedic mantras. The nirguṇa Śiva is identical with the parabrahman; in his saguṇa form he manifests himself as Rudra. Prakṛti was born from Śiva's wish, and, from her, were born the other gods including Brahmā and Viṣṇu. This saṃhitā, like some of those discussed earlier, strongly encourages liṅga worship as the ideal way to worship Śiva himself. It urges worship under the guidance of a competent teacher; worship will lead to bhakti, then to jñāna, and, ultimately, to nirvāṇa, i.e. the realization that the only real thing is Śiva. Hazra points out that the text was influenced by the Kumārasambhava, Raghuvaṃśa, and Kirātārjunīya. He surmises that it may have been composed in Benares, by someone who was also familiar with the banks of the Narmadā, not before A.D. 950.

The Śiva Purāṇa, as a whole, is one of the most composite and unwieldy Purāṇas, having been composed and expanded by different authors over various periods. There exist two primary versions: the Bombay 1884, Venkat 1895–96, and Venga Manuscript (Class A); and the Venkat 1906, 1965 Pandita Pustakalaya Manuscript (Class B). According to R.C. Hazra, the sections found in the Class A Manuscript are older and more authentic, whereas those in the Class B Manuscript (Including Uma Samhita) are very recent compositions . Most significantly, the older and more authentic Class A Manuscript does not contain the Uma Saṁhitā.

saṃhitās, with different titles and different arrangements; two of their saṃhitās are not even listed in the Śiva' passages.[87] The following is a comparative survey of the saṃhitās, in the two passages of the Śiva' itself, and in the two sets of editions — which from now on I will refer to as class A and class B editions.

Śrī Narayana-Tattva

Scriptures such as the Mahābhārata—particularly the Viṣṇu Sahasranāma in Anuśāsana Parva, Chapter 149—describe Śrī Nārāyaṇa Deva as being utterly free from all defects, including lust, anger, and greed. He is Hṛṣīkeśa, the supreme master of all senses, and Śuddhātmā, the Pure Soul—completely untouched by impurities, attachments, and worldly illusions. Nārāyaṇa embodies absolute truth, divine consciousness, and eternal bliss, remaining beyond all material limitations and entirely free from sexual or any other form of desire or impurity. He is sinless—pure in every act, thought, and intention. As Dharmakṛt, He not only upholds dharma but practices it perfectly to establish it in the world. As Nivṛttātmā, His nature is intrinsically free from all worldly cravings, including lust and greed, and His mind remains eternally pure.

Allegations-

Indra raped Ahilya

Indra was quite popular among gods and sages for ravishing others' wives and had done this to Ahalya by assuming the form of her husband Sage Gautama, Skanda Purana V.iii.136.2-16 "There was a Brahmana named Gautama who was like another Brahma. He was endowed with truthfulness and piety. He was engrossed in the Vanaprastha stage of life. His blessed wife named Ahalya was very famous in all the three worlds as a woman endowed with beauty and prime of youth. Satakratu [Indra], the king of Devas

Indra is called the जार (Destroyer) of Ahalya (Night) in these sections of Shruti :

ShadVimsa Brahmana 1.1: -अहल्यायै जारोऽसी।अहलायाया ह मैत्रेय्या जार आस that is Indra is Destroyer of Ahilya

Shatpath Brahmana 3.3.4.18: -अहल्यायै जारोऽसी that is Indra (Sun) is destroyed of Ahilya (Night)

Satapatha Brahmana 4.5.9.4 says वै शुक्रो य एष तपत्येष उ एवेन्द्रस्तस्माच्छुक्राग्रान्गृह्णाति that is Sun is Indra

Taittriya Aranyaka Prapathak 1 Anuvak 12 says इन्द्राऽऽगच्छ हरिव आगच्छ मेधातिथेः । मेष वृषणश्वस्य मेने (३) । गौरावस्क-न्दिन्नहल्यायै जार that is Indra (sun) is the destroyer of Ahilya (night) and Indra comes to the sacrifice of Medhatithi

Drahyāyaṇa Śrautasūtram Patala 1 khanda 3 says इन्द्रागच्छ हरिव आगच्छ मेधातिथेर्मेषवृषणश्वस्य मेने गौरावास्कन्दिन्नहल्यायै जारकौशिकब्राह्मण गौतमब्रुवाणेति that is Indra comes to the Sacrifice of Medhatithi and Indra (Sun) is the destroyer of Ahilya (night)

In Nirukta 3.16, 3.3.4- सूर्य (Sun) is clearly called the जार (destroyer) of रात्रि (Night).

You might be wandering what is the meaning of गौतम (gautam) then? "उत्तमा गावो रश्मयो यस्य सः" That which has Excellent rays is Gautam. Here "चंद्रमा (moon) is Gautama

And Gautama means चन्द्र i.e. kaanta of Ahilya रश्मी गै उच्यते, गौ with तम meaning who shines bright. here because of Surya from whom the moon shines, has been called गौ (Gautam) The meaning that has to be taken as "Sun(Indra) is the

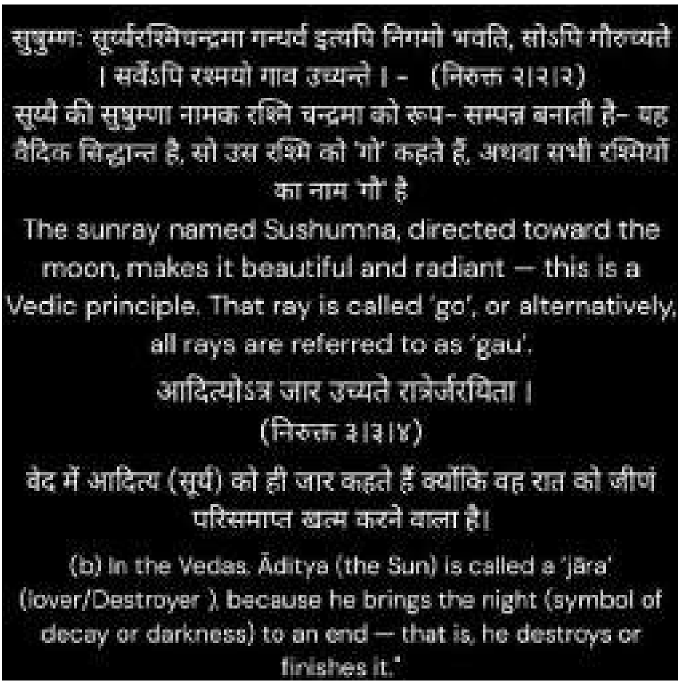
सूर्य्यै की सुषुम्णा नामक रश्मि चन्द्रमा को रूप- सम्पन्न बनाती है- यह वैदिक सिद्धान्त है, सो उस रश्मि को 'गो' कहते हैं, अथवा सभी रश्मियों का नाम 'गौ' है

The sunray named Sushumna, directed toward the moon, makes it beautiful and radiant — this is a Vedic principle. That ray is called 'go', or alternatively, all rays are referred to as 'gau'.

वेद में आदित्य (सूर्य) को ही जार कहते हैं क्योंकि वह रात को जीणं परिसमाप्त खत्म करने वाला है।

(b) In the Vedas, Āditya (the Sun) is called a 'jāra' (lover/Destroyer), because he brings the night (symbol of decay or darkness) to an end — that is, he destroys or finishes it."



Ancient Acharya Sri Kumarilla Bhatta had explained in his book Tantra Vartika 11.3.7

(2) The word "Indra"—proceeding from the root 'Idi' which signifies great glory—would signify one possessed of a resplendent glory; and as such it is taken as another name of the Sun; and he is the 'jāra'—destroyer (jarati-naçayati)—of 'Ahalyā'—(ahani līyate) that which disappears during the day, i.e., Night; as it is only when the Sun rises that the darkness of night is destroyed; and it is in this sense that we should take the sentence—"Indro' halyāyā jārah,"—which cannot be taken in its ordinary sense, of an illicit connection with a woman.

According to Ancient Acharya Kumarila Bhatta, in his commentary Tantravartika on the Mimamsa Darshan (page 189), writes that the name “Indra” refers to the Sun, and “Ahalya” refers to the night. When the Sun rises, the night is destroyed. This is why Indra is called the “Destroyer” (jar) of Ahalya. This does not mean that a deity named Indra had an illicit relationship with a woman named Ahalya. In Texts like Ramayana and Mahabharat this Scientific philosphy was adopted only in the form of a narrative and this is the real meaning of that Narrative and it should be understood within this context only

कारणरूप सनातन परमात्मा भगवान्‌का दर्शन कर लिया? ।। ४६ ।। नारदजीने कहा- भगवन् ! मैंने विश्वरूपधारी उन अविनाशी एवं कान्तिमान् परम पुरुषका दर्शन कर लिया। ऋषियोंसहित देवता तथा सम्पूर्ण लोक उन्हींके भीतर विराजमान हैं ।। ४७ ।। मैं इस समय भी आप दोनों सनातन पुरुषोंको देखकर यहीं श्वेतद्वीपनिवासी भगवान्‌की झाँकी कर रहा हूँ। वहाँ मैंने अव्यक्तरूपधारी श्रीहरिको जिन लक्षणोंसे सम्पन्न देखा था, आप दोनों व्यक्तरूपधारी पुरुष भी उन्हीं लक्षणोंसे सुशोभित हैं ।। ४८-४९ ।। इतना ही नहीं, मैंने आप दोनोंको वहाँ भी परमदेवके पास उपस्थित देखा था और उन्हीं परमात्माके भेजनेसे आज मैं फिर यहाँ आया हूँ ।। ५० ।। तीनों लोकोंमें धर्मके पुत्र आप दोनों महापुरुषोंके सिवा दूसरा कौन है, जो तेज, यश और श्रीमें उन्हीं परमेश्वरके समान हो ।। ५१ ।। उन भगवान् श्रीहरिने मुझसे सम्पूर्ण धर्मका वर्णन किया था। क्षेत्रज्ञका भी परिचय दिया था और यहाँ भविष्यमें उनके जो अवतार जैसे होनेवाले हैं, उन्हें भी बताया था ।। ५२ ।।वहाँ जो चन्द्रमाके समान गौरवर्णके पुरुष थे, वे सब-के-सब पाँचों इन्द्रियोंसे रहित अर्थात् पाञ्च-भौतिक शरीरसे शून्य, ज्ञानवान् तथा पुरुषोत्तम श्रीविष्णुके भक्त थे ।। ५३ ।।वे सदा उन नारायणदेवकी पूजा-अर्चा करते रहते हैं और भगवान् भी सदा उनके साथ प्रसन्नतापूर्वक क्रीड़ा करते रहते हैं। भगवान्‌को अपने भक्त बहुत ही प्रिय हैं तथा वे परमात्मा श्रीहरि ब्राह्मणोंके भी प्रेमी हैं ।। ५४ ।।वे विश्वका पालन करनेवाले सर्वव्यापी भगवान् बड़े भक्तवत्सल हैं। भगवद्भक्तोंके प्रेमी और प्रियतम श्रीहरि उनसे पूजित हो वहाँ सदा सुप्रसन्न रहते हैं ।।वे ही कर्ता, कारण और कार्य हैं। उनका बल और तेज अनन्त है। वे महायशस्वी भगवान् ही हेतु, आज्ञा, विधि और तत्त्वरूप हैं ।। ५६ ।।वे अपने आपको तपस्यामें लगाकर श्वेतद्वीपसे भी परे प्रकाशमान तेजोमय स्वरूपसे विख्यात हैं। उनका वह तेज अपने ही प्रकाशसे प्रकाशित है ।। ५७

My grandsire Arjuna, having obtained the assistance of Lord Vāsudeva, achieved a glorious victory. In that, he did nothing that could be called extraordinary, for when the Lord of the three worlds, Śrī Kṛṣṇa Himself, was His helper, I cannot believe that there was anything in all the three worlds which could have been unattainable for him.

O Brāhmaṇa, all my forefathers were indeed blessed, for the divine Janārdana Himself was ever ready to protect and bless them. The vision of Lord Nārāyaṇa—worshipped in all the worlds—can be obtained only through great austerities; yet my grandsire effortlessly obtained the direct sight of that Lord adorned with the Śrīvatsa mark upon His chest.

But more worthy of gratitude than all of them is Nārada, the son of Brahmā. I do not consider the immortal Nārada to be in any way less radiant than other sages, for he reached Śvetadvīpa and there obtained the direct vision of Śrī Hari Himself. Clearly, this divine vision was the fruit of the Lord's own grace. O Sage, why was it that, after beholding Lord Nārāyaṇa in His Aniruddha form in Śvetadvīpa, Nārada again set forth for Badarikāśrama to see Nara and Nārāyaṇa?

Vaiśampāyana said: I bow to the supremely radiant Lord Vyāsa, by whose grace I narrate this tale of Lord Nārāyaṇa.

When Nārada returned from the great continent of Śveta after beholding the immortal Śrī Hari, he swiftly reached Mount Meru. He carried in his heart the charge entrusted to him by Lord Hari Himself.

Then a great wonder arose in his mind—"How was it that, after traversing such a far-off path, I have returned here safely?"

Thereafter, from Mount Meru he journeyed toward Mount Gandhamādana and descended from the sky near the great holy place of Badarī.

There he beheld the two ancient divine sages, Nara and Nārāyaṇa, absorbed in Self-realization, having undertaken mighty vows and performing great austerities.

They shone with brilliance surpassing even the sun that illumines all the worlds. The Śrīvatsa mark adorned their chests, and they wore matted locks upon their heads. In their hands was the mark of a swan, upon their feet the mark of a discus. They had broad chests, long arms, four seeds in their scrotum, sixty teeth and eight molars, deep voices like the sound of clouds, beautiful faces, wide foreheads, graceful eyebrows, lovely chins, and charming noses—altogether of wondrous beauty.

Their heads seemed as though covered by a crown-like canopy. Beholding those two great beings adorned with such auspicious marks, Nārada felt great joy. Lord Nara and Lord Nārāyaṇa welcomed and honored Nārada, inquiring after his welfare.

Then, gazing upon them, Nārada thought within himself: "Ah! These two great sages are exactly like the exalted members of the divine assembly whom I beheld in Śvetadvīpa." Thinking thus, he circumambulated them and at upon a beautiful seat of kuśa grass.

Thereafter, those two sages—abodes of austerity, fame, and radiance, endowed with self-restraint and tranquility—completed their morning rites and, offering water for washing the feet and the ritual welcome, worshiped Nārada.

Having finished their daily duties and the honoring of their guest, they too sat upon seats of kuśa grass. As the three of them sat there, that place shone like a sacrificial pavilion illumined by the blazing flames of three ghee-fed fires.

After Nārada had partaken of hospitality, rested in comfort, and was seated at ease, Nārāyaṇa spoke to him thus:

Nara and Nārāyaṇa said: “O divine sage! Have you now gone to Śvetadvīpa and beheld the eternal Supreme Being, the original cause of both of us?”

Nārada said: “O Lord, I have indeed seen that eternal, radiant Supreme Person who is the form of the whole universe. The gods with the sages, and all the worlds, dwell within Him.

Even now, beholding you two eternal persons here, I seem to be looking upon that very Lord of Śvetadvīpa. The marks and attributes with which I saw the unmanifest Śrī Hari there are the same with which you two, in manifest form, are adorned here. Not only that—I saw you both even there, standing near the Supreme Lord; and it is by His command that I have come here today.

In all the three worlds, apart from you two great souls—the sons of Dharma—who else can equal that Supreme Lord in brilliance, glory, and majesty?

That Lord Śrī Hari explained to me the entirety of dharma, gave me the knowledge of the knower of the field (kṣetrajña), and described to me the future incarnations He will assume here.

There, the fair-complexioned men, shining like the moon, were entirely free of the five senses—that is, devoid of the five-elemental body—yet possessed of knowledge and devoted to the Supreme Person, Śrī Viṣṇu.

They ever worship that Lord Nārāyaṇa, and the Lord in turn ever plays with them joyfully. The Lord dearly loves His devotees, and He is especially fond of the brāhmaṇas.

That all-pervading Lord, preserver of the universe, is supremely devoted to His devotees. Pleased with His devotees’ love, He ever remains delighted there, being Himself the doer, the cause, and the effect. His power and radiance are infinite. He is the great and glorious Lord, the source, the command, the ordinance, and the truth itself.

Devoting Himself to austerities, He resides beyond even Śvetadvīpa, known by His resplendent, self-luminous form, whose light shines by its own brilliance.

उन दोनों देवताओंके मस्तक छत्रके समान प्रतीत होते थे। ऐसे शुभलक्षणोंसे सम्पन्न उन दोनों महापुरुषोंका दर्शन करके नारदजीको बड़ी प्रसन्नता हुई। भगवान् नर और नारायणने भी नारदजीका स्वागत-सत्कार करके उनका कुशल-समाचार पूछा ॥ ३८-३९ ॥

तदनन्तर नारदजीने उन दोनों पुरुषोत्तमोंकी ओर देखकर मन-ही-मन विचार किया, अहो! मैंने श्वेतद्वीपमें भगवान्‌की सभाके भीतर जिन सर्वभूतवन्दित सदस्योंको देखा था, ये दोनों ऋषिश्रेष्ठ भी वैसे ही हैं ॥

इति संचिन्त्य मनसा कृत्वा चाभिप्रदक्षिणम् ॥ ४१ ॥

इसके बाद वहाँ आतिथ्य ग्रहण करके सुखपूर्वक बैठकर विश्राम करते हुए नारदजीसे नारायणने इस प्रकार कहा ॥ ४५½ ॥

नरनारायणावूचतुः

अपीदानीं स भगवान् परमात्मा सनातनः ॥ ४६ ॥
श्वेतद्वीपे त्वया दृष्ट आवयोः प्रकृतिः परा ।

नारद उवाच

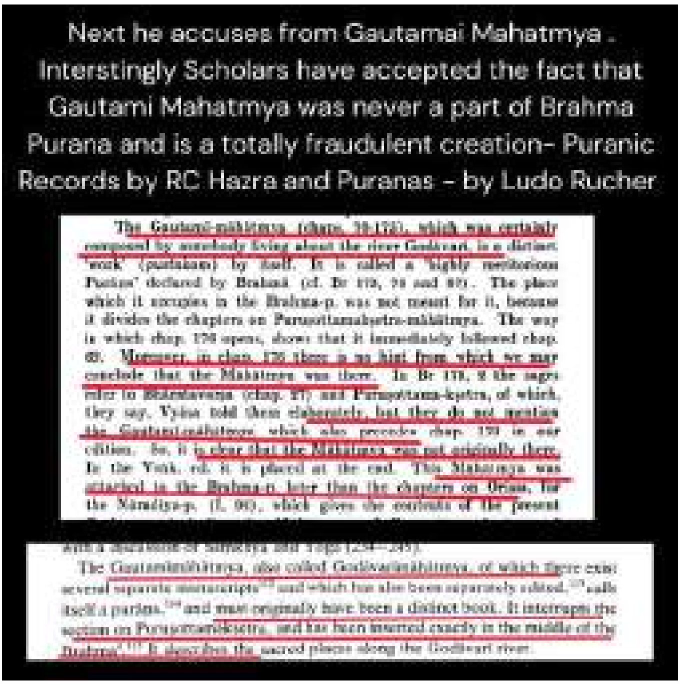
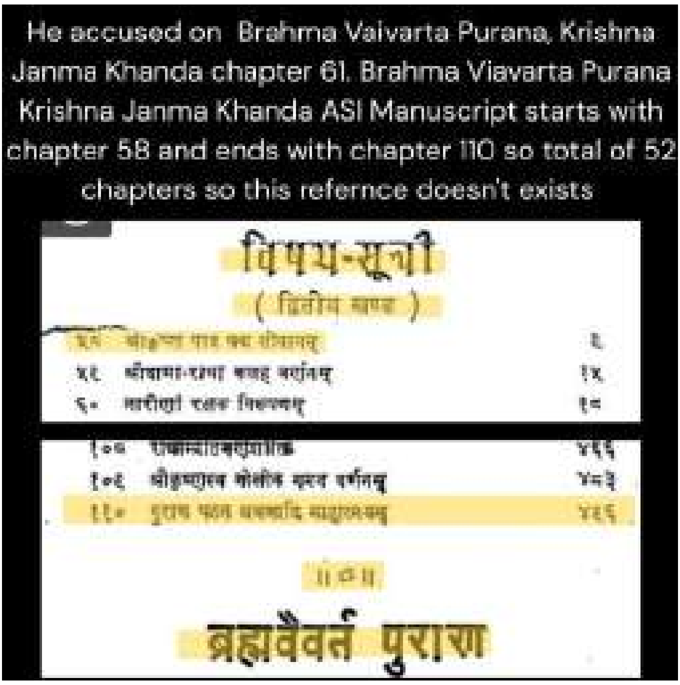
He accuses from Gautami Mahatmya . Interestingly Scholars have accepted the fact that Gautami Mahatmya was never a part of Brahma Purana and is a totally fraudulent creation- Puranic Records by RC Hazra and Puranas – by Ludo Rucher



Coming to Allegations on Brahma Vaivarta Purana, Krishna Janma Khanda chapter 61.

He accused on Brahma Vaivarta Purana, Krishna Janma Khanda chapter 61. Brahma Viavarta Purana Krishna Janma Khanda ASI Manuscript starts with chapter 58 and ends with chapter 110 so total of 52 chapters so this refernce doesn't exists



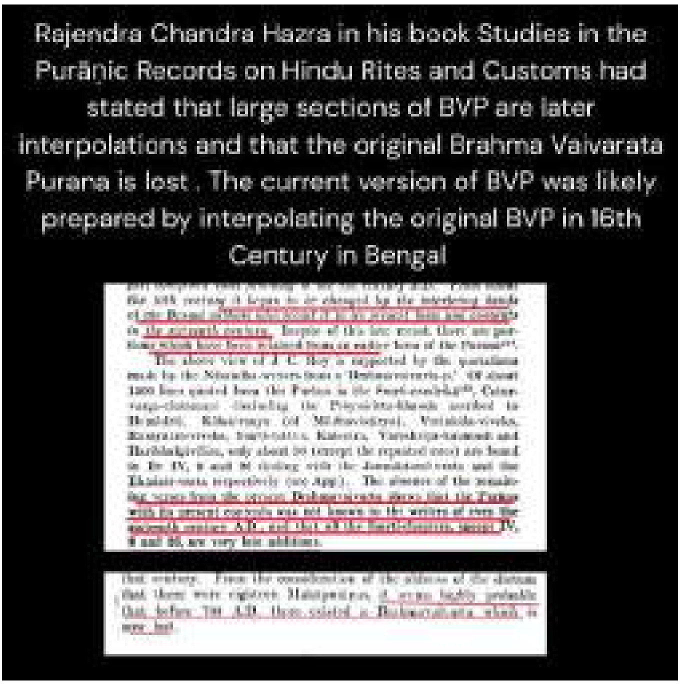
Allegations-

Brahma Vaivarta Purana mentioned the rape of Rambha by Indra.

Brahma Vaivarta Purana, Krishna Janma Khanda, chapter 14, verses 45-51 "…now I am going to narrate the story of Rambha to you, Rambha was born in the land of Bharata as daughter of Sucandara…the king Sucandra gave away his daughter in marriage to Janamejaya along with several riches…The king enjoyed her company at several places. Once the king started and Asvamedha sacrifice. At that point of time Indra stole away the sacrificial horse and concealed himself in the royal palaces. Thinking that the Sacrificial horse would be quite beautiful she went to the stable alone playfully. On reaching the horse, Indra appeared on the scene and forcibly enjoyed her company. He had sex with her in spite of her objecting to it. After the performance, Indra was fainted and he lost the senses about the day or night. The beautiful ladies coming in touch with Indra ended her life and Indra getting terrified from the king went back to the heaven." Tr. Shanti Lal Nagar, edited by Acharya Ramesh Chaturvedi

Refutation-

Rajendra Chandra Hazra in his book Studies in the Purāṇic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs had stated that large sections of BVP are later interpolations and that the original Brahma Vaivarata Purana is lost. The current version of BVP was likely prepared by interpolating the original BVP in 16th Century in Bengal.



Archaelogical survey of India prepared a critical edition of Brahma Vaivarat Purana based on the different manuscripts found all over India and prepared a critical edition in which they removed all those interpolated chapters and portions. I am providing the link of Critical edition Brahma Vaivarata Purana Volume 1 and 2 translated by Ram Sharma Acharya QR code provided here

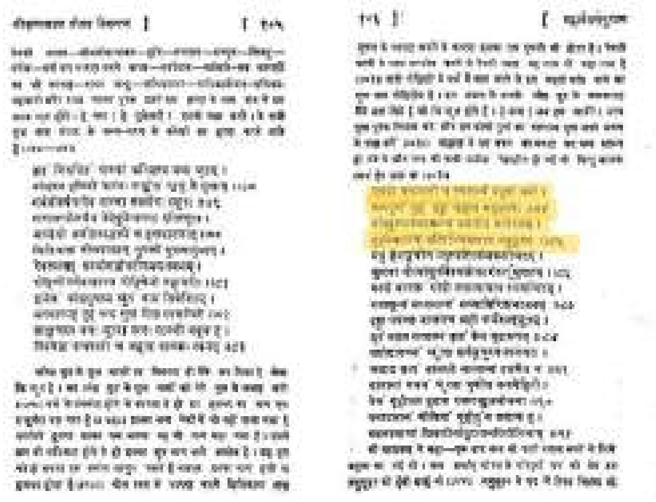
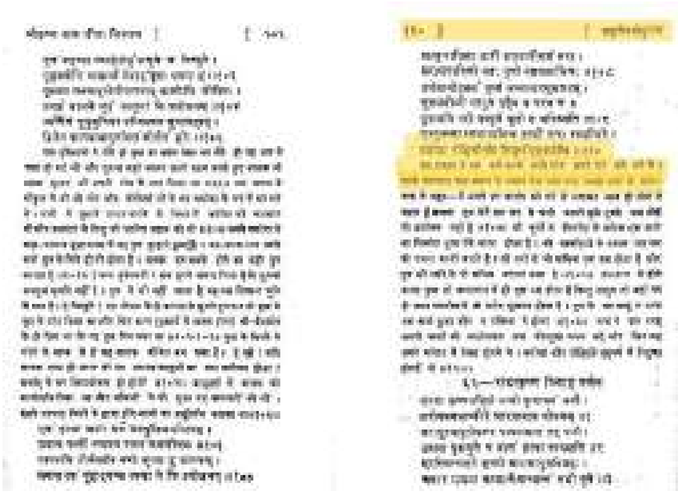
In ASI Manuscript these slokas of chapter 14 of Interpolated Brahma Vaivarta Purana occur in chapter 66 slokas 84 onwards in ASI Manuscript translated by Shri Ram Sharma Acharya .



These slokas continue in Chapter 66 of ASI Manuscript of Brahma Vaivarta Purana upto slokas 101 which is total 17 slokas from Interpolated Manuscript and no more slokas from Interpolated Manuscript are continued in ASI Manuscript proving that slokas 45-51 are interpolated



Even the Next Adhaya talks about Radha-Krishna Vivah and not about any such thing

Allegations-

7. Indra entered a horse in order to have intercourse with the Queen

Harivamsa Purana 3.5.11-25
A few days after Janamejaya duly undertook the celebration of a horse sacrifice accompanied with profuse presents. Having controlled herself according to the rites laid down in the scripture the worshipful lady Vapusthuma Kashya, went to the horse slain at Janamejaya's sacrifice, and sat down near it. Desiring for that perfectly beautiful lady Vasava entered into the body of the slain horse and knew her. Beholding that change Janamejaya said to the sacrificing priest, "This horse has not been slain: kill him at once." Coming to know of that endeavour of Indra's the wise priest communicated it to the royal saint Janamejaya and imprecated a curse on Indra."

Refutation –

Next he accused on Harivamsa Purana bhavishya parva chapter 5 on Indra Dev here is Geeta Press Gorakhpur Harivamsa Purana

Harivamsa Purana bhavishya parva chapter 5 Slokas 31-33 and Sloka 39 makes it clear that Indra entering the dead horse and copulating with Janamejaya wife was an Illusion created by Indra becuase Indra feared of the Ashwamedha Yagya so he created this illusion to destroy the merits of this yagya . In words of Sage Viswavasu to Janamajeya Indra Dev can never commit this heinous crime of Violating other men wife as Indra is rightous and controlled of senses he just created an Illusion to destroy the Yagya

समान बलसे भ्रष्ट कर दिये गये। तुम तीन सौ यज्ञोंका अनुष्ठान करनेवाले अत्यन्त दुर्धर्ष वीर थे, तुमसे और
उन ब्राह्मणोंसे भी इन्द्र सदा डरते रहते थे; अतः उन्होंने अकेले ही मायाके प्रयोगद्वारा उन दोनों प्रकारके भयोंको पार कर लिया ॥ २९-३२॥ विजयकी इच्छा रखनेवाले वे महातेजस्वी इन्द्र जिसे दूसरोंने कभी नहीं किया, वह पापकर्म कैसे कर सकते हैं? अपने पोतेकी पत्नीपर बलात्कार उनके द्वारा कैसे सम्भव हो सकता है ? ॥ ३३ ॥ हरिवाहन इन्द्रमें जिस प्रकार उत्तम बुद्धि, उत्कृष्ट धर्म, श्रेष्ठ इन्द्रिय-संयम और परम ऐश्वर्य बतलाया गया है, उसी प्रकार तीन सौ यज्ञोंका अनुष्ठान करनेवाले तुझ दुर्धर्ष वीरमें वे सभी बातें हैं॥ ३४॥ अतः तुम इन्द्रमें, गुरु एवं पुरोहितमें, अपनेमें तथा रानी वपुष्टमामें दोषदृष्टि न करो; क्योंकि काल सर्वथा दुर्लङ्घय है ॥ ३५ ॥ देवेन्द्रने अपनी ऐश्वर्यशक्तिसे अश्वमें प्रवेश करके तुम्हारे हृदयमें रोष उत्पन्न कर दिया था, अतः सुखार्थी मनुष्यको सदा देवताके अनुकूल बर्ताव करना चाहिये ॥ ३६ ॥ जैसे जलके प्रवाहके प्रतिकूल तैरना कठिन होता है, उसी प्रकार प्रतिकूल देवतासे पार पाना बहुत कठिन है। तुम्हारी रानी निष्पाप हैं, ये रमणियोंमें रत्न हैं, तुम निश्चिन्त होकर इनका उपभोग करो ॥ ३७ ॥

They were corrupted by the same force. You, who have performed three hundred sacrifices and are an extremely invincible hero — even you and those Brahmins were always feared by Indra. Therefore, he alone, by using the power of illusion (Māyā), overcame both kinds of dangers. (29–32)

How could that mighty and resplendent Indra, who desired victory, commit such a sinful deed that no one else had ever done? How could it be possible for him to violate the wife of is own grandson? (33)

Just as the highest intellect, supreme righteousness, excellent control over the senses, and great sovereignty are described in Harivāhana Indra, in the same way, all those qualities are present in you, O indomitable hero who has performed three hundred sacrifices. (34)

Therefore, do not see faults in Indra, in the guru and the family priest, in yourself, or in Queen Vapuṣṭamā, for Time is completely irresistible. (35)

By his sovereign power, Lord Indra entered into the horse and kindled anger in your heart. Hence, a man who desires happiness should always behave in accordance with the will of the deity. (36)

Just as it is difficult to swim against the current of a river, in the same way, it is very hard to overcome a hostile deity. Your queen is innocent — she is a jewel among women. Enjoy her company without worry. (37)

The satisfaction of Janamejaya in ruling the kingdom and the glory of reciting and hearing this text

Sauti said — When Viśvāvasu gently persuaded King Janamejaya, whose mind had, without reason, been clouded with doubt, the king became pleased with Queen Vapuṣṭamā. He adopted peace by following the conduct of human righteousness. (1)

Relieved of mental distress and desiring great fame for himself, King Janamejaya ruled the kingdom with wisdom rooted in righteousness, and with a joyful heart, he lived in union with Vapuṣṭamā. (2)

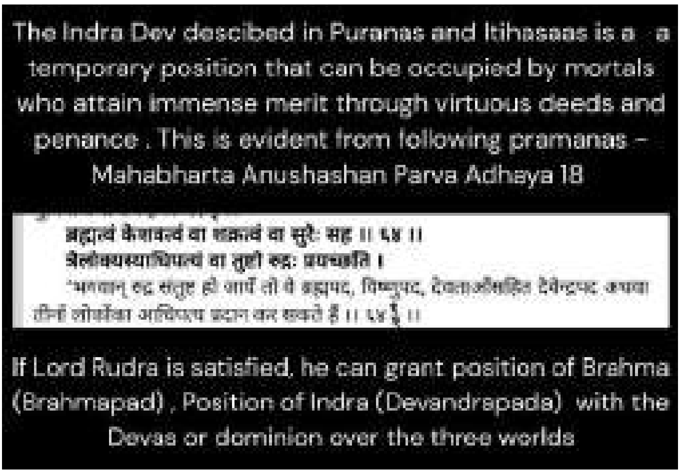
THE TRUE CHARACTER AND TATTVA OF INDRA DEVA

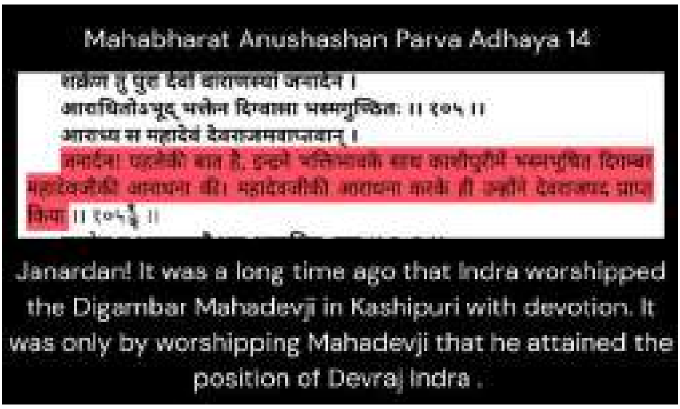
The Indra Dev descibed in Puranas and Itihasaas is a a temporary position that can be occupied by mortals who attain immense merit through virtuous deeds and penance. This is evident from following pramanas Mahabharta Anushashan Parva Adhaya 18

'भगवान् रुद्र संतुष्ट हो जायँ तो वे ब्रह्मपद, विष्णुपद, देवताओंसहित देवेन्द्रपद अथवा तीनों लोकोंका आधिपत्य प्रदान कर सकते हैं ।। ६४ ।।
If Lord Rudra is satisfied, he can grant position of Brahma (Brahmapad), Position of Indra (Devandrapada) with the Devas or dominion over the three worlds



Mahabharat Anushashan Parva Adhaya 14

जनार्दन ! पहलेकी बात है, इन्द्रने भक्तिभावके साथ काशीपुरीमें भस्मभूषित दिगम्बर महादेवजीकी आराधना की। महादेवजीकी आराधना करके ही उन्होंने देवराजपद प्राप्त किया ।। १०५३ ।।
Janardan! It was a long time ago that Indra worshipped the Digambar Mahadevji in Kashipuri with devotion. It was only by worshipping Mahadevji that he attained the position of Devraj Indra.



Mahabharat Shanti Parva Adhaya 22

'देखिये। इन्द्र ब्राह्मणके पुत्र हैं, किंतु कर्मसे क्षत्रिय हो गये हैं। उन्होंने पापमें प्रवृत्त हुए अपने ही भाई-बन्धुओं (दैत्यों)-मेंसे आठ सौ दस व्यक्तियोंको मार डाला ।। ११ ।।

'प्रजानाथ! उनका वह कर्म पूजनीय एवं प्रशंसाके योग्य माना गया। उन्होंने उसी कर्मसे देवेन्द्रपद प्राप्त कर लिया, ऐसा हमने सुना है ।

Look. Indra is the son of a Brahmin, but has become a Kshatriya by his deeds. He killed eight hundred and ten eople from among his own brothers and relatives (demons) who were inclined towards sin. Prajanath! His deed was considered worthy of praise. We have heard that he achieved the position of Devraj Indra due to the same deeds.

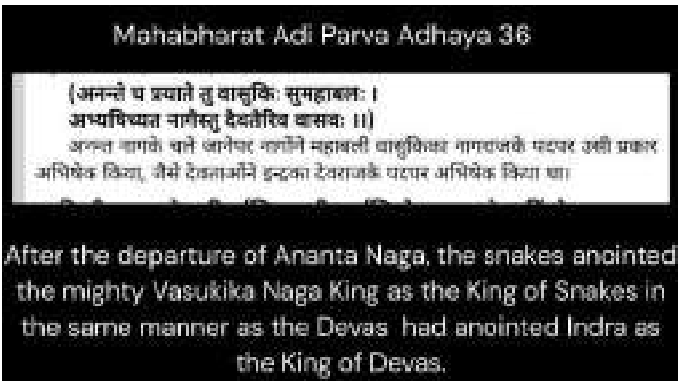
Mahabharat Adi Parva Adhaya 36

अनन्त नागके चले जानेपर नागोंने महाबली वासुकिका नागराजके पदपर उसी प्रकार अभिषेक किया, जैसे देवताओंने इन्द्रका देवराजके पदपर अभिषेक किया था।

After the departure of Ananta Naga, the snakes anointed the mighty Vasukika Naga King as the King of Snakes in the same manner as the Devas had anointed Indra as the King of Devas.



Mahabharta Adi Parva Adhaya 31

संयमपूर्वक उत्तम व्रतका पालन करनेवाले वे महर्षि यह संकल्प करते थे कि – 'सम्पूर्ण देवताओंके लिये कोई दूसरा ही इन्द्र उत्पन्न हो, जो वर्तमान देवराजके लिये भयदायक, इच्छानुसार पराक्रम करने वाला और अपनी रुचिके अनुसार चलनेकी शक्ति रखनेवाला हो ।। १३ ।।
Those great sages who followed the best vows with restraint, resolved that – 'For all the Devas another Indra should be born, who should be fearsome for the current king of Devas who should be capable of performing feats as per his wish and who should have the power to act according to his own will. 13.

Atharva Veda 11/7/11 states only By Brahmacharya one can become Devas including Devraj Indra

इस स्वर्ग के नीचे एक सूर्यात्मक अग्नि है और दूसरी पृथ्वी के ऊपर है. इस स्वर्ग और धरती के मध्य दोनों अग्नियां आपस में मिल कर उदय होती हैं. उन सूर्य और अग्नि से संबंधित किरणें धरती और स्वर्ग के मध्य आश्रय लेती हैं. ब्रह्मचारी अपने तप की महिमा से उन का देवता बनता है.

Beneath this heaven, there is a solar fire, and another exists above the earth. Between heaven and earth, these two fires unite and rise together. The rays associated with that sun and fire take refuge in the space between earth and heaven. Through the greatness of his austerity (tapas), the Brahmachari becomes the Devas

Srimad Bhagvatam 3.11.24-26 also tells the same thing that in every period of Brahma – Devas including Devraj Indra are born again and again and attain their position per their karma

24. Every Manu rules during his own period which is somewhat longer than seventyone catur-yugas (cycles of four yugas682) In the eras of Manus, kings in the lineage of the Manu are born in succession. Hermits, gods, king of gods and his at-tendants are born simultaneously.
25. This is Brahma's daily creation whereby the three worlds are made to function and in which the birds, beasts, men, pitrs and gods are born according to their kaimas.

26. In the Manu-eras, the Supreme Lord retains his sattvaguna and protects the universe by incarnating as Manus and manifesting himself in other human forms.

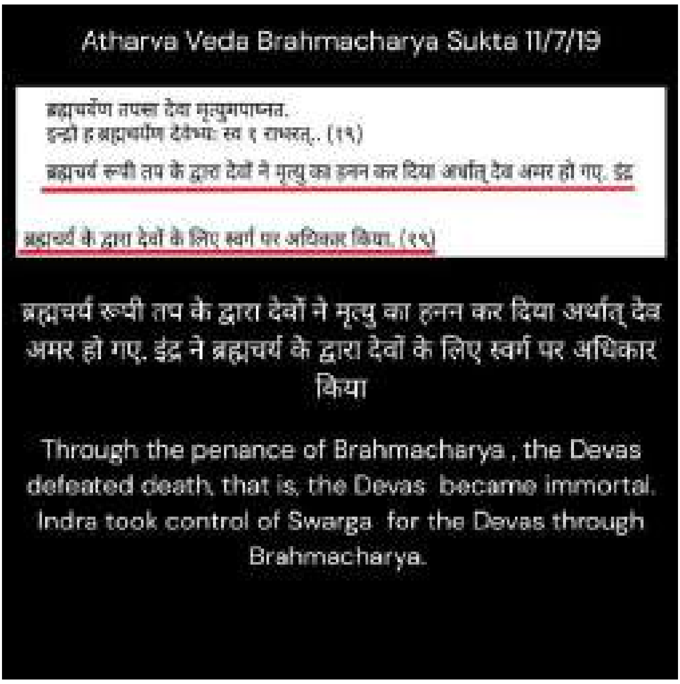
Atharva Veda Brahmacharya Sukta 11/7/19

ब्रह्मचर्य रूपी तप के द्वारा देवों ने मृत्यु का हनन कर दिया अर्थात् देव अमर हो गए. इंद्र ने ब्रह्मचर्य के द्वारा देवों के लिए स्वर्ग पर अधिकार किया

Through the penance of Brahmacharya , the Devas defeated death, that is, the Devas became immortal. Indra took control of Swarga for the Devas through Brahmacharya.



Atharva Veda 11/7/14 states all Devas including Devraj Indra follow Strict Brahmacharya and live in Brahmacharya

अपान के बाद ज्ञान को, मन, वाणी, हृदय और मेधा को उत्पन्न करता है

A man who practices Brahmacharya attains the Brahm in the form of the Veda which is full of light. All the Devas are related to that Veda. Brahmacharya is the abode of the Devas it produces knowledge, mind, speech, heart and intelligence after Prana and Apan.

उस ब्रह्मचारी ने ब्राह्मण जाति के जल अर्थात् गंगा आदि नदियों को, स्वर्ग आदि लोकों को, प्रजाओं की सृष्टि करने वाले प्रजापति को तथा प्रजापति के बाद सृष्टि की रचना करने वाले परमेष्ठी को उत्पन्न किया. वह ब्रह्मचारी मृत्यु रहित ब्रह्म की सत्ता, रज, तमोगुण वाली प्रकृति में गर्भ बन कर सब को जन्म देता है. उस ने तप के बल से इंद्र हो कर देवों के विरोधी असुरों का विनाश किया.

“That Brahmachari created the sacred waters of the Brahmin class, such as the Ganga and other rivers, the heavenly realms, the Prajapatis who created living beings, and thereafter, the supreme creator (Parameshthi) who continued the creation. That Brahmachari, being the immortal essence of Brahman, enters into nature—which is endowed with the qualities of rajas (activity) and tamas (inertia)—as a womb, and gives birth to all. Through the power of his Brahmacharya , he became Indra and destroyed the Asuras who opposed the Devas .”

The rays associated with that sun and fire take refuge in the space between earth and heaven. Through the greatness of his austerity (tapas), the Brahmachari becomes the Devas

According to Chandogya Upanishad 8.11.3, Devraj Indra observed Brahmacharya for 101 years to learn the essence of the soul and its nature from Prajapati.

Prajāpati said: 'Indra, it is so. I will explain the matter to you again. Stay here another five years.' Indra lived there another five years. The total time Indra spent thus was one hundred and one years. This is what sages refer to when they say, 'Indra lived with Prajāpati for one hundred and one years practising brahmacarya.' Then Prajapati said to him-

Satapatha Brahmana 2/1/3/4 says अपहतपाप्मानो देवा अप पाप्मानं हतेऽमृता देवा नामृतत्वस्याशास्ति। that is Devas do not do any sinful activity and Devas attained immortality by destroying Sins

Acharya Sayana in his commentary on Satapatha Brahmana 2/1/3/4 said – तदेतत् प्रशंसति अपहतपाप्मान इति । देवानां पाप। हित्यान्मरणधर्मराहित्याच्च तत्सम्बन्धि-न्ययनेऽग्न्याधानकारिणोऽपि तदुभयं सिद्धयतीत्यर्थः ' This is praised with the expression 'Apahatapāpman' (i.e., one who is free from sin). Because the Devas are free from sin and from the condition of mortality, therefore, even one who performs the Agnyādheya (the rite of establishing the sacred fire), by becoming related to them, attains both

According to Chandogya Upanishad 8.11.3, Devraj Indra observed Brahmacharya for 101 years to learn the essence of the soul and its nature from Prajapati.

Prajāpati said: 'Indra, it is so. I will explain the matter to you again. Stay here another five years.' Indra lived there another five years. The total time Indra spent thus was one hundred and one years. This is what sages refer to when they say, 'Indra lived with Prajāpati for one hundred and one years practising brahmacarya.' Then Prajapati said to him-

Abstraining from Illicit sexual intercourse , following celibacy , behaving free from Sin and keeping your senses under control are all essential parts of Brahmacharya which are followed by All Devas including Devraj Indra

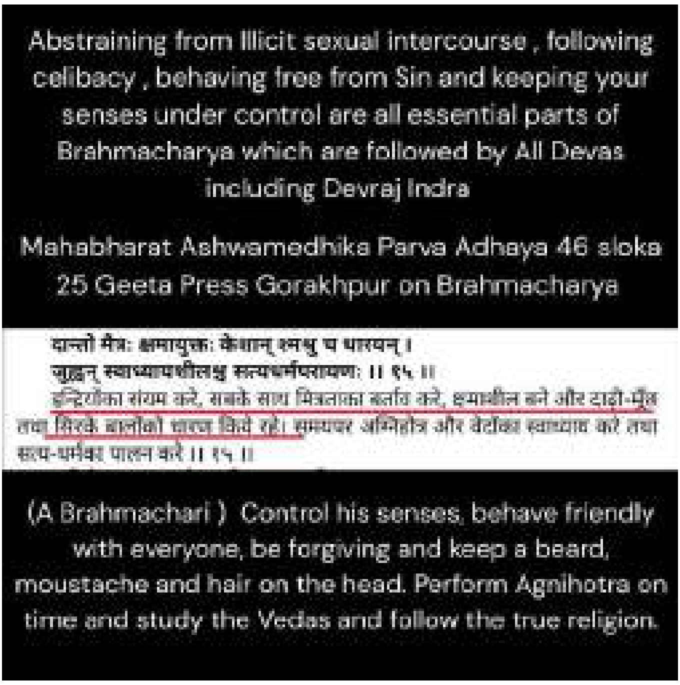
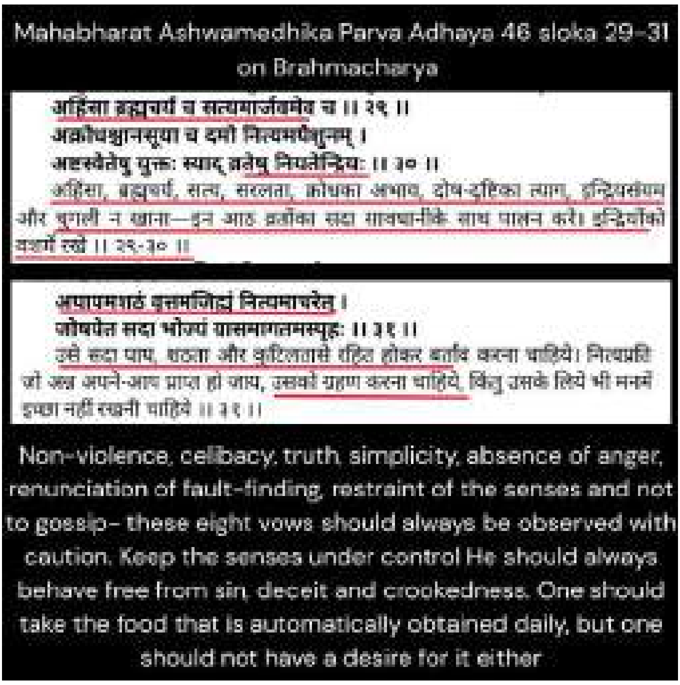
(A Brahmachari) Control his senses, behave friendly with everyone, be forgiving and keep a beard, moustache and hair on the head. Perform Agnihotra on time and study the Vedas and follow the true religion.

Non-violence, celibacy, truth, simplicity, absence of anger, renunciation of fault-finding, restraint of the senses and not to gossip- these eight vows should always be observed with caution. Keep the senses under control He should always behave free from sin, deceit and crookedness. One should take the food that is automatically obtained daily, but one should not have a desire for it either





Aitreya Brahmana 7/16 says amongst all Devas Indra Deva practices the most righteous path according to Dharma

विश्वेदेव उससे बोले 'इन्द्र ही देवताओं में सबसे अधिक ओजस्वी, बलवान्, महिष्णु, सत्यपर चलनेवाले तथा प्रभावशाली है, उन्हीं की स्तुति करो तो तुम्हें छोड़ दें।

Vishwadev said to him, 'Indra is the most powerful, tolerant, truthful and righteous among all the Devas .

Allegations-

Bhagavad Purana states that Shiva tried to force himself on a naked woman,

Srimad Bhagavatam 8.12.26-30 "The beautiful woman was already naked, and when She saw Lord Siva coming toward Her, She became extremely bashful. Thus She kept smiling, but She hid Herself among the trees and did not stand in one place. His senses being agitated, Lord Siva, victimized by lusty desires, began to follow Her, just as a lusty elephant follows a she-elephant. After following Her with great speed, Lord Siva caught Her by the braid of Her hair and dragged Her near him. Although She was unwilling, he embraced Her with his arms. Being embraced by Lord Siva like a female elephant embraced by a male, the woman, whose hair was scattered, swirled like a snake. O King, this woman, who had large, high hips, was a woman of yogamaya presented by the Supreme Personality of Godhead. She released Herself somehow or other from the fond embrace of Lord Siva's arms and ran away." Tr. Swami Prabhupada

This is sexual harassment and if a man does this in the present age he would surely be put behind the bars for an attempt to rape. The above verses are explained briefly in the LGBT section. This is Shiva's rape of Vishnu (Mohini).

Refutation-

Traditional Sri Vaishnava Acharya Pandit Madhavacharya Shastri in his book Purana Digdarshan page 599 explained the meaning of the Shiva Mohini story in Bhagvatam

(क) यद् रुद्रश्चन्द्रमास्तेन । – (कोषीतकी ६ । ७) – (a) Due to which Rudra [is called] the Moon.

(ख) (प्रजापतिः) तं (रुद्रं) अब्रवीन्महादेवोऽसीति । तद्यदस्य तन्नामाकरोच्चन्द्रमास्तरूपमभवत् ।। (शतपथ ६ । १।३।१६) -Prajapati said to this Rudra that you are Mahadev because he was named Mahadev = Mahan-radiant, so he (beautiful) became the Moon. . (ग) आग्नेयी पृथिवी । (ताण्ड्य १५।४।८) -This earth was igneous – fiery vapor

(घ) इयं (पृथिवी) वै देव्यदितिविश्वरूपी । (तैत्तिरीय १ । ७ । ६।७) – This earth itself is the beautiful goddess in the form of Mohini

So the meaning is that on insistence of Lord Shiva in the form of Moon, the आग्नेय वाष्प in the form of Vishnu, on attaining density, assumed the form of Mohini in the form of the Earth. So, when the Earth became stable and the Earth also got an independent orbit due to the attraction and repulsion of other planets, the Moon started revolving around the Earth, as if Lord Shiva became infatuated with the beauty of the Earth in the form of Mohini. This is what Mahadev means by running after Mohini; the Moon ran around to its full capacity, spread its rays or hands, but could not get anything, that is, the Moon could not assimilate the Earth, this is the meaning of Mohini not coming in its hands.

Then whats the meaning of Maheshwar Shiva releasing his tejas behind Mohini . Pandit Madhavacharya Shastri explained

वर्तमान विज्ञानवेत्ता भी इस बात को स्वीकार करते हैं कि आरम्भमें यह पृथ्वी तपे हुवे सोने के बराबर जाज्वल्यमान एवं दमकते हुवे पिण्ड के समान थी सो ज्यों ही चांद पृथ्वीपिण्ड की अपरिमित ऊष्मा से संश्लिष्ट हुवा तो उसका बहुत सा भास्वर हिम पिघल २ कर बहने लगा। गर्मी के संयोग से बर्फ का बह जाना विज्ञान सिद्ध बात है। सो यही शिव के वीर्यपात का आशय है।

The present day Science also accept that in the beginning, the earth was like a glowing and shining body like heated gold, (As provided in Vedic Shruti as well) so as soon as the moon was composed of the infinite heat of the earth, a lot of its shining snow melted and started flowing. It is a scientifically proven fact that snow starts flowing due to heat. So this is the meaning of Shiva's semen discharge in Srimad Bhagvatam 8.12. 32

Skanda Purana 1.2.9.40-58 narrates the story of Shiva abducting and attempting to rape the daughter of sage Agnivesya, Skanda Purana Book 1 Mahesvara khanda Section 2 Kaumarika khaṇḍa, chapter 9 verses 40-58 "O gentle Sir, I saw the daughter of sage Agniveśya standing in water without any clothes on. She was on the threshold of youth. She was a Śyāmā, with slender waist. She was fawn-eyed. She had ample buttocks. Her thighs resembled the interior of a plantain tree (full, round and lovely). Her breasts were very close to each other...Impatient with love I got down from the aerial chariot and abducted her. On being seized by me and placed in the aerial chariot she lamented loudly for a long time shouting "O father, O father", O gentle Sir. On hearing these words of those (girls) from all round, the gentle sage, the storehouse of austerities, Agniveśya, hurriedly came up to her in the sky. "Stop, stop,"... My daughter was carried away by force by you in the manner in which a piece of flesh is carried away by a vulture in the sky. So, be a vulture now immediately. My daughter, an ascetic girl, has been abducted by you against her will. O vicious one, obtain its fruit now itself. On hearing this I was overcome with fear. I bent down my face with shame. I grasped the feet of the sage. I fell down at his feet and grasped them. I lamented loudly." Tr. G.V. Tagare

In Skanda Purana 1.2.9.40-58 it was not Maheshwar Shiva but a prince named Kuśadhvaja a son of the lord of kasi who attempted to kidnap the daughter of Sage Agniveshya and was cursed by Sage Agniveshya to become a Vulture and that when he will assist in recognizing King Indradyumna the prince will get freed from the curse

गृध्र कहता है- हे भद्र ! सुनें! पूर्वकाल में मैं अत्यन्त चपल वानर था। मैं जिस वन में रहता था, उसके आगे के भाग में एक शिवालय था। उन शिव का नाम था जगद्योगेश्वर ! चैत्र शुक्ला चतुर्दशी तिथि पर हस्त नक्षत्र तथा हर्षणयोग में उन भवोद्भव देव का एक उत्सव हुआ। उस दिन लोग सुवर्ण के झूले में उस लिंग को बैठा कर झुलाते थे। इस दिन रात में जब अन्य कोई नहीं था, मैं जाति चापल्यवशात् वहां झूले पर चढ़कर उसे पुनः पुनः चलाने लगा। इस प्रकार रात्रि व्यतीत होने पर अगले दिन लोग वहां देवदेवेश्वर की पूजा के लिए आये तथा मुझे झूले पर बैठा देखकर लाठी से पुनः पुनः प्रहार करने लगे। उनके वज्रसम दुःसह प्रहार के कारण मैं उस शिवमन्दिर में झूले में रहते ही मर गया।। २१-२७।। मैंने जो शिव को झूला झुलाया था (अनजाने में) उसके फल से राजा के यहां मेरा जन्म हुआ। मैं काशीराज के पुत्ररूप में जन्म लेकर कुशध्वज कहलाया। जब मुझे राजत्व प्राप्त हुआ, तब मैंने अपने राज्य में दमनकोत्सव प्रवर्त्तित किया, क्योंकि मुझे पूर्वजन्म की स्मृति थी। हे भद्र ! मनुष्यगण झूले पर बैठे शिव को जैसे-जैसे झुलाते, उनके अशुभ भी उसी प्रकार उनसे दूर होते जाते! उनका पुण्य संचित होता जाता। मैं शैवागम के वर्णित विधान से दीक्षा लेकर शैवाचार्यों द्वारा समस्त संस्कार से संस्कृत होकर पशुपाश से मुक्त हो गया। मैं निर्वाह दीक्षा पर्यन्त समस्त संस्कार से संस्कृत हो गया। चित्तवृत्ति निरोध द्वारा वैराग्य अभ्यास पूर्वक उद्गीथ जप तथा उसके अर्थ द्वारा समस्त क्लेशों का उच्छेद करके प्रजावर्ग की हितचिन्तना में रत हो, समस्त क्लेशनाशक, जगद्गुरु, अष्टम रसरसिक देवदेवेश, उमापति रुद्र की आराधना करने लगा। मैं प्रणिधान तथा अभ्यास द्वारा साधनमार्ग में दृढ़भूमिका लाभ करके जब विघ्नों द्वारा भी विचलित नहीं किया गया, तब शंभुदेव मेरे ऐसे साधनोत्कर्ष को जानकर मेरे ऊपर प्रसन्न हो गये। उन्होंने दर्शन देकर मुझसे कहा।।२८-३४।। भगवान् कहते हैं- "हे कुशध्वज ! मैं तुम्हारे प्रति सन्तुष्ट हो गया। तुम वांछित वर ग्रहण करो। भूतल पर तुम्हारे अतिरिक्त ऐसा कठोर अनुष्ठान अन्य किसी ने नहीं किया है।" तब मैंने भगवान् शिव से कहा- "हे शम्भु ! मैं इसी शरीर से आपका गण बनना चाहता हूं।" प्रभु शम्भु ने कहा 'ऐसा ही हो।' तदनन्तर शंकर मुझे कैलास ले गये तथा मुझे उन्होंने एक सर्वरत्नमय, सर्वाश्चर्ययुक्त दिव्य विमान प्रदान किया। मैंने उस पर आरोहण किया तथा प्रसन्नचित्त होकर विचरण करने लगा।। ३५-३८।। हे भद्र ! तदनन्तर कुछ काल के उपरान्त एक बार वसन्त के समय पर्वत के गवाक्ष में बैठा जल में स्नान के लिए आई विवस्त्रा अग्निवेश ऋषि की कन्या को देखा। तब मलयवायु प्रवाहित हो रही थी। उस उद्गत् यौवना, श्यामा, क्षीणमध्या, मृगनयनी, विस्तीर्ण स्थूल जघना, संहत स्तनों वाली, केले के तने के समान जघनयुक्त रमणी को देखकर मेरे मन में कामाग्नि जल उठी। उस वर्णनीयतम सौन्दर्यशालिनी, विद्वानों के द्वारा भी यथाशक्ति वर्णन योग्या, विकसित कमल के समान मुख वाली बालिका को देखकर विदित हुआ कि मानों ालसिंचन के कारण उसके लावण्य का अंकुर फूट उठा है! कामदेव उसके अंगों में

अवस्थित हो गया तथा वह उस रमणी के कुटिल कटाक्ष विक्षेपरूप कामबाणों के माध्यम से मुझे दृढ़ रूप से विद्ध करने लगा। तब मैं भी कामातुर होकर अपने विमान से उतरा तथा सखियों से घिरी, स्वेच्छापूर्वक क्रीड़ा तत्पर उस बालिका का मैंने हरण कर लिया। हे भद्र! वह मेरे विमान पर पड़ी उच्च स्वर से हा तात, हा तात! कहकर अत्यन्त रोदन करने लगी।। ३९-४५।। तब उसकी समवयस्का सखियों दीनतापूर्वक शीघ्रता से मुनि के पास जाकर कहने लगीं- "भगवन्! किसी विमान पर विचरण करने वाले व्यक्ति ने आपकी कन्या का हरण किया है। वह रो रही है। आप उठिये तथा उसकी रक्षा करिये।" यह सुनकर श्रेष्ठ तपोनिधि अग्निवेश्य मुनि आकाश पथ में विमान का पीछा करते बोले, रुको ! रुको ! तथा तपोबल से विमान की गति रुद्ध करके क्रुद्ध होकर मुझसे कहने लगे "हे दुर्मति ! जैसे गृध्र मांसपेशी का अपहरण करता है, वैसे ही तुमने मेरी कन्या का आकाशमार्ग से आकर अपहरण किया है। अतएव तुम गृध्र हो जाओ। मेरी तपःशीला बालिका की इच्छा न होने पर तुमने उसका अपहरण किया है, उसका फल भोगो।" मैं यह शाप सुनकर लज्जापूर्वक अधोमुख हो गया।।४६-५१।।

The vulture said—"O noble one, listen! In a former birth, I was a very restless monkey. In the forest where I lived, there stood a temple of Śiva named Jagadyogeśvara. On the fourteenth day of the bright half of the month of Caitra, when the star Hasta coincided with the auspicious Harṣaṇa yoga, a festival was held for that deity who is the source of the worlds. On that day, people would place the liṅga in a golden swing and rock it. One night, when no one else was there, driven by my monkeyish restlessness, I climbed onto the swing and kept rocking it again and again. When morning came and people arrived for worship, they saw me on the swing and beat me repeatedly with sticks. Because of those unbearable, thunderbolt-like blows, I died there in the swing of that Śiva temple.

From the merit of rocking Śiva's swing (though unknowingly), I was reborn as the son of the king of Kāśī and named Kuśadhvaja. When I attained kingship, I instituted the festival of Damanaka, for I remembered my former birth. O noble one, just as men rock Śiva in a swing, in the same way their misfortunes are driven away and their merit increases. I received initiation according to the Śaiva scriptures from Śaiva teachers, was sanctified by all the prescribed rites, and freed from the bonds of worldly existence. By restraining the movements of my mind through the practice of detachment, chanting the Sāman called Udgītha with its meaning, and destroying all afflictions, I engaged in the welfare of my people. I devoted myself to worship of the world's teacher, destroyer of all sorrows, the nectar-enjoying Lord of Umā, Rudra. With firm resolve in the path of practice, unmoved even by obstacles, I pleased Lord Śambhu by the excellence of my discipline.

Appearing before me, the Lord said, 'O Kuśadhvaja, I am pleased with you. Choose any boon you desire. None other on earth has performed such severe austerity as you.' I replied, 'O Śambhu, I wish to become one of Your attendants in this very body.' Lord Śambhu said, 'So be it,' and took me to Kailāsa, granting me a wondrous aerial chariot adorned with all jewels. Mounting it, I wandered about joyfully.

Then, after some time, one spring day, as I sat in a window of a mountain palace, I saw Agniveśa Ṛṣi's daughter come to bathe, unclothed. The Malaya breeze was blowing. She was youthful, dark-complexioned, slim-waisted, deer-eyed, with broad and full hips, firm breasts, and thighs like banana trunks. Seeing that most beautiful maiden—whose face was like a blooming lotus, whose charm seemed freshly sprouted as if nourished by water—my mind was inflamed with passion. Kāma himself seemed to dwell in her limbs, and through her crooked sidelong glances, which were like love's arrows, he pierced me deeply. Overcome with desire, I descended from my chariot and seized that maiden, who was sporting with her friends. She cried out loudly upon my chariot, 'Alas, father! Alas, father!' and wept bitterly." The maidens of her age, distressed, quickly went to the sage and said, "Revered one! A man traveling in an aerial chariot has abducted your daughter. She is weeping—please rise and protect her." Hearing this, the eminent ascetic Agniveśya, treasure of penance, pursued the chariot through the sky, calling out, "Stop! Stop!" By the power of his austerities, he halted the chariot's movement, and, enraged, said to me, "O wicked-minded one! Just as a vulture snatches a piece of flesh, so have you carried off my daughter through the air. Therefore, become a vulture! Because you have abducted my daughter, steadfast in her chastity, against her will, bear the consequence." Hearing this curse, I hung my head in shame. (46–51)

Shri Maheshwara (Lord Shiva) said –
O Devi! Not causing harm to any living being, speaking the truth, showing compassion to all creatures, controlling the mind and senses, and giving charity according to one's capacity — these are the noble duties of a householder (Grihastha Ashrama). (Verse 25)

Maintaining these duties of household life —
Staying away from relations with another's wife, protecting entrusted goods and the honor of women, not taking anything without giving in return, and renouncing meat and alcohol — these are five types (aspects) of Dharma that lead to happiness.
Each of these Dharmic principles has many branches. Those who consider Dharma to be supreme should certainly follow this virtuous and meritorious path.

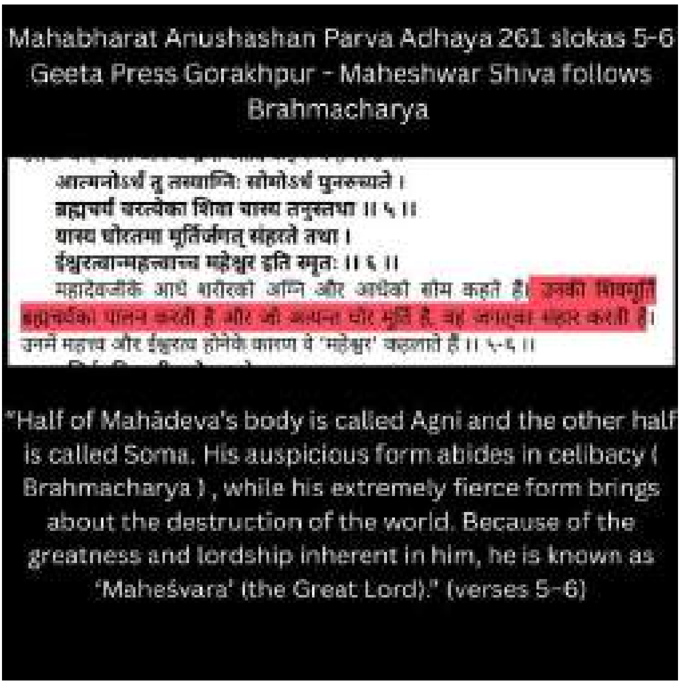
His auspicious form abides in celibacy (Brahmacharya), while his extremely fierce form brings about the destruction of the world. Because of the greatness and lordship inherent in him, he is known as 'Maheśvara' (the Great Lord)." (verses 5-6)



In Srimad Bhagavatam Book 8 Chapter 7 sloka 32
Maheshwar Shiva is called the destroyer of Kama (Lust)

That you destroyed Kama (the god of Love), the sacrifice (of Daksa), Tripuras the three cities (constructed by Maya) subdued the god of death, consumed the (Hala-hala) poison (which is as good as consumed as you are certain to drink it up just now) and killed innumerable trouble-

In Mahabharta Shanti Parva Adhaya 284 sloka 112
Maheshwar Shiva is called destroyer of Kama (Lust)
काम कामद कामघ्न तृप्तातृप्तविचारिणे । सर्व सर्वद सर्वघ्न संध्याराग नमोऽस्तु ते ।। ११२ ।।
आप कामस्वरूप, कामनाओंको पूर्ण करनेवाले, कामदेवके नाशक, तृप्त और अतृप्तका विचार करनेवाले, सर्वस्वरूप, सब कुछ देनेवाले, सबके संहारक और संध्याकालके समान रंगवाले हैं। आपको प्रणाम है ।।
You are of the nature of Kāma (desire), the fulfiller of desires, the destroyer of Lust, the one who contemplates both satisfaction and dissatisfaction, the embodiment of all forms, the giver of everything, the destroyer of all, and of a hue like that of the evening twilight. I bow to you.

Allegations-

Soma

Soma is said to have raped Brihaspati's wife Tara,

Srimad Bhagavatam 9.14.4 "After conquering the three worlds [the upper, middle and lower planetary systems], Soma, the moon-god, performed a great sacrifice known as the Rājasūya-yajña. Because he was very much puffed up, he forcibly kidnapped Bṛhaspati's wife, whose name was Tara". Tr. Swami Prabhupada

Brahma Vaivarta Purana, Krishna Janma Khanda 80.9-19 "[Tara to Soma]…And if you commit rape with me, you will surely be guilty of woman slaughter. But when the Moon, without minding her words was about to commit rape with her, the dispassionate chaste woman cursed him thus…In spite of the curse however, the Moon, held her and associated with her. Afterwards, holding the sorrowful, weeping wife of the Guru in his lap, he left that place." Tr. Rajendra Nath Sen

It is also mentioned in Brahmanda Purana 2.3.72.29. Brihaspati is considered the Guru of all Gods. Soma without thinking about violating the bed of the guru raped the preceptor's wife. But Brihaspati was not an angel, he too had raped a woman.

Refutation-

Pandit Madhavacharya Shastri explained in his Purana Digdarshan Page no 665 about Chandra-Tara/Soma - Tara Story

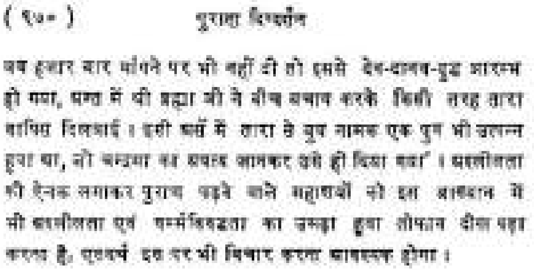
श्रीमद्भागवत (९।१४।—) में और देवी भागवत (१।११।६।१०) में लिखा है कि "चन्द्रमा ने अपने गुरु बृहस्पति की धर्मपत्नी तारा को हठात् छीन लिया।



(६७०) पुराण दिग्दर्शन

जब हजार बार मांगने पर भी नहीं दी तो इससे देव-दानव-युद्ध प्रारम्भ हो गया, अन्त में श्री ब्रह्मा जी ने बीच बचाव करके किसी तरह तारा वापिस दिलवाई। इसी काल में तारा से बुध नामक एक पुत्र भी उत्पन्न हुआ था, जो चन्द्रमा का अपना जानकर उसे ही दिया गया"। अश्लीलता की ऐनक लगाकर पुराण पढ़ने वाले महाशयों को इस आख्यान में भी अश्लीलता एवं धर्मविरुद्धता का उमड़ा हुआ तूफान दीख पड़ता है, एतदर्थ इस पर भी विचार करना आवश्यक होगा।

स्वर्गीय श्री पं० कालूराम जी शास्त्रा ने उक्त आख्यान का निम्न-लिखित आध्यात्मिक भाव प्रकट किया है-
'यहां पर गुरु को बृहस्पति के नाम से याद किया गया है, और आल्हादयुक्त शिष्य को चन्द्रमा कहा है। गुरु विद्या में रमण करता है, इस विद्या को गुरुपत्नी लिखा है, वह साधारण नहीं है, वह तारा है, 'तार-यति संसार-सागरात् या सा तारा – विद्या'– संसार सागर से जो पार उतारती है उस विद्या का नाम तारा है। शिष्य गुरु को विद्या को ग्रहण कर लेता है, उस विद्या से शिष्य के अन्तःकरण में ज्ञान पैदा होता है उस ज्ञान को यहाँ पर 'बुध' लिखा है। जब शिष्य को ज्ञान पैदा हो जाता है तब उसको विद्या की आवश्यकता नहीं रहती अतएव वह विद्या फिर गुरु के पास चली जाती है। यह चन्द्र तारा की कथा का आध्या-त्मिक भाव है ।

The late Shri Pt. Kaluram Ji Shastri expressed the following spiritual interpretation of the aforementioned narrative:

“Here, the Guru is referred to by the name Brihaspati, and the joyful disciple is symbolized as the Moon (Chandra). The Guru delights in knowledge (vidya), which is described as the Guru’s consort. This is no ordinary consort—it is Tara, meaning that which liberates: ‘Tārayati saṁsāra-sāgarāt yā sā tārā – vidyā’—Tara is that knowledge which helps one cross the ocean of worldly existence.

The disciple receives this knowledge from the Guru, and through this knowledge, wisdom arises within the disciple’s heart. This awakened wisdom is referred to here as ‘Budha’ (Mercury). Once the disciple attains true knowledge, he no longer requires the external form of that knowledge; hence, the knowledge (Tara) returns to the Guru.

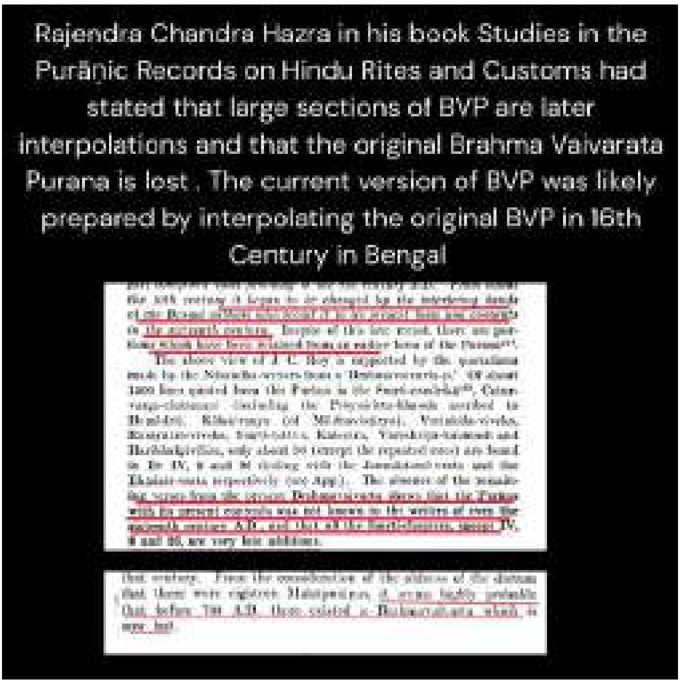
This is the spiritual interpretation of the story of Chandra and Tara.

Regarding Brahma Viavarta Purana Krishna Janma Khanda 80.1-22

Rajendra Chandra Hazra in his book Studies in the Purāṇic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs had stated that large sections of BVP are later interpolations and that the original Brahma Vaivarata Purana is lost. The current version of BVP was likely prepared by interpolating the original BVP in 16th Century in Bengal.



Archaelogical survey of India prepared a critical edition of Brahma Vaivarat Purana based on the different manuscripts found all over India and prepared a critical edition in which they removed all those interpolated chapters and portions. I am providing the link of Critical edition Brahma Vaivarata Purana Volume 1 and 2 translated by Ram Sharma Acharya QR code provided here

He accused on Brahma Viavarta Purana Krishna Janma Khanda 80.1-22 Brahma Viavarta Purana Krishna Janma Khanda ASI Manuscript starts with chapter 58 and ends with chapter 110 so total of 52 chapters so chapter 80 doesn’t exists

Brihaspati

Brihaspati the Guru of all Gods raped his own pregnant sister-in-law named Mamata. A man with what kind of heart would do that?

Matsya Purana 49.17-28 "Suta said:- Brihaspati, whilst staying on Earth, one day saw the wife of his brother, Usija, who was big with child, and addressed her thus:- "Dress thyself well and let us enjoy." She, being thus addressed, replied to Brihaspati thus:- "The embryo in my womb is mature and is already reciting the Vedas. Thy seed will also not be fruitless and thy proposal is sinful." Hearing which, Brihaspati said:- "I need not to be taught morality by thee, O sweet one." After saying that, he carried out his desire by force…" Tr. Taluqdar of Oudh, Edited by B.D. Basu

This rape is also mentioned in Vayu Purana Part 2, 37.140 and Mahabharata Adi Parva 1.104 but the translator K.M. Ganguli has translated those particular lines of Mahabharata into Latin language. This story of Mamata's rape is also mentioned in Srimad Bhagavatam, Srimad Bhagavatam 9.20.36 "When the demigod named Bṛhaspati was attracted by his brother's wife, Mamata, who at that time was pregnant, he desired to have sexual relations with her. The son within her womb forbade this, but Bṛhaspati cursed him and forcibly discharged semen into the womb of Mamata." Tr. Swami Prabhupada

The rape of Mamata is also mentioned in Brahmanda Purana 2.3.74.37-42.

बृहस्पति और ममता

३० पुराणों पर एक यह भी आक्षेप किया जाया करता है कि उन में बृहस्पति का ममता से बलात्कार करना लिखा है। कहा जाता है कि बृहस्पति ने अपने बड़े भाई उतथ्य की धर्म्मपत्नी ममता से सगर्भावस्था में ही बार बार हटाने पर भी हठात् मैथुन किया, जब गर्भस्थ बालक ने बृहस्पति का वीर्य अन्दर न जाने दिया तो उसके बाहिर गिरते ही उससे 'भरद्वाज' मुनि की उत्पत्ति हुई, एवं बृहस्पति ने क्रुद्ध होकर गर्भस्थ बालक को जन्मान्ध हो जाने का शाप दिया, जिससे दीर्घतमा ऋषि उत्पन्न हुवे। यह कथा

वास्तविक भाव

वास्तविक भाव

उपर्युक्त दोनों स्वरूपों की तुलना करने पर प्रत्येक साक्षर इस आख्यान की वैदिकता का अच्छी तरह अनुमान कर सकता है। कई तुच्छबुद्धि जन इस कथा से नियोग भी सिद्ध करना चाहा करते हैं, परन्तु उन्हें यह विदित नहीं कि इससे तो आप के माने हुये नियोग की उल्टी धज्जियें उड़ जाती हैं। क्योंकि आपके यहां नियोग का लक्षण यही तो है कि 'सन्तान के लिए पति की आज्ञा से या उसके मरने पर किसी परपुरुष से इच्छापूर्वक भोग करना।' उक्त कथा में इन तीनों बातों का सर्वथा अभाव है। क्योंकि सन्तान तो पूर्व ही ममता के गर्भ में विद्यमान थी। पति आज्ञा का इसमें लेशमात्र भी नहीं और ममता अन्त तक इस कार्य के सर्वथा प्रतिकूल ही रही है। अत: इसे खुला व्यभिचार या बलात्कार ही कह सकते हैं। अगर आप की सम्मति में नियोग भी इसी का का नाम है तब तो आप के इस धार्मिक कृत्य पर सौ २ बार बलिहारी ! आशा है कि प्रतिवादी अब इससे नियोग सिद्ध करने का साहस नहीं दिखायेंगे। रहा इसकी वास्तविकता का विचार, सो हम वैदिक शब्दों में ही प्रकट करते हैं। वेदों में लिखा है कि—

(क) वाग्वै बृहती (शतपथ १४ । ४ । १ । २२)

(ख) पतिः पालयिता (निरुक्त अ० १० खं० २१)

अर्थात्—(क) यह वाक् ही बृहती कही जाती है। (ख) पति रक्षक को कहते हैं।

सो पुरुष का मन ही बृहस्पति कहलाता है : क्योंकि 'यन्मनसाऽनुमनुते तद् वाचा वदति' इस श्रुति के अनुसार पहिले मन में जो भाव उदित

वृत्ति इन दोनों के पारस्परिक संघर्ष का परिणाम है अतः वह 'भरद्वाज' कहा जाता है। उत्पन्न हुये आत्मज्ञान का यमनियमादि साधनों द्वारा ही परिपोषण होता है, अतः यही 'भरद्वाज' का देवताओं द्वारा रक्षित होने का अभिप्राय है। यही इस कथा का आध्यात्मिक भाव है। इतिहास पक्ष में वेदपुराणसमन्वयाध्याय के देवतावाद-प्रकरणलिखित दिव्य चरित्रों का मनन करने से सब शंकाएं काफूर हो जायेंगी। क्योंकि मनुष्ययोनि कर्मयोनि है अर्थात् इसमें किए गये शुभाशुभ कर्म भोगने पड़ते हैं और पशु पक्षी आदि तथा देव गन्धर्व आदि भोग-योनियें हैं इनमें पूर्व जन्मकृत अशुभ और शुभ कर्मों को केवल भोगना पड़ता है, अतः सूक्ष्म इच्छामय दिव्य शरीरधारी देवताओं के चरित्र स्थूल विकारी पांच भौतिक शरीरधारी मनुष्यों के लिए अनुकरणीय नहीं होते। इसके अतिरिक्त जहां यह कथा आती है वहां पर इसे कहीं भी धर्मसंगत नहीं कहा है। ऐतिहासिक ग्रन्थों में बुरी भली सभी प्रकार की घटनायें लिखी रहती हैं। उनके सर्वसाधारण तादृश अनुकरण करने के लिए बाध्य हों सो बात नहीं है। हमारे विचार में यह कथा एक रूपकमात्र आख्यायिका है परन्तु वेदव्यास जी ने पुराणों की विशिष्ट शैली के अनुसार इसमें ऐतिहासिक अंश को जो विनिश्चित किया है, सो विश्लेषण करने पर इतना ज्ञात पड़ता है कि विनष्ट हुये भरतकुल का उत्तराधिकारी 'भरद्वाज' हुआ है।

रहा इसकी वास्तविकता का विचार, सो हम वैदिक शब्दों में ही प्रकट करते हैं। वेदों में लिखा है कि-

(क) वाग्वै बृहती

होता है वही पश्चात् वाणी से बोला जाता है। अतः मनः ही वाणी का पति कहला ।कता है। इसका ज्येष्ठ आता जीवात्मा ही उतथ्य है । 'तथ्य' शब्द का अर्थ सत्य है

और 'उ' शब्द वितर्क द्योतक है: अर्थात् जिसकी सत्यता में वितर्क हो वह 'उतथ्य' कहा जाता है। अतः यह जीव – 'जोवरूपेण सत्य किंवा 'ब्रह्मविद् ब्रह्मव भवति' के अनुसार ब्रह्मरूपेण सत्य है ?' – ऐसा विचार जीवात्मा के विषय में निरन्तर बना रहता है। द्वैत-अद्वैत विशिष्टाद्वैत आदि सिद्धान्त इसी एक 'उ' के चमत्कार हैं। 'ममता' शब्द की विशेष व्याख्या करने की आवश्यकता नहीं क्योंकि प्रचलित भाषा में भी किसी वस्तु में विशेष आसक्त होना या उसमें रागाधिक्य रखना, ममत्व-ममता किंवा मामता कही जाती है, जो कि माया का ही विशद स्वरूप है। 'दीर्घतमा' का अर्थ घोर अन्धकार है, जिसे दूसरे शब्दों में अज्ञान या मोह कहा जा सकता है। इसी प्रकार 'वीर्य' शब्द भी पराक्रम का पर्याय्य है। अतः आध्यात्मिक पक्ष में इसका सीधा अर्थ यही होगा कि जीमात्मा रूप उतथ्य की स्त्री ममता 'ममत्वयुक्त' तादृश वृत्ति के गर्भ में मोहरूप दीर्घतमा थे। बृहस्पति मन ने इस वृत्ति में अपने वीर्य-सामर्थ्य का संचार करना चाहा, परन्तु जब तक ममता के गर्भ में मोह घुसा बैठा हो तब तक मानसी शक्ति का संचार होना सर्वथा कठिन है। वेद में इसी भाव को इस प्रकार प्रकट किया है-

As for its true significance, we express it using Vedic expressions:

- (a) Vāk vai Bṛhatī — "Speech indeed is called Bṛhatī." (Shatapatha Brahmana 14.4.1.22)
- (b) Patiḥ pālayitā — "A husband is the protector." (Nirukta, Chapter 10, Section 21)

Hence, the mind of a man is called Bṛhaspati, because—according to the Shruti (scriptural saying)—'What one contemplates with the mind, that alone one expresses through speech' (yan manasā anumanyate tad vācā vadati). First, the emotion arises in the mind…"

"What arises first in the mind is later expressed through speech. Therefore, the mind can be regarded as the 'husband' of speech. The 'elder' that comes from it is the jivātma (individual soul), which is referred to here as Utathya.

The word 'tathya' means 'truth,' and the prefix 'u' signifies doubt or questioning — thus, 'Utathya' refers to 'that which is questioned in its truthfulness.' In this way, constant inquiry continues about the nature of the soul — whether, being of the form of consciousness, it is truly real, or, as the Upanishadic saying goes, brahmavid brahmaiva bhavati — 'The knower of Brahman becomes Brahman.' Philosophical doctrines such as Dvaita (dualism), Advaita (non-dualism), and Vishishtadvaita (qualified non-dualism) are all intricate elaborations based on this single mysterious prefix 'u'.

The term 'Mamata' requires no special interpretation. In commonly understood language, it signifies deep attachment to or excessive fondness for something — also referred to as possessiveness or egoistic attachment, which is essentially a manifestation of Maya (illusion or cosmic delusion).

The term 'Dirghatama' means 'profound darkness,' which in other words stands for ignorance or delusion. Likewise, the term 'Virya' also means valor or potency. So, in spiritual terms, the meaning becomes clear: the soul (Utathya)'s consort Mamata, who is imbued with egoistic attachment, had in her womb a conception called Dirghatama (darkness/delusion).

The mind, symbolized by Brihaspati, wished to infuse this disposition with the power of its Virya (potency/energy). However, as long as delusion (moha) resides in the womb of Mamata (attachment), the transmission of mental or spiritual power becomes nearly impossible.

This idea is expressed in the Vedas as:
'Andham tamaḥ praviśanti ye'vidyām upāsate' —
"They enter into blinding darkness, those who worship ignorance." (Yajurveda 40.12)"

"That is — those human beings who become entangled in the snare of avidyā (ignorance) attain profound darkness. Therefore, even after countless efforts by the mind, the moha (delusion) residing in the womb of Mamata (attachment) does not allow the entry of mental or spiritual force.

Even if, by chance, the mind in the form of Bṛhaspati — out of weariness or helplessness — ends up spilling or discharging its vīrya-power (potency) in the presence of such an egoistic tendency (Mamata-vṛtti), then the result is the birth of Bharadvāja, who symbolizes ātmajñāna (self-knowledge).

Because self-knowledge is the result of the mutual struggle between the mind (manas) and the tendencies (vṛtti), it is thus called Bharadvāja. The nourishment and growth of this born self-knowledge (Bharadvāja) occur only through disciplines such as restraint and spiritual practices — and so, the idea of the 'gods protecting Bharadvāja' refers to this very nurturing process. This, then, is the spiritual essence of the story.

Varuna

Varuna is the god of water. He is praised in several hymns of the Vedas. A story mentioned in the Mahabharata tells us Varuna's rape of Bhadra another wife of Utathya, Mahabharata 13.154.10-17 "…'Hear now, O king, the story of Utathya who was born in the race of Angiras. The daughter of Soma, named Bhadra, came to be regarded as unrivalled in beauty. Her sire Soma regarded Utathya to be the fittest of husbands for her…the handsome Varuna had, from a long time before, coveted the girl. Coming to the woods where Utathya dwelt, Varuna stole away the girl when she had plunged into the Yamuna for a bath. Abducting her thus, the Lord of the waters took her to his own abode…There, within that palace, the Lord of waters; O king, sported with the damsel. A little while after, the fact of the ravishment of his wife was reported to Utathya…"

Here is Mahabharata Anushashan Parva Adhaya 154 BORI Critical Edition nowhere written such thing

Vaishampayana said, 'Bhishma, Shantanu's son, spoke these words to all the Kurus. O scorcher of enemies! Then, Kouravya remained silent for a while. In due order, he held himself in different stages of dharana. 13 Having controlled his breath of life, the great-souled one propelled it upwards. In the midst of those great-souled ones, an extraordinary event occurred. As Shantanu's son released it along different parts of his body, because of being united with yoga, the wounds disappeared from those parts. While all of them looked on, in a short while, he was completely free of wounds. O king! With Vasudeva at the forefront, all of them were astounded on seeing this and that included all the sages, Vyasa and the others. He restrained his breath of life and controlled all the exits. Therefore, it pierced the crown of his head and ascended towards heaven. O lord of men! Like a giant meteor, it pierced Bhishma's head and emerged, penetrating the sky and instantly disappearing. O tiger among kings! Thus did the king who was Shantanu's son, the extender of the Bharata lineage, himself give up this world.
'The great-souled Pandavas and Vidura collected many diverse kinds of wood and fragrances and prepared the funeral pyre. Yuyutsu and the other Kouravas The great-souled Pandavas and Vidura collected many diverse kinds of wood and fragrances and prepared the funeral pyre. Yuyutsu and the other Kouravas looked on. Yudhishthira and the extremely intelligent Vidura wrapped Gangeya Kourava's body in silken cloth and covered it with garlands. Over it, Yuyutsu held aloft an excellent umbrella. Bhimasena and Arjuna fanned it with whisks. The sons of Madri held the headdresses. Bhishma was the protector of the Kouravas and the extender of the Kuru lineage. On every side, the women stood around with fans made of palm leaves and fanned the body. The great-souled one's funeral ceremony14 was performed according to the prescribed ordinances. Priests who knew the Sama Veda chanted Sama hymns. Sandalwood, yellow fragrant wood, black aloe and fragrances were used in the pyre. Gangeya was covered in these and the fire was lit. The kings, with Dhritarashtra at the forefront, stood on the right side of the pyre. Thus did the supreme ones of the Kuru lineage perform the funeral rites of Gangeya, foremost among the Kurus.

With large numbers of rishis, the extenders of the Kuru lineage then went to the banks of the Bhagirathi. They were followed by Vyasa, Narada, Asita, Krishna, the women of the Bharata lineage and the assembled citizens. Following the prescribed rites, the best among the kshatriyas and all the people offered water to the great-souled Gangeya.

'When water was offered to her son, the goddess Bhagirathi herself arose from the water, weeping in grief. Lamenting, she addressed the Kouravas. "O unblemished ones! I will tell you what has happened. Listen. He was royal in conduct, with wisdom and a noble lineage. He honoured the elders among the weapons and was immensely valorous. He has now been slain by Shikhandi. O kings! There is no doubt that the core of my heart is made out of stone. Though I can no longer see my beloved son, it has not yet been shattered. For the svayamvara, all the kings and the kshatriyas assembled in the city of Kashi. 16 On a single chariot, he defeated all of them and abducted the maidens. There never has been strength like his on earth. Yet, on hearing that he had been brought down by Shikhandi, my mind was not shattered. In Kurukshetra, the great-souled one fought with Jamadagni's son. Despite his being brought down by Shikhandi, I am not greatly afflicted." In this fashion, the great river lamented in many ways. The lord Damodara[1] comforted her. "O fortunate one! Control yourself. O one who is beautiful to see! You should not grieve. There is no doubt that your son has obtained supreme success. O beautiful one! He was one of the immensely energetic Vasus and was cursed. That is the reason he was born as a man. You should not sorrow. He followed the dharma of kshatriyas and fought in the field of battle. He was brought down by Dhananjaya, not by Shikhandi. When Bhishma, tiger among the Kurus, was engaged in a great battle, no one was capable of bringing him down in that engagement, not even Shatakratu himself. O one with the beautiful face! Your son is at ease and has gone to heaven. O best among rivers! Therefore, you should not sorrow on account of that descendant of the Kuru lineage. O goddess! Be without anxiety. Your son has gone and has become one of the Vasus." In this way, the best among rivers was addressed by Krishna and by Vyasa. O great king! She abandoned her grief and controlled herself. All the kings, with Krishna at the forefront, honoured the river. Having taken her permission, all the kings then returned.'

Chapter 1633(154)

Vaishampayana said, 'Bhishma, Shantanu's son, spoke these words to all the Kurus. O scorcher of enemies! Then, Kouravya remained silent for a while. In due order, he held himself in different stages of dharana.[13] Having controlled his breath of life, the great-souled one propelled it upwards. In the midst of those great-souled ones, an extraordinary event occurred. As Shantanu's son released it along different parts of his body, because of being united with yoga, the wounds disappeared from those parts. While all of them looked on, in a short while, he was completely free of wounds. O king! With Vasudeva at the forefront, all of them were astounded on seeing this and that included all the sages, Vyasa and the others. He restrained his breath of life and controlled all the exits. Therefore, it pierced the crown of his head and ascended towards heaven. O lord of men! Like a giant meteor, it pierced Bhishma's head and emerged, penetrating the sky and instantly disappearing. O tiger among kings! Thus did the king who was Shantanu's son, the extender of the Bharata lineage, himself give up this world.

'The great-souled Pandavas and Vidura collected many diverse kinds of wood and fragrances and prepared the funeral pyre. Yuyutsu and the other Kouravas

'The great-souled Pandavas and Vidura collected many diverse kinds of wood and fragrances and prepared the funeral pyre. Yuyutsu and the other Kouravas looked on. Yudhishthira and the extremely intelligent Vidura wrapped Gangeya Kourava's body in silken cloth and covered it with garlands. Over it, Yuyutsu held aloft an excellent umbrella. Bhimasena and Arjuna fanned it with whisks. The sons of Madri held the headdresses. Bhishma was the protector of the Kouravas and the extender of the Kuru lineage. On every side, the women stood around with fans made of palm leaves and fanned the body. The great-souled one's funeral ceremony[14] was performed according to the prescribed ordinances. Priests who knew the Sama Veda chanted Sama hymns. Sandalwood, yellow fragrant wood, black aloe and fragrances were used in the pyre. Gangeya was covered in these and the fire was lit. The kings, with Dhritarashtra at the forefront, stood on the right side of the pyre. Thus did the supreme ones of the Kuru lineage perform the funeral rites of Gangeya, foremost among the Kurus. With large numbers of rishis, the extenders of the Kuru lineage then went to the banks of the Bhagirathi. They were followed by Vyasa, Narada, Asita, Krishna, the women of the Bharata lineage and the assembled citizens. Following the prescribed rites, the best among the kshatriyas and all the people offered water to the great-souled Gangeya.

'When water was offered to her son, the goddess Bhagirathi herself arose from the water, weeping in grief. Lamenting, she addressed the Kouravas. "O unblemished ones! I will tell you what has happened. Listen. He was royal in conduct, with wisdom and a noble lineage. He honoured the elders among the “Crying aloud, making sound all around — this is explained as follows: thundering in the clouds, producing rumbling and roaring, the dark-white (grayish) cloud, filled with water, in the morning thus becomes Varuṇa. With his great, abundant organ — his power of procreation — he pours forth upon the earth. By that organ associated with Varuṇa, the Brahmacārin, through the greatness of his austerity, pours down water, the generative essence that produces all the worlds, upon the heights and elevated places of the earth. By this it is indicated that the Brahmacārin, being one of ‘upward-seed’ (ūrdhva-retas), creates the worlds. The meaning is that he pours down the seed that belongs to Varuṇa, not his own. By that seed in the form of water, the four great directions, beginning with the East, live and sustain life. The creatures living there thrive and prosper. The implied sense is that wherever a Brahmacārin dwells, there timely rain occurs.”

"The god Varuṇa, having become the Āchārya (spiritual teacher), caused ghee (clarified butter) to be poured out—signifying pure water alone—and united it with himself. That is, he made the water, which is unmixed and pure, one with himself. Varuṇa thus, in the form of the teacher, associated water (symbol of purity) with his own self.

This Varuṇa, when desiring a particular fruit or result from Prajāpati—his own progenitor, the Brahman—then he transformed into the god Mitra, becoming a Brahmachārin , through the power and greatness of his own brahmacharya , from his own body—(here "from his own self" is in the ablative sense; 'lyab-lopa' explains the omission of the participle)—without caring for his body, that is, disregarding his own physical comfort, offered everything that was desired to Varuṇa, who was in the role of the teacher.

Surya

Surya is the Sun-God and several hymns of Vedas are dedicated to him. He raped the virgin Kunti. Kunti was just examining her mystic power and the sun god appeared before her and was smitten with passion after seeing young and beautiful Kunti and then raped her.

Devi Bhagavatam 2.6.13-35 "...Surya Deva said :– "O Kunti! What for you called me, by virtue of the Mantra? Calling me, why do you not worship me, standing before you? O beautiful blue one! Seeing you, I have become passionate; so come to me. By means of the mantra, you have Srimad Bhagavatam 9.24.33-36 As soon as Kunti called for the demigod of the sun, he immediately appeared before her, and she was very much surprised. She told the sun-god, "I was simply examining the effectiveness of this mystic power. I am sorry I have called you unnecessarily. Please return and excuse me.

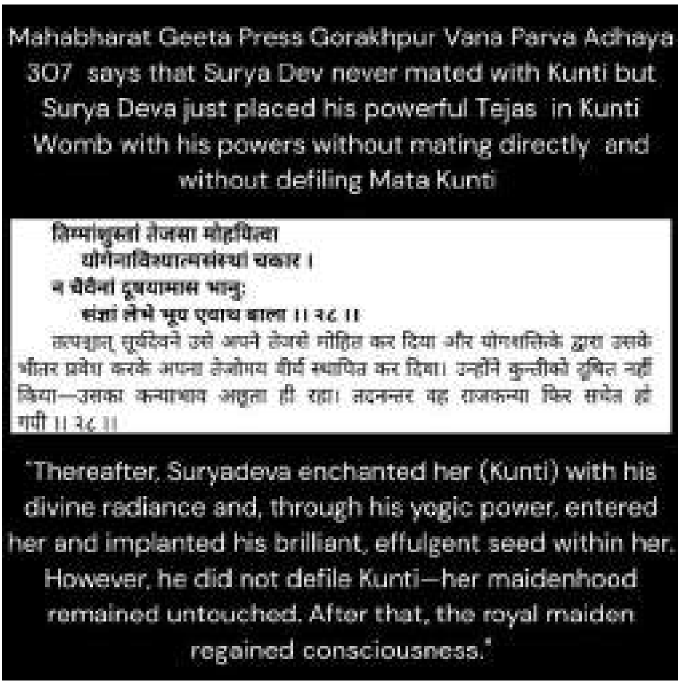
Refutation-

Mahabharat Geeta Press Gorakhpur Vana Parva Adhaya 307 sloka 28 says that Surya Dev never mated with Kunti but Surya Deva just placed his powerful Tejas in Kunti Womb with his powers without mating directly and without defiling Mata Kunti

तत्पश्चात् सूर्यदेवने उसे अपने तेजसे मोहित कर दिया और योगशक्तिके द्वारा उसके भीतर प्रवेश करके अपना तेजोमय वीर्य स्थापित कर दिया। उन्होंने कुन्तीको दूषित नहीं किया-उसका कन्याभाव अछूता ही रहा। तदनन्तर वह राजकन्या फिर सचेत हो गयी ।। २८ ।।

“Thereafter, Suryadeva enchanted her (Kunti) with his divine radiance and, through his yogic power, entered her and implanted his brilliant, effulgent seed within her. However, he did not defile Kunti—her maidenhood remained untouched. After that, the royal maiden regained consciousness.” 28



Srimad Bhagavatam 9.24.33-36 also recounts that, in accordance with the boon granted to her by Rishi Durvasa, Surya Deva blessed Mata Kunti with the birth of Karna. This divine conception occurred without compromising her chastity or her virginity, preserving her purity while fulfilling the boon.

33. She was astounded to see the (sun)-god appearing instantly in her presence. (Being embarrassed, apologetic-ally) she said, “It is just for testing the efficacy of the lore that the mantra was used. Excuse me, Oh god, and (kindly) go your way.”
34. ‘The sight of gods is never fruitless, Oh lady! I shall beget a son for you, and see to it that your virginity is unimpaired, Oh girl of beautiful waist !’
35. Assuring her thus, the sun-god impregnated her and returned to the firmament. She instantly gave birth to a son who was (brilliant) like another sun.

Ashvinkumara

Ashvinkumara was the son of the Sun God. He is said to have raped a Brahmin lady and impregnated her.

Brahma Vaivarta Purana, Brahma Kanda, 10.125-134 Saunaka was astonished at the words of Sauti and said, 'Sir, what irony of fate led Aswinkumara, the offspring of the sun, to copulate with a Brahmin woman? Kindly narrate this incident and gratify my curiosity" Santi, the best of saints replied, "O best of Munis, impossible are the ways of Providence . Once upon a time, this tranquil, strong offspring of the sun was enamoured of a Brahmin woman while she was going out on pilgrimage. Though he was dissuaded by her again and again he forcibly took her to a grove, ravished and impregnated her. The lady, bewildered with shame and fear caused her own miscarriage..." Tr. Rajendra Nath Sen

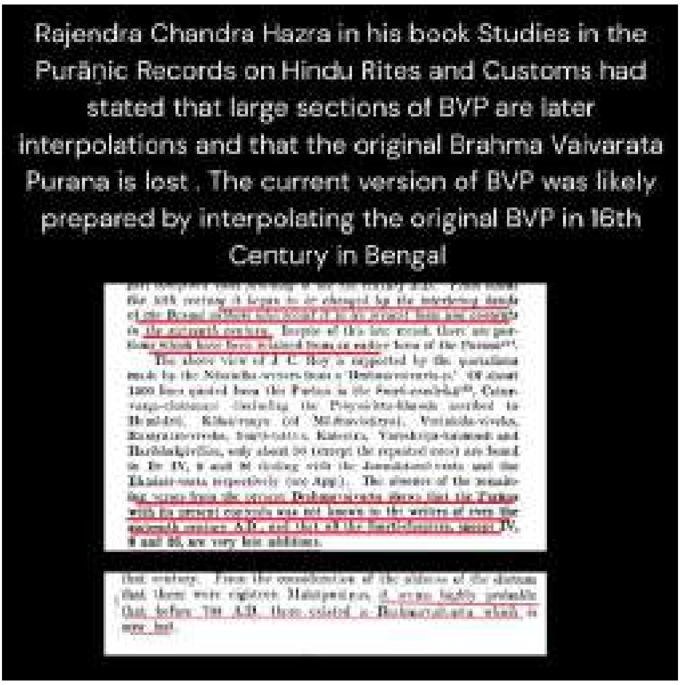
Rajendra Chandra Hazra in his book Studies in the Purāṇic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs had stated that large sections of BVP are later interpolations and that the original Brahma Vaivarata Purana is lost. The current version of BVP was likely prepared by interpolating the original BVP in 16th Century in Bengal.



Archaelogical survey of India prepared a critical edition of Brahma Vaivarat Purana based on the different manuscripts found all over India and prepared a critical edition in which they removed all those interpolated chapters and portions. I am providing the link of Critical edition Brahma Vaivarata Purana Volume 1 and 2 translated by Ram Sharma Acharya QR code provided here

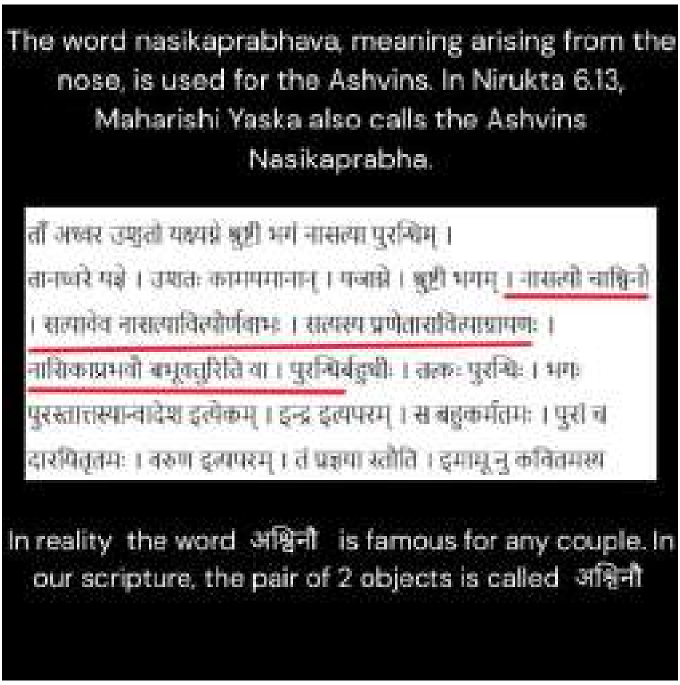
The word nasikaprabhava, meaning arising from the nose, is used for the Ashvins. In Nirukta 6.13, Maharishi Yaska also calls the Ashvins Nasikaprabha. नासत्यौ चाश्विनौ । सत्यावेव नासत्यावित्यौर्णवाभः । सत्यस्य प्रणेतारावित्याग्रायणः । नासिकाप्रभवौ बभूवतुरिति वा । पुरन्धिर्बहुधीः

In reality the word अश्विनौ is famous for any couple. In our scripture, the pair of 2 objects is called अश्विनौ



In Kathaka Samhita 13.5 the Earth and the Sky are told to be the twin अश्विनौ

वा अश्विनौ तान् द्यावापृथिवीभ्यामेवावस्तान्निबाध्यादित्येन परस्ताद्राच्या अनुदन्त

Similarly, in Maitreya Samhita 3.4.4, day and night are called twin अश्विनौ

अहोरात्रे वा अश्विना, अहोरात्रे एवास्यैतेनाभीष्टे प्रीते भवतः, सजूः सूरा एतशेनेति

Similarly, Prana and Apana are also Ashvins. They originate from the nose, hence they are called nasal origin.

Among the subjects treated in the last few chapters reference should be made to a discourse on the qualifications and duties of the king, on rites such as [illegible] and [illegible], and on the different types of sons and the necessity to have them.

The [illegible] Sporadic claims that it, rather than the Vaiṣṇava Bhāgavata, is the true and original Bhāgavata,[217] have been dismissed by most [illegible].[218]

There is general agreement that the Kālikā originated in Kāmarūpa, or in the part of Bengal which is closest to it.[219] There is less agreement, however, on the date of the text. After having been assigned to the fourteenth century,[220] the year A.D. 1000 [illegible].[221] Others noticed, in the text (35.17/37.17), an allusion to king Dharmapāla of Kāmarūpa, and consequently placed the Kālikā at the end of the eleventh or the beginning of the twelfth century.[222] [illegible] A.D. 700, in view of the fact that the purāṇa is influenced by Māgha's Śiśupālavadha.[223] Finally, [illegible] century,[224] [illegible], one which had only [illegible] course of the seventh century.[225]

Brahma

Brahma the creator is said to have raped his own daughter Saraswati. It is explained in detail in the article Brahma's incestuous relationship with his daughter Saraswati.

Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.12.28-31
O Vidura, we have heard that Brahmã had a daughter named väk who was born from his body and who attracted his mind toward sex, although she was not sexually inclined towards him. Thus, finding their father so deluded in an act of immorality, the sages headed by Marici, all sons of Brahma, spoke as follows with great respect. O father, this erformance in which you are endeavoring to complicate yourself was never attempted by any other Brahmã, nor by anyone else, nor by you in previous kalpas, nor will anyone dare to attempt it in the future. You are the supreme being in the universe, so how is it that you want to have sex with your daughter and cannot control your desire? Even though you are the most powerful being, this act does not suit you because your character is followed for spiritual improvement by people in general."

Skanda Purana 3.1.40.6-12
Prajpati (i.e. Brahma) was formerly deluded, O Brahmanas. He desired like a lover of his own daughter named Vac (Speech) joyously. This daughter of Prajapati became ashamed on noticing his lecherous love for her. Hence she assumed the form of a Rohita deer. Inclined to have sexual dalliance with her, Brahma too took the form of a deer. As she went ahead in the guise of a female deer, he too followed her. On seeing him intent on having sexual intercourse with his daughter, all the deities condemned him: 'This Brahma is committing a deed that should not be done, i.e. attempt to have sexual union with one's own daughter. Thus they censured the creator and the Lord of the worlds. On seeing Paramesthin (Brahma) engaged in the forbidden act, Lord Hara took up the Pinaka bow and assumed the form of a hunter. He fitted one arrow to his bow. He drew the bow string as far as his ear and hit Brahma with his sharp arrow. Struck down by the arrow of the Annihilator of the three Puras, Brahma fell down on the ground."

We know the term Prajapati is used for Brahma in Puranas . The Same term Prajapati is used for Sun in Vedas at several places because Sun is responsible for life on Earth . So Sun is Prajapati [Brahma] .

Then who is the daughter of Prajapati Sun [Brahma] . Usha [Dawn] is the daughter of Prajapati Surya [Brahma] as Usha[Dawn] is brought about by approach of Prajapati Sun [Brahma] . Acharya Kumarilla Bhatta explained in his Tantra Vartika 1.3.7

. (1) The word "Prajapati" means 'one who protects all creatures;' as such it can be taken as a name of the Sun; and it is an ordinary fact that towards morning the sun reaches the early Dawn, ('Usha'); and as the early Dawn is brought about by the approach of the Sun, it is called his "daughter;" and it is the fact of the Sun letting his rays fall in (or on) the Dawn that has been figuratively spoken of as the intercourse of a man with a woman.

That is being the protector of the world Prajapati Brahma is Sun and Usha Dawn is the daughter of Prajapati Brahma Sun . It is an ordinary fact that towards morning Sun (Brahma) reaches the early Dawn, ('Usha'); and as the early Dawn is rought about by the approach of the Sun (Brahma) it is

In Srimad Bhagvatam and Skanda Purana its written that Prajapati Brahma [Sun] went after his daughter Usha [Dawn] . Rays of Sun can be taken as sons of Prajapati Brahma . The Sons of Prajapati Brahma [Sun] Stopped him and then Brahma [Sun] left his body causing Fog which spread in all directions.It's not that rays of sun try to stop him. यहां इतना और भी समझ लेना आवश्यक है कि इस कथा के अध्यात्म-प्रधान रूपक में – मरीचि आदि पुत्रों का समझाना घटित नहीं होता था, अतएव ब्रह्मवैवर्त में श्री वेदव्यास जी ने उक्त घटना के बजाय यह प्रकट किया है कि 'पुत्री के पीछे भागते हुये ब्रह्मा को उसके पुत्र महादेव ने सावधान किया ।' इस अंश का तात्पर्य यह है कि वाणी का अनुगमन करते हुए मन को विवेक बार २ सावधान करता है। यही इस कथा का 'आध्यात्मिक-अर्थ' है, जिससे मनोविज्ञान का एक अद्भुत रहस्य प्रकट होता है ।

To make this spiritual meaning clear, Lord Śrī Krishna, who, in response to Śrī Rādhā's question, says:

manassvarūpo brahmā me jñānarūpo maheśvaraḥ (verse 58)

vāgadhiṣṭhātrī devī yā sā svayaṃ ca sarasvatī (verse 56)

Meaning:

The mind is my form as Brahmā; knowledge is my form as Maheśvara (Śiva); and the presiding goddess of speech is Sarasvatī herself.

It is important to further understand that, in the spiritually symbolic version of this tale, the narrative involving Mārīci and other sons (i.e., their attempt to dissuade Brahmā) is not relevant. Hence, Sage Vedavyāsa presents the story as:

"As Brahmā chased after his daughter, it was his son Mahādeva (Śiva) who warned him."

The meaning behind this is: as the mind chases after speech, it is discrimination (viveka), represented by Śiva, which again and again warns the mind. This is the true spiritual meaning of the tale — revealing a profound mystery of psychology (manovijñāna).

Similar explanation has been given by कृष्णनारायण प्रसाद 'मागध' – वाणी प्रकाशन। -१९९९

वैदिक साहित्य में प्रजापति को बहुधा मन '98 एवं वाक् को सरस्वती' 99 कहा गया है। मन की सत्ता वाक् से पूर्ववर्त्तिनी होती है। पहले मन संकल्प करता है। तदुपरांत वह वाक् (वाणी) द्वारा प्रकट होता है। अव्यक्त ब्रह्मा ने सृष्टि (अपने को अनेक रूपों में व्यक्त) करने का मन में संकल्प किया। मन के संकल्प से वाक् की उत्पत्ति हुई। इस पारस्परिक संबंध के कारण 'मन' को पिता (प्रजापति ब्रह्मा) और 'वाक्' को दुहिता (सरस्वती) कहा गया। मन रूपी पिता के वाक् रूपी दुहिता में प्रेरणारूप वीर्याधान किए जाने पर शब्द रूप पुत्र की उत्पत्ति होती है। मन की अपेक्षा वाक् सूक्ष्म होती है। अतः उसके लिए भागवतकार द्वारा प्रयुक्त 'तन्वीं' ार्थक विशेषण है। कामना करना मन का धर्म है। इसीलिए आख्यान में मनरूपी

प्रजापति को 'सकाम' और वाक् को 'अकामा' कहा गया है। प्रथम उत्पन्न होने के कारण मन को 'स्वयम्भू' भी कहा जाना सार्थक है। इस प्रकार सृष्टि-विद्या के गूढ़ आध्यात्मिक रहस्य को इस आख्यान के मिस मनोवैज्ञानिक रूप में प्रस्तुत करना पुराणकार का लक्ष्य रहा है।

Vāk as "Sarasvatī".
The existence of the mind precedes speech (vāk).
First, the mind conceives a thought, and afterward, it manifests through vāk (speech).

The unmanifest Brahmā resolved in his mind to manifest creation (himself in multiple forms).
From the mental resolution, vāk emerged.

Due to this mutual relationship, the mind is called the father (Prajāpati Brahmā), and vāk is called the daughter (Sarasvatī).

When the mind, in the form of a father, deposits inspiration (vīrya) into vāk, in the form of the daughter, the child in the form of words (śabda) is born.
Compared to the mind, vāk is more subtle.
Therefore, the adjective "tanvīm" (delicate) used by the Bhāgavata author for her is appropriate.

Desire is a natural trait of the mind.
Hence, in the narrative, the mind-like Prajāpati is called "sakāma" (with desire) and vāk is called "akāmā" (without desire).
Being the first to emerge, it is appropriate to refer to the mind as "Svayambhū" (self-born).

In this way, the deep spiritual mystery of the science of creation has been presented in psychological terms through this narrative by the Purāṇa authors.

उन्होंने मुझसे कहा—'मैं तुम्हारा वध करूँगा।' फलतः उनसे विनय युक्त हो मैंने अपनी वह कन्या विवस्वान् को सौंप दी[60]। इसे आद्योपांत आकाशीय चित्र से समझा जा सकता है—

ऊपरि चित्र का नक्षत्र-समूह उत्तरी गोलार्द्ध (भारत सहित एशिया, यूरोप उत्तरी अमेरिका) में शिशिर ऋतु (पौष-माघ, स्थूलतः मध्य दिसंबर से मध्य फरवरी) की रात्रियों के प्रथम प्रहर में दक्षिण की ओर देखने पर सिर के ऊपर दिखायी पड़ता है। द्वितीय प्रहर में यह पश्चिम की ओर ढलने लगता है, तब गाथा में वर्णित दृश्य प्रत्यक्ष हो उठता है। चित्र में, आकाश-गंगा के पश्चिम, दिखायी पड़ने वाला वृहद् और चमकीला नक्षत्र-समूह प्रजापति (Constellation of ORION) है। प्राचीन भारतीय खगोलविदों के अनुसार प्रजापति नक्षत्र-समूह में पाँच प्रमुख नक्षत्र हैं—रोहिणी (Aldebaran), मृगशिरा, आर्द्रा, मृगव्याध (Sirius) और पुनर्वसु (Pollux)। अंतरिक्ष में सूर्य और चंद्रमा के भ्रमण-पथ के निकट रोहिणी दिखायी पड़ती है। रोहिणी का अर्थ मृगी (रोहित) है। यह वृष राशि (Taurus) का सर्वाधिक चमकीला और रक्तवर्णी नक्षत्र है। रोहिणी के नीचे उत्तर-पूर्व में (बायीं ओर) उसका अनुगमन करने वाला मृगरूप धारी प्रजापति (ORION) बीच में है। चतुष्कोण बनाने वाले प्रजापति-समूह के चार तारे ही मृग की चार टाँगें हैं एवं चतुष्कोण के ऊपर दिखायी पड़ने वाला तीन तारों से निर्मित त्रिकोण ही मृग का सिर अर्थात् मृगशिरा नक्षत्र है—"एतद् वै प्रजापतेः

महाभारतीय आख्यान (सौप्तिक पर्व, अ. 18) की प्रतीक व्याख्या भी इसी खगोलीय तथ्य का पोषक है। उसके अनुसार देवयज्ञ में रुद्र को भाग नहीं मिला अतः वे कुपित हो धनुष-बाण लिए यज्ञ-स्थान पर गए। उन्हें कुपित देख देवता भयभीत हो उठे। कुपित रुद्र ने यज्ञ (यज्ञ प्रजापति) के हृदय में बाण से आघात किया। तब अग्नि सहित यज्ञ (यज्ञ प्रजापति) मृग का रूप धारण कर वहाँ से भाग चला और आकाश में पहुँच कर (प्रजापति नक्षत्र-समूह के रूप में) प्रकाशित होने लगा। आकाश में भी रुद्र (मृगव्याध रूप में, आर्द्रा नक्षत्र जिनका त्रिकाण्ड बाण है) उसके पीछे लगे रहते हैं। दक्षयज्ञ-विध्वंस-आख्यान (महाभा. 12/283/36 एवं आगे) में भी इसका अधूरा रूप मिलता है। ऐतरेय ब्रा. (3/3/9) की गाथा के खगोलीय तथ्य से पुष्पदन्त पूर्णतः परिचित थे—उनके शिवमहिम्न-स्तोत्र का अग्रांकित बाइसवाँ श्लोक उसी से प्रेरित प्रतीत होता है—

प्रजानाथं नाथ प्रसभमभिकं स्वां दुहितरं/गतं रोहिद्भूतां रिरमयिषुमृष्यस्य वपुषा।
धनुष्पाणेर्यातं दिवमपि सपत्राकृतममुं/त्रसन्तं तेऽद्यापि त्यजति न मृगव्याधरभसः॥

ग. आधिदैविक तथ्य

इस आख्यान में सृष्टिविकास को अधिदैविक तथ्य के रूप में उपस्थित किया गया है। वैदिक गाथाओं की त्रिविध व्याख्या का मार्ग यास्क ने प्रशस्त किया था। उक्त आधार पर इसकी भी व्याख्या की जाती है। कृष्ण यजुर्वेद की काठक सं (12/5 एवं 27/1) के अनुसार वाक् प्रजापति की पुत्री एवं पत्नी (शक्ति) दोनों है। उनके परस्पर संयोग से प्रजा वर्गों की उत्पत्ति होती है। तदुपरांत वाक् (प्रजापति की शक्ति) प्रजापति में ही प्रविष्ट हो जाती है—

प्रजापतिर्वै इदमासीत्। तस्य वाक् द्वितीया आसीत्। तां मिथुनं समभवत् सा [illegible] अपाक्रामत्। सा इमाः प्रजाः असृजत्। सा प्रजापतिमेव पुनः प्राविशत्।

शतपथ ब्रा. में प्रजापति और वाक् के मानसिक संयोग से वसुओं, रुद्रों, आदित्यों एवं विश्वेदेवों की उत्पत्ति का वर्णन मिलता है। पंचविंश ब्रा. के अनुसार आरंभ में प्रजापति और वाक् दो ही तत्व थे—'प्रजापतिर्वै इदं एक आसीत् तस्य वाक् एव स्वमासीद् वाग् द्वितीया'। अस्तु, वाक् (स्त्री लिंग) की कल्पना ब्रह्म (नपुंसक लिंग एवं पुंलिंग ब्रह्मा)—पत्नी के रूप में किया जाना अस्वाभाविक नहीं है। बृहद्देवता (5/97-103) में [illegible] यज्ञ करते समय प्रजापति का शरीरिणी वाक् को देख कर विकार ग्रस्त होने के उल्लेख में भी कदाचित् इसी ओर संकेत हुआ है।

सर्ग की सलिलोत्पत्ति (देखिए [illegible]) के वर्णन में उल्लेख किया जा चुका है कि सृष्टि-रचना की कामना करने पर स्वयम्भू प्रजापति (पुराणों के ब्रह्मा) अपनी इच्छा से अपने भीतर से मूल रचनात्मक उपादान (मातृतत्व) की सृष्टि करता है। स्वयम्भू जिस मातृ-तत्व की सृष्टि करता है, वह उसका अविभाज्य अंग होता है। मनुस्मृति (1/32) में भी दोनों अविभाज्य तत्व ही स्वीकृत हुए हैं। हरिवंश पु. के अनुसार तप में ब्रह्मा अकेले रम नहीं सके तो उन्होंने एक शुभलक्षणा भार्या उत्पन्न की जो उनके शरीर का आधा भाग थी। वह लोकों की सृष्टि करने में समर्थ थी। उससे संसर्ग कर उन्होंने सभी प्रजापतियों, सागरों, सरिताओं की सृष्टि की। ब्रह्मा का अपनी देह के दो भाग (प्रथमार्द्ध को पुरुष रूप और द्वितीयार्द्ध को स्त्रीरूप) करने के उल्लेख किंचित् शब्दांतर से कई पुराणों में हुए हैं। भविष्य पु. में इतना और कथित है कि ब्रह्मा ने उस स्त्रीरूप से विराट् की सृष्टि की। मत्स्य पु. (3/30-48) वर्णित आख्यान में भी कहा गया है कि सृष्टि करने की इच्छा से तप करने पर ब्रह्मा का कल्मष रहित शरीर दो भागों में विभक्त हो गया—आधाभाग स्त्रीरूप और आधाभाग पुरुष रूप हो गया। स्त्री रूप आधे भाग की अभिधा 'शतरूपा' (शतविध माया) हुई। वही सावित्री, गायत्री, सरस्वती और ब्रह्माणी भी कही गयी है। 'स्वदेहसम्भूता', आत्मजा गायत्री के मनोहर रूप पर ब्रह्मा मुग्ध हो गए। आगे उसी में कहा गया है ब्रह्मा ने अनिंदिता शतरूपा का पाणिग्रहण किया जिससे स्वायम्भुव मनु, जिसे विराट् भी कहा जाता है, की उत्पत्ति

पूर्व उल्लिखित ऐतरेय ब्रा. की गाथा का उत्तरार्द्ध प्रजापति-नक्षत्र सूमूह (ORION) अथवा रोहिणीशकट का रूपकात्मक विवरण प्रस्तुत करता है। ब्रह्म पु. के पंचतीर्थ-माहात्म्य वर्णन में इसी को कथा का रूप दिया गया है। उसमें कथावाचक स्वयं ब्रह्मा हैं। उन्होंने कहा है कि सावित्री, गायत्री, श्रद्धा, मेधा और सरस्वती मेरी ज्येष्ठ कन्याएँ हैं। इनमें एक को मैंने अलौकिक रूपवती बनाया। उसके अद्वितीय सौंदर्य को देख स्वयं मेरी बुद्धि विकृत हो गयी। कामवश मैंने जब उसे पकड़ना चाहा, तब वह भाग खड़ी हुई। जब वह मृगी बन कर भागने लगी, तब मैंने मृग बन कर उसका पीछा किया। यह देख लोकधर्म के रक्षार्थ शंभु मृग-व्याध का रूप धारण कर, धनुष ताने मेरे पीछे-पीछे दौड़े।

उपरि चित्र का नक्षत्र-समूह उत्तरी गोलार्द्ध (भारत सहित एशिया, यूरोप उत्तरी अमेरिका) में शिशिर ऋतु (पौष-माघ, स्थूलतः मध्य दिसंबर से मध्य फरवरी) की रात्रियों के प्रथम प्रहर में दक्षिण की ओर देखने पर सिर के ऊपर दिखायी पड़ता है। द्वितीय प्रहर में यह पश्चिम की ओर ढलने लगता है, तब गाथा में वर्णित दृश्य प्रत्यक्ष हो उठता है। चित्र में, आकाश-गंगा के पश्चिम, दिखायी पड़ने वाला बृहत् और चमकीला नक्षत्र-समूह प्रजापति (Constellation of ORION) है। प्राचीन भारतीय खगोलविदों के अनुसार प्रजापति नक्षत्र-समूह में पाँच प्रमुख नक्षत्र हैं- रोहिणी (Alldebaran), मृगशिरा, आर्द्रा, मृगव्याध (Sirius) और पुनर्वसु (Pollux)। अपेक्षया दांयीं ओर चंद्रमा के भ्रमण-पथ के निकट रोहिणी दिखायी पड़ती है। रोहिणी का अर्थ मृगी (रोहित) है। वह वृष राशि (Taurus) का सर्वाधिक चमकीला और रक्तवर्णी नक्षत्र है। रोहिणी के नीचे उत्तर-पूर्व में (बायीं ओर) उसका अनुगमन करने वाला मृगरूप धारी प्रजापति (ORION) बीच में है। चतुष्कोण बनाने वाले प्रजापति-समूह के चार तारे ही मृग की चार टाँगें हैं एवं

शिरो यन्मृगशीर्षम्' (शतपथ ब्रा. 2/1/2/8)। उसके नीचे उत्तर-पूर्व में (बायीं ओर) दिखायी पडने वाले 'मृगव्याध' रूपी रुद्र (Canis Major या Great Dog) की बध की आकृति अगल-बगल के तारों को मिला कर बनती है- लगता है कि कोई व्यक्ति (व्याध) कमर में शस्त्र लटकाए, एक हाथ में धनुष लिए मृगरूपधारी प्रजापति का पीछा कर रहा है। वह वाण छोड़ चुका है। मृग के शरीर के अंदर एक रेखा में अवस्थित तीन तारे (आर्द्रा नक्षत्र; लोकभाषा में तीनडड़िया208) ही मृगव्याध रूपी रुद्र के द्वारा छोड़े गए त्रिकांड वाण (इषुस्त्रिकाण्डः) हैं। प्राचीन भारतीय खगोलविदों ने जिस तारा-समूह को रुद्र (मृग-व्याध) कहा है, उसे ही पश्चिमी खगोलविदों ने बृहत्श्वान (Canis Major या Great Dog) कहा है। रुद्र-मृगव्याध तारा-समूह का ही नहीं, अपितु संपूर्ण गोलार्द्ध का सर्वाधिक चमकीला तारा 'मृग-व्याध' (Sirus या Dog Star) है। मृग-व्याध (Sirus) से रोहिणी (Aldebaran) तक एक सीध में काल्पनिक रेखा खींचने पर वह आर्द्रा (ORION'S BELT) से होकर ही गुजरेगी। रोहिणी के ऊपर दायीं ओर वाले (छह, पाश्चात्य मिथक के अनुसार सात जिन्हें 'सप्तस्वसा'- Seven Sisters कहा गया है) तारों के समूह की आख्या कृतिका (Pleiades) है। शास्त्रों एवं ज्योतिषीय ग्रंथों में इस पूरे नक्षत्र-मंडल की आख्या 'रोहिणी-शकट' है। बृहत्संहिता (47/4) के अनुसार रोहिणी-शकट के बीच से शनि के गुजरने पर बारह वर्षों तक वर्षा नहीं होती है। तैत्तिरीय सं. (4/4/10) में विभिन्न नक्षत्रों और उनके स्वामियों के उल्लेख हुए हैं। तदनुसार रोहिणी के स्वामी प्रजापति (रोहिणी नक्षत्रं प्रजापतिर्देवता) एवं आर्द्रा के स्वामी रुद्र (आर्दा नक्षत्रं रुद्रो देवता) कहे गए हैं। इससे भी आख्यान के खगोलीय आधार का संकेत होता है।
महाभारतीय आख्यान (सौप्तिक पर्व, अ. 18) की याज्ञिक व्याख्या भी इसी खगोलीय तथ्य का पोषक है। उसके अनुसार देवयज्ञ में रुद्र को भाग नहीं मिला। अतः वे कुपित हो धनुष-वाण लिए यज्ञ-स्थान पर गए। उन्हें कुपित देख देवता भयभीत हो उठे। कुपित रुद्र ने यज्ञ (यज्ञ प्रजापति) के हृदय में वाण से आघात किया। तब अग्नि सहित यज्ञ (यज्ञ प्रजापति) मृग का रूप धारण कर वहाँ से भाग चला और आकाश में पहुँच कर (प्रजापति नक्षत्र-समूह के रूप में) प्रकाशित होने लगा। आकाश में भी रुद्र (मृगव्याध रूप में, आर्द्रा नक्षत्र जिनका त्रिकाण्ड वाण है) उसके पीछे लगे रहते हैं 209। दक्षयज्ञ-विध्वंस-आख्यान (महाभा. 12/288/36 एवं आगे) में भी इसका अधूरा रूप मिलता है। ऐतरेय ब्रा. (3/3/9) की गाथा के खगोलीय तथ्य से पुष्पदंत पूर्णतः परिचित थे उनके शिवमहिम्न स्तोत्र का अग्रांकित बाइसवाँ श्लोक उससे प्रेरित प्रतीत होता है-
प्रजानायं नाथ प्रसभमभिकं स्वां दुहितरं गतं रोहिद्भूतां रिरमयिषुमृष्यस्य व्युषा । धनुष्पाणेर्यातं दिवमपि सपत्राकृतममुं त्रसन्तं तेऽद्यापि त्यजति न मृगव्याधरभसः ।।

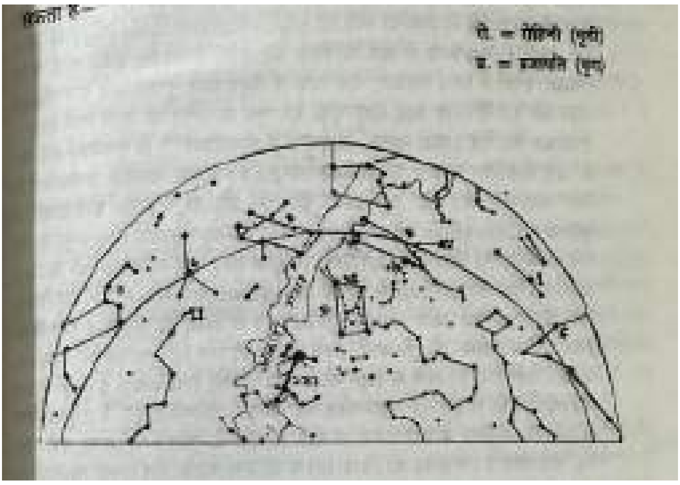
. Astronomical/Astrological Basis

The latter part of the previously mentioned Aitareya Brahmana legend presents an allegorical depiction of the Prajapati–Nakshatra constellation group (ORION) or the Rohini-Shakat (the chariot of Rohini). In the Brahma Purana's description of the sanctity of the Panchatirtha (the five sacred spots), this has been presented as a narrative. In this tale, the narrator is Brahma himself. He says:

"Savitri, Gayatri, Shraddha, Medha, and Saraswati are my eldest daughters. I made one of them extraordinarily beautiful. On seeing her unparalleled beauty, my intellect became deluded. Driven by desire, when I tried to seize her, she fled. When she transformed into a deer and ran away, I too became a deer and chased her. Witnessing this, for the protection of cosmic order (lokadharma), Shambhu (Shiva) assumed the form of a deer-hunter, drew his bow, and began chasing after me."

He said to me, "I shall slay you." As a result, freeing myself from him, I handed over that daughter of mine to Vivasvan (the Sun God).



This can be understood through the sky chart marked above. The constellation depicted in the chart appears overhead when looking southward during the early part of the night in the winter season (Paush–Magh months, roughly mid-December to mid-February) in the Northern Hemisphere (including India, Asia, Europe, and North America). During the second watch of the night, it begins to descend westward, and at that time, the scene described in the legend visually manifests.

In the chart, the large and luminous star group seen to the west of the Milky Way is Prajapati (the constellation of ORION). According to ancient Indian astronomers, there are five major stars or nakshatras (lunar mansions) in the Prajapati constellation group: Rohini (Aldebaran), Mrigashira, Ardra, Mrigavyadha (Siriu and Punarvasu (Pollux).

Rohini is visible relatively to the right, near the Moon's orbital path. The term Rohini literally means "the doe" (female deer, Rohit). It is the brightest and reddish star in the Taurus constellation. Below Rohini, toward the northeast (to the left), Prajapati (ORION), in the form of a deer pursuing her, is seen in the middle.

The four stars that form a quadrilateral in the Prajapati group represent the four legs of the deer, and the triangle formed by three stars appearing above this quadrilateral is the head of the deer, i.e., the Mrigashira nakshatra — "Etad vai Prajapateh..." (This indeed is of Prajapati).

The head is what is called Mrigashirsha (the Head of the Deer)" (Shatapatha Brahmana 2.1.2.8). Below it, toward the northeast (to the left), appears the figure of Rudra as the Deer-Hunter (Mrigavyadha), formed by connecting the stars of Canis Major or the Great Dog. It looks like a man (a hunter), with a weapon tied at his waist, holding a bow in one hand and chasing the deer-shaped Prajapati. He has already released an arrow.

Inside the body of the deer, there are three stars aligned in a row (these correspond to the Ardra Nakshatra, popularly known as "Teen Dandiyan" or "Three Sticks" in folk language). These three stars are the three-parted arrow (Trikanda Vaan) shot by Rudra in the form of the Mrigavyadha.

The star cluster that ancient Indian astronomers referred to as Rudra (the Deer-Hunter) is the same one Western astronomers named Canis Major or the Great Dog. The brightest star not only in this group but in the entire visible hemisphere is the Mrigavyadha (Sirius or the Dog Star).

If one draws an imaginary straight line from Mrigavyadha (Sirius) to Rohini (Aldebaran), it will pass directly through Ardra (Orion's Belt). Above Rohini and toward the right, there is a cluster of six stars (called seven in Western mythology, known as the Seven Sisters or Pleiades) — this group is called Krittika in Indian astronomy.

In scriptures and astrological texts, this entire star region is referred to as Rohini-Shakat (the Chariot of Rohini). According to the Brihat Samhita (47.4), if Saturn passes through the center of Rohini-Shakat, it causes a drought lasting twelve years.

The Taittiriya Samhita (4.4.10) mentions various nakshatras and their presiding deities. Accordingly, Rohini's deity is Prajapati (Rohini Nakshatram Prajapatir Devata), and Ardra's deity is Rudra (Ardra Nakshatram Rudro Devata). This also points to the astronomical basis of the myth.

The Mahabharata narrative (Sauptika Parva, Chapter 18) also supports this celestial interpretation. According to it, during the sacrificial ritual (Devayajna), Rudra did not receive his share, and thus, angered, he went to the sacrificial site with bow and arrow. Seeing him enraged, the gods were terrified. Rudra, in his fury, struck the heart of the yajna (i.e., Prajapati) with an arrow. Then the yajna, along with Agni (fire), took the form of a deer and fled, eventually rising into the sky and becoming the constellation of Prajapati. Even in the sky, Rudra, in the form of Mrigavyadha, continues to pursue him — his arrow being the three stars of Ardra (Orion's Belt).

A partial version of this story is also found in the tale of Daksha Yajna's destruction (Mahabharata 12.288.36 onward).

Pushpadanta was fully aware of the astronomical facts related to the Aitareya Brahmana (3.3.9) tale. The twenty-second verse of his Shivamahimna Stotra seems to be directly inspired by this:

प्रजानायं नाथ प्रसभमभिकं स्वां दुहितरं गतं रोहिद्भूतां रिरमयिषुमृष्यस्य व्युषा । धनुष्याणेर्यातं दिवमपि सपत्राकृतममुं त्रसन्तं तेऽद्यापि त्यजति न मृगव्याधरभसः ।।

This interpretation is given by Acharya Sayana in his Commentary on Aitareya Brahmana 3/33 and as well

सा० भा०- स रुद्रोऽभ्यायत् य बाणयुक्तं धनुरभित आकृष्य तं प्रजापतिमविध्यत्। ऋश्यमृगरूपः स प्रजापतिर्विद्धः सन्नूर्ध्वमुख उदप्रपतत् प्रकर्षेणोत्पतनमकरोत्। तमेत-मुत्पतितमृश्यमृगरूपं प्रजापतिमाकाशे दृष्ट्वा सर्व एव ते जना मृग इत्याचक्षते, रोहिण्या-र्द्रयोर्नक्षत्रयोर्मध्येऽवस्थितं मृगशीर्षनक्षत्रं कथयन्ति, नक्षत्ररूपेण निष्पन्न इत्यर्थः। 'य उ एव' यस्तु रुद्रो 'मृगव्याधो' मृगघाती स रुद्र ाकाशे दृश्यमानः स उ एव लोकप्रसिद्धो मृगव्याध आसीत्। या दुहिता रोहिता

That Rudra approached, who had a bow with an arrow set upon it, and having fully drawn it, he struck Prajāpati. Prajāpati, who had taken the form of a Ṛśya-mṛga (a kind of antelope or deer), was hit, and looking upwards, he leapt up — he made a great upward flight.
Seeing this Prajāpati in the form of an Ṛśya-mṛga who had thus leapt into the sky, all the people (sages, observers) began to call it 'Mṛga' (deer).
They refer to the Mṛgaśīrṣa Nakṣatra (a lunar constellation) as being located between the stars Rohiṇī and Ārdrā — meaning it has become established in the form of a star (nakṣatra).
The one who (shot the arrow), that Rudra, who is the 'Mṛgavyādha' (hunter of the deer), is seen in the sky — he himself became the popularly known figure of the celestial Mṛgavyādha (hunter of the deer).
And the daughter, the reddish-colored deer-like one (mṛgī), who is Rohiṇī (literally meaning 'reddish' or 'blood-colored'), she became the celestial star Rohiṇī in the sky.
And that very object (the arrow) which Rudra sent forth — composed of three parts: Trikāṇḍa (threefold shaft), Śalya (the point), and Tejana (the fiery power) — that itself became the celestial arrow seen in the sky, renowned for its triple structure

Shatapatha Brahmana (2/1/2/8-9) too states that the Mrigashira Nakshatra is referred to as Prajapati (Brahma) and Rohini Nakshatra as the daughter of Prajapati (Brahma) (Mrigashira Nakshatra)

रोहिणी नक्षत्र में भी अग्न्याधान करे, क्योंकि रोहिणी नक्षत्र में ही सन्तान के इच्छुक प्रजापति ने अग्न्याधान किया था। उसने प्रजा सूजी और वह प्रजा एक-रूप और ठीक रही, रोहिणी (लाल गाय) के समान । इसलिए रोहिणी नक्षत्र रोहिणी गौ के समान है। इसलिए जो कोई इस रहस्थ को समझकर रोहिणी नक्षत्र में अग्न्याधान करता हैं वह सन्तान और पशुओं से फूलता-फलता है ।।६।।
मृगशीर्ष नक्षत्र में भी अग्न्याधान हो सकता है, क्योंकि मृगशीर्ष प्रजापति का सिर है। श्री ही शिर है। इसलिए जो मनुष्य जाति में श्रेष्ठ होता है उसको कहते हैं कि यह जाति का शिर है। जो इस रहस्य को समझकर मृगशीर्ष नक्षत्र में अग्न्याधान करता है वह श्री को प्राप्त होगा ।।८।।
अब मृगशीर्ष नक्षत्र में अग्न्याधान न करने की (युक्ति कुछ लोग यह देते हैं) कि यह प्रजापति का शरीर है। जब इसको देवों ने त्रिकाण्ड तीर से बींधा तो कहते हैं कि उसने शरीर त्याग दिया। इसलिए यह शरीर केवल वास्तु, अयज्ञिय (यज्ञ न करने योग्य) और निर्वीर्य हो गया । इसलिए मृगशीर्ष में अग्न्याधान न करेः।।६।।
परन्तु वह कर सकता है। यह जो प्रजापति का शरीर है, न तो वास्तु है, न ही अयज्ञिय और न निर्वीर्य (इसलिए मृगशीर्ष में अग्न्याधान करे) । पुनर्वसु नक्षत्र में पुनराधेय कर्म करे। ऐसा आदेश है ।।१०।।

“One should also perform the ignition of the sacred fire (Agnyaadhan) during the Rohini Nakshatra, because it was during Rohini Nakshatra that Prajapati, desiring progeny, performed Agnyaadhan. As a result, progeny was born, uniform and flawless, resembling Rohini (the red cow). Therefore, Rohini Nakshatra is considered similar to the Rohini cow.
Hence, whoever understands this secret and performs Agnyaadhan during Rohini Nakshatra flourishes with offspring and cattle. (Verse 6)

It is also during Rohini Nakshatra that the sacrificial fires related to animals are established, so that they may ascend to the level of human desires (Rohem – rise).
The fires rose to fulfill human desires.
And just as the animals’ desires toward humans were fulfilled, so too will the humans’ desires toward the animals be fulfilled — for the one who, understanding this secret, performs Agnyaadhan during Rohini Nakshatra. (Verse 7)

Agnyaadhan can also be performed during the Mrigashirsha Nakshatra, because Mrigashirsha is considered the head of Prajapati.
‘Shri’ (wealth, prosperity) is connected with the ‘head.’
Therefore, the one who is foremost among a community is called 'the head of the community.'

Thus, whoever understands this secret and performs Agnyaadhan during Mrigashirsha Nakshatra will attain prosperity (Shri). (Verse 8)

Now, some people argue against performing Agnyaadhan during Mrigashirsha Nakshatra, saying that it represents the body of Prajapati.
When the gods pierced it with a threefold arrow (Trikanda Teer), it is said that he (Prajapati) abandoned his body.
Hence, they claim, this body became merely a physical mass, unfit for sacrifice (Ayajniya), and devoid of potency (Nirvirya).
Therefore, according to them, Agnyaadhan should not be performed during Mrigashirsha. (Verse 9)

However, it can indeed be performed.
This body of Prajapati is neither a mere mass (Vastu), nor unfit for sacrifice (Ayajniya), nor devoid of potency (Nirvirya).
Thus, Agnyaadhan may be performed during Mrigashirsha.
During the Punarvasu Nakshatra, the rite of re-establishment (Punaradheya) should be performed.
Such is the instruction. (Verse 10)

THE TRUE CHARACTER OF BRAHMA JI FROM SRIMAD BHAGAVATAM

Brahma Ji is the master of all his senses, never speaks falsehood, never strays from the righteous path, and remains ever devoted to penance and austerities.

Srimad Bhagvatam 2/6/32-35

प्यारे नारद ! मैं प्रेमपूर्ण एवं उत्कण्ठित हृदयसे भगवान्‌के स्मरणमें मग्न रहता हूँ, इसीसे मेरी वाणी कभी असत्य होती नहीं दीखती, मेरा मन कभी असत्य संकल्प नहीं करता और मेरी इन्द्रियाँ भी कभी मर्यादाका उल्लंघन करके कुमार्गमें नहीं जातीं ।। ३३ ।। मैं वेदमूर्ति हूँ, मेरा जीवन तपस्यामय है, बड़े-बड़े प्रजापति मेरी वन्दना करते हैं और मैं उनका स्वामी पहले मैंने बड़ी निष्ठासे योगका सर्वांग अनुष्ठान किया था

Dear Nārada! With a heart full of love and longing, I remain absorbed in the remembrance of the Lord.
Because of this, my speech never appears to be false, my mind never forms false resolves, and my senses never violate propriety by straying onto the wrong path. (33)
I am the embodiment of the Vedas; my life is filled with austerity.
Great Prajāpatis offer me their reverence, and I am their master. Earlier, with great steadfastness, I had performed the complete practice of Yoga, yet I could not come to know the true nature of my original cause the Supreme Self. (34)

Srimad Bhagvatam 2/9/3-8 Geeta Press Gorakhpur

ब्रह्माजीकी निष्कपट तपस्यासे प्रसन्न होकर भगवान्ने उन्हें अपने रूपका दर्शन कराया और आत्म-तत्त्वके ज्ञानके लिये उन्हें परम सत्य परमार्थ वस्तुका उपदेश किया (वही बात मैं तुम्हें सुनाता हूँ) ।।४।।
तीनों लोकोंके परम गुरु आदिदेव ब्रह्माजी अपने जन्मस्थान कमलपर बैठकर सृष्टि करनेकी इच्छासे विचार करने लगे . ब्रह्माजी तपस्वियोंमें सबसे बड़े तपस्वी हैं। उनका ज्ञान अमोघ है। उन्होंने उस समय एक सहस्र दिव्य वर्षपर्यन्त एकाग्र चित्तसे अपने प्राण, मन, कर्मेन्द्रिय और ज्ञानेन्द्रियोंको वशमें करके ऐसी तपस्या की, जिससे वे समस्त लोकोंको प्रकाशित करनेमें समर्थ हो सके ।।८।।

Pleased with Brahmā's sincere and guileless austerity, the Lord granted him a vision of His own form and instructed him in the Supreme Truth – the ultimate reality so that he might gain knowledge of the Self. (4)
The supreme preceptor of the three worlds, the primordial deity Brahmā, seated upon the lotus – his place of birth – began to contemplate with the desire to create the universe.
Brahmā is the greatest of all ascetics. His knowledge is unfailing. At that time, for a thousand divine years, with a concentrated mind, he brought his life-breath, mind, organs of action, and organs of perception under control, performing such austerity that he became capable of illuminating all the worlds. (8)

Srimad Bhagvatam 3/9/34-37 Geeta Press Gorakhpur

ब्रह्माजी ! नाना प्रकारके कर्मसंस्कारोंके अनुसार अनेक प्रकारकी जीवसृष्टिको रचनेकी इच्छा होनेपर भी तुम्हारा चित्त मोहित नहीं होता, यह मेरी अतिशय कृपाका ही फल है ।।३४।। तुम सबसे पहले मन्त्रद्रष्टा हो। प्रजा उत्पन्न करते समय भी तुम्हारा मन मुझमें ही लगा रहता है, इसीसे पापमय रजोगुण तुमको बाँध नहीं पाता ।।३५।। तुम मुझे भूत, इन्द्रिय, गुण और अन्तःकरणसे रहित समझते हो; इससे जान पड़ता है कि यद्यपि देहधारी जीवोंको मेरा ज्ञान होना बहुत कठिन है, तथापि तुमने मुझे जान लिया है ।।३६।। 'मेरा आश्रय कोई है या नहीं' इस सन्देहसे तुम कमलनालके द्वारा जलमें उसका मूल खोज रहे थे, सो मैंने तुम्हें अपना यह स्वरूप अन्तःकरणमें ही दिखलाया है ।।३७।।
O Brahmā! Even though, according to various karmic impressions, you have the desire to create many kinds of living beings, your mind is not deluded this is solely the result of My supreme grace. (34)
You are the very first seer of the mantras. Even while producing the creation, your mind remains fixed on Me; therefore, the sinful quality of rajas cannot bind you. (35)
You understand Me to be devoid of elements, senses, qualities, and the inner organ (mind); this shows that, although it is extremely difficult for embodied beings to know Me, you have indeed realized Me. (36)
When you wondered, “Do I have a source or not?” and searched for its root in the water through the stalk of the lotus, I revealed this very form of Mine to you within your own heart. (37)

Allegations-

Brahmanas speaks of this illicit relationship as well,

Aitareya Brahmana 6.5.27
For the semen is like something unspeakable secretly poured forth into the womb. The sperm becomes blended. For when Prajapati had carnal intercourse with his daughter, his sperm was poured forth upon the earth (and was mixed up with it. This was done for making the sperm produce fruit."

Pancavimsa Brahmana 8.2.10
Prajapati went on top of his own daughter Usas. His semen flew away. It was poured on this (the earth). He made it perfect, [thinking]: "Let this [Semen] of mine not be spoiled." He made it [something] real, namely, cattle."

Shatapatha Brahmana 1.7.4.1-3
Prajapati set his mind on his own daughter, either Sky or Dawn. 'May pair with her; he wished. He made love to her. That indeed was a sin for the gods: a 'He who acts thus towards his own daughter, our sister, [commits a sin].' Those gods then said to this god who is lord of cattle. 'An act of transgression he commits who acts thus towards his own daughter, our sister. Pierce him.' Rudra, having aimed [him], pierced him. In the middle [of the act, his semen spurted forth. Thus indeed it was."

Refutation-

Prajapati is Sun in Vedas

(क) यो ह्यव सविता स प्रजापतिः । (शतपथ 12/3/5/1

(ख) प्रजापतिर्वे सविता । (ताण्ड्य 8/2/10 –)

Meaning – Prajapati is Sun

Atharva Veda 17/1/27 – Prajapati is Sun

Atharva Veda 17/1/27 – Surya is Prajapati because he takes care of the subjects through rain etc. I am Prajapati, I am urrounded and protected by the shield of Surya and the light and brilliance of sage Kashyap. I am old and yet have strong limbs and enjoy many kinds of pleasures. May I attain long life and be blessed by the Sun God while performing worldly and Vedic tasks.

Rig Veda 4.52.1 tells that Usha is daughter of Sun

Rig Veda 4.52.1-Usha, the daughter of the Sun, who is well praised, the able leader of all living beings and gives birth to the best fruits, appears and destroys the darkness after the night has passed.

Atharva Veda 19.12.1 tells that Usha is the sister of Night and destroys night . Thus Usha is Dawn

Atharva Veda 19.12.1 – As soon as Usha arrives, she dispels the darkness of her sister night. After this Usha opens the worldly and Vedic path completely.

Rig Veda 10.61.14 states जिस समय काली रात लाल रंग वाली उषाओं में बदलने लगती है, उस समय मैं तुम्हारा आह्वान करता हूं – “At the time when the dark night begins to turn into the red-hued dawn (Usha I invoke you.”

कृष्णा यद्गोष्वरुणीषु सीदद्दिवो नपाताश्विना हुवे वाम्।
वीतं मे यज्ञमा गतं मे अन्नं ववन्वांसा नेषमस्मृध्रू॥ (४)

हे स्वर्गपुत्र अश्विनीकुमारो! जिस समय काली रात लाल रंग वाली उषाओं में बदलने लगती है, उस समय मैं तुम्हारा आह्वान करता हूं. मेरे हव्य अन्न की अभिलाषा करने के लिए तुम मेरे यज्ञ में आओ. अश्वों के समान उसे ग्रहण करो और मेरे प्रति द्रोह को भुला दो. (४)

It is written in Nirukta (2.18) as well as in the Uṇādi Sūtra (4.235) that Uṣā (the dawn) is that which dispels the darkness of night. The time that follows the night, when the darkness begins to fade away — that early morning period is called Uṣā (dawn).N

उषाः कस्मादुच्छतीति सत्या रात्रेरपरः कालः ।
कस्मात् किस कारण से उषाः उषा कहा जाता है? क्योंकि उच्छतीति सत्या (अन्धकार को) निवारित करती हुई रहती है-दूर करती हुई रहती है। रात्रः रात्रि का अपरः कालः उत्तरवती (पिछला) काल होता है।
विमर्श-

"Why is the dawn (Uṣā) called Uṣā? Because she 'ucchatīti satyā' — she removes, dispels (the darkness). The period following the night is known as Uṣā, the later (subsequent) part of the night, i.e., the early morning."

Discussion (Vimarśa):
The term Uṣā is derived from the root "ucch" (to rise, to remove), indicating that Uṣā is the one who removes darkness — hence, she is called Uṣā. She signifies the later phase of the night, when the darkness begins to withdraw, and light begins to appear. Thus, Uṣā represents the transition from night to day, symbolizing hope, awakening, and illumination.

In the Nirukta, Uṣā is described as a deity associated with the heavenly realm (dyuloka).

In Chapter 12 of the Nirukta, a list of deities associated with the dyuloka (celestial region) is given, where Uṣā is mentioned second, right after the Aśvins, as a deity of the heavenly sphere.

That is why in the Brāhmaṇa texts, Uṣā is referred to as a deity of the dyuloka. Whether one says "Uṣā" or "deity of the dyuloka", both refer to the same entity — there is no disagreement in this regard.

Furthermore, regarding Uṣā — the deity of the dyuloka — it is written in the Nirukta that she spreads light across half the region of the sky before the sun rises. This is what we commonly know as dawn or uṣā-kāla (the time of Uṣā in the early morning).

Now then, from here onwards, the dyusthānāḥ — the deities of the celestial realm (dyuloka) — are being explained.

(2. Uṣas / Ushas)
Uṣā, of the root vaṣṭiḥ meaning "to shine, radiate beauty," is derived from the verb root uśch (उच्छी) in the sense of radiating or rising. One Uṣā is mādhyamikā, the intermediate — the other kind of Uṣā associated with the mid-region (antarikṣa) and related to lightning.
But here, this Uṣā is dyusthānīya — the heavenly Uṣā.

Vedic Mantra (Ṛgveda 1.92.13):

uṣas tac citram ābharāsmabhyam vājinīvati yena tokaṁ ca tanayaṁ ca dhāmahe
Translation: O Uṣā! Bring us that brilliant (wealth), rich in horses, by which we may sustain our offspring and their children.

Explanation:

The word Uṣā refers to the early morning light before sunrise — she is a dyuloka-sthānīya (heavenly) goddess. The word "Uṣā" is derived from two different roots:

- From the root vaś (वश्) meaning "to shine or radiate beauty" → implying her role in spreading brilliance and charm.
- From the root uśch (उच्छी) meaning "to rise or emit" → again suggesting the dawning or emitting of light.

There is another intermediate Uṣā (antarikṣa-sthānīya), signifying lightning or brilliance in the mid-region — but the current context is about the celestial Uṣā, associated with the dawn.

Mantra meaning:

This Uṣā, belonging to the region of space (rajas), in the eastern half of the sky — before the Sun rises — anoints everything with light (bhānuṁ añjate), illuminating all. She awakens all beings (ketum akrat) and makes them aware.

Like warriors who cleanse and polish their weapons (dhṛṣṇavaḥ āyudhāni iva), preparing them for battle, similarly, this Uṣā brightens the world, energizing it for the day ahead.

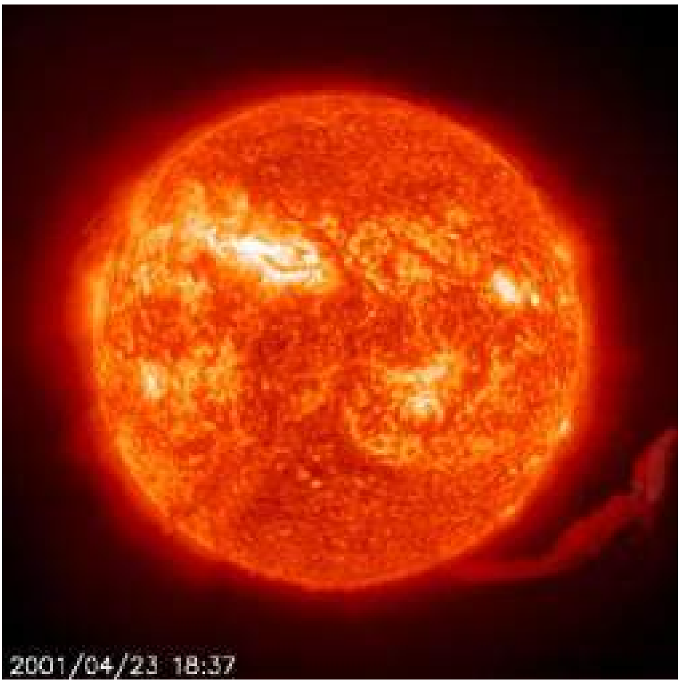
(ऋ० १.९२.१)

Who is Prajapati here ?

Sun is Prajapati



Who is Usha here ?

Usha is Dawn

Acharya Kumarilla Bhatta a famous Acharya who had defeated the buddhists had explained Prajapati-Usha Prakarn in his Tantra Vartika 1.3.7. As per Acharya Kumarilla Bhatta the Prajapati Sun releasing its rays into Usha (Dawn) has been spoken of as intercourse between Man and Woman. This is also Supported by Rig Veda 1.115.2

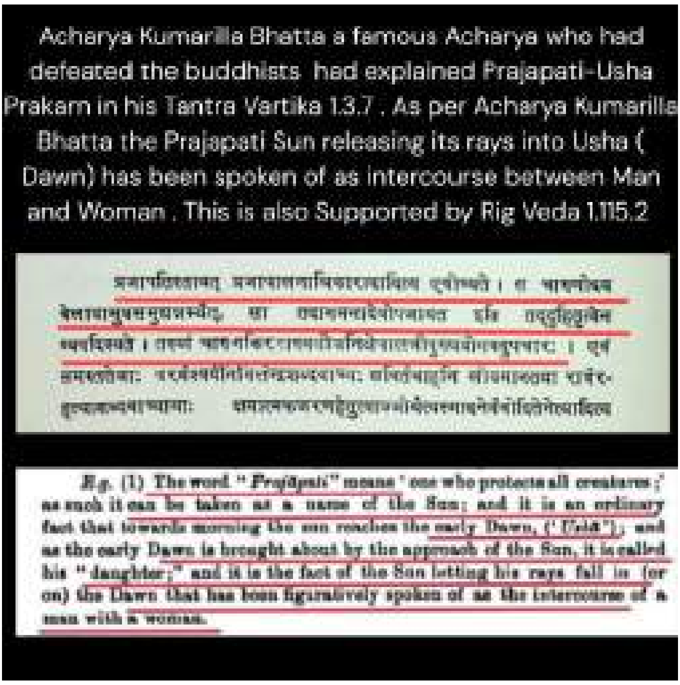
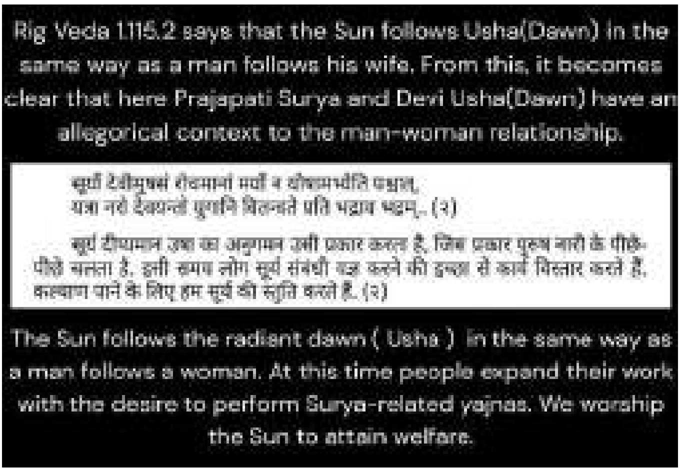
प्रजापतिस्तावत् प्रजापालनाधिकारादादित्य एवोच्यते । स चारुणोदय वेलायामुषसमुद्यन्नभ्यैत्, सा तदागमनादेवोपजायत इति तदुहितृत्वेन व्यपदिश्यते । तस्यां चारुणकिरगाख्यबीजनिक्षेपात्स्त्रीपुरुपयोगवदुपचारः । एवं समस्ततेजाः परमैश्वर्यनिमित्तेन्द्रशब्दवाच्यः सवितैवानि लीयमानतया रात्रेर-हल्याशब्दवाच्यायाः क्षयात्मकज रणहेतुत्वाज्जीर्यत्यस्मादनेनैवोदितेनेत्यादित्य

E.g. (1) The word "Prajapati" means 'one who protects all creatures;' as such it can be taken as a name of the Sun; and it is an ordinary fact that towards morning the sun reaches the early Dawn, ('Usha'); and as the early Dawn is brought about by the approach of the Sun, it is called his "daughter;" and it is the fact of the Sun letting his rays fall in (or on) the Dawn that has been figuratively spoken of as the intercourse of a man with a woman.



Rig Veda 1.115.2 says that the Sun follows Usha(Dawn) in the same way as a man follows his wife. From this, it becomes clear that here Prajapati Surya and Devi Usha(Dawn) have an allegorical context to the man-woman relationship.

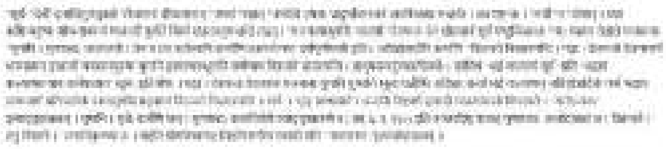
सूर्य दीप्यमान उषा का अनुगमन उसी प्रकार करता है, जिस प्रकार पुरुष नारी के पीछे-पीछे चलता है. इसी समय लोग सूर्य संबंधी यज्ञ करने की इच्छा से कार्य विस्तार करते हैं. कल्याण पाने के लिए हम सूर्य की स्तुति करते हैं. (२)
The Sun follows the radiant dawn (Usha) in the same way as a man follows a woman. At this time people expand their work with the desire to perform Surya-related yajnas. We worship the Sun to attain welfare.



Sayancharya bhasya on Rig Veda 1.115.2 explains it further-

“सूर्यः “देवीं दानादिगुणयुक्तां “रोचमानां दीप्यमानाम् “उषसं “पश्चात् “अभ्येति उषसः प्रादुर्भावानन्तरं तामभिलक्ष्य गच्छति । तत्र दृष्टान्तः । “मर्यो “न “योषाम् । यथा कश्चिन्मनुष्यः शोभनावयवां गच्छन्तीं युवतिं स्त्रियं सततमनुगच्छति तद्वत् । “यत्र यस्यामुषसि जातायां “देवयन्तः देवं द्योतमानं सूर्यं यष्टुमिच्छन्तः “नरः यज्ञस्य नेतारो यजमानाः “युगानि । युगशब्दः कालवाची । तेन च तत्र कर्तव्यानि कर्माणि लक्ष्यन्ते यथा दर्शपूर्णमासौ इति । अग्निहोत्रादीनि कर्माणि “वितन्वते विस्तारयन्ति । यद्वा । देवयन्तो देवयागार्थं धनमात्मन इच्छन्तो यजमानपुरुषा युगानि हलावयवभूतानि कर्षणाय वितन्वते प्रसारयन्ति । तामुषसमनुगच्छतीत्यर्थः । एवंविधं “भद्रं कल्याणं सूर्यं “प्रति “भद्राय कल्याणरूपाय कर्मफलाय’ स्तुमः इति शेषः । यद्वा । देवयन्तः देवकामा यजमाना युगानि युग्मानि भूत्वा पत्नीभिः सहिताः सन्तो भद्रं कल्याणम् अग्निहोत्रादिकं कर्म भद्राय तत्फलार्थं प्रति प्रत्येकं यस्यामुषसि प्रवृत्तायां वितन्वते विस्तारयन्ति ॥ मर्यः । 'मृङ् प्राणत्यागे'। छन्दसि निष्टक्र्य इत्यादौ यत्प्रत्ययान्तो निपात्यते । ' यतोऽनावः' इत्याद्युदात्तत्वम् । युगानि । युजेः कर्मणि घञ् । युगशब्दः कालविशेषे रथाद्युपकरणे च (का. ६. १. १६०) इति उञ्छादिषु पाठात् गुणाभावः अन्तोदात्तत्वं च । वितन्वते । ' तनु विस्तारे । ' तनादिकृञ्भ्य उः । सहेति योगविभागात तिङोपसर्गस्य समासे सति ' समासस्य ' इत्यन्तोदात्तत्वम् ॥

The Sun follows the radiant goddess Uṣas, who is endowed with divine qualities such as generosity and shines brilliantly. After Uṣas manifests, the Sun, drawn by her beauty, proceeds after her—just as a young man constantly follows a graceful young woman. When Uṣas rises, the worshippers (devayantaḥ), desiring to behold the shining deity (the Sun), prepare to offer their worship. The word yugāni refers to time cycles or ritual periods, such as the new and full moon sacrifices, during which obligatory rites like Agnihotra are performed and expanded. Alternatively, yugāni may refer to the components of a plough, indicating that these sacrificers—desiring divine rewards and wealth—engage in agricultural labor by spreading their yokes for plowing. Thus, it is said that they follow Uṣas into activity. This benevolent and auspicious Sun is praised for auspicious purposes—the fruitful results of sacred actions. Or again, devayantaḥ, the sacrificers, paired with their wives (yugāni as conjugal pairs), perform auspicious acts like Agnihotra during the rise of Uṣas, each extending their rituals in pursuit of divine blessings.



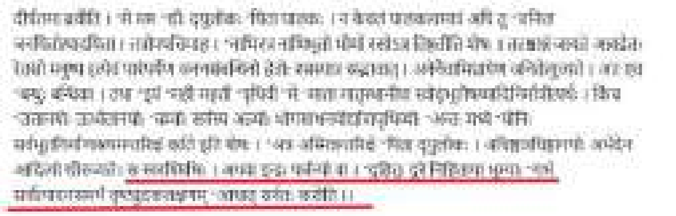
. Then what is the semen of Prajapati Sun here ? Rig Veda 164.33 Sayana Bhasya tells that Father form Sun

impregnates his daughter Usha/Heaven with Sun rays form Virya/Semen which gives rise to all living beings . Thus the Semen here is Sun rays only

Sayancharya bhasya on Rig Veda 1.164.33

“स स्वरश्मिभिः । अथवा इन्द्रः पर्जन्यो वा । दुहितुः दूरे निहिताया भूम्याः गर्भं सर्वोत्पादनसमर्थं वृष्ट्युदकलक्षणम् आधात् सर्वतः करोति ।।”

“He, with his own rays places the seed (garbha), capable of producing all beings and characterized by rain or water, into the daughter , who is situated afar. He causes this (fertilization) from all directions.”



Meaning of Rudra Punishing Prajapati here in this Prakaran

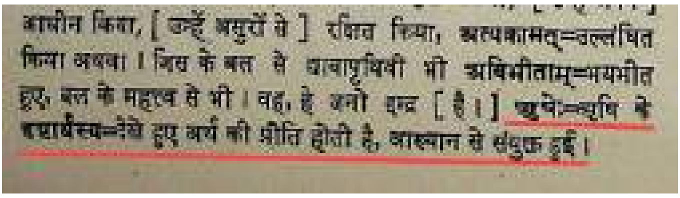
In this Prakaran in Aitreya Brahmana 3/33 and Satapatha Brahmana 1.7.4. its written that Rudra punished Prajapati with his Bow ? So whats the meaning of this prakaran

To understand this i will quote Nirukta 10/10

he very first thing to understand is that the style in which the sages (ṛṣis) present the meanings of mantras is ākhyāyikā in Nature .In Nirukta (10.10), the great sage Yāska states:

“ṛṣer dṛṣṭārthasya prītir bhavati ākhyāna-saṁyuktā” —

That is: A sage finds joy in conveying the meaning of what he has perceived (through intuition or vision) by combining it with a narrative (ākhyāna), i.e., symbolic or imaginative stories. These stories are not mere fiction; they serve to convey both natural (cosmic or physical) and didactic (educational/moral) meanings behind the mantra.



आधीन किया, [उन्हें असुरों से] रक्षित किया, अस्पकामत्=वल्लंधित किया अथवा। जिस के बल से द्यावापृथिवी भी अबिभीताम्=भयभीत हुए, बल के महत्त्व से भी। वह, हे जनो इन्द्र [है।] ऋषेः=ऋषि के दृष्टार्थस्य=देखे हुए अर्थ की प्रीति होती है, आख्यान से संयुक्त हुई।

In the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa 1.7.4 which contains the Same Prajapati-Usha Prakaran as in Rig Veda 10.61.5-7 , Aitreya Brahmana 3/33 the episode of Prajāpati and Uṣā is referred to as a “Prāśitraharaṇa Ākhyāna”, meaning it is presented purely as a narrative or story. Therefore, the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa itself classifies it as an ākhyāna (allegorical or symbolic tale).

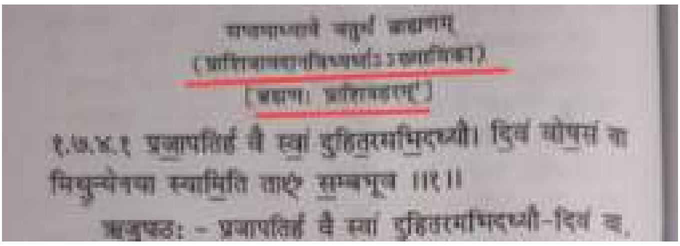
(प्राशित्रावदानविर्यथाऽ ऽ ख्यायिका)
[ब्रह्मणः प्राशित्रहरम्'



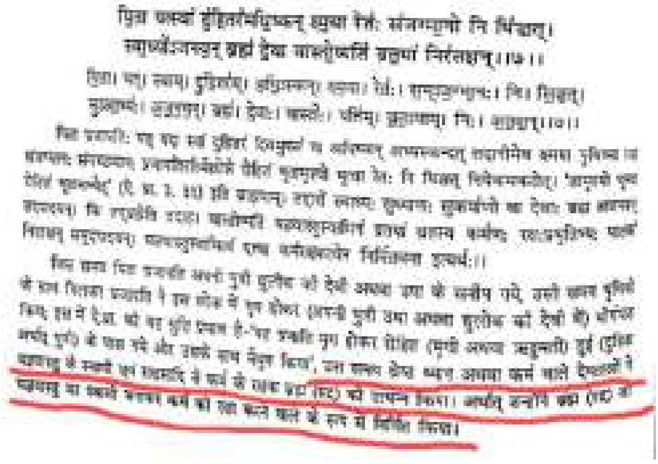
१.७.४.१ प्रजापतिर्ह वै स्वां दुहितरमभिदध्यौ। दिवं वोषसं वा
मिथुन्येनया स्यामिति तां सम्बभूव ॥१॥

In the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, the episode of Prajāpati and Uṣā is referred to as the "Prāśitra-haraṇa Ākhyāna", which means it is presented merely as a story or allegorical narrative, not as a historical or factual account. That is why the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa itself classifies this as an "ākhyāna" (tale or parable), indicating its symbolic or illustrative nature.

Rig Veda 10/61/5-7 Sayanacharya commentary

> "यज्ञकर्म के स्वामी एवं रक्षक के रूप में कर्म के समय ध्यान अथवा कर्म करने वाले देवताओं ने रुद्र (रू) का उत्पन्न किया। अर्थात् उन्होंने ब्रह्म (रू) को यज्ञकर्म तथा स्वामी भाव अर्थात कर्म की रक्षा करने वाले के रूप में निर्मित किया।"

> "As the master and protector of the sacrificial act (yajña-karma), during the performance of the ritual, the deities conceived Rudra (Rū). That is, they created Brahman (Rū) in the form of the guardian and lord of the sacrificial act."



Ācārya Sāyaṇa has written in his commentary on the Ṛgveda (10.61.7) that when Prajāpati, the father, committed an improper act with his daughter Uṣā, the noble gods at that time manifested Rudra, who is also referred to here as Vāstoṣpati Brahman, the protector of righteous actions (karma). That is, when there was harm or corruption of actions due to sin, the gods called upon Rudra to safeguard the sanctity of karma.

Whenever there is damage to karmic order due to sin, Rudra — the Supreme Being — arises to protect dharma by punishing the wrongdoers. We will understand this further through narratives (ākhyānas) found in the Brāhmaṇa texts as revealed by the sages.

Shatpath Brahman (1/7/4/3)

It is stated in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa (1.7.4.3) that for this sinful act of Prajāpati, the gods told Rudra: "Prajāpati has committed the sin of incest with his own daughter; therefore, punish him." (Atmospheric phenomenon between Dawn and Sun as per Kumarilla Bhatta and Rig Veda which I had already explained before) And Rudra killed Prajāpati with a sharp arrow.

That is, the sages (ṛṣis), through the personification of two natural elements — the Sun (Sūrya) and Dawn (Uṣā) — conveyed through a symbolic story that in Vedic Dharma, anyone who commits a sin such as incest with one's own daughter shall receive the punishment of death in the same manner.

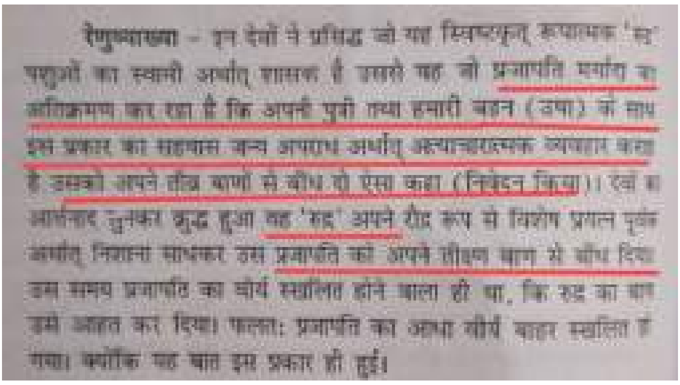
इन देवों ने प्रसिद्ध जो यह स्विष्टकृत् रूपात्मक 'रुद्र'
पशुओं का स्वामी अर्थात् शासक है उससे यह जो प्रजापति मर्यादा का अतिक्रमण कर रहा है कि अपनी पुत्री तथा हमारी बहन (उषा) के साथ इस प्रकार का सहवास जन्य अपराध अर्थात् अत्याचारात्मक व्यवहार करता है उसको अपने तीव्र बाणों से बींध दो ऐसा कहा (निवेदन किया)। देवों का आर्त्तनाद तुनकर क्रुद्ध हुआ वह 'रुद्र' अपने रौद्र रूप से विशेष प्रयत्न पूर्वक अर्थात् निशाना साधकर उस प्रजापति को अपने तीक्ष्ण बाण से बींध दिया। उस समय प्रजापति का वीर्य स्खलित होने वाला ही था, कि रुद्र का बाण उसे आहत कर दिया। फलतः प्रजापति का आधा वीर्य बाहर स्खलित हो गया। क्योंकि यह बात इस प्रकार ही हुई।

The gods then invoked the well-known Sviṣṭakṛt form of Rudra, who is the lord and ruler of all beings (paśus), and said to him:

"This Prajāpati, who is crossing the bounds of righteousness by engaging in a sinful act of union with his own daughter — our sister Uṣā — is committing an offense born of lust and aggression. Pierce him with your sharp arrows."

Hearing the anguished plea of the gods, Rudra became enraged. Taking on his fierce (raudra) form, he deliberately aimed and struck Prajāpati with his piercing arrow.

At that very moment, Prajāpati was on the verge of discharging his seed, but before he could, Rudra's arrow struck him. As a result, half of Prajāpati's seed was expelled externally.



रेणुव्याख्या – इन देवों ने प्रसिद्ध जो यह स्विष्टकृत् रूपात्मक 'रुद्र' पशुओं का स्वामी अर्थात् शासक है उससे यह जो प्रजापति मर्यादा का अतिक्रमण कर रहा है कि अपनी पुत्री तथा हमारी बहन (उषा) के साथ इस प्रकार का सहवास जन्य अपराध अर्थात् अत्याचारात्मक व्यवहार करता है उसको अपने तीव्र बाणों से बींध दो ऐसा कहा (निवेदन किया)। देवों का आर्त्तनाद तुनकर क्रुद्ध हुआ वह 'रुद्र' अपने रौद्र रूप से विशेष प्रयत्न पूर्वक अर्थात् निशाना साधकर उस प्रजापति को अपने तीक्ष्ण बाण से बींध दिया। उस समय प्रजापति का वीर्य स्खलित होने वाला ही था, कि रुद्र का बाण उसे आहत कर दिया। फलतः प्रजापति का आधा वीर्य बाहर स्खलित हो गया। क्योंकि यह बात इस प्रकार ही हुई।

Allegations-

The Hindu scripture lists several forms of marriage, one of them is known as Rakshasa marriage. Rape and abduction of females are legitimized under this form of marriage. Maharshi Manu explains Rakshasa marriage in the following way, Manu Smriti 3.33 The forcible abduction of a maiden from her home, while she cries out and weeps, after (her kinsmen) have been slain or wounded and (their houses) broken open, is called the Rakshasa rite.

This form of marriage is permitted for the Kshatriya caste,

Manu 3.24 "The four forms (of Marriage) the seers have ordained as proper for Brahmanas; only the Rakshasa form as proper for Kshatriyas, and the A'sura form as proper for Vais'yas and S'udras." Tr. M.N. Dutt

It is also mentioned in Mahabharata,

Mahabharata 1.73.8-11 "…There are, in all, eight kinds of marriages. These are Brahma, Daiva, Arsha, Prajapatya, Asura, Gandharva, Rakshasa, and Paisacha, the eighth.

Refutation-

Asura and Rakshasa Vivah have been prohibited and condemned in the present times under law . So both of these Marriages – Asura Vivah and Rakshas Vivah are not allowed in present times – Manu Smriti 3.41-42 and Mahabharata 13.44.9-10 and Narada Smriti 12.44

Manu Smriti 3.41-42

Manu Smriti 3.41-42 says Asura and Rakshas Vivah results in offspring who are cruel, anti-Veda & habitual liars and hence Rakshas and Asura Vivah should be avoided at all costs and never performed or practiced by anybody at all

Verse 41:
"When the other remaining four types of improper marriages take place, the children born from them are harsh, untruthful, and hold hatred towards the Vedic Dharma."

Verse 42:
"Children born from a dharmically wedded wife—through a marriage approved by the scriptures and considered noble—are not objects of criticism but of praise. On the other hand, those born of a woman wed through unapproved and blameworthy marriage systems become subjects of contempt. Therefore, to avoid the birth of distress-bringing children, such degraded forms of marriage should be avoided."

In marriages other than the Brahma and similar approved types—i.e., in Gandharva and others—the children speak harshly and untruthfully.
'Harsh' refers to vulgar or abusive language used toward mother, sister, etc.

'Untruthful' refers to lies and well-known dishonesty.
The etymology of 'nṛśaṁsa-anṛta' (cruel and false) is given as those whose nature is to say such things.
'Brahma-dharma' refers to Vedic dharma and the meaning of the Vedas; these people either hate, criticize, or do not believe in it.
Therefore, such marriages are to be condemned."

This verse presents a summary of the results of various types of marriages.
The children (progeny such as sons) born from those marriages which are scripturally sanctioned (अनिन्दित, unblameworthy) are themselves unblameworthy and praiseworthy.
The ones born from condemned (निन्दित) and prohibited (प्रतिषिद्ध) marriages are blameworthy.
Therefore, since such condemned marriages result in sorrow-bringing progeny, one should avoid such condemned marriages."

From the four lower types of marriage—Asura, Gandharva, Rakshasa, and Paisacha—excluding the approved Brahma and similar ones, children are born who commit cruel deeds, lie a lot, and hate the Vedas and Vedic rituals like yajñas."

This verse is a concise statement about the fruits (results) of marriage.
Through deserving (scripturally appropriate) marriage forms, men obtain an unblameworthy lineage.
But through condemned (गर्हित) marriages, the progeny is also condemned.
Therefore, one should not engage in blameworthy marriages."

These forms are Asura, Gandharva, Rakshasa, and Paisacha.

From marriages that are unblameworthy (अनिन्दितैः), praiseworthy progeny (children like sons) are born — this is the intended meaning.
From condemned marriages such as the Asura type, blameworthy children are born.
Therefore, one should avoid such condemned marriages."

The word 'śiṣṭeṣu avaśiṣṭeṣu' refers to the remaining unapproved forms.
'Nṛśaṁsa' means cruel, either by action or by nature.
'Brahma' here refers to the Veda, the Brahmin caste, or Vedic dharma like Agnihotra, all of which these offspring tend to despise."

"Just as the logic of 'A mountain does not cry' implies that a non-mountain does, this verse also implies a prohibition of blameworthy marriages by praising the unblameworthy ones (अनिन्दितैः).
Just as in statements like 'he who sings is blessed', there's an implied directive.
So too, this verse implies that one should undertake only unblameworthy marriages; the prohibition of blameworthy ones is conveyed indirectly (arthavāda — a laudatory or cautionary statement with implied command)."

Among the eight types of marriages mentioned above, the first four — Brāhma, Prājāpatya, Ārṣa, and Daiva — are in accordance with dharma.

Allegations-

Brihadarayaka Upanishad also promotes rape,

Brihadaranyaka Upanishad 6.4.7 "If she does not willingly yield her body to him, he should buy her with presents. If she is still unyielding, he should strike her with a stick or with his hand and overcome her, repeating the following mantra: "With power and glory I take away your glory." Thus she becomes discredited."

Refutation-

So let's debunk this allegation in detail

This is the mantra:

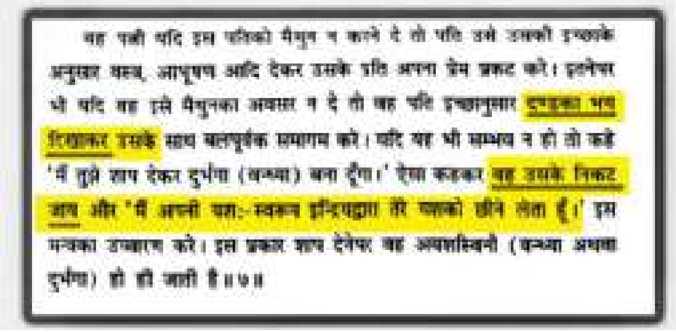
सा चेदस्मै न दद्यात्काममेनामपक्रिणीयात् सा चेदस्मै नैव दद्यात्काममेनां यष्ट्या वा पाणिना वोपहत्यातिक्रामेदिन्द्रियेन ते यशसा यश आदद इत्ययशा एव भवति ॥ ७ ॥

The word उपहत्या is mistranslated by the translator as "beating".The word comes from the root from the root verb √ हन् which has the yaugika meaning "to go" or "to approach" apart from the generally taken meaning "to kill" etc as evident from the following pramana :हन् हन हिंसागत्योः अदादिः (DhatupāTha 2.2) ~ Meaning "to kill" or "to go"As for the usage of the very word उपहत्या in the sense of गमन्, we have direct śruti pramāna as follows:

स वराहो रूपं कृत्वोप न्यमज्जत् । स पृथिवीमध आर्छत् । तस्या उपहत्योदमज्जत् । (Taittirīya Brāhmana 1.1.3.6) ~He (Nārāyaṇa/Prajapati) took the form of Varaha and went down. He found the Prithvi.He went to her and lifted her up.

The interpretation of हनस्त च (slay/injure) is explicitly said to be specifically for words that don't have upasarga while it has उप- having ल्यप which makes the verb dynamic and avyaya in the sense of "go or approach".So as per the context it's means "Go and explain or Approach and explain"

The grammatical explanation being put forth, it's evident that the pūrvapakṣins won't be satisfied unless some "translations" of Brhadāranyaka Upanisad 6.4.7 are provided. So here they are :



वह पत्नी यदि इस पतिको मैथुन न करने दे तो पति उसे उसकी इच्छाके अनुसार वस्त्र, आभूषण आदि देकर उसके प्रति अपना प्रेम प्रकट करे। इतनेपर भी यदि वह इसे मैथुनका अवसर न दे तो वह पति इच्छानुसार दण्डका भय दिखाकर उसके साथ बलपूर्वक समागम करे। यदि यह भी सम्भव न हो तो कहे 'मैं तुझे शाप देकर दुर्भगा (वन्ध्या) बना दूँगा।' ऐसा कहकर वह उसके निकट जाय और 'मैं अपनी यशः-स्वरूप इन्द्रियद्वारा तेरे यशको छीने लेता हूँ।' इस मन्त्रका उच्चारण करे। इस प्रकार शाप देनेपर वह अयशस्विनी (वन्ध्या अथवा दुर्भगा) हो ही जाती है॥७॥

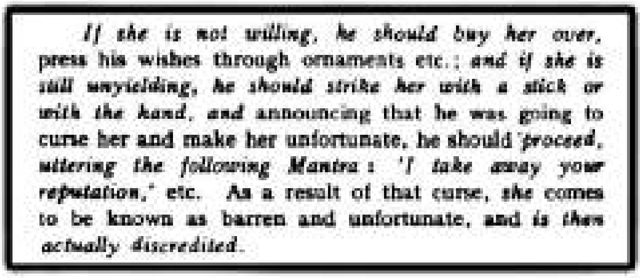
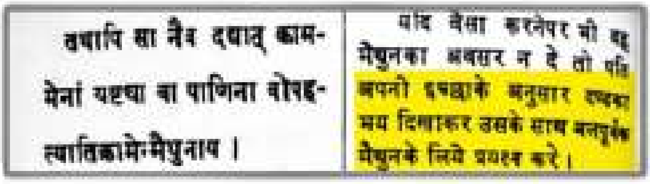
Hence, it's pretty evidently obvious that none of the authentic translations mention anything about beating the wife too, just like the grammatical breakdown.

★ Now Maleechs might say that Your acharya Adi Shankara himself says in his commentary to beat the wife. This is again the result of the wrong english translation of Shankar Bhaashya by the same translator as follows:



If she is not willing, he should buy her over, press his wishes through ornaments etc.; and if she is still unyielding, he should strike her with a stick or with the hand, and announcing that he was going to curse her and make her unfortunate, he should proceed, uttering the following Mantra: 'I take away your reputation,' etc. As a result of that curse, she comes to be known as barren and unfortunate, and is then actually discredited.

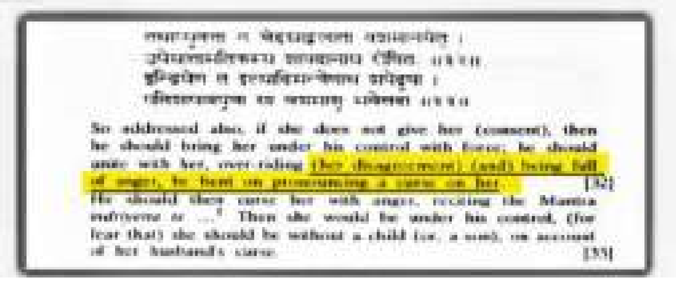
However, we can see the better translation of his commentary below:



तथापि सा नैव दद्यात् काम-मेनां यष्ट्या वा पाणिना वोपहत्यातिक्रामेन्मैथुनाय ।	यदि वैसा करनेपर भी वह मैथुनका अवसर न दे तो पति अपनी इच्छाके अनुसार दण्डका भय दिखाकर उसके साथ बलपूर्वक मैथुनके लिये प्रयत्न करे ।

Translation of Shankara bhasya by Geeta press

- The latter is further supported by his direct disciple Sureśvarācārya in Brhadāranyaka Upaniṣad Bhāśya Vartikā :

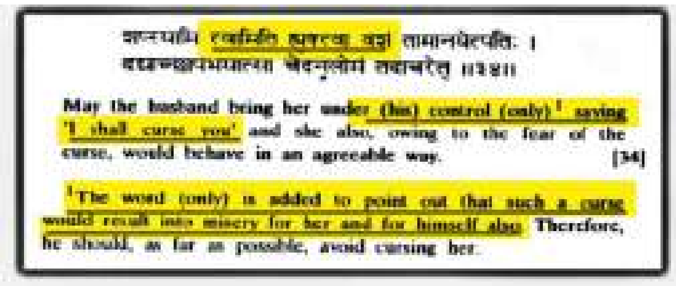


So addressed also, if she does not give her (consent), then he should bring her under his control with force; he should unite with her, over-riding (her disagreement) (and) being full of anger, be bent on pronouncing a curse on her. [32]
He should then curse her with anger, reciting the Mantra indriyena te ...[2] Then she would be under his control, (for fear that) she should be without a child (i.e., a son), on account of her husband's curse. [33]

Doubt: All these translations ask to unite with the wife "by force" (बलपूर्वक समागम करे). Isn't this condoning domestic violence?

Clarification:The "by force" part comes from the translation of the word अतिक्रमण which has been more aptly translated as "over-riding her disagreement" in Sureśuara's vartika.So does over-riding her disagreement mean violence?

Sureśvarācārya himself clarifies the meaning of "by force" or "over-riding" in the very next verse of his vartika:



May the husband bring her under (his) control (only)[1] saying 'I shall curse you' and she also, owing to the fear of the curse, would behave in an agreeable way. [34]

[1] The word (only) is added to point out that such a curse would result into misery for her and for himself also. Therefore, he should, as far as possible, avoid cursing her.

Doubt : All these translation said " By fear of punishment "(दण्डका भय दिखाकर). Isn't this condoning domestic violence or speaks about beating?

Clarification :- The punishment for women is separating your bed not beating her as already clarified in Garuda puran.

तस्करस्य वधो दण्डः कुमित्रस्याल्पभाषणम् ॥ पृथक् शय्या तु नारीणां ब्राह्मणस्यानिमन्त्रणम् ॥ ३० ॥

Death is the penalty for theft, a separate bed is the punishment for a wife, a cold greeting is the punishment for deceitful friends, and non- invitation is the punishment for Brāhmaṇas. (Garuda Puran 1:109:30)

- So it's pretty clear that all proper translators and also the pūrvācāryas have taken दण्ड as mere upalakshana like वाक दण्ड (verbal warning) or Separating bed and that no beating or violence is involved in the inference of the alleged verse. The only "force" is the fear of curse.

★ The entire import of all the translations and of the grammatical essence is conveyed by Śrī Rāghaavendra Swamy in His khaṇḍārtha of Upanisad:

सा एवमुपमंत्रिता स्त्री अस्मै पुंसे । कामं उपहासं न दद्याच्चेत् । एनां स्त्रियमवक्रीणीयात् । शिक्षांतरं चाह । सा चेदिति । अतिक्रामेत् । अतिक्रम्य ग्रक्त्वा गच्छेत् । गमने वक्तव्यमाह ॥ इंद्रियेणेति । मदीयेनेंद्रियेण यशसा ते यश

आददे गृह्णामीति वाच्यमित्यर्थः । तते यश आदधामीति वाच्यं पुंसेत्यर्थः । तः अयशा एव सा भवतीत्यर्थः ॥ ७ ॥

Thus the woman has to be approached by the man. If she is not willing, the man has to offer pleasing things to her and approach. If she still does not concede, just leave her and go. While going, the man just says 'using my indriya shakti (power of indriyas, I draw out your fame' – meaning 'since you refused to have good progeny, which I was willing to offer you, you lose the fame of having great progeny'. (Śrī Raghaavendra Swamy in His khanḍārtha of Bṛhadaranyaka Upanisad:6.4.7)

- Here is Śrī Ācārya clearly writes that the अतिक्रमण or over- riding her disagreement should be attempted by simply leaving her and going away. Nothing about beating or force here.

CONCLUSION Bṛhadaranyaka Upanisad 6.4.7
does NOT speak of beating the wife or physically forcing her to comply with the husband's sexual desire.

Moreover Marital Rape and Wife Beating is Anti Vedic and prohibited in Various Shastras

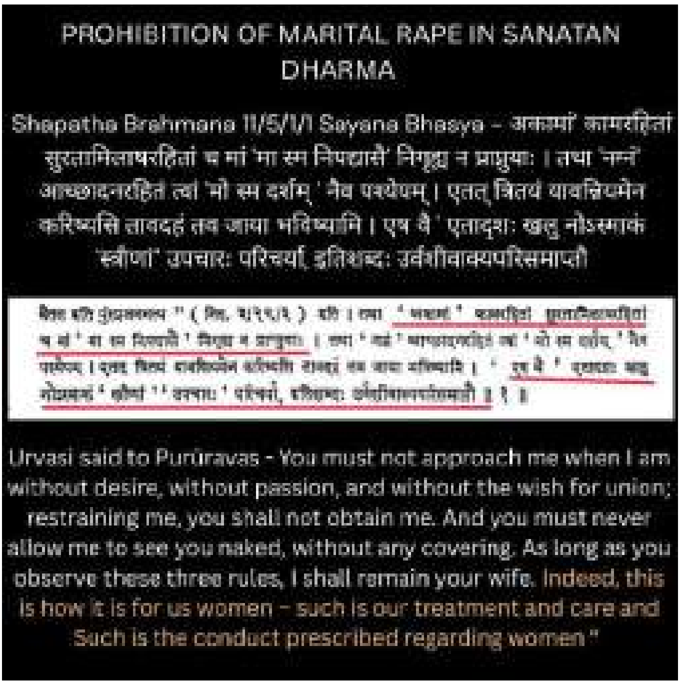
Shapatha Brahmana 11/5/1/1 Sayana Bhasya – अकामां' कामरहितां सुरतामिलाषरहितां च मां 'मा स्म निपद्यासै' निगृह्य न प्राप्नुयाः । तथा 'नग्नं' आच्छादनरहितं त्वां 'मो स्म दर्शम् ' नैव पश्येयम् । एतत् त्रितयं यावन्नियमेन करिष्यसि तावदहं तव जाया भविष्यामि । एष वै ' एतादृशः खलु नोऽस्माकं 'स्त्रीणां" उपचारः परिचर्या, इतिशब्दः उर्वशीवाक्यपरिसमाप्तौ Urvasi said to Purūravas – You must not approach me when I am without desire, without passion, and without the wish for union; restraining me, you shall not obtain me. And you must never allow me to see you naked, without any covering. As long as you observe these three rules, I shall remain your wife. Indeed, this is how it is for us women – such is our treatment and care and Such is the conduct prescribed regarding women "

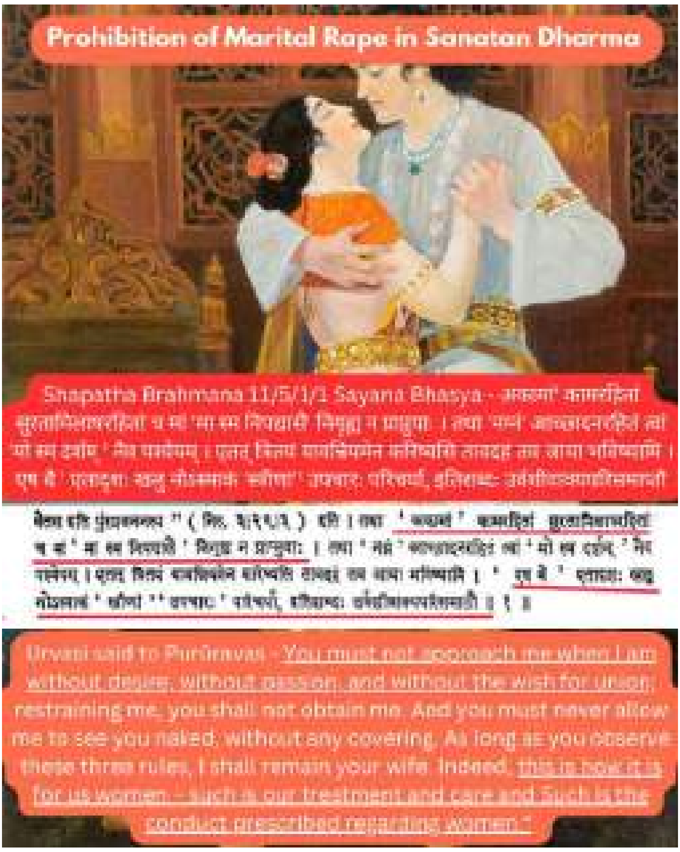
Some Halala Putras may raise objection where is it told as a general Rule in Shatapatha 11/5/1/1 the answer is see the last part of the bhasya – एष वै ' एतादृशः खलु नोऽस्माकं 'स्त्रीणां" उपचारः परिचर्या, इतिशब्दः उर्वशीवाक्यपरिसमाप्तौ – Indeed, this is how it is for us women – such is our treatment and care and Such is the conduct prescribed regarding women "

Some may object to the line "you must never let me see you naked", thinking it contradicts the earlier mention of intercourse, where nudity naturally occurs.
But there is no contradiction:

- The first part speaks of consensual union, where bodily exposure happens within intimacy.
- The second part refers to other circumstances—outside of intercourse—where casual or forced nudity is not to be shown.

Thus, Urvaśī lays down two separate rules: intimacy only with her consent, and modesty outside that context.





Narada Smriti 12.94 also prohibits Marital Rape

वन्ध्या, लड़कियों को ही जनने वाली, समाज में कलंकित तथा पति का अहित-चिन्तन करने वाली स्त्री की सहमति के बिना उससे सम्भोग करने वाला पुरुष दण्डनीय अपराधी होता है।

"A man must never approach for intercourse a barren woman, one who bears only daughters, one disgraced in society, or one who is unwilling. If he does so out of lust, he becomes guilty (of sin)."

Hinduism blames the victim in the case of rape, it says that by getting raped the woman incurs sin. Women have always een made to suffer in case of rape.

Parasara Smriti 10.25-26 "A woman forcibly ravished by a man, in captivity, as well as she, who accommodates a man on account of being physically over-powered, or out of a sense of danger to her life, should regain her purity by practising a Santapanam penance. This is what has been enjoined by Parasara. A woman, who having been once ravished by another man, turns back with repugnance from the path of inequity, should expiate her sin by practising a Prajapatya penance, whereby she would be pure after her next monthly period."

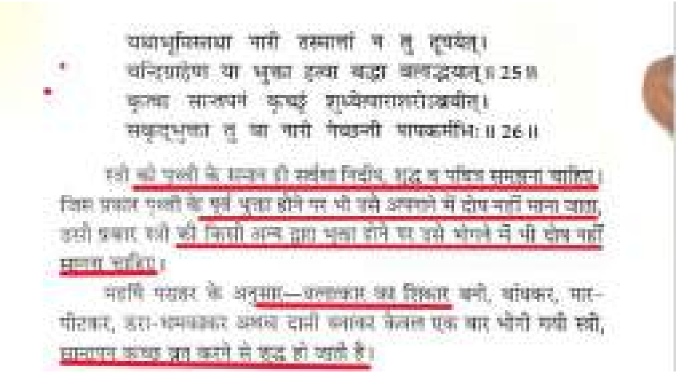
Refutation-

Here is Parashara Smriti 10.25-26 hindi translation . Now tell me where it's told that a victim woman is responsible for her rape on the other hand it says – स्त्री को पृथ्वी के समान ही सर्वथा निर्दोष, शुद्ध व पवित्र समझना चाहिए। जिस प्रकार पृथ्वी के पूर्व भुक्ता होने पर भी उसे अपनाने में दोष नहीं माना जाता, उसी प्रकार स्त्री की किसी अन्य द्वारा भुक्ता होने पर उसे भोगने में भी दोष नहीं मानना चाहिए। – A woman should be regarded as completely blameless, pure, and sacred, just like the earth. Just as the earth, though previously used (cultivated or trodden upon) by others, is not considered defective or impure when accepted or used again, in the same way, if a woman has been previously enjoyed by someone else, there is no fault in being with her – That a woman is always blameless and sacred even if she is forcefully enjoyed by somebody else there is no fault in her . It only tells that a woman who has been a victim of Rape becomes pure again by Sāntapana Kaccha vow

स्त्री को पृथ्वी के समान ही सर्वथा निर्दोष, शुद्ध व पवित्र समझना चाहिए। जिस प्रकार पृथ्वी के पूर्व भुक्ता होने पर भी उसे अपनाने में दोष नहीं माना जाता, उसी प्रकार स्त्री की किसी अन्य द्वारा भुक्ता होने पर उसे भोगने में भी दोष नहीं मानना चाहिए।
महर्षि पराशर के अनुसार – बलात्कार का शिकार बनी, बांधकर, मार-पीटकर, डरा-धमकाकर अथवा दासी बनाकर केवल एक बार भोगी गयी स्त्री, सान्तपन कच्छ व्रत करने से शुद्ध हो जाती है।

A woman should be regarded as completely blameless, pure, and sacred, just like the earth. Just as the earth, though previously used (cultivated or trodden upon) by others, is not considered defective or impure when accepted or used again, in the same way, if a woman has been previously enjoyed by someone else, there is no fault in being with her.

According to Sage Parāśara – A woman who has been a victim of rape (forced intercourse), or has been violated once by being bound, beaten, threatened, or enslaved, becomes pure again by performing the Sāntapana Kaccha vow (Sāntapana-Kaccha Vrata).



यथाभूमिस्तथा नारी तस्मात्तां न तु दूषयेत्।
बन्दिग्राहेण या भुक्ता हत्वा बद्ध्वा बलाद्भयात्॥ 25॥
कृत्वा सान्तपनं कृच्छ्रं शुध्येत्पाराशरोऽब्रवीत्।
सकृद्भुक्ता तु या नारी नेच्छन्ती पापकर्मभिः॥ 26॥

स्त्री को पृथ्वी के समान ही सर्वथा निर्दोष, शुद्ध व पवित्र समझना चाहिए। जिस प्रकार पृथ्वी के पूर्व भुक्ता होने पर भी उसे अपनाने में दोष नहीं माना जाता, उसी प्रकार स्त्री की किसी अन्य द्वारा भुक्ता होने पर उसे भोगने में भी दोष नहीं मानना चाहिए।

महर्षि पराशर के अनुसार—बलात्कार का शिकार बनी, बांधकर, मार-पीटकर, डरा-धमकाकर अथवा दासी बनाकर केवल एक बार भोगी गयी स्त्री, सान्तपन कच्छ व्रत करने से शुद्ध हो जाती है।

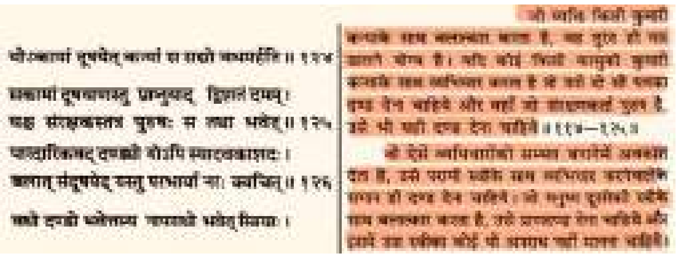
I Have already shown from my above section that Punishment for Rape and Adultery and other lustful activities is very severe for men

PROHIBITION AND PUNISHMENT FOR RAPE AND ADULTERY AND LUSTFUL ACTIVITIES IN SANATAN DHARMA

Matsya Purana chapter 227 slokas 124-126 says

जो व्यक्ति किसी कुमारी
कन्याके साथ बलात्कार करता है, वह तुरंत ही मार डालने योग्य है। यदि कोई किसी कामुकी कुमारी कन्याके साथ व्यभिचार करता है तो उसे दो सौ पणका दण्ड देना चाहिये और वहाँ जो संरक्षणकर्ता पुरुष है, उसे भी यही दण्ड देना चाहिये ॥ १२४-१२५ ॥
जो ऐसे व्यभिचारोंको सम्भव बनानेमें अवकाश देता है, उसे परायी स्त्रीके साथ व्यभिचार करनेवालेके समान ही दण्ड देना चाहिये। जो मनुष्य दूसरेकी स्त्रीके साथ बलात्कार करता है, उसे प्राणदण्ड देना चाहिये और इसमें उस स्त्रीका कोई भी अपराध नहीं मानना चाहिये

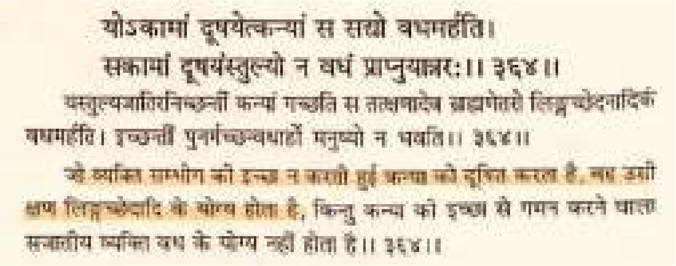
"A man who commits rape on an unmarried maiden (kumārī kanyā) deserves to be put to death immediately.
If anyone has illicit intercourse with a lustful (consenting but unprotected) maiden, he should be fined two hundred paṇas, and the guardian or protector who failed to safeguard her should be punished with the same fine.
Whoever allows such adulterous acts to happen through negligence shall be punished in the same way as the one who committed adultery with another man's wife.
A man who rapes another man's wife must be punished with the death penalty, and in this case, the woman herself is not to be considered guilty in any way."



Manu Smriti 8.364

जो व्यक्ति सम्भोग की इच्छा न करती हुई कन्या को दूषित करता है, वह उसी क्षण लिङ्गच्छेदादि के योग्य होता है, किन्तु कन्या की इच्छा से गमन करने वाला सजातीय व्यक्ति वध के योग्य नहीं होता है।। ३६४ ।।

"A man who violates a maiden who has no desire for sexual union becomes, at that very moment, deserving of punishment such as the cutting off of his organ; however, if a man of the same caste unites with a maiden with her consent, he is not considered deserving of death."



योऽकामां दूषयेत्कन्यां स सद्यो वधमर्हति।

Response to VedKaBhed and Hinduscript – Refutation of "Slavery in Hinduism"

Written by Rohan Saini in Uncategorized

This entire article is a response and rebuttal to the blogs called VedKaBhed and Hinduscript regarding their claims of "Slavery in Hinduism".

The Sanskrit word "dasa" is often deliberately mistranslated into English by Western scholars with an ulterior motive to denigrate the Hindu tradition. A case of spiteful mistranslation can be found regarding the word dasa. The Sanskrit word Dāsa is mistranslated as 'slave' so frequently that almost everyone accepts this as the correct meaning.People see Dāsa as equivalent to the shameful and inhumane system of slavery followed by Christian and Islamic invaders all over the world.

Vachaspatyam says that one who is given Salary, and who dedicates his part (Body) for the treatment (Seva) of the Master (in exchange for Salary), is called Dasa.

Acharya Sayana in his commentary on Rig Veda 8.56.3 interpreted Dasa (दासान्) as भृत्यान् which means Paid Servants/Employees who are paid wages for their service

तथा शतान् शतसंख्याकान् दासान् भृत्यान्

2. Lexical Meaning from Amarakośa:

वेतनम् । इत्यमरः । २।१०।३८ ॥

"Vetanam" (वेतनम्) means wages, salary, or remuneration.
This is from Amarakośa, section 2.10.38.
So the word भृत्या is linked conceptually to वेतनम् — one who serves or supports, and in return receives wages.

Where as the definition of slave is a person who is the property of and wholly subject to another and forced to provide unpaid labor.

In Sanatan Dharm it is clearly said that you can't make someone dasa against his/her will ..
It is said
बलाद्दासीकृतश्चौरैर्विक्रीतश्चापि मुच्यते । that if someone is forcibly made a Dasa or sold by thieves, even when already sold, he/she has to be released

Yajnavalkya Smriti says बल्लाद्दासीकृतश्चौरैर्विक्रीतश्चापि मुच्यते । स्वामिप्राणप्रदो भक्तत्यागात्तन्निष्क्रयाद्धि –

ऐसा स्मृतिकार याज्ञवल्क्य का वचन है। जिसे बलपूर्वक दास बना लिया गया हो, तस्करों के द्वारा बेच दिया गया हो, उसे दासत्व से मुक्त कर देना चाहिए। अर्थात् यदि आप अपने घर के लिये या व्यापार के लिए किसी को नौकरी पर रखते हैं तो उसे बलपूर्वक या मानव-तस्करों के द्वारा खरीद बेच कर दास नहीं बनाया हुआ होना चाहिए –

This is the statement of Smriti writer Yagyavalkya. One who has been forcibly made a Dasa or sold by smugglers should be freed from Dasatva. That is, if you employ someone for your home or business, then he should not have been made a slave by force or by buying and selling from human smugglers.

Narada Smriti 5.38 says

चौरापहृतविक्रीता ये च दासीकृता बलात् । राज्ञा मोक्षयितव्यास्ते दासत्वं तेषु नेष्यते ॥ 38 ॥जो लोग चोरों द्वारा अपहरण कर लिए जाते हैं और गुलाम के रूप में बेच दिए जाते हैं या जबरन गुलाम बना लिए जाते हैं, उन्हें राजा द्वारा मुक्त कर दिया जाता है और उन्हें अधिक समय तक जेल में नहीं रखा जा सकता

Those who are kidnapped by thieves and sold as Dasas or are forcibly made Dasa are freed by the king and they cannot be kept in a prison for a longer period of time a person who is forced to work for another against his will is a slave

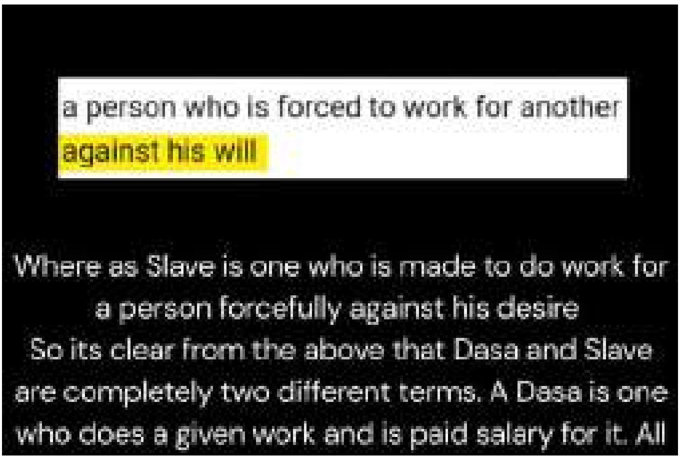
Where as Slave is one who is made to do work for a person forcefully against his desire

So its clear from the above that Dasa and Slave are completely two different terms. A Dasa is one who does a given work and is paid salary for it.



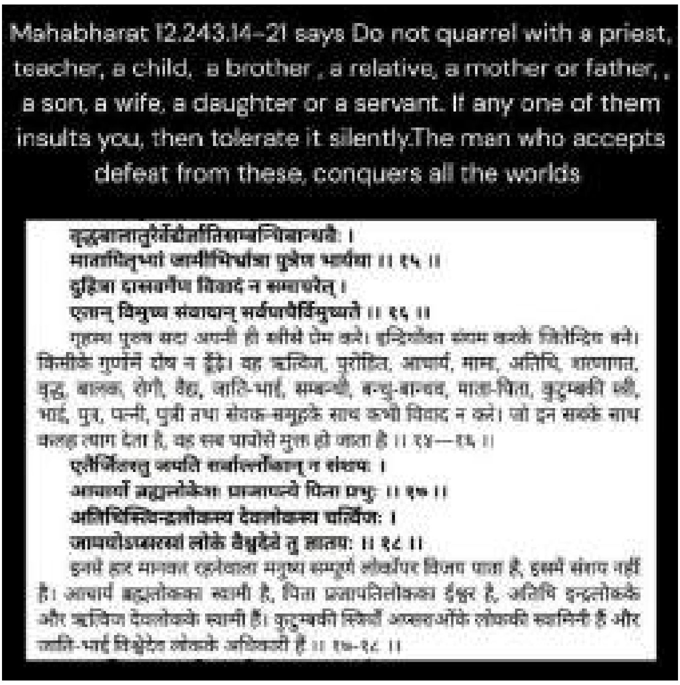
Vedic Scriptures have a Very high Status of Dasa

Do not quarrel with a priest, teacher, maternal uncle, guest, an aged person, a child, a sick person, a doctor, a brother , a relative, a mother or father, a woman of the same family,, a son, a wife, a daughter or a servant. If any one of them insults you, then tolerate it silently. The man who accepts defeat from these, conquers all the worlds – Mahabharat 2.243.14-21

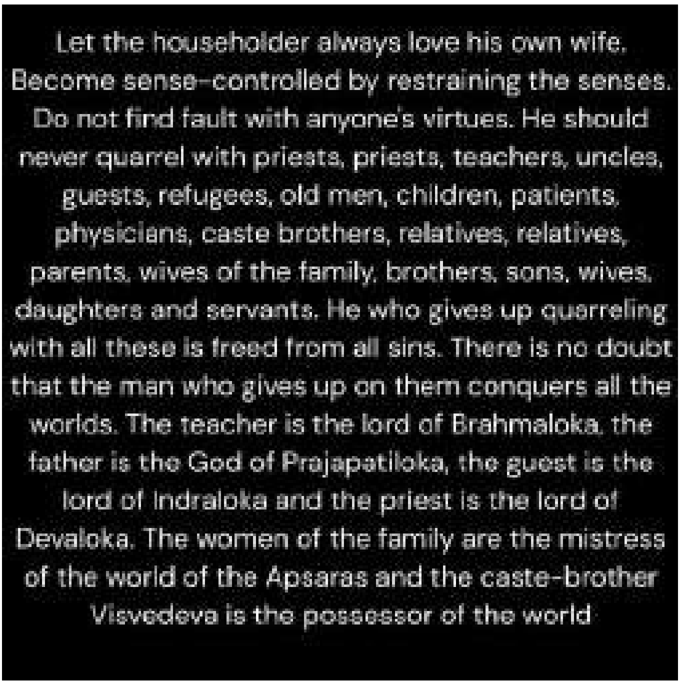
गृहस्थ पुरुष सदा अपनी ही स्त्रीसे प्रेम करे। इन्द्रियोंका संयम करके जितेन्द्रिय बने। किसीके गुणोंमें दोष न ढूँढ़े। वह ऋत्विज, पुरोहित, आचार्य, मामा, अतिथि, शरणागत, वृद्ध, बालक, रोगी, वैद्य, जाति-भाई, सम्बन्धी, बन्धु-बान्धव, माता-पिता, कुटुम्बकी स्त्री, भाई, पुत्र, पत्नी, पुत्री तथा सेवक-समूहके साथ कभी विवाद न करे। जो इन सबके साथ कलह त्याग देता है, वह सब पापोंसे मुक्त हो जाता है ।। १४-१६ ।।

इनसे हार मानकर रहनेवाला मनुष्य सम्पूर्ण लोकोंपर विजय पाता है, इसमें संशय नहीं है। आचार्य ब्रह्मलोकका स्वामी है, पिता प्रजापतिलोकका ईश्वर है, अतिथि इन्द्रलोकके और ऋत्विज देवलोकके स्वामी हैं। कुटुम्बकी स्त्रियाँ अप्सराओंके लोककी स्वामिनी हैं और जाति-भाई विश्वेदेव लोकके अधिकारी हैं ।। १७-१८ ।।

Let the householder always love his own wife. Become sense-controlled by restraining the senses. Do not find fault with anyone's virtues. He should never quarrel with priests, priests, teachers, uncles, guests, refugees, old men, children, patients, physicians, caste brothers, relatives, relatives, parents, wives of the family, brothers, sons, wives, daughters and servants. He who gives up quarreling with all these is freed from all sins. There is no doubt that the man who gives up on them conquers all the worlds. The teacher is the lord of Brahmaloka, the father is the God of Prajapatiloka, the guest is the lord of Indraloka and the priest is the lord of Devaloka. The women of the family are the mistress of the world of the Apsaras and the caste-brother Visvedeva is the possessor of the world – Mahabharta Shanti Parva Adhaya 243 Slokas 14-21



Mahabharat 12.243.14-21 says Do not quarrel with a priest, teacher, a child, a brother , a relative, a mother or father, , a son, a wife, a daughter or a servant. If any one of them insults you, then tolerate it silently.The man who accepts defeat from these, conquers all the worlds



Mahabharta Anushshashan Parva Adhaya 23 Sloka 82 says

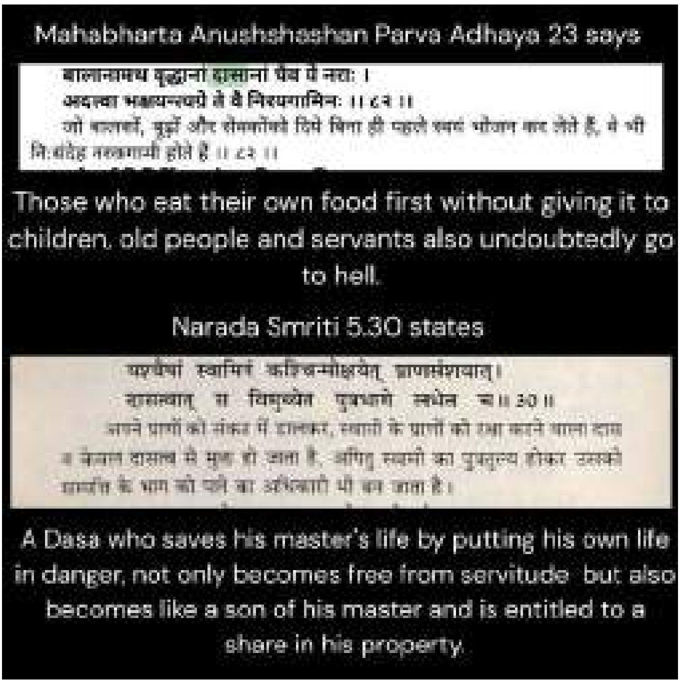
जो बालकों, बूढ़ों और सेवकोंको दिये बिना ही पहले स्वयं भोजन कर लेते हैं, वे भी निःसंदेह नरकगामी होते हैं ।। ८२ ।।

Those who eat their own food first without giving it to children, old people and servants also undoubtedly go to hell.

Narada Smriti 5.30 states-

अपने प्राणों को संकट में डालकर, स्वामी के प्राणों की रक्षा करने वाला दास न केवल दासत्व से मुक्त हो जाता है, अपितु स्वामी का पुत्रतुल्य होकर उसकी सम्पत्ति के भाग को पाने का अधिकारी भी बन जाता है।

A Dasa who saves his master's life by putting his own life in danger, not only becomes free from servitude but also becomes like a son of his master and is entitled to a share in his property.



Apastamba Dharmasutra 2.4.9 says one may keep his wife his children hungry but never his Dasa Apastamba Dharmasutra 2.4.9 – 9. (But gifts offered to priests) at sacrifices (are to be given) in the manner prescribed by the Veda.

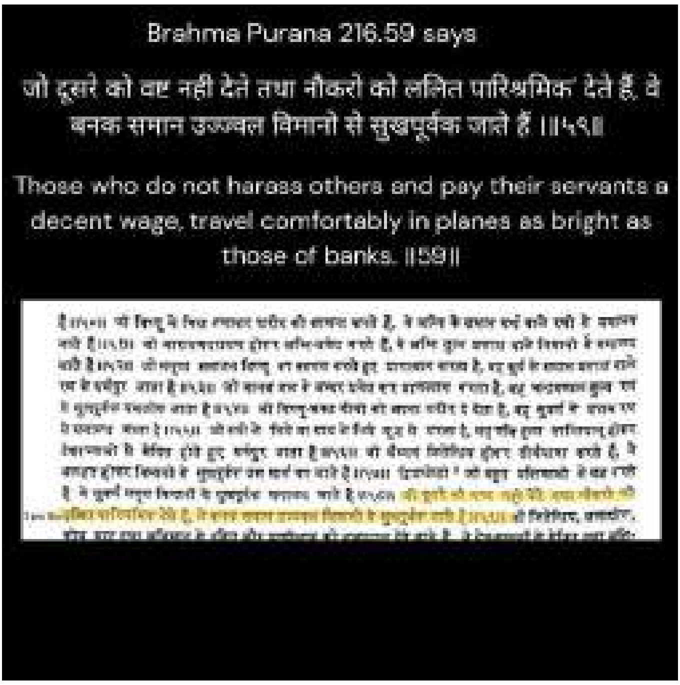
10. The division of the food must be made in such a manner that those who receive daily portions (Dasas) do not suffer by it.

11. At his pleasure, he may stint himself, his wife, or his children, but by no means a Dasa who does his work.

12. And he must not stint himself so much that he becomes unable to perform his duties.

Brahma Purana 216.59 says जो दूसरे को वष्ट नही देते तथा नौकरो को ललित पारिश्रमिक' देते हैं, वे बनक समान उज्ज्वल विमानो से सुखपूर्वक जाते हैं ।।।५९।। Those who do not harass others and pay their servants a decent wage, travel comfortably in planes as bright as those of banks. ॥59॥



Valmiki Ramayana 2.105.33 says that in the Rule of Raja Dashratha all his servants subjects were aintained properly

"Our father reached heaven because he maintained his servants properly, protected his subjects and realised the taxes in the manner prescribed by scriptures from them."

"In Adi Parva, Adhyaya 220 of the Mahabharata, Subhadra humbly refers to herself as a dāsi of Devi Draupadi."

"And with great joy, she (Draupadi) gave many blessings to that incomparable bride. Thereafter, Subhadra—whose lovely face resembled the full moon—immediately went and touched the feet of Queen Draupadi and said, 'Devi! I am your humble servant (dāsi).' (Verse 22)

At that moment, Draupadi immediately stood up and, embracing Subhadra—the sister of Shri Krishna—with great happiness, said, 'Sister! May your husband be free from enemies.' Subhadra, too, overwhelmed with joy, replied, 'Sister! So may it be.' (Verses 23–24)"

यही बात ऋचाद्वारा कही गयी है- यह ब्रह्मवेत्ताकी नित्य महिमा है, जो कर्मसे न तो बढ़ती है और न घटती ही है। उस महिमाके ही स्वरूपको जाननेवाला होना चाहिये, उसे जानकर पापकर्मसे लिप्त नहीं होता। अतः इस प्रकार जाननेवाला शान्त, दान्त, उपरत, तितिक्षु और समाहित होकर आत्मामें ही आत्माको देखता है, सभीको आत्मा देखता है। उसे [पुण्य-पापरूप] पापकी प्राप्ति नहीं होती, यह सम्पूर्ण पापोंको पार कर जाता है। इसे पाप ताप नहीं पहुँचाता, यह सारे पापोंको संतप्त करता है। यह पापरहित, निष्काम, निःसंशय ब्राह्मण हो जाता है। हे सम्राट्! यह ब्रह्मलोक है, तुम इसे पहुँचा दिये गये हो-ऐसा याज्ञवल्क्यने कहा। [तब जनकने कहा- 'वह मैं श्रीमान्‌को विदेह देश देता हूँ, साथ ही आपकी दासता (सेवा) करनेके लिये अपने-आपको भी
समर्पण करता हूँ' ॥ २३ ॥

"This very truth has been spoken through a Richa (Vedic verse): This is the eternal glory of the knower of Brahman — it neither increases through actions nor decreases. One must become a knower of this glory itself. Knowing it, one does not become tainted by sinful deeds.

Therefore, such a knower—peaceful, self-controlled, withdrawn (from sense pleasures), enduring, and concentrated—sees the Self in his own self and sees the Self in all beings. Such a person does not incur sin (in the form of merit or demerit); he transcends all sins. Sin cannot touch him; rather, he burns up all sins. He becomes a sinless, desireless, doubt-free Brahmana (knower of Brahman).

O Emperor! This is the world of Brahman — you have attained it," said Yājñavalkya.

Then Raja Janaka spoke –

"I offer the land of Videha to you, O venerable one, and along with it, I also surrender myself to serve you and become your Dasa."

११२६ बृहदारण्यकोपनिषद् [अध्याय ४

यही बात मन्त्रद्वारा कही गयी है—यह ब्रह्मवेत्ताकी नित्य महिमा है, जो कर्मसे न तो बढ़ती है और न घटती ही है। उस महिमाके ही स्वरूपको जाननेवाला होना चाहिये, उसे जानकर पापकर्मसे लिप्त नहीं होता। अतः इस प्रकार जाननेवाला शान्त, दान्त, उपरत, तितिक्षु और समाहित होकर आत्मामें ही आत्माको देखता है, सभीको आत्मा देखता है। उसे [पुण्य-पापरूप] पापकी प्राप्ति नहीं होती, यह सम्पूर्ण पापोंको पार कर जाता है। इसे पाप ताप नहीं पहुँचाता, यह सारे पापोंको संतप्त करता है। यह पापरहित, निष्काम, निःसंशय ब्राह्मण हो जाता है। हे सम्राट्! यह ब्रह्मलोक है, तुम इसे पहुँचा दिये गये हो—ऐसा याज्ञवल्क्यने कहा। [तब जनकने कहा—] 'वह मैं श्रीमान्‌को विदेह देश देता हूँ, साथ ही आपकी दासता (सेवा) करनेके लिये अपने-आपको भी समर्पण करता हूँ'॥ २३॥

"These evidences clearly demonstrate that the term Dasa is not equivalent to 'slave.' In fact, Dasa is a sacred term with a meaning that stands in stark contrast to the concept of slavery. In the Vedic scriptures, Dasas are portrayed with great reverence and are accorded a highly respected status equivalent to that of a son "

Now they quote also (the following verses): 'It is declared that a female who has been purchased for money is not a wife. She cannot (assist) at sacrifices offered to the gods or the manes. Kāśyapa has stated that she is a slave."

The offspring born to a slave belongs to the one who owns her, rather than the one who engages in intercourse with her

Rebuttal –

Baudhyana Dharmasutra 1.11.21.2 he deliberately took it out of Context . Just the next verse criticises slavery and says that one who sells and buys a girl goes into hell after death and faces severe punishment.

'Baudhyana Dharmasutra 1.11.21.3 – Those wicked men who, seduced by greed, give away a daughter for a fee, who (thus) sell themselves and commit a great crime, fall (after death) into a dreadful place of punishment and destroy their family down to the seventh (generation). Moreover they will repeatedly die and be born again. All (this) is declared (to happen), if a fee (is taken).

Because of the rights over offspring, one must consider those things (like cows, horses, etc.) as belonging to the person — this is the purpose of the mention of cows and horses.
Or alternatively, since the transaction of seed and fruit is more commonly known in the context of crops, it is mentioned here to negate that (i.e., to include animals too).
This principle applies to all — bipeds (humans), quadrupeds (animals), birds, and immovable beings (like plants).
The word “this” (eṣaḥ) refers to both aspects (ownership through action and non-action).
If one does not intend to own (non-abhi-sandhāna), then the field belongs to the one who tills it; but if there is intention (abhi-sandhāna), then the fruit belongs to both (owner and worker).
The example of cows and horses is to illustrate this point — and the same rule applies even to dogs and cats.
Then why does the scripture say “except for other animals like oxen” (bady-anyagoṣu)?
It’s because generally cows are considered as belonging to humans, unlike birds and others — hence this is a reiteration based on common understanding.
Female Dasi (dāsyaḥ) are said to belong to seven types of Dasas ‘Prasavaḥ’ refers to birth from the body.
The expression “for him, it is yours” means: the child born belongs to you (i.e., the master/owner).

📚Narada Smriti Quotations from Narada 8.9📚
It is by permission (of the owner) only that a female slave, cattle, or an estate may be enjoyed (by a stranger). He who enjoys that which had not been given up to him (by the owner), must pay for the (illegitimate) enjoyment of what he had been enjoying.”

Narada Smriti 8.9 – No Slavery or mention of female slaves –

Narada Smriti 8.9 –

इसी प्रकार एक क्रेता से पण्य का सौदा पक्का कर दूसरे क्रेता को सामान बेचने वाले व्यापारी से भी न केवल सामान के मूल्य का दुगुना वसूल करना चाहिए, अपितु राजा को उसे दण्डित भी करना चाहिए।

हां, यदि क्रेता ख़रीदे पण्य को नहीं उठाता है, तो विक्रेता को अपना सामान किसी अन्य व्यापारी को बेचने पर कोई दोष नहीं लगता; क्योंकि आख़िर व्यापारी को अपना सामान बेचना ही तो है, घर में तो नहीं रखना है

Similarly, a merchant who seals a deal with one buyer and then sells the goods to another buyer should not only be charged double the price of the goods but the king should also punish him . Yes, if the buyer does not pick up the purchased goods, then the seller does not have any fault if he sells his goods to another merchant; because after all the merchant has to sell his goods, not keep them at home

Refutation-

He claimed Agni Purana 223.23-29 talks about paying taxes while importing female slaves . In reality this translation is totally fake the mool sloka and its english translation doesnt even mention such thing

Agni Purana 223.23-29 – The property that has been stolen by the inmates of the house need not be restored by the king. O Brahmin! the king should take one twentieth of the value from the merchandise belonging to his country. The fees to be levied on goods from foreign countries should be determined after knowing the cost, the wear and tear and the profit got by the trader. (In this case) one twentieth of the profit should be taken. If not (paid) (the importer) should be punished. Freight should not be collected from women and mendicants. The ferryman should be made to repay by the king that which has been lost in transit on account of the fault of the ferryman. The king should take one sixth in the case of the grain śūka (barley) and one eighth in the case of the grain śimbi (a kind of kidney bean) as toll befitting the region and season. The king should take four and five parts respectively in the case of animals and gold. Only.a sixth part should be collected in the case of perfumes, herbs, cereals, flowers, roots, fruits, leaves, vegetables, straw, bamboos hides, wicker works and vessels made of stone and all (other materials), honey, meat and clarified butter.

22. The king should obtain from thieves and the officers in charge of the protection, the property taken by them. One who lies that he has been robbed when he has not been robbed should be punished and expelled (from the country).

30-33. (The king) should not levy tax on the brahmins even in emergency. The king in whose realm a brahmin, well-versed in the scriptures, perishes on account of hunger, his kingdom gets ruined on account of diseases, famine and thieves. ब्राह्मणोंसे कोई प्रिय वस्तु अथवा कर नहीं लेना चाहिये। जिस राजाके राज्यमें श्रोत्रिय ब्राह्मण भूखसे कष्ट पाता है, उसका राज्य बीमारी, अकाल और लुटेरोंसे पीड़ित होता रहता है। अतः ब्राह्मणकी विद्या और आचरणको जानकर उसके लिये अनुकूल जीविकाका प्रबन्ध करे तथा जैसे पिता अपने औरस पुत्रका पालन करता है, उसी प्रकार राजा विद्वान् और सदाचारी ब्राह्मणकी सर्वथा रक्षा करे। जो राजासे सुरक्षित होकर प्रतिदिन धर्मका अनुष्ठान करता है, उस ब्राह्मणके धर्मसे राजाकी आयु बढ़ती है तथा उसके राष्ट्र एवं खजानेकी भी उन्नति होती है। शिल्पकारोंको चाहिये कि महीनेमें एक दिन बिना पारिश्रमिक लिये केवल भोजन स्वीकार करके राजाका काम करें। इसी प्रकार दूसरे लोगोंको भी, जो राज्यमें रहकर अपने शरीरके परिश्रमसे जीविका चलाते हैं, महीनेमें एक दिन राजाका काम करना चाहिये ॥ ३०-३४॥

Translation:

If a person is entrusted with the duty of protection, the king should recover from him any wealth that is stolen. If a person claims his wealth is stolen even when it is not, he is punishable and should be expelled from the kingdom. If the household's own members steal from the household wealth, the king should not compensate for it from his treasury.

Within the kingdom, all shops should pay one-twentieth (5%) of their income as tax to the king. When importing goods from foreign lands, considering the expenses and losses involved, as well as the taxes on the goods, the king should impose a tax on each merchant so that they still make a profit and do not suffer a loss. The king should take only one-twentieth of the income. Any royal official who collects more than this should be punished.

No services should be demanded from women or ascetics (sadhus and sanyasis) for rowing boats. If any damage occurs to the boat due to the fault of the boatmen (mallahs), the boatmen themselves should be held responsible and made to compensate.

The king should collect one-sixth part of grains like rice (shukadhanya) and one-eighth part of grains like wheat (shimbidhanya) as tax. Similarly, appropriate taxes should be taken on wild fruits and roots according to the country and season. One-fifth of animals and one-sixth of gold should be collected as royal tax.

On items such as perfumes, medicines, juices, flowers, roots, fruits, leaves, vegetables, grass, bamboo, baskets made of bamboo, stone utensils, honey, meat, and ghee, one-sixth of the income should be collected as tax.

No beloved items or taxes should be taken from Brahmins. In a kingdom where Brahmin scholars suffer from hunger, the kingdom will suffer from disease, famine, and robbers. Therefore, the king should ensure appropriate livelihood for Brahmins by understanding their knowledge and conduct, and protect learned and virtuous Brahmins just like a father cares for his son.

A Brahmin who stays safely under the king's protection and performs daily religious duties increases the king's lifespan as well as the prosperity of his kingdom and treasury.

Craftsmen should work one day each month for the king without any wages, accepting only food. Similarly, others who earn their living through manual labor in the kingdom should also work for the king one day a month.

2. Lexical Meaning from Amarakośa:

वेतनम् । इत्यमरः । २।१०।३८ ॥

"Vetanam" (वेतनम्) means wages, salary, or remuneration.
This is from Amarakośa, section 2.10.38.
So the word भृत्या is linked conceptually to वेतनम् — one who serves or supports, and in return receives wages.

Here actually the word used is ‘vadhu’ (वधू), which refers to a married woman or bride, not a slave. There is no word related to selling or buying female Slaves in this mantra.

In the commentary on this mantra in the Bṛhaddevatā, it is explained that kings would marry off their daughters to suitable men of the same gotra and varṇa, which is commonly known as ‘kanyādāna’ (ritual gift of a daughter in marriage). Hence, the word ‘vadhu’ appears in these mantras, which is always used for a married woman or bride, not a slave.

And as for the mention of giving chariots or other things, that is actually a traditional part of ‘strī-dhana’ (the wealth given to the bride by her family). For example, in the Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa, during the wedding of Sītā, King Janaka gave chariots, animals, male and female attendants to look after the bride. This was part of the marriage custom and not some form of slavery.

Seeing that he (Kakṣīvat) was handsome and radiant like a son of the gods, the king, finding no objection in terms of caste or lineage, considered offering him his daughter in marriage.

Then, lifting him up, the king asked about his caste and lineage. The young man (Kakṣīvat) replied respectfully: “O King, I belong to the lineage of the sage Aṅgiras. I am the son of the high-born sage Dīrghatamas.”

Thereupon, the king (Svanaya) gave him ten beautifully adorned maidens as companions. To carry these maidens, he also provided a chariot, muscular horses in teams of four, wealth, vessels made of less precious metals, as well as goats and sheep.

Section 1: On the Root and Meanings of 'वधू'

> "ब(व)धू स्त्री बध्नाति ममतया बन्ध–ड गलोपः," > The feminine word vadhū (bride/wife) is derived from the root bandh (to bind) — indicating "she who binds with affection" (i.e., connects through love or emotional attachment).

> "उह्यते वह-क घश्चान्टालृएशे वा।" > Alternatively, it comes from the root vah (to carry or lead), interpreted through suffix usage (like ghañ or ṇic) per Pāṇinian rules — meaning, "she who is led/carries herself from father's house to husband's."

> "१ नार्य्याम्," — In the sense of "a woman."

> "२ पृक्कायाञ्च अमरः" — In the Amarakosha (a Sanskrit thesaurus), it is also applied to "a daughter-in-law."

> "३ स्नुषायां," — It also means "a son's wife."

> "४ नबोढिआयाम्, भार्य्यायां" — Specifically a newly-married woman, a wife.

> "५ शारिवोषधौ" — In botanical context, "Vadhū" is a name for a medicinal herb, Śārivā (Indian sarsaparilla).

> “६ शआम्, च मेदि०” — In Śabdakalpadruma and Medinī-kośa, “vadhū” also appears as a general term for a woman of marriageable age or a bride.

Section 2: Alternative Root and Etymology

> “वधू स्त्री उह्यते पितृगेहात् पतिगृहं वह–ऊ धुकच्।” > The word vadhū also derives from vah (to carry), with the meaning “she who is carried or led from her father’s home to the husband’s home” — using the dhukac affix formation.

> “१ भार्य्यायाम् २ नवोढायां ३ पुत्रजायायाम् अमरः” > As per Amarakosha, it refers to: > 1. Wife > 2. Newlywed bride > 3. Son’s wife (daughter-in-law)

Here the word used is 'vadhu' (वधू), which refers to a married woman or bride, not a slave. There is no word related to selling or buying female Slaves in this mantra.

In the commentary on this mantra in the Bṛhaddevatā, it is explained that kings would marry off their daughters to suitable men of the same gotra and varṇa, which is commonly known as 'kanyādāna' (ritual gift of a daughter in marriage). Hence, the word 'vadhu' appears in these mantras, which is always used for a married woman or bride, not a slave.

And as for the mention of giving chariots or other things, that is actually a traditional part of 'strī-dhana' (the wealth given to the bride by her family). For example, in the Vālmīki Rāmāyaṇa, during the wedding of Sītā, King Janaka gave chariots, animals, male and female attendants to look after the bride. This was part of the marriage custom and not some form of slavery.

तब उसे (कक्षीवत् को) उठाकर उन्होंने उससे उसका वर्ण और गोत्रादि पूछा। उस युवक (कत्तीवत्) ने यह कहते हुये उत्तर दियाः 'हे राजन्, में अङ्गिरम् के वंश का हूँ; हे नृप में उच्च्य-पुत्र बत्रृषि दीर्घतमस् का पुत्र हैं।' तब उन्होंने (स्वनय ने) उसे (कक्षीवत्त् को) आभूषणों से अलंकृत दस कम्यायें प्रदान की, और इन कन्याओं को ले जाने के लिये इसी संरया में रथ तथा चार-चार के दल में चलने वाले मुहद शरीर के अश्व, और धन तथा हीन धातु के वर्तन, और बकरियों तथा भेड़ आदि भी दिये ।

Seeing that he (Kakṣīvat) was handsome and radiant like a son of the gods, the king, finding no objection in terms of caste or lineage, considered offering him his daughter in marriage.

Then, lifting him up, the king asked about his caste and lineage. The young man (Kakṣīvat) replied respectfully: "O King, I belong to the lineage of the sage Aṅgiras. I am the son of the high-born sage Dīrghatamas."

Thereupon, the king (Svanaya) gave him ten beautifully adorned maidens as companions. To carry these maidens, he also provided a chariot, muscular horses in teams of four, wealth, vessels made of less precious metals, as well as goats and sheep.

Allegations-

Agni Purana 211.37-43 – One who gives a slave girl to an excellent brahmin would reach the world of nymphs. Having given a copper plate weighing five hundred palas (a measure of weight) or half the weight or a quarter of that weight or one-eighth of the weight would get enjoyment and emancipation. By giving a cart together with a bull one would go to heaven by means of a cart.

Refutation-

Here is correct translation of Agni Purana 211.37-43 It mentions maid servants not slaves . There is a large Earth-Sky difference between Slaves and Maid Servants . Maid servants are paid salary for their works while Slaves are forced to do unpaid labour without any salary .

Agni Purana 211.37-43 – One who gives a maid servant to an excellent brahmin would reach the world of nymphs. Having given a copper plate weighing five hundred palas (a measure of weight) or half the weight or a quarter of that weight or one-eighth of the weight would get enjoyment and emancipation. By giving a cart together with a bull one would go to heaven by means of a cart.

Next we will be debunking his section – 2. How does one acquire slaves

Allegations-

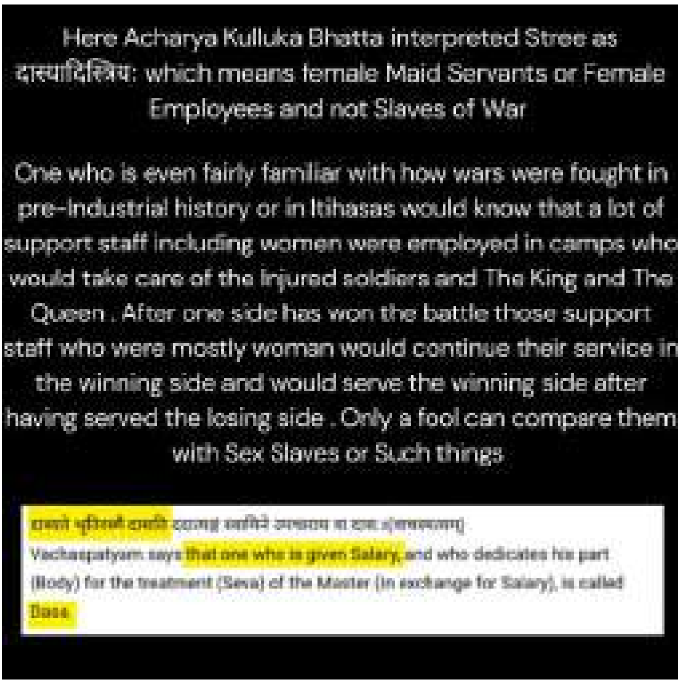
📚Manusmriti 7.96📚– Chariots and horses, elephants, umbrellas, wealth, grains, animals, women, all goods and baser metals belong to him who wins them.

Refutation-

He alleged Female Slavery on Manu 7.96 lets see how traditional commentators interpreted it

Acharya Kulluka Bhatta said in his Bhasya on Manu 7/96 – । राज्ञः स्वामिनः सर्वधनग्रहणे प्राप्ते तदपवादार्थमाह । रथाश्वहस्तिछत्रवस्त्रादि धनधान्यगवादि दास्यादिस्त्रियः सर्वाणि द्रव्याणि गुडलवणादीनि । कुप्यंच सुवर्णरजतव्यतिरिक्तताम्रादिधनम् यः पृथग्जित्वा सततंगृहमा-नयति तस्यैव तद्भवति सुवर्णरजतभूमिरवाद्यनपकृष्टथनंतु राज्ञएव समर्पणीयं एतदर्थमेवात्र परिगणनीयम् -Here Acharya Kulluka Bhatta interpreted Stree as दास्यादिस्त्रियः which means female Maid Servants or Female Employees and not Slaves of War

One who is even fairly familiar with how wars were fought in pre-Industrial history or in Itihasas would know that a lot of support staff including women were employed in camps who would take care of the Injured soldiers and The King and The Queen . After one side has won the battle those support staff who were mostly woman would continue their service in the winning side and would serve the winning side after having served the losing side . Only a fool can compare them with Sex Slaves or Such things Vachaspatyam says that one who is given Salary, and who dedicates his part (Body) for the treatment (Seva) of the Master (in exchange for Salary), is called Dasa.



Same Manu Smriti 8.323 says punishment for kidnapping woman is death sentence – Manu 8.323 – For stealing noble men, and specially women, and the precious gems, the thief deserves 'immolation.

Similarly Agni Purana 236.62-65 says woman of defeated enemies do not belong to else but to defeated enemies themselves Agni Purana 236.62-65. After having gained ictory in the battle, one shouldworship gods and brahmins.

In a battle won by the minis-ter, the gems (acquired by the minister) should be made over to the king. The wives of a defeated king would not belong to anyone else (but to that defeated king). The wives of the de-feated king should be protected (by the conquering king). A king should honour a hostile king defeated in the battle and treat him as his own son. He should not fight with him again. He should honour the customs and manners (of that country). Then after having entered his native country, he should enter

From the lord of the battlefield, captured and brought; through greed for livelihood, becoming a Bhakta-Dāsa; the son of a house-born Dāsa; purchased for a price; given as a gift by another; inherited from father or family; and one who, for the sake of clearing penalty or wealth due, accepts the state of Dāsya — these are the seven origins of Dāsa-hood.

ध्वजाहृतो भक्तदासो गृहजः क्रीतदत्त्रिमौ।
पैत्रिको दण्डदासश्च सप्तैते दासयोनयः॥ ४१५॥

The seven types of Das are the one captured in a war, the one brought here for the greed of livelihood, the child of a person who does servitude in his house, the one who is bought, the one who is given as a gift, the ancestral servant and the one who accepts servitude to pay off a punishment.

In Manu Smriti 8.415 too the word Dasa has been used which doesn't mean slaves but refers to paid servants

Translation

"The phrase 'captured under a banner' (dhvaja-grahaṇa)— here the word 'banner' (dhvaja) stands for the army. Hence, one who has been defeated in battle, taken away and brought, is made a Dāsa.

Now, one may ask: Is it the statement of the Kṣatriya that when a Kṣatriya is defeated in battle, he becomes a Dāsa?
We say: No; not in the strict sense.
Because by nature this condition of Dāsya is connected primarily with the Śūdra; for the Śūdra has been created for the purpose of service.
When someone conquers a lord, the people belonging to that lord, once captured, accept the Dāsya of the captor.

One may question: Is Dāsya only for Śūdras?
No; though for the Śūdra it is natural, in exceptional cases others also may enter into Dāsya.
If this were not accepted, there would be no clarity about who exactly is considered a Dāsa.
For in reality all three varṇas, in one way, are Dāsas of the king, following him from generation to generation; there is no fixed rule, because it is a matter of dependence.
But not all such Dāsas engage in direct personal service.
Thus, even among Kṣatriyas and others, a form of Dāsya exists.
There is a distinction: one form of Dāsya is different from another.

Another form of Dāsya is simply performing lowly work.
The Dāsya of an unknown person is unrestricted: it involves unreserved rendering of service.
Paricaryā (personal attendance), on the other hand, means bodily service (pressing the limbs), assistance through wealth, etc.
This distinction has been elaborated by Nārada.

- Bhakta-Dāsa: One who, for the sake of benefit or due to devotion, has voluntarily undertaken Dāsya.
- Gṛhaja: The Dāsa born in the household, i.e., the son of a Dāsī.
- Krīta: The Dāsa purchased with a price from the master.
- Datrima: The Dāsa given as a gift, out of affection or without particular purpose.
- Kramāgata (Paitrika): The hereditary Dāsa, passed down from father.

What is the difference between Gṛhaja and Kramāgata?
—The Gṛhaja is one born in servitude within that same house;
—the Kramāgata is one whose status has come down as an inheritance from a previous arrangement.

- Daṇḍa-Dāsa: The Dāsa who, being unable to pay a royal fine, undertakes Dāsya as a consequence.

Even a person from a higher varṇa may, due to inability to pay a fine, become such a Dāsa.
But this is not the same as menial Dāsya.
There is a difference between Dāsya and mere work: the latter is only task-oriented, and does not completely make a person a Dāsa.
In the same way, performing tasks for someone is also found outside strict Dāsya.

Further, even a Śūdra who has approached Dharma may become a Dāsa, but this does not mean that these seven causes of Dāsa-status are the only ones.
These are sources of Dāsya, but the willingness of the person is also an important factor.
For the one who has voluntarily chosen to serve, it is not like the Dāsa who is bought, born in a household, etc.

Thus, as it has been said, each case must be considered according to its circumstances.
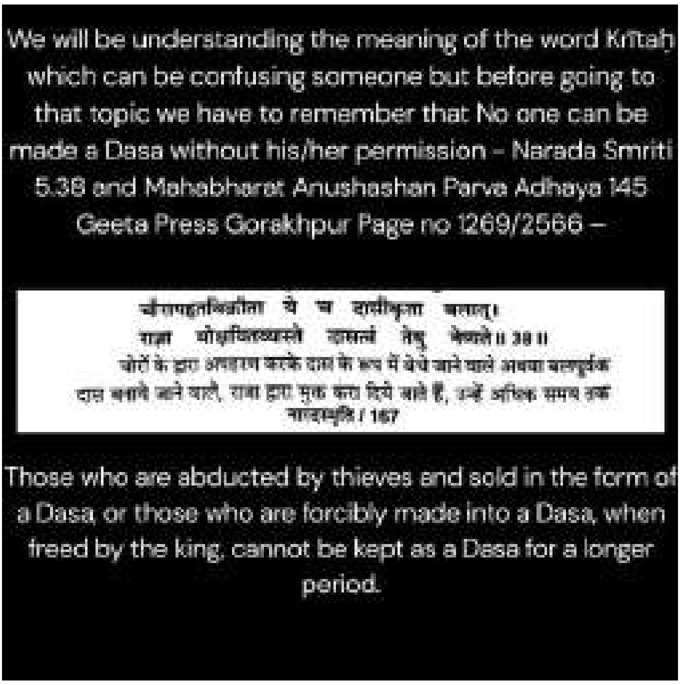
For one who desires a particular result, there is a form of Dāsya, but there is no lifelong obligation.
Therefore, for one who does not willingly accept Dāsya, there is no such relationship.
Hence, if a Śūdra, possessing wealth, lives in independence without dependence upon Brāhmaṇas or others, there is no fault in him."

Thus its clear From Acharya Medhatithi commentary that Manu 8.414 does not refer to Slavery but to Dasa Paid Servants and Employees .

We will be understanding the meaning of the word Krītaḥ which can be confusing someone but before going to that topic we have to remember that No one can be made a Dasa without his/her permission – Narada Smriti 5.38 and Mahabharat Anushashan Parva Adhaya 145 Geeta Press Gorakhpur Page no 1269/2566 –

Narada Smriti 5.38

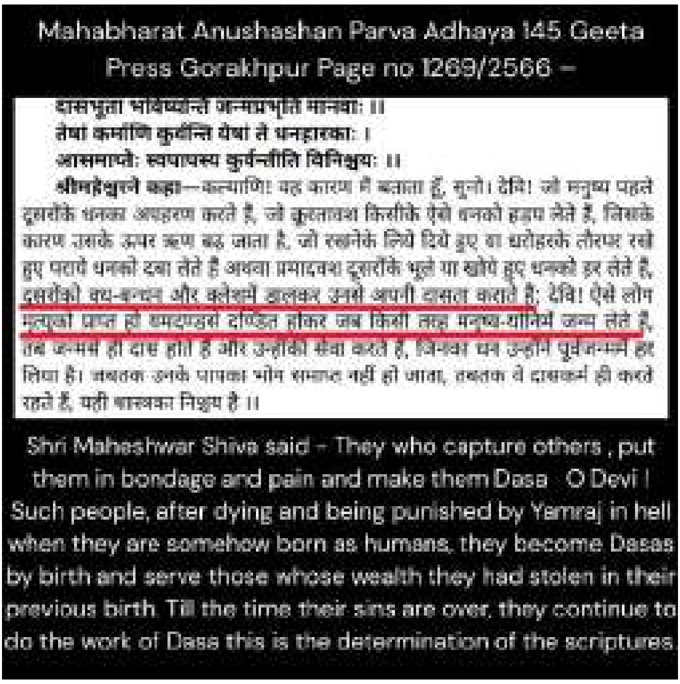
चोरों के द्वारा अपहरण करके दास के रूप में बेचे जाने वाले अथवा बलपूर्वक दास बनाये जाने वाले, राजा द्वारा मुक्त करा दिये जाते हैं, उन्हें अधिक समय तक नारदस्मृति /
Those who are abducted by thieves and sold in the form of a Dasa, or those who are forcibly made into a Dasa, when freed by the king, cannot be kept as a Dasa for a longer period.



Mahabharat Anushashan Parva Adhaya 145 Geeta Press Gorakhpur Page no 1269/2566 –

दसरोंको वध-बन्धन और क्लेशमें डालकर उनसे अपनी दासता कराते हैं; देवि ! ऐसे लोग मृत्युको प्राप्त हो यमदण्डसे दण्डित होकर जब किसी तरह मनुष्य-योनिमें जन्म लेते हैं, तब जन्मसे ही दास होते हैं और उन्हींकी सेवा करते हैं, जिनका धन उन्होंने पूर्वजन्ममें हर लिया है। जबतक उनके पापका भोग समाप्त नहीं हो जाता, तबतक वे दासकर्म ही करते रहते हैं, यही शास्त्रका निश्चय है ।।

Shri Maheshwar Shiva said – They who capture others , put them in bondage and pain and make them Dasas O Devi ! Such people, after dying and being punished by Yamraj in hell when they are somehow born as humans, they become Dasa by birth and serve those whose wealth they had stolen in their previous birth. Till the time their sins are over, they continue to do the work of Dasa, this is the determination of the scriptures.



We have Evidences from the Scriptures that prohibits selling ~nd buying human beings

Mahabharat 13.45.23

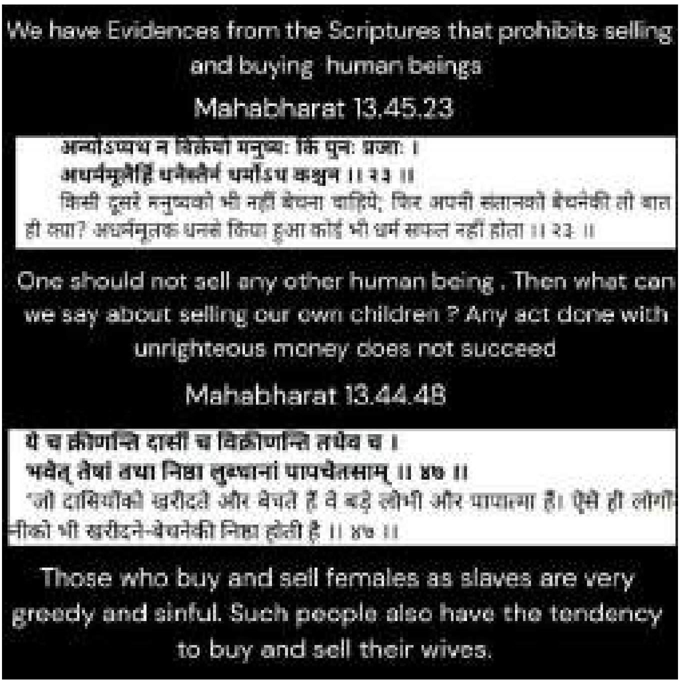
किसी दूसरे मनुष्यको भी नहीं बेचना चाहिये; फिर अपनी संतानको बेचनेकी तो बात ही क्या? अधर्ममूलक धनसे किया हुआ कोई भी धर्म सफल नहीं होता ।। २३ ।।

One should not sell any other human being. Then what can we say about selling our own children? Any act done with unrighteous money does not succeed

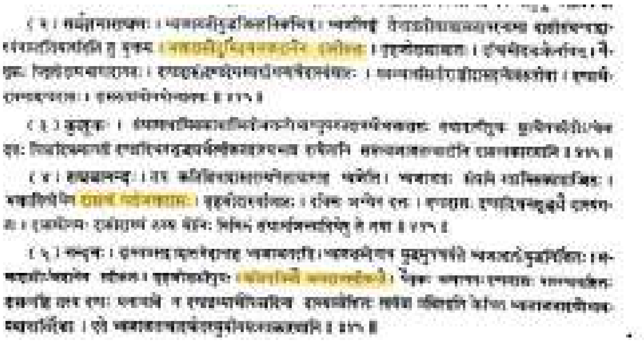
Mahabharat 13.44.48

'जो दासियोंको खरीदते और बेचते हैं वे बड़े लोभी और पापात्मा हैं। ऐसे ही लोगों नीको भी खरीदने-बेचनेकी निष्ठा होती है ।। ४७ ।।

Those who buy and sell females as slaves are very greedy and sinful. Such people also have the tendency to buy and sell their wives.



Sarvgaya Narayana , Raghavananda ,Nandan , Medhatithi and Kulluka Bhatta ji and have explained the meaning of word Krītaḥ as – भक्तदासोदुर्भिक्ष्य भक्तदानेन दासीकतः , दासत्वं गतोभक्तदासः । क्रीतदृत्रिमौ क्रयदानस्वीकृतौ meaning giving money or resources or a share of profit to someone in exchange for servitude and doing some work for the master in exchange for money in simple words contract labour as kritam . For ex – In IPL where Franchise buy players for a contract for a specific period of time but that doesn't mean they are forcefully sold as slaves like in Islamic Slavery



Thus we have understood the meaning of the word Kritam as purchasing the service of a person in a contract for a specific period of time for a specific amount like we see in Football Franchise and Cricket leagues .

Kritam as purchasing the sevice of a person in a contract for a specific period of time for a specific amount like we see in Football Franchise and Cricket leagues .

Narada Smriti Adhayay 5 describes many circumstances in which the person who has become Dasa due to Drought or Famine – , one who has become Dasa become of non payement of Loan and money , one who has become Dasa by himself and or one who became a Dasa due to war , one who became Dasa for Bharan Poshan may free themselves from Dasatva by themselves

Narada Smriti 5.31 –

अकाल में पाला-पोसा जाने से दास बना व्यक्ति दीर्घकाल तक स्वामी की सेवा करने पर भी दासत्व से मुक्त नहीं हो सकता है। हां, सामर्थ्य जुटाने पर गाय-बैल आदि देकर मुक्ति-लाभ कर सकता है।

A person who has become a Dasa by being brought up during a famine cannot be freed from Dasatva even if he serves his master for a long time. Yes, if he can gather the means, he can get freedom by giving away cows and bulls etc.

Manu Smriti 3.41-42

Manu Smriti 3.41-42 says Asura and Rakshas Vivah results in offspring who are cruel, anti-Veda & habitual liars and hence Rakshas and Asura Vivah should be avoided at all costs and never performed or practiced by anybody at all

अन्य अवशिष्ट चार दुर्विवाह होने पर उनसे कठोर और असत्यभाषण करनेवाले तथा वैदिक धर्म से द्वेष रखने वाले पुत्र जन्म लेते हैं ।।४१॥

धर्मशास्त्रसम्मत और प्रशस्त विवाह पद्धति में ब्याही धर्मपत्नी से जो सन्तान जन्म लेती है, वह निन्दा का पात्र न होकर प्रशंसा का पात्र होती है और अशास्त्रीय तथा अप्रशस्त गर्हित विवाहपद्धति से ब्याही गयी स्त्री से उत्पन्न व्यक्ति की सन्तान तिरस्कार का पात्र होती है । अतः दुख देनेवाली सन्तान जन्म न ले, इसलिये गर्हित विवाहों को नहीं करना चाहिये ॥४२॥

Verse 41:
"When the other remaining four types of improper marriages take place, the children born from them are harsh, untruthful, and hold hatred towards the Vedic Dharma."

Verse 42:
"Children born from a dharmically wedded wife—through a marriage approved by the scriptures and considered noble—are not objects of criticism but of praise. On the other hand, those born of a woman wed through unapproved and blameworthy marriage systems become subjects of contempt. Therefore, to avoid the birth of distress-bringing children, such degraded forms of marriage should be avoided."

In marriages other than the Brahma and similar approved types—i.e., in Gandharva and others—the children speak harshly and untruthfully.
'Harsh' refers to vulgar or abusive language used toward mother, sister, etc.
'Untruthful' refers to lies and well-known dishonesty.
The etymology of 'nṛśaṁsa-anṛta' (cruel and false) is given as those whose nature is to say such things.
'Brahma-dharma' refers to Vedic dharma and the meaning of the Vedas; these people either hate, criticize, or do not believe in it.
Therefore, such marriages are to be condemned."

This verse presents a summary of the results of various types of marriages.
The children (progeny such as sons) born from those marriages which are scripturally sanctioned (अनिन्दित, unblameworthy) are themselves unblameworthy and praiseworthy.
The ones born from condemned (निन्दित) and prohibited (प्रतिषिद्ध) marriages are blameworthy.
Therefore, since such condemned marriages result in sorrow-bringing progeny, one should avoid such condemned marriages."

From the four lower types of marriage—Asura, Gandharva, Rakshasa, and Paisacha—excluding the approved Brahma and similar ones, children are born who commit cruel deeds, lie a lot, and hate the Vedas and Vedic rituals like yajñas."

This verse is a concise statement about the fruits (results) of marriage.
Through deserving (scripturally appropriate) marriage forms, men obtain an unblameworthy lineage.
But through condemned (गर्हित) marriages, the progeny is also condemned.
Therefore, one should not engage in blameworthy marriages."

These forms are Asura, Gandharva, Rakshasa, and Paisacha.

From marriages that are unblameworthy (अनिन्दितैः), praiseworthy progeny (children like sons) are born — this is the intended meaning.
From condemned marriages such as the Asura type, blameworthy children are born.
Therefore, one should avoid such condemned marriages."

He highlights the defects in the four other forms (excluding Brahma, Daiva, Arsha, and Prajapatya).
The word 'śiṣṭeṣu avaśiṣṭeṣu' refers to the remaining unapproved forms.
'Nṛśaṁsa' means cruel, either by action or by nature.
'Brahma' here refers to the Veda, the Brahmin caste, or Vedic dharma like Agnihotra, all of which these offspring tend to despise."

"Just as the logic of 'A mountain does not cry' implies that a non-mountain does, this verse also implies a prohibition of blameworthy marriages by praising the unblameworthy ones (अनिन्दितैः).
Just as in statements like 'he who sings is blessed', there's an implied directive.
So too, this verse implies that one should undertake only unblameworthy marriages; the prohibition of blameworthy ones is conveyed indirectly (arthavāda — a laudatory or cautionary statement with implied command)."

Narada Smriti Chapter 12 sloka 44

उपर्युक्त आठ प्रकार के विवाहों में प्रथम चार- ब्राह्म, प्राजापत्य, आर्ष तथा दैव- धर्मसम्मत हैं। पांचवां गान्धर्व विवाह साधारण है, अर्थात् उसे न धर्मसम्मत कहा

जा सकता है और न ही धर्म-विरुद्ध। अन्य तीन-आसुर, राक्षस तथा पैशाच – अधर्म और पाप-रूप होने से निन्दनीय एवं त्याज्य हैं।

Among the eight types of marriages mentioned above, the first four — Brāhma, Prājāpatya, Ārṣa, and Daiva — are in accordance with dharma.
The fifth, Gandharva marriage, is considered neutral, meaning it can be called neither righteous nor unrighteous.
The remaining three — Asura, Rakshasa, and Paishacha — are condemned and to be avoided, as they are unrighteous and sinful in nature.

The wise have directed that when an accomplished person has been invited, a maiden may be bestowed on him, decked with ornaments and along with many valuable presents. Others again may bestow their daughters by accepting a couple of kine. Some again bestow their daughters by taking a fixed sum, and some take away maidens by force. Some wed with the consent of the maidens, some by drugging them into consent, and some by going unto the maidens' parents and obtaining their sanction."

When Bhishma reached there, other Kshatriya kings made fun of him by calling him old. So he took the maidens on his chariot and challenged all of them for a duel. And later in 1.102.65 we see he married those women with his younger brother. And in 1.102.68 we can see those girls were happy with their husband."

They were happy to know that both of them had got husbands suitable to them; therefore, both the auspicious ladies started serving and worshipping Vichitravirya with great devotion-68

Rebuttal –

Here is Mahabharat 4.72.19-26 -भगवान श्रीकृष्ण ने महात्मा पाण्डवों को दहेज या निमन्त्रण में बहुत-सी दासियाँ, नाना प्रकार के रत्न और बहुत-से वस्त्र पृथक-पृथक भेंट किये। तत्पश्चात् मत्स्य और पार्थकुल के वैवाहिक सम्बन्ध का कार्य विधिपूर्वक सम्पन्न होने लगा "Lord Krishna gave the great Pandavas many maidservants, various kinds of jewels, and numerous garments separately as part of the dowry or invitation gifts. Thereafter, the marriage alliance between the Matsya and Partha families was ceremoniously completed."

Here it is clearly mentioned about dasis which are servants and there is a lot of difference between Slave and servant . You dont have to pay your slaves but you have to pay your servants regularly

📚Mahabharata 1.223.48-50📚
He also gave them a thousand mules, all well- trained and possessing the speed of the wind, of white colour with black manes. And he of eyes like lotus-petals also gave unto them a thousand damsels well-skilled in assisting at bathing and at drinking, young in years and virgins all before their first-season, well-attired and of excellent complexion, each wearing a hundred pieces of gold around her neck, of skins perfectly polished, decked with every ornament, and well-skilled in every kind of personal service.

Refutation-

Now coming to his allegations on Mahabharat Adi Parva 223.48-50.

This Prakaran has occured in Adhaya 220 of Geeta Press Gorakhpur . Here is geeta press translation –

"In bathing, drinking, and festive occasions, there were one thousand fair-complexioned women who were of marriageable age, beautifully attired, and radiantly charming. They adorned themselves with golden necklaces embedded with hundreds of pearls, their bodies free of any visible body hair, and they were exquisitely decorated with garments and ornaments. These women, who were also skilled in service, were presented as gifts by the lotus-eyed Lord Krishna."

स्नान, पान और उत्सवमें जिनका उपयोग किया गया था, जो वयःप्राप्त थीं, जिनके वेष सुन्दर और कान्ति मनोहर थी, जिन्होंने सोनेके सौ-सौ मणियोंकी कण्ठियाँ पहन रखी थीं, जिनके शरीरमें रोमावलियाँ नहीं प्रकट हुई थीं, जो वस्त्राभूषणोंसे अलंकृत तथा सेवाके काममें पूर्ण दक्ष थीं, ऐसी एक हजार गौरवर्णा कन्याएँ भी कमलनयन भगवान् श्रीकृष्णने भेंट कीं ॥ ४९-५० ॥

In this context, Śrī Kṛṣṇa presented gifts to Arjuna and Subhadrā on the occasion of their marriage. These gifts included chariots, horses, trained soldiers, and also well-trained and graceful maidservants assigned to serve the queen. Now, observe carefully how the description of the dāsīs is given:

जिनके वेष सुंदर और कान्ति मनोहर थी, जिन्होंने सोने के सौ-सौ मणियों की कण्ठियाँ पहन रखी थीं, जिनके शरीर में रोमावलियाँ नहीं प्रकट हुई थीं, जो वस्त्राभूषणों से अलंकृत तथा सेवाके कार्यों में दक्ष थीं

"They adorned themselves with golden necklaces embedded with hundreds of pearls, their bodies free of any visible body hair, and they were exquisitely decorated with garments and ornaments."

This description clearly shows that the dāsīs were adorned with costly and beautiful jewelry, diamond and gold ornaments, and elegant garments. Does this fit the image of a slave? Certainly not. These women were not slaves but maidservants (dāsīs) who performed their roles with dignity.

According to Vācaspatyam , dāsīs received proper wages for their work, which primarily included taking care of the queen, assisting in her decoration, and managing her personal service. Therefore, it is completely unreasonable and misleading to equate them with the notion of slaves.

Refutation-

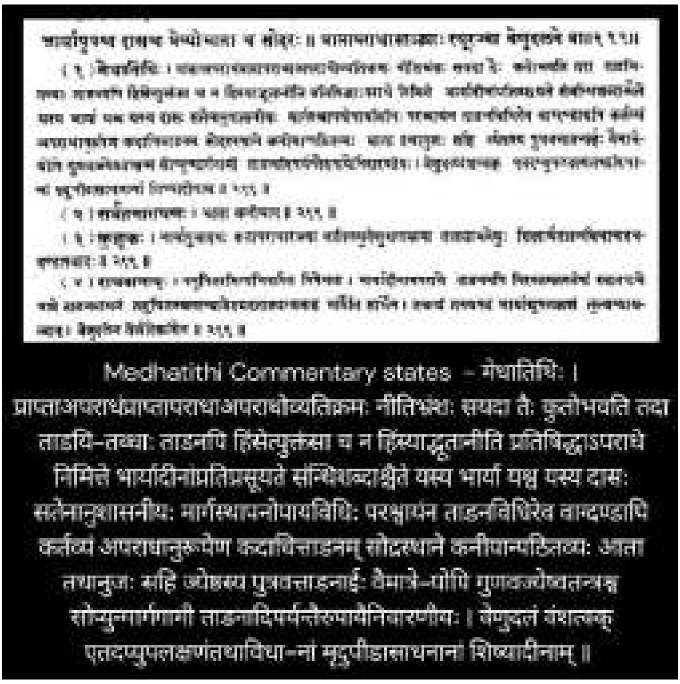
First of all we must understand that these sort of verses are not stating an indivitual’s duty . they are stating that person A has adhikar over B , C and D . Also Medhatithi Bhasya clarifies that the Aparadh here means transgression of Morality and its not actual beating but mere scolding only

Medhatithi Commentary states – मेधातिथिः । प्राप्ताअपराधंप्राप्तापराधाअपराधोव्यतिक्रमः नीतिभ्रंशः सयदा तैः कुतोभवति तदा ताडयि-तब्धाः ताडनपि हिंसेत्युक्तंसा च न हिंस्याद्भूतानीति प्रतिषिद्धाऽपराधे निमित्ते भार्यादीनांप्रतिप्रसूयते संन्धिशब्दाश्चैते यस्य भार्या यश्च यस्य दासः सतेनानुशासनीयः मार्गस्थापनोपायविधिः परश्चायंन ताडनविधिरेव वाग्दण्डापि कर्तव्यं अपराधानुरूपेण कदाचित्ताडनम् सोद्रस्थाने कनीयान्पठितव्यः आता तथानुजः सहि ज्येष्ठस्य पुत्रवत्ताडनाईः वैमात्रे-योपि गुणवज्येष्वतन्त्रश्च सोप्युन्मार्गगामी ताडनादिपर्यन्तैरुपायैनिवारणीयः । वेणुदलं वंशत्वक् एतदप्युपलक्षणंतथाविधा-नां मृदुपीडासाधनानां शिष्यादीनाम् ॥



Medhatithi Commentary – Prāptāparādhāḥ,'—those who have fallen upon, committed, a fault. 'Fault' means transgression of morality; when any such has been committed by them, they should he beaten. But even beating is said to be violence (hiṁsā), and it is prohibited by the principle "na hiṁsyāt bhūtāni" ("one should not harm living beings"). Regarding offenses, in the case of a wife and others (bhāryādīnām), reconciliation (sandhi) should first be attempted. The method of establishing proper conduct (mārgasthāpana upāya) is not through through beating (tāḍana), but verbal punishment (vāgdanda) should also be applied

A younger person (kanīyān) in place of a stepbrother (sodrasthāne) should study (paṭhitavyaḥ).A younger sibling (anujaḥ), as well as a stepbrother (vaimātreyaḥ), should be treated like a son (putravat) by the elder sibling (jyeṣṭhaḥ). However, if he lacks good qualities (guṇavargaḥ), lacks discipline (atantaraḥ), or follows the wrong path (unmārgagāmī), he should be corrected.

Manu Smriti 4.164 says – One should not beat someone except his son or Pupil

> He shall not, when angry, raise the rod against another person, nor shall he let it fall; except in the case of the son or the pupil; these two he may beat with a view to correction.—(164)

Refutation-

Now coming to Narada Smriti 12.78 we have to see the context . Narada Smriti 12.70-80 talks about premarital sex . Narada Smriti 12.71-72 clearly states that if you have sex with a woman without her consent then you will be given death penalty and your penis and fingers will be cut . Verse 72 states if you have sex with a woman with her consent then there is nothing wrong but you will have to marry her then .Narada Smriti 12.73-75 talks about relations with whom you cant have sex like your mother , daughter etc and punishment for it if you have forbidden intercourse like cutting the penis . Narada Smriti 12.78 says you can have sex with your Dasi (Female Employee) or a woman of lower arna but condition being this relationship must be wit consent and you must marry that woman after that compulsorily .

Narada Smriti 12.71-72

हीन अथवा समान वर्ण, जाति तथा स्थिति की कन्या की इच्छा के विरुद्ध उसकी योनि को अंगुलि से अथवा लिंग से आहत करने वाले पुरुष के हाथ की दो अंगुलियां काट डालनी चाहिए। अपने से उन्नत वर्ण-जाति की स्त्री से बलात्कार करने वाले से न केवल उसकी सारी सम्पत्ति छीन लेनी चाहिए, अपितु उसे मृत्यु-दण्ड भी देना चाहिए।

कन्या की इच्छा एवं सहमति से उससे मैथुन करने वाला पुरुष दोषी नहीं माना जाता। हां, पुरुष को अपने द्वारा भोगी गयी कन्या को समुचित आदर देते हुए उसे सजा-धजा कर उससे विवाह कर लेना चाहिए।

“A man who injures the private parts (yoni) of a girl of lower or equal varna, caste, or status against her will, either with his fingers or his genitals, should have two fingers of his hand cut off.

If he rapes a woman of a higher varna or caste than his own, not only should all his property be confiscated, but he should also be given the death penalty.

However, a man who has sexual intercourse with a girl with her consent and willingness is not considered guilty. Yet, he must give her due respect, adorn her appropriately, and marry her.”

निम्म्रोक्त बीस सम्बन्धियों से सम्भोग करने वाले युवक के लिंग को काट देना ही इस पाप का एकमात्र दण्ड है, इसके अतिरिक्त दूसरा कोई दण्ड नहीं है- सम्बन्धी स्त्रियां हैं-

1. अपने पिता की पत्नी (माता तथा माता से भिन्न अन्य स्त्री, विमाता आदि), 2. माता की भगिनी (मौसी), 3. सासू मां, 4. मामी, 5. पिता की बहिन, बुआ, 6. चाचा की पत्नी या रखैल, 7. शिष्य की स्त्री, 8. बहिन, चाचा, मामा आदि की लड़की, 10. पुत्रवधू, 11. अपनी पुत्री, 12. आचार्य की पत्नी, 13. अपने गोत्र-दूर के चाचा, भाई आदि की बहिन, पुत्री, बहू आदि, 14. शरण में आयी हुई असहाय स्त्री, 15. रानी, 16. संन्यासिनी, 17. दायी – पालन करने वाली अथवा स्तनपान कराने वाली स्त्री, 18. उत्तमर्ण की पतिव्रता स्त्री, 19. अपने वर्ण से भिन्न वर्ण-जाति की स्त्री तथा 20. भाई की पत्नी।

“For a youth who engages in sexual relations with any of the following twenty female relatives, the only punishment for this sin is the severing of his genitals. There is no other punishment apart from this.” The related women are: The wife of one’s father (mother or stepmother, etc.), Mother’s sister (maternal aunt),Mother-in-law, Aunt (wife of maternal uncle), Father’s sister (paternal aunt), Wife of an uncle, The wife of one’s disciple, Sister or daughters of one’s uncles (paternal/maternal cousins), Daughter-in-law, One's own daughter, The wife of one's teacher (guru), The sister, daughter, or wife of a distant relative of the same lineage (gotra), A helpless woman who has taken refuge, A queen, A female ascetic (sannyasini), A wet nurse or a woman who raised the person, The devoted wife of a noble man, A woman of a different caste or social class than one's own, Brother's wife.

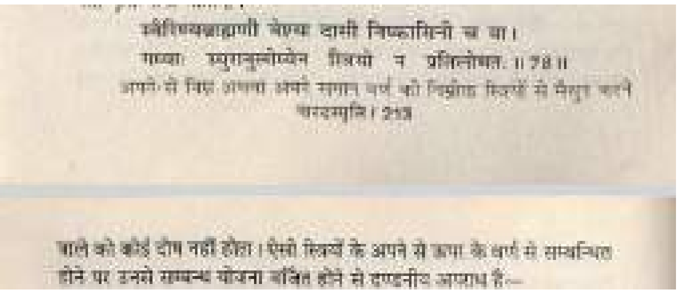
Narada Smriti 12.78

अपने से निम्न अथवा अपने समान वर्ण की निम्म्रोक्त स्त्रियों से मैथुन करने वाले को कोई दोष नहीं होता। ऐसी स्त्रियों के अपने से ऊपर के वर्ण से सम्बन्धित होने पर उनसे सम्बन्ध योजना वर्जित होने से दण्डनीय अपराध है-

"A man who engages in sexual intercourse with the following women, provided they are of lower or equal varna (caste/status) to his own, is not considered at fault. However, if these women belong to a higher varna than his, then sexual relations with them are forbidden and constitute a punishable offense."



Allegations-

📚Katyayana Smriti Verse 723📚
When a master has sexual intercourse with his female slave and the latter then gives birth to a son, the master looking to the seed (which was his own) should make the female slave free from slavery together with her progeny."

Refutation-

Here is Katayani Smriti Verse 723 . here it is said that when a Master has sexual intercourse with a female Dasi [Dasi means servant/Employee not slave] and the Dasi begets a hild from the master then he will have to free her from Servitude . Now whats wrong in this Narada Smriti 12.72 clearly states that the person will have to marry the woman he had sexual intercourse with .

Even Rama received such slaves as wedding gifts from King Janak when he married Sita. This is mentioned in Valmiki Ramayan, Baal Kaand, Sarg 74, shloka 5. The duty-conscious (maryada purushottam) Rama, of course, did not see anything inhuman or barbaric in accepting an enormous dowry which included slave girls.

5. Slaves Cannot Own Property

📚Manusmriti 8.416📚
The wive, the son and the slave,—these three are declared to have no property; whatever they acquire is the property of him to whom they belong.”

Refutation –

Acharya Medhatithi has explained this verse in his Manu Bhasya

If these persons have no property, how can they be entitled to the performance of any rites? So that it would not be right to assert that—‘if two sons should have kindled the consecrated fire, they should offer the oblations to those for whom the father offers them.’ Then again, it is necessary for the husband and wife to perform religious rites jointly, the husband being exhorted not to ignore the wife in matters relating to religious acts, pleasure and wealth? If however the wife has no property, what would be her ignoring in regard to wealth? Further, the Śūdra also has got to make certain offerings of cooked food; and this also would be incompatible with the fact of his having no property. There would be no such incompatibility if the injunction regarding these offerings were taken as referring to such Śūdras as are free (and hence possess property). But as a matter of fact, Dasas also have proprietary rights over their property, which is, on that account, called their own property. For these reasons it is wrong to say that ‘what they acquire is the property of him to whom they belong.’ This is exactly like the assertion ‘she whose son I am is not my mother.’ Further, if women had no proprietary right, there would be no sense in such śruti-declarations as —‘the wife should obey,’ ‘the wife should follow in the footsteps of her marrier’ and so forth.”

Our answer to the above is, as follows:—What is meant by the text is only that they are dependent, subservient . Others however hold that the ‘wife’ and the ‘son’ have been mentioned only by way of illustrating the status of the Dasa and the latter is mentioned for the purpose of declaring, in reference to him alone

Hindu scriptures on concubines of Kings,

Natya Shastra 34.26-29 I shall now describe the classes and function of women who live in the harem and have dealings with the king. They are the chief queen (maha-devi), other queens (devi), his high born wives (sramini), ordinary wives (sthayini), concubines (bhogini) craft women (silpakarini), acresses (natakiya), dancers (nartaki), maids in constant attenance (ancarika), maids of special work (paricarka), maids in constant movement (sancarika), maids for running errands (presana-carika), Mahattaris (matron), old dames (sthavira). Ayuktikas and (overseer), Pratiharis (usher), maidens (kumari).

Natya Shastra 34.40 Concubines (bhogini) to a king are known as well-behaved, gentle [in manners], not very hanghty, and they are indifferent [to rivals], modest, affectionate but not held in high honor.

Refutation-

Here is Natya Shastra Chapter 34 mool slokas 26-29 and slokas 40 . It nowhere talks about any concubinage or any such thing

There is a concept known as Chaturmāga, which refers to four distinct movement paths: āliptā (smeared or coated), aṅkita (marked or decorated), gomukha (cow-faced, possibly curved like a cow's snout), and vitastā (spanned or stretched).

Next is Dvilepa, which denotes a double application of paste or makeup, specifically characterized by strokes that move upward and to the left (vāmordhvaka).

The term Ṣaṭkaraṇa encompasses six dramatic forms or structural variations: rūpa (the form itself), kṛtapratikṛta (original and its imitation), pratibheda (variation or differentiation), rūpaśeṣa (residual form), modha (distortion or modification), and pratiśulka (counter-cost or reciprocal value).

Triyati refers to three types of movement flows: sama (uniform or equal), srotogatā (stream-like or flowing), and gopucchā (cow-tail shaped, tapering or trailing).

Trilaya is the combination of three tempos in performance: druta (fast), madhya (medium), and vilambita (slow), which together create rhythmic complexity.

Trigata describes three philosophical or conceptual alignments: tattva-anugata (aligned with truth or essence), amogha (unfailing or effective), and iti (thus, indicating conclusion or affirmation).

Tripracāra outlines three styles of movement: sama-pracāra (equal movement), viṣama-pracāra (unequal movement), and sama-viṣama-pracāra (a combination of both).

Trisaṁyoga refers to three types of syllabic combinations in rhythm: guru-saṁyoga (heavy-heavy), laghu-saṁyoga (light-light), and guru-laghu-saṁyoga (heavy-light).

Tripāṇika defines three hand positions: sama-pāṇi (equal-handed), avapāṇi (lowered hand), and uparipāṇi (raised hand).

Pañcapāṇi-prahata includes five types of hand strikes: sama-pāṇi (equal-handed), ardha-sama-pāṇi (half-equal), ardhārdha-sama-pāṇi (quarter-equal), pārśva-pāṇi (side-hand), and pradeśinī (index-hand or pointing gesture).

Triprahāra refers to three types of strikes or attacks: nigṛhīta (restrained), ardha-nigṛhīta (half-restrained), and mukta (released or free).

Trimārjana describes three cleansing or sweeping gestures: māyūrī (peacock-like), ardha-māyūrī (half-peacock), and kārmāravī (blacksmith-like, possibly forceful or rhythmic).

Finally, the passage concludes by stating that there are twenty types of ornamentation (alaṅkāra) and eighteen types of rhythmic patterns (jāti), which will be demonstrated through variations in footwork (padabheda).

Verse 47:
Hunting, gambling, daydreaming, slandering others, excessive association with women, intoxication, attachment to dancing, singing and playing musical instruments, and roaming about here and there aimlessly—these are described as the tenfold group that arises from desire (kāma).

Verse 48:
Tale-bearing (backbiting), reckless daring, treachery, jealousy, finding faults in others' virtues, the desire to seize another's wealth, speaking harsh words, and behaving with cruelty—these eight are said to arise from anger (krodha).

Verse 49:
All learned men consider greed (lobha) to be the root cause of both these groups. One should therefore strive with utmost effort to conquer greed, because these two groups spring forth from it.

Verse 50:
Among the group born of desire, drinking liquor, gambling, association with women, and hunting—this group of four should be regarded, in order, as especially more harmful.

Verse 52:
A self-controlled king should consider, in this group of seven (vices), that the earlier ones (arising from desire) have relatively more disastrous effects.

(1) Medhātithi’s Commentary:

> On drinking and gambling:
> Of the two (drinking and gambling), drinking is worse, because it causes loss of awareness, turns even a sane man insane, makes him walk naked, results in loss of learning and intelligence, loss of friends, association with bad company and alienation from good people, creates attachment to singing, music and other sensual pleasures, makes one reveal secrets, invites ridicule from others, makes one talk nonsense even if his nature was earlier serious—all due to the force of intoxication.

In gambling, however, a skilful gambler always wins, while an unskilled one is defeated; but gambling itself leads to loss of wealth even for the skilled, constant enmity, frequent quarrels, ordinary or slight gains but heavy losses, destruction of food and property, holding in the urges of urine and stool causing bodily weakness and diseases, and intense misery caused by worthless people.

Even when the mother dies, a gambler continues gambling; and even when respectable men rebuke him, he does not stop. Like heated iron balls, he swallows others' property and does not bow down. When hungry and in distress, he disregards food, shows indifference to necessities, and looks down even on virtuous and qualified people as if they were grass—these are the faults of gambling.

On addiction to women:

Between woman-addiction and hunting, woman-addiction is worse, because association with women leads to neglect of duties, delay in work, loss of dharma, and it also drags in the faults of drinking. It causes attachment to pleasure, falsehood, and related vices.

On hunting:
Hunting involves exercise, binding of bile and phlegm, reduction of fat, knowledge of moving and still targets, expertise in weapons, and contact with common people.

Thus, in the group of four vices arising from desire (kāma)—drinking, gambling, woman-addiction, and hunting—each preceding one is worse than the following.

In the anger-born group:
These also are connected with punishment. Both harsh speech and physical punishment have faults, but physical punishment is worse because it leads to death, injury, or permanent damage, which cannot be remedied.

Harsh words, on the other hand, though they burn like fire arising from anger, can be pacified by gifts, respect, or soothing words. Between harsh speech and economic damage, harsh speech is worse, because for spirited men, hurtful words disturb the mind, even more than the loss of wealth. Hence the saying:

"A tree pierced with an axe heals;
a wound pierced with an arrow heals;
but a heart wounded with words never recovers."

Therefore, it is concluded that in both groups (desire-born and anger-born), the earlier vice is worse than the later ones. (Verse 52)

(2) Sarvajña-Nārāyaṇa:

> In this set of seven vices, the two groups (desire-born and anger-born) overlap, because women, music, etc., give rise to further faults like tale-bearing.
>
> Of the desire-born vices, gambling is worse than women, because gambling destroys wealth and the possibility of enjoyment, whereas women are a cause of pleasure.
> Similarly, in the anger-born group, the same principle applies. (Verse 52)

(3) Kulaka:

> These seven vices (from drinking to economic harm) usually exist in every royal court. A king of noble character should know that in the series of vices, the earlier ones are more harmful than the later ones.
>
> Drinking destroys self-control and results in misconduct due to loss of sense; gambling causes wealth-loss but sometimes has accidental gain; woman-addiction is worse than gambling due to the resulting enmity; hunting, compared to woman-addiction, has some good aspects like exercise and health.
>
> Thus, in the desire-born group, each previous one is worse.
>
> Similarly, in the anger-born group of three, physical punishment is worse than harsh speech, because its effects like mutilation are irreparable. Harsh speech, though painful, can be soothed by conciliation.
>
> Economic harm (arthadoṣa), however, can be compensated by giving wealth. (Verse 52)

(4) Rāghavānanda:

> All these seven vices—beginning with drinking and ending with economic harm—cause misery both in this life and the next. Hence the gravity of these vices has been explained here. (Verse 52)

(5) Nandana:

> Here, a gradation between the two groups is expressed: each previous vice is heavier than the next. The word "pūrva" (earlier) means "relative to its own class" and not absolute, because it has already > been established that the desire-born vices are graver than the anger-born vices. (Verse 52)

(6) Rāmacandra:

> For a self-controlled king, among these seven vices, the earlier vices such as drinking are to be considered more grievous and painful. This applies because these vices spread everywhere in the kingdom. (Verse 52)

स्त्रियोंके प्रति आसक्ति, जुआ खेलना, शिकार खेलनेका शौक और मद्यपान – ये चार प्रकारके भोग कामनाजनित दुःख बताये गये हैं, जिनके कारण मनुष्य अपने धन-ऐश्वर्यसे भ्रष्ट हो जाता है। शास्त्रोंके निपुण विद्वान् सभी परिस्थितियोंमें इन चारोंको निन्दनीय मानते हैं; परंतु द्यूतक्रीडाको तो जूएके दोष जाननेवाले लोग विशेषरूपसे निन्दनीय समझते हैं ।। ७-८ ।।

“Attachment to women, gambling, fondness for hunting, and drinking Alchohol —these four kinds of indulgences, arising from desire, are said to be causes of suffering, due to which a man is ruined in terms of wealth and prosperity. Scholars well-versed in the scriptures consider all four of these to be blameworthy under any circumstance; however, those who understand the evils of gambling regard it as especially reprehensible. विद्वान् पुरुष शिकार करने, जूआ खेलने, स्त्रियोंके संसर्गमें रहने और मदिरा पीनेके प्रसंगोंकी बड़ी निन्दा करते हैं, परंतु इन पापकर्मोंमें अनेक शास्त्रोंके श्रवण और अध्ययनसे सम्पन्न पुरुष भी संलग्न देखे जाते हैं

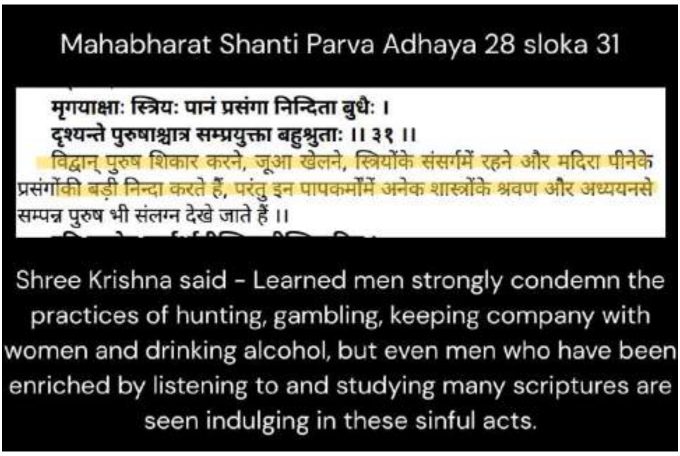
Shree Krishna said – Learned men strongly condemn the practices of hunting, gambling, keeping company with women and drinking alcohol, but even men who have been enriched by listening to and studying many scriptures are seen indulging in these sinful acts.



Mahābhārata, Ādi Parva, Chapter 113

Anyone who has sex with a man or woman other than own husband or wife, suffers the pāpa of aborting the embryo.

श्वेतकेतुने यह नियम बनाया, कि आजसे जो नारी पतिको तजकर व्यभिचार करेगी, उसको दुःखदायी भ्रूणहत्याका पाप लगेगा ।। १७

तथा इस भूमण्डलमें जो पुरुष कुमारी ब्रह्मचारिणी तथा पतिव्रता प्यारी स्त्रीको तजकर परायी नारीसे मिलेगा उसके भी वैसा ही पाप लगेगा ।। १८ ।।

"O noble one! We have heard that from that time onward, this rule was firmly established in human society;
it does not apply to other living beings."

Śvetaketu established this rule:
From today, any woman who abandons her husband and commits adultery will incur the grievous sin equivalent to the destruction of a fetus (embryo)."

And likewise, in this world, any man who, forsaking a maiden observing brahmacharya (celibacy) or a faithful, devoted wife, engages with another's wife, will incur the same sin."

If he does not keep his senses under control, the great faults arising from them will surely bring him down.

Agni Purana Adhaya 238 Slokas 3-7 hindi translation by Choukhamba Publications – Description of Ethics by Bhagwan Shree Rama for Kings and Common Man

शास्त्रज्ञान, आठ गुणों से युक्त बुद्धि, धृति (उद्वेग का अभाव), दक्षता (आलस्य का अभाव), प्रगल्भता (सभा में बोलने या कार्य करने में भय अथवा संकोच का न होना), धारणशीलता (जानी सुनी बात को भूलने न देना), उत्साह (शौर्यादि गुण), प्रवचन-शक्ति, दृढ़ता (आपत्तिकाल में क्लेश सहन करने की क्षमता), प्रभाव (प्रभु-शक्ति), शुचिता (विविध उपायों द्वारा परीक्षा लेने से सिद्ध हुई आचार-विचार की शुद्धि), मैत्री (दूसरों को अपने प्रति आकृष्ट कर लेने का गुण), त्याग (सत्पात्र को दान देना), सत्य (प्रतिज्ञापालन), कृतज्ञता (उपकार को न भूलना), कुल (कुलीनता), शील (अच्छा स्वभाव) और दम (इन्द्रियनिग्रह तथा क्लेशसहन की क्षमता) - ये सम्पत्ति के हेतुभूत गुण हैं।।४-५।। ज्ञानमय अङ्कुश से वश में करना चाहिये। काम, क्रोध, लोभ, हर्ष, मान और मद-ये 'षड्वर्ग' कहे गये हैं। राजा इनका सर्वथा त्याग कर देना चाहिये। इन सभी का त्याग हो जाने पर वह सुखी होता है।।६-७।।
राजा को विनय-गुण से सम्पन्न हो आन्वीक्षिकी (आत्मविद्या एवं तर्कविद्या), वेदत्रयी वार्ता (कृषि, वाणिज्य और पशुपालन) तथा दण्डनीति-इन चार विद्याओं का उनके विद्वानों तथा उन विद्याओं के अनुसार अनुष्ठान करने वाले कर्मठ पुरुषों के साथ बैठकर चिन्तन करना चाहिये। (जिससे लोक में उनका सम्यक् प्रचार और प्रसार हो)। 'आन्वीक्षिकी' से आत्मज्ञान एवं वस्तु के यथार्थ स्वभाव का बोध होता है। धर्म और अधर्म का ज्ञान 'वेदत्रयी' पर अवलम्बित है, अर्थ और अनर्थ 'वाती' के सम्यक् उपयोग पर निर्भर हैं तथा न्याय और अन्याय 'दण्डनीति' के समुचित प्रयोग और अप्रयोग पर आधारित हैं।।

Scriptural knowledge; intelligence endowed with eight qualities; fortitude (absence of agitation); skill (absence of laziness); boldness (absence of fear or hesitation in speaking or acting in an assembly); retentiveness (not forgetting what has been heard or learned); enthusiasm (qualities like valor); eloquence (ability to expound and speak well); firmness (capacity to endure hardships in times of calamity); influence (commanding authority); purity (purity of conduct and thought, proven through various tests); friendliness (the quality of drawing others toward oneself); generosity (giving charity to a worthy recipient); truthfulness (keeping one's word); gratitude (never forgetting a favor); noble lineage; good character; and self-control (restraint of the senses and endurance of hardship) – these are the virtues that serve as the causes of prosperity. (4–5)

One should control others with the goad of knowledge. Lust (kāma), anger (krodha), greed (lobha), delight (harṣa), pride (māna), and arrogance (mada) – these are called the sixfold enemies (ṣaḍ-varga). A king should completely renounce them. When all these are abandoned, he becomes happy. (6–7)

A king, endowed with the virtue of humility, should deliberate upon the four sciences – Ānvīkṣikī (the science of the self and logic), the triple Veda (Vedic knowledge), Vārttā (agriculture, commerce, and cattle-rearing), and Daṇḍanīti (science of governance and law enforcement) – together with learned scholars and capable men who practice these sciences according to their respective fields (so that they are properly propagated and spread among the people).

From Ānvīkṣikī comes knowledge of the self and understanding of the true nature of things. Knowledge of righteousness (dharma) and unrighteousness (adharma) rests upon the triple Veda. Wealth and misfortune depend upon the proper use of Vārttā. Justice and injustice are based upon the proper or improper application of Daṇḍanīti. (8–9)

Apastamba (1.20.10-13). Trade is not lawful for a Brāhmaṇa;- in times of distress he may trade in lawful merchandise, avoiding the following, that are forbidden-men, condiments and liquids, colours, perfumes, food, skins, heifers, glueing substances, water, young corn-stalks, substances from which spirituous liquor is extracted, red and black pepper, corn, flesh, arms, and the hope of reward for meritorious deeds. Among the various kinds of grains, he shall specially not sell sesamum or rice.

Gautama (7.8-15).-'Goods not to be sold by the Brahmaṇa are-perfumes, flavouring substances, prepared food, sesamum, hempen and linen cloth, skins, garments dyed red or washed, milk and preparations of it, roots, fruits, flowers, medicines, honey, flesh, grass, water, poisons, animals for slaughter; nor under any circumstances, human beings, heifers, female calves, cows big with young. Some declare that traffic in land, rice, barley, goats, sheep, horses, hulls, milch cows and draught oxen is also forbidden

Yājñavalkya (3.6-38).-'Fruits, stones, linen, Soma, human beings, cakes, plants, sesamum, rice, liquids, curds, milk, clarified butter, water, arms, wine, wax, honey, lac, grass, clay, skins, flowers, blankets, hairs, Takra, poisons, land, silken cloth, indigo, salt, one-hoofed animals, lead, vegetable, pepper, medicines, oil-cake, animals, perfumes, these the Brahmaṇa should never sell, even when living by the occupations of the Vaiśya. But sesamum may be sold for religious purposes, in exchange of paddy.'

He shall avoid all savoury substances as also cooked food and sesamum, stores, salt, animals and human beings. —(86)

Even Traditional Commentators on Manu Smriti 10.86 said similar thing that selling of Human beings is not allowed and is strictly prohibited

1) Medhātithi's Commentary:

> "Sweetness and other six tastes (madhura-ādi ṣaḍ-rasāḥ) are being referred to. The primary substances > (dravyāṇi) that strongly exhibit these tastes—such as jaggery (guḍa), pomegranate (dāḍima), kishat (a type of sweet), bitter substances (tikta), etc.—are prohibited (pratiṣidhyante). This is because tastes (rasāḥ) do not exist in isolation; even though the word 'rasa' (taste) does not independently refer to a substance like the word 'white' (śukla) does, it still implies the substance by association (sāmānādhikaraṇya), similar to the expression 'sound in the Ganges' (gaṅgāyāṃ ghoṣaḥ), which refers to sound occurring in the Ganges region."

> "Thus, these are to be avoided in sale: cooked food (kṛtānna), prepared rice (siddham anna), modana (a type of rice preparation), raw rice (taṇḍula), etc. Also, sesame seeds (tilāḥ) and food prepared from sesame should not be sold. However, the prohibition applies when they are sold together (sahaprayuktayoḥ), not individually. That is, the individual sale of either sesame or its preparations may be permitted."

> "'Aśmānaḥ' refers to all types of stones (pāṣāṇa). Salt, even if in rock form (apāṣāṇarūpam), like rock salt (saindhava), is included under the word 'stone' here. In the context of taste, the sale of salt is being definitively prohibited. Therefore, even substances having sweet or other tastes (madhura-ādīnāṃ) may only be sold incidentally (pākṣika), not as primary items."

"Animals (paśavaḥ), both domesticated (grāmya) and wild (āraṇya), and even human beings (mānuṣāḥ), are included in the prohibition."

(२) सर्वज्ञनारायणः । तदेवाह सर्वानिति । रसान् पत्त्रकाष्ठादिनिर्यासान् अपोहेत विक्रये त्यजेत्, न विक्रीणीतेत्यर्थः । अश्मनः उपलान् । पशव श्छागाः । ये च मानुषा-स्तानिति पूरणीयम् ।। ८६ ।।

"Thus he says 'all' to indicate a complete prohibition. The term 'rasān' refers to plant exudations such as from leaves, wood, etc.—these should not be sold (apohyet = should be avoided in sale). 'Aśmān' refers to stones or pebbles. 'Paśavaḥ' here includes goats (chāgāḥ). The phrase 'and humans' (mānuṣāḥ) is to be understood as completing the list."

(३) कुल्लूकः। तानि वर्जनीयान्याह सर्वानिति । सिद्धार्थतिलपाषाणलवणपशुमनुष्यान्न विक्रीणीत । रसत्वेनैव लवणरय निषेधसिंद्धौं विशेषेण निषेधो दोषगौरवज्ञापनार्थः । तच्च प्रायश्चित्तगौरवार्थमेवमन्यस्यापि पृथङ्निषेधो व्याख्येयः ।। ८६ ।।

All those actions which are prohibited and not encouraged (anacodyamānān adharmaḥ) are to be avoided. That's what is implied by the use of 'sarvān' (all). This includes cooked food made from sesame, stones, salt, animals, and humans —they are not to be sold. In the context of taste, salt is pecifically prohibited, emphasizing the gravity of the fault

(doṣa-gaurava). The specific prohibition also indicates the need for serious expiation (prāyaścitta), and similar prohibitions should be interpreted in the same manner for other items."

(८) गोविन्दराजः। तानि वर्जनीयान्याहुः सर्वानिति । सर्वान् खण्डादीन् रसांस्तथा सिद्धान्नतिलपाषाणपशुलवणमनुष्यान् न विक्रीणीत । लवणस्य रसशब्देनैव ग्रहणसिद्धौ पृथग्वचनं दोषविशेषज्ञापनार्थम् । एतेनान्यस्यापि पृथगाम्नातव्याख्यातम् ।। ८६ ।।

"They say these are to be renounced entirely. One should not trade any of the six rasas, cooked food, sesame, stones, animals, salt, or humans. The fact that salt is mentioned separately despite already being covered under 'rasa' highlights a special fault or defect associated with salt. Similarly, other specific terms mentioned separately despite being implied serve to draw special attention to their prohibition."

Megasthenes who is known to have visited India as early as 302 BCE-208 BCE wrote that in Hindu society the law of the land ordains that under no circumstances no human can be treated as a slave but everyone enjoyed equal rights and freedom.

Of several remarkable customs existing among the Indians, there is one prescribed by their ancient philosophers which one may regard as truly admirable: for the law ordains that no one among them shall, under any cir-cumstances, be a slave, but that, enjoying free-dom, they shall respect the equal right to it which all possess

der. [39] Of several remarkable customs existing among the Indians, there is one prescribed by their ancient philosophers which one may regard as truly admirable: for the law ordains that no one among them shall, under any circumstances, be a slave, but that, enjoying freedom, they shall respect the equal right to it which all possess: for those, they thought, who have learned neither to domineer over nor to cringe to others will attain the life best adapted for all vicissitudes of lot: for it is but fair and reasonable to institute laws which bind all equally, but allow property to be unevenly distributed.

186 years BEFORE Lincoln abolished slavery 130 years BEFORE British abolished slavery Hindu Hridaya Samrata Chatrapati Shivaji Maharaj abolished slavery throughout his kingdom. He was the first king to impose a total ban on slavery which was widely practiced during Muslim rule.

nurturing matrix of illusion, point a path to transcendence."[91]

A final example of the intimate connection of Shivaji's ideologies to his practices, or of the nigh impossibility to separate the two, is the following passage from his qaul granted to VOC ambassador Herbert de Jager in 1677. In it Shivaji puts his proscription of the slave trade discussed above in the context of a radical (and ideological) break with the past:

> In the days of the Moorish government it was allowed for you to buy male slaves and female slaves here [the Karnatak], and to transport the same, without anyone preventing that. But now you may not, as long as I am master of these lands, buy male or female slaves, nor transport them. And in case you were to do the same, and would want to bring [slaves] aboard, my men will oppose that and prevent it in all ways and also not allow that they be brought back in your house; this you must as such observe and comply with.[92]

Even if Shivaji's measure was motivated, as Herbert de Jager suggests, by a concern about revenues (which would be less if there were fewer inhabitants) rather than a concern for the welfare of the potential slaves, it is quite impossible to distinguish in this passage the practical measure from the patriotic appeal conveyed by it, directed as it is against Muslim rulers allowing the slave trade and Europeans carrying slaves off to foreign parts, unless one would want to argue that Shivaji was not planning to enforce the measure despite his assurance that his men would do so "in all ways."

But it is by no means my intention to argue that in the late

With this the allegations of Slavery in Sanatan Dharma stands debunked completely .

Response to Vedkabhed and Hinduscript . Refutation of Bestiality in Hinduism

Written by Rohan Saini in Uncategorized

This entire article is a response and rebuttal to the blogs called VedKaBhed and Hinduscript regarding their claims of "Bestiality in Hinduism".

First we will see the Jurisdictions and opinions of Shastras like Mahabharat , Puranas , Vedas etc on Crimes like Bestiality(having Sexual intercourse with Animals)

Mahabharat 13.145.52 –

जो दुराचारी, दुर्बुद्धि एवं मूढ़ मनुष्य पशु आदिकी योनिमें मैथुन करते हैं, वे पुरुषोंमें नपुंसक होते हैं ।।

Shri Maheshwar Shiva said – Those Adulterous and wicked people who indulge in sexual activities with animals and other inappropriate beings become Napunsak among men."

Mahabharta Vana Parva Adhaya 110 slokas 27-28 –

युधिष्ठिरने पूछा- भगवन्! कश्यपनन्दन विभाण्डकके पुत्र ऋष्यशृंग मृगीके पेटसे कैसे उत्पन्न हुए? मनुष्यका पशुयोनिसे संसर्ग करना तो शास्त्र और व्यवहार दोनों ही दृष्टियोंसे विरुद्ध है। ऐसे विरुद्ध योनि-संसर्गसे उत्पन्न हुआ बालक तपस्वी कैसे हो सका? उस बुद्धिमान् बालकके

भयसे बल और वृत्रासुरका विनाश करनेवाले देवराज इन्द्रने अनावृष्टिके समय वर्षा कैसे की? ।। २७-२८ ।।

Yudhisthira asked: Lord! How did Rishyasringa, the son of Kashyapa-nandan Vibhandaka, emerge from the belly of a deer? It is contradictory to both scripture and behavior for man to have sexual intercourse with Animals How could a child born of such an opposite vaginal intercourse become an ascetic?

In case anyone doubts later on Ved Vyas clarifies this doubt that Rishyasringa was born when a magical doe (Who was a cursed Apsara) accidentally drank the dropped Tejas of Rishi Vibhandaka and got pregnant because of it and gave birth to Rishyasringa

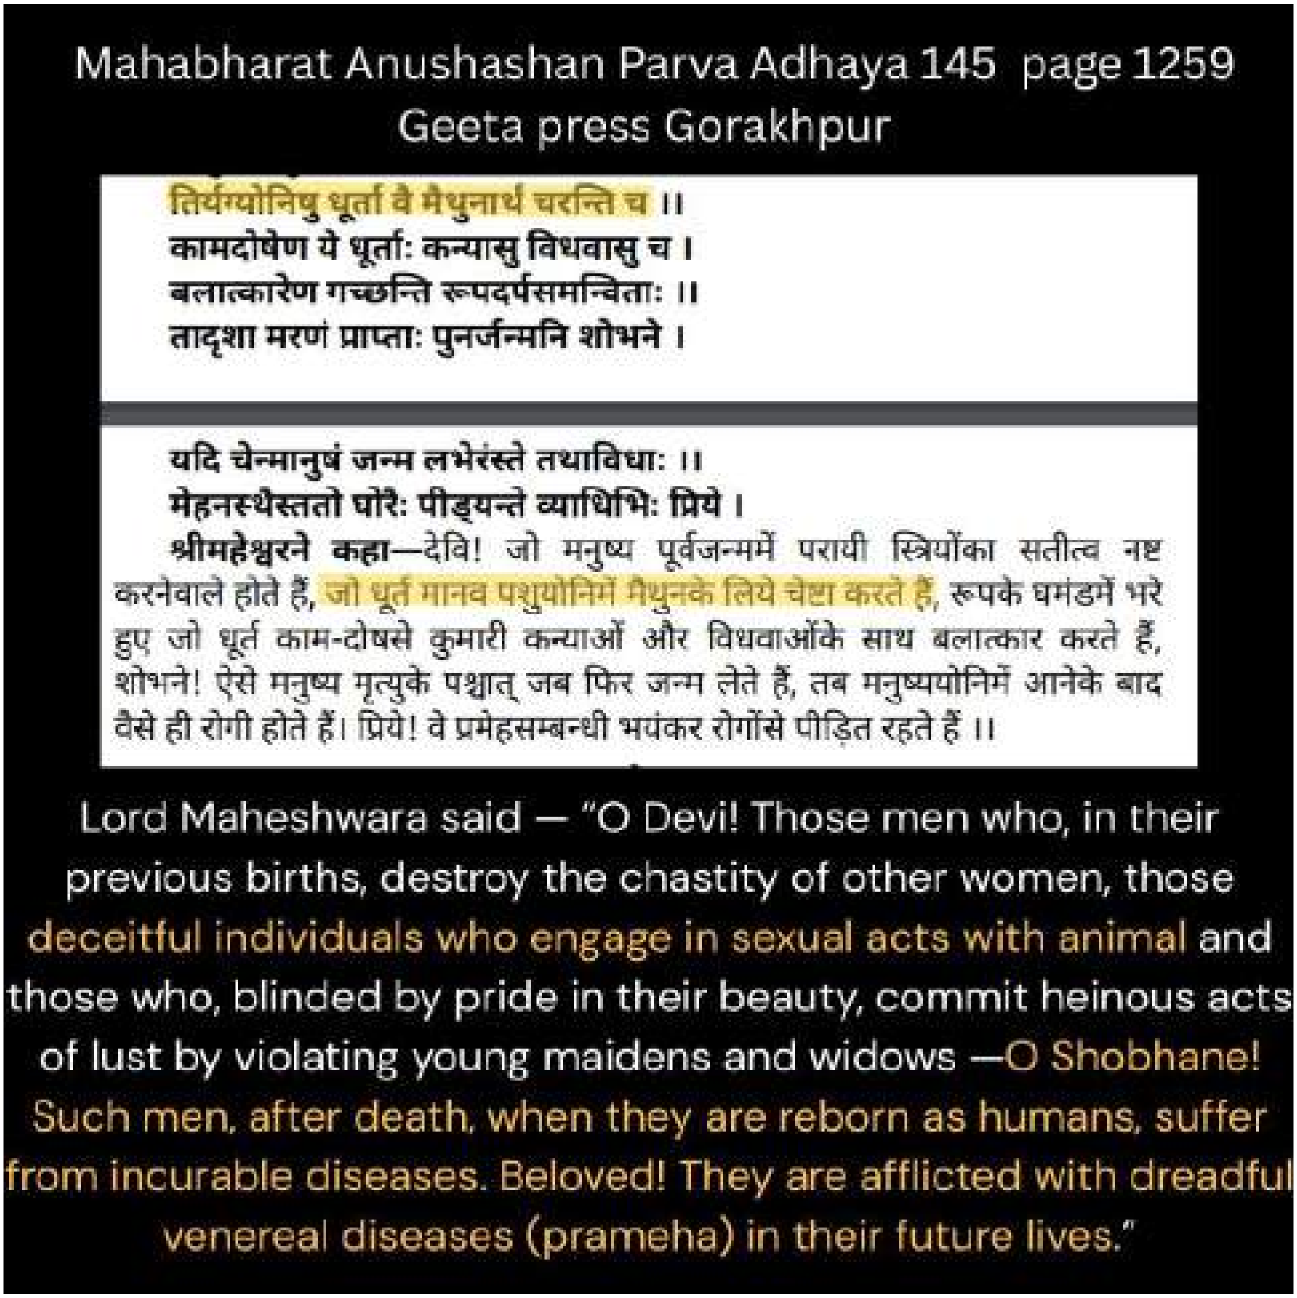
श्रीमहेश्वरने कहा- देवि ! जो मनुष्य पूर्वजन्ममें परायी स्त्रियोंका सतीत्व नष्ट करनेवाले होते हैं, जो धूर्त मानव पशुयोनिमें मैथुनके लिये चेष्टा करते हैं, रूपके घमंडमें भरे हुए जो धूर्त काम-दोषसे कुमारी कन्याओं और विधवाओंके साथ बलात्कार करते हैं, शोभने ! ऐसे मनुष्य मृत्युके पश्चात् जब फिर जन्म लेते हैं, तब मनुष्ययोनिमें आनेके बाद वैसे ही रोगी होते हैं। प्रिये! वे प्रमेहसम्बन्धी भयंकर रोगोंसे पीड़ित रहते हैं ।।

Lord Maheshwara said — “O Devi! Those men who, in their previous births, destroy the chastity of other women, those deceitful individuals who engage in sexual acts with animal and those who, blinded by pride in their beauty, commit heinous acts of lust by violating young maidens and widows —O Shobhane! Such men, after death, when they are reborn as humans, suffer from incurable diseases. Beloved! They are afflicted with dreadful venereal diseases (prameha) in their future lives.”



Vedas state that Punishment for crimes like Bestiality is death Sentence
Vedas tell to punish Pisachas

Atharva Veda 4/36/6

मैं मंत्रों के सामर्थ्य से पिशाचों को उसी प्रकार संताप देता हूं, जिस प्रकार बाघ गायों के स्वामियों को दुःखी करता है. सिंह को देख कर जिस प्रकार कुत्ता भय से छिप जाता है, उसी प्रकार मेरे मंत्रों के प्रभाव से वे अधोगति पाते हैं. (६)

With the power of mantras, I torment the Pisachas in the same way as a tiger torments the owners of cows. Just as a dog hides in fear after seeing a lion, in the same way they suffer degradation due to the influence of my mantras.

Atharva Veda 4/37/10 tells to punish the pisach with death and kill the Pisach

हे अजशृंगी जड़ी! शैवाल खाने वाले, सभी को शोक पहुंचाने वाले उन गंधर्वों को जलों में प्रकाशित करो, जो युद्ध से संबंधित हैं. तुम सभी पिशाचों को मारो तथा पराजित करो. (१०)

O herb, may you illumine all of my blood-suckers, that feed on avaka and shine in the waters. May you defeat and kill all Pisachas

Atharva Veda 5/29/14 prays to Agni to destroy Pisachas –

हे अग्नि ! तुम्हारी ये समिधाएं पिशाचों को नष्ट करने वाली हैं. हे जातवेद! इन समिधाओं को प्राप्त कर के तुम प्रसन्न बनो. (१४)

O Agni may you destroy the pisachas . Hey Jatveda! May you become happy after attaining these samidhas

Brihannardiyapuranam, Purvabhaga, Chapter 15 says Oral/anal sex (with wife), having sexual intercourse with Animals and releasing semen in Animals is punished in Yamaloka by having to drink semen for '000s of years –

Brihannardiyapuranam, Purvabhaga, Chapter 15 slokas 93-94 –

जो मनुष्य अयोनि, वियोनि और पशुयोनि में वीर्य त्याग करता है। वह हापापो उसी वीर्य को पीता है। तदन्तर वसा कूप नरक में जाकर देवताओं के वर्ष के प्रमाण से सात वर्ष तक हता है। फिर वीर्यभोजो मनुष्य होकर सब लोकों में निन्दित होता है।

जो महापापी अयोनि (योनिसे भिन्न स्थान), वियोनि (विजातीय योनि) और पशुयोनिमें वीर्यत्याग करता है, वह यमलोकमें वीर्य ही भोजनके लिये पाता है। तत्पश्चात् चर्बीसे भरे हुए कुएँमें डाला जाकर वहाँ सात दिव्य वर्षोंतक केवल वीर्य भोजन करके रहता है। उसके बाद मनुष्य होकर सम्पूर्ण लोकोंमें निन्दाका पात्र बनता है। राजन् !

The great sinner who releases semen in the ayoni (place different from the vagina), the viyoni and the animal vagina, finds only semen for food in Yamaloka. Then he is thrown into a well filled with fat and remains there for seven divine years eating only semen. After that, he becomes a human being and becomes the object of condemnation in all the worlds 93b-94a. The great sinner who discharges semen in non-vagins (ayonis) as in masturbation), in those who are destitute of vulva (Viyonis), and uterus of animals (Paśu-yonis) shall fall into the hell Reto-bhojana (where one has to subsist on semen).

94b-95a. He then falls into Vasākūpa (a deep and narrow well of fat). There he stays for seven divine years. That man has semen for his diet. He becomes the most despicable man in the world when reborn.

95b-96a. The man who washes his teeth with a twig of a tree as the tooth brush, O king, on the day of fast (like Ekādaśī) falls into the terrible hell called Vyāghra-Pakṣa (and remains there) for a period of four yugas.

96b-97. The person who abandons his religious duties is called a heretic by learned men. He and a person who associates with him are great sinners. They fall into

Srimad Bhagavatam 5.26.21 says that those who engage in sexual intercourse with Sub Human beings (like Animals) etc are taken to hell and punished severely with horns

The person who commits adultery with animals etc. in this world, after death, the messengers of Yama throw him into the Vajrakantakashalmali hell and after making him climb the Semra tree which has thorns as hard as thunderbolts, pull him down again.

When men have no women to sleep with, they satisfy themselves with other kinds of vulvas, or with dolls, or else masturbate.” ”When a man does not find any woman to his taste, how does he satisfy himself? With men, or with the vaginas of other species, mares, she-goats, bitches, sheep, any animal of female gender, as he would, Otherwise, he manages by simply "seizing the lion" (simhakranta). meaning masturbation. In this connection, it is said: In an upright position, seizing the lion means grasping one's sex with one's hand and thus scattering one's orgasm. Since spilling one's seed anywhere is a serious offense, a purification rite should then be performed."

Refutation-

The Kamasutra is not a dharmic text. Its primary focus is on sexual activity, disregarding the principles of Dharma. According to the Shastras, sexual intercourse is prescribed not for mere pleasure or recreation, but solely for the purpose of procreation. In contrast, texts like the Kamasutra reduce sexual activity to acts of lust and indulgence, promoting pleasure as an end in itself rather than fulfilling dharmic duties.

Srimad Bhagvatam 11.5.13

The smelling of wine (in the Sautrāmani sacrifice) is laid down as its intake (and no drinking of liquor is permitted); a beast is to be (symbolically) offered to the deities (by touching it) in sacrifices, but no killing for meat-eating is allowed; simi-larly, sexual intercourse (with one's wife) is to be indulged in for procreation but not for sexual enjoyment. But people do not understand this pure course of their own dharma.

In the heavenly world be you two completely covered. Queen says – I will urge on the impregnator, you will urge on the impregnator; let the two of us stretch out our four legs. Adhvaryu says – Let the stallion, semen-producer, produce semen [insert semen]. Bring the penis into the two thighs, drive along the erect and unctuous one which is women's living enjoyment, which is their hole-runner cleaner, women's dear secret (pleasure) which has hit the sardigrdi (clitoris?) in their black (haired) mark... This little bird which creeps around saying 'ahalam' knocks the penis into the slit; the vulva devours it."

The Adhvaryu escorts the senior queen fully decorated, making amends, being reproached (and addresses the three queens) "O Amba, O Ambali O Ambika* (The senior queen says) "No person leads me. The poor horse is sleeping." Having lain down by the side of the horse towards the north, she draws a piece of cloth over her head. The Adhvaryu covers both of them with the piece of linen with the formula, "O fair one, clad in a fair garment, do you two be covered together in the heaven. "The senior queen lays the horse's penis on her lap with the formula, "I have clasped the impregnatory; do thou clasp me for impregnation. Let us together spread out our four legs." The Adhvaryu follows her with the formulas, "Let the impregnator out of you deposit the seed. O horse, do thou press thy region of male organ upon the thighs (of the queen) and insert into the queen's genitals thy penis which is the means of enjoyment of women, which dashes into their womb, and which, when entered into the genitals pleases them, and which attacks the central part of genitals within the black spot." The senior queen censures the horse." and others

📚Sankhayana Srauta Sutra 16.3.33-36📚
When the horse has been quitened (slaughtered) they cause the first consort of the king to lie down near it. They cover them both (horse and consort) with an upper-garment. To these two the sacrificer addresses the obscene (verse). 'Put the penis into (the space between the) thighs, bring the sleek one down, which is the life and delight of women.''

📚Varaha Srauta Sutra 3.4.4.15📚
When their two generative organs have been put together."

📚Katyayana Srauta Sutra 20.6.16📚
(The Mahisi) takes the penis of the horse in her lap."

📚Shatapatha Brahmana 13.5.2.1-10📚
A cloth, an upper cloth, and gold is what they spread out for the horse, and on that they 'quiet' him. When the sacrificial animals have been 'quieted', the (king's) wives come up with water for washing the feet — four wives, and a maiden as the fifth, and four hundred women attendants. When the water for washing the feet is ready, they make the chief queen (Mahishi) lie down next to the horse, and they cover the two of them up with the upper cloth as they say the verse, 'Let the two of us cover ourselves in the world of heaven', for the world of heaven is where they 'quiet' the sacrificial animal. Then they draw out the penis of the horse and place it in the vagina of the chief queen, while she says, 'May the vigorous virile male, the layer of seed, lay the seed'; this she says for sexual intercourse. While they are lying there, the sacrificer insults the horse by saying, 'Lift up her thighs and put it in her rectum.' No one insults (the sacrificer) back, lest there should be someone to act as a rival against the sacrificer. The officiant (Adhvaryu) then insults the maiden: 'Hey, maiden, hey, maiden, the little female bird ...' and she insults him back: 'Hey, officiant, hey, officiant, that little bird....' And then the overseer (Brahman) insults the chief queen: 'Hey, chief queen, hey, chief queen, your mother and father climb to the top of a tree....' She has as her attendants a hundred daughters of kings; they insult the overseer in return: 'Hey, overseer, hey, overseer, your mother and your father play in the top of a tree....' Then the cantor (Udgatri) insults the king's favorite wife: ‘Hey, favorite, hey, favorite wife, raise her up erect….’ She has as her attendants a hundred royal women; they insult the cantor in return: ‘Hey, cantor, hey, cantor, raise him up erect….’ Then the invoker (Hotri) insults the rejected wife: ‘Hey, rejected wife, hey, rejected wife, when inside her tight crack….’ She has as her attendants a hundred daughters of bards and village headmen; they insult the invoker in return: ‘Hey, invoker, hey, invoker, when the gods see that miserable penis….’ Then the carver (Kshatri) insults the fourth wife: ‘Hey, fourth wife, hey, fourth wife, when the deer eats the barley, (the farmer) does not hope to nourish the animal….’ She has as her attendants a hundred daughters of carvers and charioteers; they insult the carver in return: ‘Hey, carver, hey, carver, when the deer eats the barley, (the farmer) does not hope to nourish the animal….’ These insulting speeches are for all kinds of attainment, for through the horse sacrifice all desires are achieved. Thinking, ‘With all kinds of speech we will achieve all kinds of desires’, they make the chief queen get up. Then the women walk back the way they came, and the others utter at the end a sweet-smelling verse, the verse that begins, ‘I praise Dadhikravan.’ For the life-span and the gods go out of those who speak impure speech in the sacrifice. Thus they purify their speech to keep the gods from going out of the sacrifice.”

(६) इन आक्षेप्ताओंको जो कि यह (रानीसे घोड़ेके मैथुनका) भ्रम हुआ है, उसका कारण यह है कि वे

लोग उस समय घोड़ेको जीवित समझते हैं, यद्यपि यह घोड़ेके जीवनमें भी उपपन्न नहीं हो सकता। क्योंकि घोड़ेका मानुषीसे समागम तथा घोड़ेके वीर्यसे मानुषीमें गर्भ उपपन्न नहीं। अतः आक्षेप्ताओंका यह महामोह है। उस समय अश्वमेधका अश्व संज्ञप्त (मृतक) है; उसके अङ्ग भी पृथक्पृथक् संशोधित होकर पड़े होते हैं। हम पहले शतपथका पाठ लिख चुके हैं कि- 'संज्ञप्तेषु पशुषु'। 'संज्ञप्त' का अर्थ 'मृतक' है। देखो – वेदाङ्ग-व्याकरण, श्रीपाणिनिमुनिका धातुपाठ। उसमें 'मारणतोषणनिशामनेषु ज्ञा' (८११) यहां मित्संज्ञक धातुओंमें 'ज्ञा' धातुका अर्थ 'मारना' सबसे पूर्व लिखा है। 'वैयाकरणसिद्धान्तकौमुदी' में भी यही है। इतना अधिक लिखा है- 'ज्ञप मिच्च' इति चुरादौ। ज्ञापनं मारणादिकं च तस्यार्थः'। यहां 'तत्त्वबोधिनी' में लिखा है- 'पशुं संज्ञपयति-मारयति इत्यर्थः'। 'बालमनोरमा' में भी यही लिखा है- 'पशुं संज्ञपयति-अक्षतं मारयतीत्यर्थः। यही स्वा०द०-संगृहीत 'धातुपाठ' में लिखा है- 'मारणतोषण-निशामनेषु ज्ञा' (पृ० १२) यहां मित्संज्ञक 'ज्ञा

(७) जब घोड़ेके पास महिषीको रखा जाता है; उस समय अश्व मृतक होता है- इस विषयकी ब्राह्मणभागकी साक्षी हम दे चुके। अब इसमें इतिहासकी साक्षी भी पाठकगण देखें-
(क) वाल्मीकि रामायणमें पुत्रेष्टियज्ञ करनेके लिए पूर्वजन्मकृत, कार्य-प्रतिबन्धक पापके क्षयार्थ पहले अश्वमेध यज्ञ किया गया था। उस समयका वहां वर्णन है- 'कौसल्या तं इयं तत्र परिचर्य (परिक्रम्य) समन्ततः। कृपाणैर्विशशासैनं त्रिभिः परमया मुदा' (१।१४।३३) यहां अश्वकी 'पत्न्यः एनं त्रिः परियन्ति' (शत० १३।२।८।४) इस कथनसे परिक्रमा और (शत० १३।२।८।२ के अनुसार) कौशल्या-द्वारा अश्वका विशसन (हनन) कहा है। फिर आगे लिखा है-'पतत्रिणा तदा सार्धं सुस्थितेन च चेतसा। अवसद् रजनीमेकां कौसल्या धर्मकाम्यया' (१४।३४) यहां पर मृतक घोड़ेके पास रहना धर्मेच्छासे कहा है, सम्भोगेच्छासे नहीं।
(ख) इसी प्रकरणके तैत्तिरीयब्राह्मणके भाष्य में श्रीभट्टभास्करने भी यही भाष्य किया है- 'तप एव सन्तापहेतुत्वात् अस्या (महिष्या

(३।६।६।२६) यहां भी अश्वकी मृतकता स्पष्ट है। (ग) अब इसकी अन्य साक्षी महाभारतमें देखें- 'ततः संज्ञप्य तुरगं विधिवद् याजकस्तदा। उपासंवेशयन् राजन्! ततस्तां द्रुपदात्मजाम्' (आश्व-मेधिकपर्व ८६१२) यहां भी मृतक घोड़ेके साथ द्रौपदीको बैठाया गया है। जब अश्व मृतक है; तब यहां आक्षेप्ताओंके आक्षेप व्यर्थ हैं। जैसे कि 'वेदोंका सार्वभौम संदेश' (पृ० ३६) में उसके व्याख्याताका यह कहना कि- महीधरके अपने-वेदभाष्यमें किये अर्थ स्पष्टतया अश्लील ग्राम्यधर्म (संभोगादि) परक हैं; यह निष्पक्ष विद्वानोंको लज्जाके साथ स्वीकार करना पड़ेगा' इत्यादि निराकृत हो गया। यहां बतलाया जा चुका है कि अश्व मृतक है, और उसे गणपतिदेव के रूपमें आहूत किया गया है, जैसा कि हम आरम्भिक-मयूखमें विस्तारसे बता चुके हैं। 'हवामहे' ऐसा आह्वान भी वैदिक-शैलीसे चेतन-देवताका होता है; उसमें प्राकृत अश्व, उसमें भी मृतकका आह्वान नहीं हुआ करता। सो 'शिश्न'

वा 'रेत' एवं वीर्य उसी गणपतिदेवका इष्ट है, मृतक अश्वका नहीं। इस बात पर न विचारनेसे ही प्रतिपक्षी भ्रमकूपमें गिरे हुए हैं। यदि यहां प्रतिपक्षी भी प्राकृत अश्वका वर्णन न समझकर 'गणपति' देवका वर्णन समझ लें, क्योंकि 'गणानां त्वा' मन्त्रका देवता आर्यसमाज

की छपाई हुई यजुर्वेदकी संहितानुसार भी 'गणपति' है; तब उन्हें यह भ्रम वा दूसरोंपर आक्षेप करनेका अवसर ही न रहे। जब जीवित-अश्वसे भी यह प्रार्थना सङ्गत नहीं हो सकती, जीवित-अश्व भी न निधिपति, न प्रियपति, और न गणपति बन सकता है, न उसका आह्वान ही उपपन्न हो सकता है; न उसके वीर्यका मानुषीमें गर्भकरनेसे कोई सम्बन्ध है, न अश्वका मानुषीसे समागममें कोई सम्बन्ध है; तब मृतक घोड़ेसे यह प्रार्थना सङ्गत कैसे हो सकती है ? तब वादियोंकी यह अपने नियोग आदिकी कल्पनासे विकृत हुए मस्तिष्ककी उपज है, प्राचीन ग्रन्थोंसे इसका कोई भी सम्बन्ध नहीं। अतः वहां अश्वरूपमें प्रजापति-गणपतिकी ही प्रार्थना है, जैसे कि शतपथमें कहा है-'प्राजापत्यो वै अश्वः' (शतपथ० १३।३।३।४) 'प्रजापतिर्देवता अस्य – इति प्राजापत्यः, अश्वः । वही गणपतिदेव आरम्भिक मयूखमें निर्शित की हुई सरणिसे विघ्नेश्वर एवं सर्वेश्वर होनेसे प्रजाके पति-रक्षक, हमारी निधिके रक्षक, वसु आदि वा कूष्माण्ड आदि गणों तथा साध्य आदि गणदेवताओंके पति, पद्म-महापद्म आदि निधियोंके पति, पति-पुत्र, प्राण-धन आदि प्रिय वस्तुओंके भी पति होते हैं। वही सम्पूर्ण-जगत्में व्यापकतासे निवास करनेसे 'वसु' नामसे सम्बोधित किये जाते हैं, मरा हुआ अश्व सम्बोधित नहीं किया जाता । वह मृतक-अश्व तो केवल सूर्तिपुजाकी मूर्तिकी तरह सम्बोधन वा अर्चनका साधन है, मूर्तिपूजामें पत्थरकी मूर्तिका आह्वान न करके मूर्तिस्थित देवताशक्तिको आहूत किया जाता है। इसी प्रकार यज्ञके नायक

अश्वमें भी गणपति-देवताको ही आहूत किया जाता है कि-'गणानां त्वा गणपति हवामहे, (यजुः २३/१६) । अब इस मन्त्र का शेष भाग है- 'वसो ! मम आहमजानि गर्भधमा त्वमजासि गर्भधम्' । यहां पर 'गर्भधं गर्भ दधातीति गर्भधं रेतः अहम् आ अजानि – आकृष्य क्षिपामि, तच्च गर्भधं रेत आ अजासि – आकृष्य क्षिपसि' इस महीधरकी व्याख्यापर बिना-विचारके ही बड़ा होहल्ला मचाया जाता है। यहां 'रेतः' का अर्थ 'बीर्य' किया जाता है; सो अश्वके जिस रेतः (वीर्य) को प्राप्त करना श्रीमहीधरने लिखा है, वही वेदने स्वयं कहा है, देखिये- 'वृषा वाजी रेतोधा रेतो दधातु' (यजुः २३।२०) यहां 'रेतः' का अर्थ छिपा लिया जाता है। यदि आक्षेप्ता 'रेतः'का 'बल' अर्थ करते हैं; तो 'वीर्य'का भी 'बल'ही अर्थ होता है; वही 'तेज' का आशय निकला। फिर किस मु'हसे महीधरको बदनाम किया जाता है ? जो 'वाजी रेतो धातु' वाले मन्त्रका अर्थ एवं आशय है, वही महीधरके भाष्यका भी है-यह क्यों नहीं सोचा जाता ? अब इस विषयमें पाठकगण देखें-(८) 'गर्भधं' पर 'शतपथब्राह्मण में लिखा है- 'प्रजा वै पशवो गर्भः, प्रजां वै पशून् आत्मन् धत्ते' (१३।२।२।५) इस श्रुतिसे 'गर्भ' शब्द यहां प्रजा एवं पशु-वाचक है। उस प्रजा-पशुरूप गर्भके धारण करनेवाले दैवी रेतः- गणपतिदेवके तेजके आकर्षणकी प्रार्थना की गई है, प्राकृत-घोड़ेके प्राकृत-वीर्य की नहीं; क्योंकि- अश्वके वीर्यका और फिर उसमें मृतक अश्वके वोर्यका सानुषी-श्रीमें गर्भसे सम्बन्ध ही

भला क्या हो सकता है ? क़्या. मृतकका वीर्य भी रह जाता है ? वीर्य-की शुष्कतासे ही तो मृत्यु होती है। :
(ख) आक्षेप्ताओंकी कुमारियां वा स्त्रियां प्रार्थना करती हैं-'वीर्यमसि वीर्य मयि धेहि' (यजुः १६।६) 'अग्निः प्रजां बहुलां मे करोतु, अन्नं पयो रेतो. अस्मासु धत्त' (यजुः १६।४८) इत्यादि मन्त्रोंसे वे कुमारियाँ वा स्त्रियाँ अपनेमें रेतः या वीर्यके आधानकी प्रार्थना करती हैं क्या ?
(ग) 'आर्याभिविनय' (पृ० ४६) के अनुसार वे प्रार्थना करती हैं- 'हमारे हृदयमें रमण कीजिये' (ऋ० ११६१।१३) ; तो क्या वे आक्षेप्ताओंकी स्त्रियाँ उसी 'प्राकृत वीर्य' तथा 'रमण' की प्रार्थना कर रही होती हैं, जिसे प्रतिपक्षी यहाँ बताते हैं ?
(घ) 'इमं ते उपस्थं मधुना सथंसृजामि' इस स्वा० ६० जीकी संस्कारविधिमें लिखे, विवाहकालीन मन्त्रमें भी आक्षेप्तागण क्या स्त्रीके उसी उपस्थको मधुसे युक्त कर रहे होते हैं? यदि ऐसा है; तो दूसरों पर आक्षेप क्यों ?
(ङ) 'अथैनं मनुष्याः उपस्थं कृत्वा उपासीदन्' (शतपथ २।४।२।३) यहाँ क्या प्रजापतिके सामने मनुष्योंका गुप्त-अङ्ग निकालना माना जावेगा ? जो अर्थ 'वीर्य, उपस्थ' आदिका प्रतिपक्षी यहाँ करेंगे, वही महीधरभाष्यमें भी हो जायगा ?
(च) परमैश्वर्यकेलिए बैलसे, छेरीसे भोग करें' [उपयोग लें] (यजुः २११६०) यह स्वा० ५० जीका किया अर्थ है; तब क्या आज्ञेप्ताओं-क़ी वेद पढ़नेवाली स्त्रियोंका बैलसे और उनका स्वयं छेरीसे. भोग

वा उपयोग लेना वही तथाकथित अश्वके भोग वा उपयोग जैसा माना जावेगा या नहीं ?
(छ) 'मम योनिर्महद् ब्रह्म तस्मिन् गर्भ धाम्यहम्' (१४।३) इस गीताके पद्यमें भी योनिमें गर्भ धारण करनेका 'तस्य योनिं परि-पश्यन्ति धीराः' (यजुः ३१।१६) यहां भी क्या योनिका वही अश्लील अर्थ किया जावेगा ? 'मम योनिरप्स्वन्तः समुद्रे' (ऋ० १०।१२५।७) यहाँ वागाम्भृणी-ऋषिकाकी योनि, 'नागं योनिं च लिङ्ग च बिभ्रती नृप ! मूर्धनि' (प्राधानिकरहस्य ५) क्या यहां भी श्रीदुर्गादेवीकी योनिका वही अश्लील अर्थ किया जावेगा ? (ज) यदि नहीं; तो याज्ञिक-प्रक्रिया में भी ऐसी बात नहीं; वहां-पर अश्व मृतक है, 'मेढ्रू' ते शुन्धामि' (यजुः ६।१४) उसके अंग पृथक् पृथक् शोधित कर रखे हैं; उससे मैथुन हो ही कैसे सकता है ? 'गणानां त्वा' इस यजुर्वेदके मन्त्रका ऐतरेय-ब्राह्मणसे 'ब्राह्मणस्पत्यम्' यह जो आक्षेप्ताओं-द्वारा अर्थ बताया जाता है, उन लोगोंको यह पता नहीं कि यह याजुष-मन्त्रका अर्थ नहीं, किन्तु ऋग्वेदके 'गणानां' इस ब्रह्मणस्पतिवाले मन्त्रका अर्थ है। उसमें 'गर्भधं' आदि याजुषमन्त्रके पदोंकी व्याख्या है ही नहीं। जिन्हें यह पता नहीं; वे चले हैं महीधरके अर्थपर आक्षेप करने । यदि दोनों ऋग्वेद एवं यजुर्वेद के गणपति एक हैं। इसलिए याजुष-मन्त्रका ऋग्वेदके ऐतरेय ब्राह्मणसे अर्थ किया जाता है; तब भी हमारा ही पक्ष सिद्ध हुआ कि अश्वमें उसी गणपति-देवताका आह्वान किया जा रहा है; उसी गणपतिदेवके तेजके आकर्षणार्थ प्रार्थना है; तब

(६) प्रतिपक्षिगण अश्वके... डरते हैं; और उससे स्त्रीके जीवित न रहनेकी शङ्का प्रकट करते हैं; पर उपवेद-आयुर्वेद पुरुषको ही 'वाजीकरण' ओषधि देकर स्त्रीकेलिए 'अश्व' बनाया चाहता है; और वेद भी पुरुषके अंगको 'अश्वका अङ्ग' बनाया चाहता है। देखिये- 'यावदंगीनं पारस्वतं हास्तिनं गार्दभं च यत् । यावद् अश्वस्य वाजिनः तावत् ते (पुरुषस्य) वर्धतां पसः, (अथर्व० ६।७२।३) पस 'शिश्न' को कहते हैं; देखिये इसपर स्वा० द०जीका यजुर्वेदभाष्य (२००६)। तो क्या स्त्री उस पुरुषके अश्वके शिश्नसे जीवित रह सकेगी, जिसका वेद विधान कर रहा है? यदि यहां प्रतिपक्षी 'अश्व'का साक्षात् 'अश्व' अर्थ नहीं लेते; वैसे यहां पर भी वे 'अश्वशिश्न' खास अर्थ कैसे करते हैं ?

(१०) यह स्पष्ट किया जा चुका है कि जो अर्थ श्रीमहीधराचार्यने किया है; वह शतपथब्राह्मणसे लिया है। सो जो तात्पर्य शतपथ में होगा, महीधरभाष्यमें भी वही तात्पर्य होगा। सो 'गर्भधं रेतः स्व-योनौ स्थापयति, अश्वशिश्नमुपस्थे कुरुते' आदिका अर्थ भी यही जान लेना चाहिये कि-स्त्री प्रजा-पशुरूप गर्भको धारण करनेवाले ५० स० ६०

गणपतिदेवके सोमरूप तेजको – जैसे कि वेदमें कहा है- अयथं सोमो वृष्णोऽश्वस्य रेतः' (यजुः २३। ६२) – प्रार्थित करके उसे अपने भीतर आकर्षित करनेकी भावना करती है। इसी भावनाके फलस्वरूप उसे चक्रवर्ती पुत्र पैदा होता है।

विवाह-संस्कार में स्वा०६०ने संस्कारविधिमें 'इन्द्राग्नी... बृहस्पतिर्मरुतो ब्रह्म सोम इमां नारीं प्रजया वर्धयन्तु' (पृ० १५४-१५५) यह मन्त्र लिखा है। उसका अर्थ किया है- बृहस्पतिः- राजा, मरुतः – सभ्य मनुष्य... इस मेरी स्त्रीको प्रजासे बढ़ाया करते हैं' यह वरकी उक्ति है। तो क्या वरकी स्त्रीमें राजा और सभ्य मनुष्य मैथुन करते हैं ? यदि नहीं, यह केवल आशीर्वादमात्र है, वैसे वहां भी गणपतिके तेजके आकर्षणकी भावनामात्र है। सो यहां अर्थ यह है–

'अश्वस्य – अश्नुते व्याप्नोति सर्वं जगद्-इति अश्वः, गण-पतिदेवः (नमस्ते गणपतये... त्वमेव सर्वं खल्विदं ब्रह्मासि' इति गणपत्युपनिषदुक्तेः) तस्य गणपतिदेवस्य शिश्नम्-'शिश्नं श्नथतेः' (निरुक्त ४। १६।६) श्नथयति – ताडयति हिनस्ति वा विघ्नरूपं तम इति शिश्नम्, शेषति – हिनस्ति वा प्रतिबन्धकतामिति वा शिश्नम्, शश प्लुनगतौ-शशति शीघ्र' व्याप्नोति इति वा शिश्नम्, शिनोति-तीक्ष्णीभवति इति वा शिश्नम्' (सर्वत्र पृषोदादिः (६।३।१०६). शिरनं-तेज इत्यर्थः; तद् व्यापकं गणपति-तेज आकृष्य भक्त्या स्वयोनौ-कर्मफलोत्पादके कारणभूतस्वसूक्ष्म शरीरान्तः फलोत्पादन-पर्यन्तं सूक्ष्मरूपेण, धारयति । वाजी- वेगवान् बलवान् वृषा-

अथवा – 'मम योनिर्महद् ब्रह्म तस्मिन् गर्भ धाम्यहम्' (गीता १४।३) के अनुसार प्रकृतिरूप-पत्नीमें चिदाभासरूप गर्भका आधान करनेवाले गणपतिदेवका मैं आह्वान करती हूँ, यह अर्थ है, शेष पूर्ववत् ।

यहां अश्वके मृतक होनेसे उससे मैथुन असम्भव है। जबकि जीवितके साथ भी वैसा नहीं हो सकता।

तब जिस-यज्ञमें अपने पतिसे भी कामवासना आदिका निषेध होता है, उसीमें मृत-अश्वके साथ वासनारूप-प्राम्यधर्म कैसे हो सकता है? तब यहां पूर्व कहा हुआ. अर्थ ही वास्तविक है। उक्त शब्द परोक्ष-वृत्तिसे कहे गये हैं। क्या कभी आक्षेप्ताओंकी स्त्रियां अपने मृतक-पतिसे मैथुन कर सकती हैं ? यदि नहीं; तब मृतक अश्वसे ही वैसे कैसे हो सकता है? अतः गणपतिदेवका तेज ही यहां प्रार्थित किया गया है। इस अवसरपर अश्वकी तीन-परिक्रमा शतपथ (१३।२।८/४) और. कातीयश्रौतसूत्र (२००६।१३) के अनुसार की जाती हैं, परिक्रमा देव-पूजामें ही हुआ करती है; सो यह स्पष्ट देवपूजा ही है। इसी दैवी तेजके आकर्षणके फलस्वरूप महिषीका चक्रवर्ती-लड़का उत्पन्न

कर्मकाण्डमें भी अश्वमहिषी-प्रसङ्गमें कोई सम्भोगका सम्बन्ध नहीं दीखताः क्योंकि अश्व मृतक है; तब केवल मृतक अश्वके पृथग्भूत और संशोधित अङ्गका स्पर्शमात्र, उपस्थ (उत्सङ्ग, गोदझें, अथवा अपने अङ्गपर) स्थापनमात्र ही इष्ट है, वहाँ विलासिता न होनेसे तथा भावना दूषित न होनेसे पातिव्रत्य-भंगकी आशङ्का भी नहीं होती, क्योंकि वह भी शाखाज्ञानुसार पतिकी आज्ञासे उसके यज्ञकी पूर्त्यर्थ किया जाता है। गायके स्तन वा सूत्रस्थानका पुरुष स्पर्श करते हैं; तो क्या वहाँ पुरुषोंको स्त्रीके अङ्गोंके स्पर्शका विचार आ जाता है ? वा उन्हें उससे काम-वासना हो जाती है ? यदि नहीं; तब स्त्रीको ही घोड़ेके अङ्गके स्पर्शमात्र से काम-वासना कैसे उत्पन्न हो जावेगी ? क्या वह मनुष्य है ? प्रतिपक्षियोंको जो ऐसी-वासना उत्पन्न हो जाती है; उसका कारण नियोग आदिकी कामुकताके प्रचारसे मस्तिष्क में विकृतिका उत्पन्न हो जाना है। प्रतिपक्षी लोग नियोगसे वा विधवा-विवाहसे मृतककी पत्नीके अङ्गमें अन्य पुरुषके अङ्गका स्पर्शमात्र तो क्या; उसमें तो विलास भी करवाते हैं; वहाँ उनको उस पत्नीके पातिव्रत्य-भङ्गकी शङ्का ही नहीं होती । यदि वे उसे अपने अभिमत-शास्त्र के अर्थके अनुसार व्यवहार करानेसे उसके पातिव्रत्यके भङ्गकी शङ्का नहीं करते; तब इस-कर्मकाण्डमें शङ्का करना अपने नियोग वा विधवा-विवाहसे आँख मूँद लेना है। जिस प्रकार आप लोग यहाँ उपहास

करते हैं; वैसे नियोगमें आप लोगोंका भी उपहास होता है, पर विचार करनेसे यह सब आक्षेप कट जाते हैं। प्रसव करनेमें डाक्टर भी स्त्रीकी योनिका स्पर्श कर रहे होते हैं। उसमें हाथ भी डाल रहे होते हैं; इससे क्या उस स्त्रीका आप पतिव्रत्यभङ्ग मान लेंगे ? विवाहको ही ले लीजिये; इसके अङ्ग-गर्भाधानमें ही क्या अश्लीलता नहीं है ? पर शास्त्रानुसार व्यवहारसे वहाँ धर्म्यता मान ली जाती है; अश्वमेधमें तो न कोई कामवासना है, न ही विलास वा सम्भोग ही; तब बलात् वहाँ समागम वा सम्भोग बताना प्रतिपक्षियोंका अपने कलुषित-हृदयका ही यह कलुषित-विचार है, प्रकृतमें ऐसी कोई बात नहीं ।

सभापति-भाषण (११ अप्रैल १६५०) के ४२ पृष्ठमें कहा है- 'प्रतिवर्ष भारतके भिन्न-भिन्न प्रदेशोंके वेदोंके विद्वान् एक केन्द्रिय स्थानपर एकत्रित हों, अश्वमेधसुक्न, कुन्तापसुक्न, तथा 'त्रीणि शता त्री सह-स्राणि अग्नि त्रिंशब्च देवाः' 'इन्द्रो दधीचो अस्थिभिः' इत्यादि मन्त्रोंमें विशेषरूपसे विचार किया जाए, जो वेदोंका अनुशीलन करने बालोंकेलिए विशेष कठिनाई उपस्थित करते हैं'। इससे स्पष्ट है कि-

अश्वमेधसूक्के उक्त मन्त्रोंका जो अर्थ स्वा० द० जीने किया है, वह उन्हें भी सन्तोषप्रद प्रतीत नहीं हुआ उसमें उन्हें भी उनकी प्रसह्यकारिता मालूम होती है ।
(११) शेष प्रश्न यह रहता है कि- 'वेदमें तथाकथित अश्लील मन्त्र ही नहीं होते। 'आहन्ति गसे पसो निगल्गलीति धारका' (यजुः २३।२२) आदि मन्त्रोंका महीधरने अश्लील अर्थ किया है कि-'यदा भगे-योनौ शिश्नमागच्छति, तदा धारका-धरति लिङ्गमिति धारका-योनिः (बच्चेदानी) गिलति वीर्य क्षरति, गल्गलेति शब्दं वा करोति' ।
इसपर उत्तर यह है कि इनं अर्थोंके करनेसे यदि श्री-महीधराचार्यको अपवादित किया जाता है; तो इसका भाव यह हुआ कि वेदमें तथाकथित अश्लील वर्णन नहीं हो सकता । पर ऐसा कहना अज्ञान है। वेदमें सर्वाङ्गीणता होती है। सर्वाङ्गता में सब कुछ होता है। यदि वेदमें ऐसे वर्णन अश्लील माने जावें; तो 'रेतो मूत्रं विजहाति योनिं प्रविशदिन्द्रियस्' (यजुः १६।७६) इस मन्त्रका अर्थ आर्यसमाजी-आचार्य अपने पास वेद पढ़नेवाली १७७२४ वर्षकी कुमारियोंको क्या बताते हैं ? "'Purnamasi bhavati' (Shatapatha 13.4.1.4):
On the full moon of the Phalguna month, during the occasion of Holika, verses from the Ashvamedha Yajna used to be recited. As a result of this tradition, even today, the style of suggestive and humorous banter (obscene jests) is found in Holi celebrations. We will explain this further in the section on 'Holika-Vijnana' (the science/philosophy behind Holika). This affirms the Vedic roots of the festival.

(6) Regarding those critics who have misunderstood this (thinking that there was a sexual union between the queen and the horse), their error stems from the belief that the horse was alive at that time. However, such an event is not possible even during the horse's lifetime — a horse cannot have intercourse with a human, nor can a human conceive from the horse's semen. Hence, this belief of the critics is a great delusion.

At the time of the Ashvamedha sacrifice, the horse is sanjñapta (i.e., dead). Its body parts are separated and purified before being laid down. Earlier, we have already quoted from the Shatapatha Brahmana: 'saṁjñapteṣu paśuṣu' — sanjñapta means 'dead.' Refer to Vedic grammar (Vedanga Vyakarana) and the Dhatu Patha of sage Panini. In that, for roots with the prefix mit-sañjñaka, the root 'jñā' (ज्ञा) primarily means 'to kill'. In the grammatical commentary Vayyakarana Siddhanta Kaumudi, the same meaning is given: 'jñāpa mitch' — the meaning of 'jñā' is communication or killing, etc. The commentary Tattvabodhini says, 'paśuṁ sañjñapayati' means 'he kills the animal'. Likewise, Bala Manorama explains it as: 'paśuṁ sañjñapayati — he kills the uninjured animal'. This is also clearly stated in the Dhatu Patha published by Swami Dayananda Saraswati (page 12): 'jñā — in the sense of killing, pleasing, and observing'. Thus, the primary meaning of the root 'jñā' is killing. Swami Dayananda also affirms this in his Akhyatika Bhvadi-Gana (page 83).

If the opponents do not believe in the authority of Vedanga grammar, then we offer the direct evidence from the Brahmana portion of the Vedas: 'ghnanti vai etat paśum, yad enam sañjñapayanti' (Shatapatha 13.2.8.2) — "They indeed kill the animal when they declare it sanjñapta."
So, when the animal (horse) is dead at that time, how can the malicious interpretation of the opponents be logically sustained?

(7) When the queen (Mahishi) is made to lie beside the horse, the horse is already dead — we have already provided scriptural (Brahmana) testimony for this. Now let the readers consider the evidence from historical tradition as well.

(a) From the Valmiki Ramayana:

To perform the Putreshti Yajna (sacrifice for begetting sons), an Ashvamedha Yajna was first performed to atone for sins (from previous lives) that obstructed the desired results of actions. The description from the Ramayana says:

> “Kausalya tam iyam tatra paricarya (parikramya) samantatah, > kr̥pāṇair viśaśāsainaṁ tribhiḥ paramayā mudā”
> (Valmiki Ramayana 1.14.33)

Translation:
“Kausalya (the chief queen) circumambulated the horse from all sides and, with great joy, slaughtered it with three knives.”

This corresponds with the Shatapatha Brahmana (13.2.8.4) statement:

> “patnyaḥ enaṁ triḥ pariyanti” — “The wives circumambulate it (the horse) three times.”

And according to Shatapatha Brahmana 13.2.8.2, the horse is to be slain by Kausalya.

Further in the Ramayana:

> “Patatriṇā tadā sārdhaṁ susthitena ca cetasā, avasad rajanim ekām Kausalya dharmakāmyayā”
> (1.14.34)

Translation:
“Kausalya, with a composed mind and accompanied by a bird (symbolic or a priest), spent one night beside the horse out of religious duty (dharmakāma), not out of carnal desire.”

Thus, staying beside the horse was for dharmic reasons, not for sexual union. The horse was already dead, and the presence beside it was ritualistic, symbolic, and spiritual.

(b) In Taittiriya Brahmana Commentary:

The commentator Bhattabhaskara explains similarly:

> "Tap eva santāpahetutvāt asyā (mahiṣyā)"
> (Taittiriya Brahmana 3.6.6.26)

Meaning:
The queen (Mahishi) endures the heat (tapas) of the ritual due to the pain caused by the spiritual austerity, not due to physical contact. This again confirms that the horse was dead during the ritual.

(c) Supporting evidence from the Mahabharata:

> "Tataḥ sañjñapya turagaṁ vidhivad yājakas tadā, upāsaṁveśayan rājan! tataḥ tāṁ Drupadātmajām" > (Ashvamedhika Parva, 86.12)

Translation:
"Then the priest, having ritually slain the horse (sañjñapya), made Draupadi (daughter of Drupada) sit beside it according to proper procedure."

This again shows that the horse was already dead, and Draupadi merely sat beside it, following ritual norms — not for any physical act.

Refutation of Misinterpretations:

Critics argue that commentators have interpreted Ashwamedha Yagya in a vulgar or obscene manner (i.e., suggesting sexual union).
But this criticism is refuted here by clearly showing:

- The horse was dead (sanjñapta).
- It was invoked symbolically as Ganapati, the deity of multitudes, not a literal horse.

- The ritual involves symbolic offerings like śiśna, retas, but these are metaphorical and refer to Ganapati, not the dead horse.

In Vedic mantras, like:

> "Havāmahe" — "We invoke…"

…such calls are addressed to conscious deities, not to physical or dead beings. So, retas and related symbols belong to Ganapati, not to a lifeless horse.

Thus, the entire act is highly symbolic, and those who misinterpret it as literal or obscene are gravely mistaken.

Final Thought:

If critics would understand the references to "Ganapati", especially in the context of the mantra:

> "Gaṇānāṁ tvā gaṇapatiṁ havāmahe…"

…as being directed toward the divine leader Ganapati, and not a physical horse, they would not fall into such misinterpretations or make accusations.

This perspective also aligns with the Arya Samaj's printed editions of the Yajurveda, where the deity of this mantra is accepted as Ganapati.

When such a prayer cannot even logically apply to a living horse—since a living horse can neither be a lord of wealth (nidhīpati), nor a beloved lord (priyapati), nor the lord of the hosts (Gana-pati)—then how can such a prayer be applicable to a dead horse?

A living horse cannot be invoked in this manner. There is no biological or ritual connection between a horse's semen and conception in a human woman, nor is there any legitimate basis for an actual union between a horse and a human.

Hence, this entire misunderstanding arises from the distorted minds of those critics who project their own perverse imaginings onto the Vedic texts. These ideas have no connection whatsoever with the ancient scriptures.

In reality, the invocation in the Ashvamedha sacrifice is directed not to a horse, but to the Prajapati-Ganapati (the cosmic deity of creation), symbolically represented in the form of a horse. As the Shatapatha Brahmana (13.3.3.4) says:

> "Prājāpatyo vai aśvaḥ"
> "The horse is indeed Prajapatya (of Prajapati)."

Thus, the prayer is addressed to Ganapati, who, according to the earlier sections of the Mayūkha text, is none other than Vighneshwara (Remover of Obstacles) and Sarveshwara (Lord of All)—

- the protector of people (praja-pati),
- the guardian of wealth (nidhi-pati),
- the lord of the ganas (like Vasus, Kushmandas, Sadhyas, etc.),
- the lord of Padma, Mahapadma and other treasures,
- and also the lord of everything beloved, like sons, life, wealth, and so on.

He alone, by virtue of his all-pervasive presence in the universe, is addressed as Vasu. A dead horse cannot be so addressed. The dead horse is merely a symbolic ritual object, like an idol in image worship (murtipuja), where the invocation is not to the stone image, but to the divine power that resides in it.

In the same way, in the Ashvamedha ritual, the invocation is made not to the horse, but to Ganapati, the divine being represented through the ritual horse. Hence, the mantra:

> “Gaṇānāṁ tvā Gaṇapatiṁ havāmahe”
> (Yajurveda 23.16)
> “We invoke you, O Ganapati, the lord of hosts…”

The next part of the same mantra is:

> “Vaso! mama āhamajāni garbhadhāma tvamajāsi garbhadhām”

Explanation:

- Garbhadhāma = the womb-holder, or source of conception
- Aham ā-ajāni = “I draw forth (the seed)”
- Tvam ajāsi garbhadhām = “You also draw forth (the seed) into the womb”

Now, people create a huge controversy over the commentary of Mahīdhara, interpreting “retas” (semen) as something obscene. But Mahīdhara simply explains:

> “Garbhadhām = retas . I draw it forth; you too draw it forth.”

This is in fact in alignment with the Vedas themselves, which explicitly declare:

> “Vṛṣā vājī retodhā reto dadhātu”
> (Yajurveda 23.20)
> “Let the powerful stallion (vājī), bearer of retodhā , deposit the retas .”

Thus, the term "retas" (semen/seed) is not hidden by the Vedas—it is clearly mentioned and understood symbolically, referring not to physical horse semen, but to cosmic creative potency represented by Ganapati or Prajapati.

In conclusion, this passage argues that:

- The ritual is symbolic and divine, not literal or carnal.
- Misinterpretations come from projecting modern materialistic views onto ancient spiritual symbols.
- The invocation is to Ganapati, a deity, not to any actual horse, whether dead or alive.

If the objector interprets the word "retas" (रेतः) as simply meaning "strength" (bal), then it should be remembered that even the word "vīrya" (वीर्य, semen) also fundamentally means "strength"—and hence, both imply "tejas" (spiritual or vital energy).

Then with what face can Mahīdhara be blamed or maligned? The meaning and intent of the Vedic mantra "vājī reto dadhātu" (Let the stallion deposit the seed) is the same as that of Mahīdhara's commentary. Why is this not acknowledged?

Now let the readers themselves consider the deeper meaning. In reference to "garbhadhām" (source of conception), the Shatapatha Brāhmaṇa (13.2.2.5) says:

> "Prajā vai paśavo garbhaḥ, prajāṁ vai paśūn ātman dhatte"
> "All living beings (paśu) are indeed progeny (garbha), and the self bears that progeny within."

This Vedic statement clarifies that the word "garbha" (womb/progeny) refers to both offspring and animals (beings). Hence, the "garbhadhām" in the mantra is not referring to some physical womb or carnal conception, but to the divine seed of life, that is, the divine energy (retas/tejas) of Ganapati being invoked to attract and sustain cosmic progeny—not any material semen of a physical horse.

After all, how could there possibly be a relationship between the semen of a dead horse and the conception in a human woman? Is it even conceivable that the semen of a dead creature still exists?

In fact, death itself occurs due to the drying up of "virility" or "vital force" (vīrya), so the notion of any remaining fertile potency in a dead horse is both scientifically and scripturally absurd.

(b) Do the objectors' own maidens or women pray in this way: "Vīryam asi, vīrya mayi gṛhi" — "You are vigor; place that vigor within me" (Yajurveda 16.6)? Or "Agniḥ prajāṁ bahulāṁ me karotu, annaṁ payo reto 'smāsu dhatta" (Yajurveda 16.48)?
Do they truly believe that these women are praying for a physical deposition of semen or retas (seed) into themselves?

(c) According to Āryābhivinaya (p. 46), women pray: "Enter into our hearts with love" (Ṛgveda 1.161.13).
So, are these women—of the objectors themselves—also praying for physical semen and carnal union, as these critics are suggesting here?

(d) In the marriage ritual detailed in the Sanskaravidhi by Swami Dayananda (Swa. 60), the following mantra is used:
"I unite your womb (upastha) with sweetness (madhu)"
Should it then be understood that the objectors are themselves sanctifying the woman's genital organ with "sweetness" in a vulgar sense?
If so, then why do they object when someone else interprets with dignity?

(e) The Shatapatha Brāhmaṇa (2.4.2.3) says:
"Atha enaṁ manuṣyāḥ upasthaṁ kṛtvā upāsīdan"
— "Then the men, having prepared the lower part (upastha), sat down."
Shall we say here that people exposed their private parts in front of Prajāpati?

If not, then how can the meanings of "vīrya" or "upastha" used by Mahīdhara be condemned while accepting the same words elsewhere?

(g) The Bhagavad Gītā verse says:
"Mama yoniḥ mahad brahma tasmin garbhaṁ dhāmy aham" (Gītā 14.3)
"My womb is the great Brahman; into that I cast the seed."
And in the Yajurveda (31.16): "Tasya yoniṁ paripaśyanti dhīrāḥ" —
"The wise behold His womb."
Should the word "yoni" here too be interpreted in a vulgar, sexualized sense?

Likewise, in Ṛgveda 10.125.7:
"Mama yoniḥ apsv antaḥ samudre"
"My womb is in the cosmic waters, in the ocean" — spoken by the female seer Vāk Ambhṛṇī.
And in Prādhānika Rahasya (verse 5):
"Nāgaṁ yoniṁ ca liṅgaṁ ca bibhṛtī nṛpa ! mūrdhani" —
"Durga Devī holds the womb and the Linga symbol on her head."
Are these also to be interpreted lewdly?

(h) If not, then even in Vedic ritual, no such obscene meaning should be implied.
In the Ashvamedha, the horse is dead, and the mantra "meḍhū te śundhāmi" (Yajurveda 6.14) says the horse's organs are purified and ritually separated—how, then, could there be any question of sexual union?

(i) The objectors say that the Yajurveda mantra "Gaṇānāṁ tvā gaṇapatiṁ havāmahe" refers to Bṛhaspati, based on the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, where "Gaṇapati" is glossed as "Brahmaṇaspati".
But they don't realize: that is the Ṛgveda mantra, not the Yajurveda one.
The Yajurvedic mantra, which includes "garbhadhām", does not appear in the Ṛgvedic Brāhmaṇa, nor is it explained there.
So those who don't even distinguish between the Vedas, come forward to criticize Mahīdhara's interpretations?

Even if the Gaṇapati in both Ṛgveda and Yajurveda is the same divine being, and one explains the other, then too, our position is established—that in the Ashvamedha ritual, the invocation is addressed to Gaṇapati, and it is a prayer to attract His divine energy (retas/tejas)—not to a physical horse or its biological semen.

In the phrase "ā ajāsi", the root "aj" (from aj gati-kṣepaṇayoḥ — meaning "to move" or "to hurl/throw") originally has the contextual sense of "projection" or "impulsion". However, the objectors cleverly modify the meaning to "ā samantāt jānāsi"—"you know completely"—just to save their position.
If that much interpretive flexibility is permitted, then why object to Mahīdhara's interpretation, whose intent can also be understood in a meaningful and symbolic sense?

Therefore,the phrases like:

- "garbhadham retaḥ sva-yonyau sthāpayati"
- "aśva-śiśnam upasthe kurute"

...should be understood to mean the following:
The woman is concentrating upon attracting the divine energy (tejas) of Gaṇapati, the deity who carries the power of divine procreation, in the form of soma . As said in the Veda (Yajurveda 23.62):

> "Ayathaṁ somo vṛṣṇo 'śvasya retaḥ"
> — "As Soma is the seed (retaḥ) of the mighty horse."

Thus, the inner prayerful intent is to draw that divine energy into herself, so that, as a result of that spiritual conception, she may give birth to a chakravartin (universal emperor) son.

In the marriage ritual, Swami 060 has written in his Saṁskāra Vidhi (pp. 154–155) the mantra:

> "Indrāgnī… Bṛhaspatir-Maruto Brahma Soma imāṁ nārīṁ prajayā vardhayantu" > — "May Indra and Agni… Bṛhaspati, the Maruts, Brahma, and Soma increase this woman (the bride) with progeny."

He interprets "Bṛhaspati" as "king," "Maruts" as "noble men (sabhyamānavāḥ)," and explains the mantra as a statement by the groom:

> "These (king and noble men) will cause this my wife to grow (prosper) with progeny."

Then the question arises: Does this mean the king and other men have sexual relations with the bride?
Obviously not. This is clearly an auspicious blessing (āśīrvāda) for the bride to be prosperous in terms of family and offspring.

Similarly, in the Ashvamedha context (or in the mantra involving "aśva-śiśnam upasthe kurute"), it should be understood not as a physical act but as an inner devotional and symbolic gesture—a prayer to attract the divine energy (tejas) of Gaṇapati, the Lord of hosts.

Now consider the inner meaning:

- "Aśvasya": The word aśva means "that which pervades or moves through all" (ashnute sarvaṁ jagad), i.e., that which pervades the universe—a symbol of omnipresence.
- "Gaṇapati": According to the Gaṇapati Upaniṣad, "Namaste Gaṇapataye… tvam eva sarvaṁ khalvidaṁ brahmāsi" – "Salutations to Gaṇapati… You alone are indeed all this (Brahman)."
  So, here Gaṇapati is Brahman itself—all-pervading divine power.
- "Śiśnaṁ": Interpreted from the Nirukta (4.16.6):
  - From the root śnathate — "to strike, to injure": thus, that which destroys obstacles (vighna).

- From śeṣate — "to obstruct": so it means that which removes obstructions.
- From śaś, pluna-gatau — "to move swiftly or flow", hence that which pervades or penetrates.
- From śinoti — "to sharpen", signifying tejas (brilliance, energy).

Thus, "śiśnaṁ" here is not a vulgar or sexual reference, but a symbolic representation of observing and accepting divine energy, or tejas of Gaṇapati, that destroys inner ignorance and obstacles, and initiates creative or spiritual fertility.

Hence, when it is said that the woman draws this Gaṇapati-tejas into her "yoni", it means:

> She spiritually attracts the universal creative force of Gaṇapati (symbolized in soma, the divine vitality), and holds it in her subtle body, in the karmic or metaphysical womb—the inner source from which the fruit of spiritual or noble progeny arises.

Thus, the vajī (horse) here symbolizes:

> Vigorous, swift, potent, and spiritually dynamic force, not a literal beast or sexual agent.

Among fruits, Vaṣukaḥ; among progenitors, Gaṇapati; may he place his tejas in me."

The Queen (Mahishī) here prays to Gaṇapati for his divine energy (tejas) and expresses a devotional longing to attract that tejas into herself.

Just as the Vedic mantras say:

- "Vīryam asi, vīryaṁ mayi ghehi" – "You are virility; may that virility enter into me." (Yajurveda 16.6)

- “Reto asmāsu ghatt” – “Let the seed be poured into us.” (Yajurveda 16.48)

The women of the sacrificers (ācheptā) chant such mantras to invoke the infusion of divine virility (vīrya) into themselves — not physical semen, but spiritual or cosmic vitality.

Alternatively, from the perspective of the Bhagavad Gītā (14.3):

> “Mama yonir mahad brahma, tasmin garbha dhāmy aham”
> “My womb is the great Brahman (Prakṛti); into it I place the embryo (conscious reflection).”

In this sense, the wife (queen), who represents Prakṛti (nature), invokes Gaṇapati, the supreme consciousness, to implant the embryo of divine awareness (cid-ābhāsa) into her spiritual womb. The rest of the meaning follows as before.

Now, it must be stressed that in this ritual:

- The horse (aśva) is dead — hence, no question of sexual union arises.
- Even with a living being, such an act would be strictly forbidden.
- And in a Vedic sacrifice, where even lustful contact with one’s own husband is prohibited, how can any act of sexual desire with a dead horse be even conceived?

Therefore, the earlier interpretation, where the horse is symbolic, and the real intent is a devotional invocation of divine energy, is the authentic meaning.

The use of terms like “śiśna” etc., are parokṣa-vṛtti — indirect, symbolic expressions common in Vedic style.

After all, would the wives of the objectors (ākṣepakās) ever have intercourse with their dead husbands?

If not, how can they accuse the Veda of prescribing intercourse with a dead horse?

Hence, it is only Gaṇapati's tejas (spiritual power) that is prayed for and invoked here.

At this moment in the ritual, the Queen circumambulates the horse three times, as mentioned in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa (13.2.8.4) and Kātyāyana Śrauta Sūtra (20.6.13).
Such circumambulation (parikrama) is always a part of divine worship (devapūjā).

Therefore, this whole act is evidently a form of worship, not any literal or physical activity.

As a result of attracting this divine energy, the Queen gives birth to a universal sovereign (cakravartin putra)—a son destined for greatness.

Even in the Karma-kāṇḍa (ritualistic portion of the Vedas), in the episode of the Aśvamedha (horse sacrifice) involving the queen and the horse, there is no reference to any actual sexual intercourse. The horse is dead, and thus, only touching its separated and sanctified body parts—and placing them near or upon oneself (such as in the lap, on the chest, or limbs)—is what is prescribed.

There is no indulgence, no lasciviousness; and since the intention is pure, there is no question of a violation of marital chastity (pātivratya). Moreover, this is done in accordance with the husband's command and for the fulfillment of his sacrificial rite, as laid down in the Vedic branches (śākhās).

Take for example: when men touch the udders of a cow or the genital area of a cow during treatment or milking, do they begin to think about sexual desire toward the cow? Do they develop lustful feelings from such touch?
If not, then how can it be claimed that a woman, by merely touching the organ of a dead horse, would develop lustful thoughts? Is she not a rational human being?

If the opponents do feel such lust, the real cause is that their minds have been corrupted by the propagation of licentious ideas

These very critics promote systems where, under Halala divorced woman is touched by another man, but even sensual union is sanctioned—yet they raise no concern about the woman's pātivratya (chastity) being compromised.
If in their own shāstra-based frameworks, they feel no violation occurs, then why raise objections in this Vedic rite, which is entirely symbolic and devotional?

To mock the Vedic ritual (like they do) is to expose themselves to equal ridicule in their own practices like Halala , if assessed critically.
Upon thoughtful reflection, all these objections collapse.

Even during childbirth, doctors touch a woman's private parts—even insert their hands for medical reasons. Does that mean the woman's marital chastity is violated?
Or, consider marriage itself: in the ritual of garbhādhāna (conception rite), there is inherent reference to intercourse. But since it is performed according to śāstra, it is regarded as dharma, not vulgarity.

In the Aśvamedha, however, there is neither sensual pleasure, nor lust, nor any actual intercourse.
Therefore, to forcibly interpret this act as sexual union is nothing but a projection of the critics' own corrupted minds.
In the actual Vedic context, no such perverse intent exists.

धातुका पहला अर्थ मारण है। यही बात स्वामी दयानन्दके आख्यातिक भ्वादिगण (पृ० ८३) में लिखी है। यदि प्रतिपक्षियोंको वेदाङ्गपर विश्वास न हो; तो हम 'संज्ञप्त' शब्दपर वेदभाग 'ब्राह्मण' की सम्मति देते हैं; देखिये—घ्नन्ति वै एतत् पशुम्, यद् एनथ्ं संज्ञपयन्ति' (शत० १३।२।८।२)। तो जब पशु उस समय संज्ञप्त (मृतक) है; तो उस समय प्रतिपक्षियोंका दुरभिप्राय कैसे सङ्गत हो सकता है ?

(७) जब घोड़ेके पास महिषीको रखा जाता है; उस समय अश्व मृतक होता है—इस विषयकी ब्राह्मणभागकी साक्षी हम दे चुके। अब इसमें इतिहासकी साक्षी भी पाठकगण देखें—

(क) वाल्मीकि-रामायणमें पुत्रेष्टियज्ञ करनेके लिए पूर्वजन्मकृत, कार्य-प्रतिबन्धक पापके क्षयार्थ पहले अश्वमेध-यज्ञ किया गया था। उस समयका वहां वर्णन है—'कौसल्या तं हयं तत्र परिचर्य (परिक्रम्य) समन्ततः। कृपाणैर्विशशासैनं त्रिभिः परमया मुदा' (१।१४।३३) यहां अश्वकी 'पत्न्यः एनं त्रिः परियन्ति' (शत० १३।२।८।४) इस कथनसे परिक्रमा और (शत० १३।२।८।२ के अनुसार) कौशल्या-द्वारा अश्वका विशसन (हनन) कहा है। फिर आगे लिखा है—'पतत्रिणा तदा सार्धं सुस्थितेन च चेतसा। अवसद् रजनीमेकां कौसल्या धर्मकाम्यया' (१४।३४) यहां पर मृतक-घोड़ेके पास रहना धर्मेच्छासे कहा है, सम्भोगेच्छासे नहीं।

(ख) इसी प्रकरणके तैत्तिरीयब्राह्मणके भाष्यमें श्रीभट्टभास्करने भी यही भाष्य किया है—'तप एव सन्तापहेतुत्वात् अस्या (महिष्या)

एतत् तपस्थानीयं यद् मृतेन *मिथुनीभवनम् [सह-उपवेशनम्]' (३।६।६।२६) यहां भी अश्वकी मृतकता स्पष्ट है। (ग) अब इसकी अन्य साक्षी महाभारतमें देखें—'ततः संज्ञप्य तुरगं विधिवद् याजकस्तदा। उपासंवेशयन् राजन्! ततस्तां द्रुपदात्मजाम्' (आश्वमेधिकपर्व ८६।२) यहां भी मृतक-घोड़ेके साथ द्रौपदीको बैठाया गया है। जब अश्व मृतक है; तब यहां आक्षेप्ताओंके आक्षेप व्यर्थ हैं। जैसे कि—'वेदोंका सार्वभौम संदेश' (पृ० ३६) में उसके व्याख्याताका यह कहना कि—महीधरके अपने-वेदभाष्यमें किये अर्थ स्पष्टतया अश्लील ग्राम्यधर्म (संभोगादि)-परक हैं; यह निष्पक्ष विद्वानोंको लज्जाके साथ स्वीकार करना पड़ेगा' इत्यादि निराकृत हो गया।

यहां बतलाया जा चुका है कि अश्व मृतक है, और उसे गणपतिदेवके रूपमें आहूत किया गया है, जैसा कि हम आरम्भिक-मयूखमें विस्तारसे बता चुके हैं। 'हवामहे' ऐसा आह्वान भी वैदिक-शैलीसे चेतन-देवताका होता है; उसमें प्राकृत अश्व, उसमें भी मृतकका आह्वान नहीं हुआ करता। सो 'शिश्न' वा 'रेत' एवं वीर्य उसी गणपतिदेवका इष्ट है, मृतक-अश्वका नहीं। इस बात पर न विचारनेसे ही प्रतिपक्षी भ्रमकूपमें गिरे हुए हैं। यदि यहां प्रतिपक्षी भी प्राकृत अश्वका वर्णन न समझकर 'गणपति' देवका वर्णन समझ लें, क्योंकि—'गणानां त्वा' मन्त्रका देवता आर्यसमाज

* 'मिथुनीभवनम्'का अर्थ इकट्ठा होना है। वेदादि-शास्त्रोंमें भाई-बहिनके जोड़ेको भी 'मिथुन' कहा जाता है। जैसे कि—निरुक्त (३।४।२)में।

अश्वमें भी गणपति-देवताको ही आहूत किया जाता है कि—'गणानां त्वा गणपतिꣳ हवामहे, (यजुः २३।१६)। अब इस मन्त्र का शेष भाग है—'वसो! मम आहमजानि गर्भधमा त्वमजासि गर्भधम्'।

यहां पर 'गर्भधं—गर्भं दधातीति गर्भधं रेतः अहम् आ अजानि—आकृष्य क्षिपामि, त्वं गर्भधं रेत आ अजासि—आकृष्य क्षिपसि' इस महीधरकी व्याख्यापर बिना-विचारके ही वड़ा होहल्ला मचाया जाता है। यहां 'रेतः'का अर्थ 'वीर्य' किया जाता है; सो अश्वके जिस रेतः (वीर्य)को प्राप्त करना श्रीमहीधरने लिखा है, वही वेदने स्वयं कहा है, देखिये—'वृषा वाजी रेतोधा रेतो दधातु' (यजुः २३।२०) यहां 'रेतः'का अर्थ छिपा लिया जाता है। यदि आक्षेप्ता 'रेतः'का 'बल' अर्थ करते हैं; तो 'वीर्य'का भी 'बल'ही अर्थ होता है; वही 'तेज'का आशय निकला। फिर किस मुंहसे महीधरको बदनाम किया जाता है? जो 'वाजी रेतो दधातु' वाले मन्त्रका अर्थ एवं आशय है, वही महीधरके भाष्यका भी है—यह क्यों नहीं सोचा जाता? अब इस विषयमें पाठकगण देखें—

(८) 'गर्भधं' पर 'शतपथब्राह्मण'में लिखा है—'प्रजा वै पशवो गर्भः, प्रजां वै पशून् आत्मन् धत्ते' (१३।२।२।५) इस श्रुतिसे 'गर्भ' शब्द यहां प्रजा एवं पशु-वाचक है। उस प्रजा-पशुरूप गर्भके धारण करनेवाले दैवी रेतः—गणपतिदेवके तेजके आकर्षणकी प्रार्थना की गई है, प्राकृत-घोड़ेके प्राकृत-वीर्यकी नहीं; क्योंकि—अश्वके वीर्यका और फिर उसमें मृतक-अश्वके वीर्यका मानुषी-स्त्रीमें गर्भसे सम्बन्ध ही

भला क्या हो सकता है ? क्या मृतकका वीर्य भी रह जाता है ? वीर्य-की शुष्कतासे ही तो मृत्यु होती है।

(ख) आक्षेप्ताओंकी कुमारियां वा स्त्रियां प्रार्थना करती हैं— 'वीर्यमसि वीर्यं मयि धेहि' (यजुः १६।६) 'अग्निः प्रजां बहुलां मे करोतु, अन्नं पयो रेतो अस्मासु धत्त' (यजुः १६।४८) इत्यादि मन्त्रोंसे वे कुमारियाँ वा स्त्रियाँ अपनेमें रेतः या वीर्यके आधानकी प्रार्थना करती हैं क्या ?

(ग) 'आर्याभिविनय' (पृ० ४६)के अनुसार वे प्रार्थना करती हैं—'हमारे हृदयमें रमण कीजिये' (ऋ० १।६१।१३); तो क्या वे आक्षेप्ताओंकी स्त्रियाँ उसी 'प्राकृत वीर्य' तथा 'रमण'की प्रार्थना कर रही होती हैं, जिसे प्रतिपक्षी यहाँ बताते हैं ?

(घ) 'इमं ते उपस्थं मधुना सᳫंसृजामि' इस स्वा० द० जीकी संस्कारविधिमें लिखे, विवाहकालीन-मन्त्रमें भी आक्षेप्तागण क्या स्त्रीके उसी उपस्थको मधुसे युक्त कर रहे होते हैं ? यदि ऐसा है; तो दूसरों पर आक्षेप क्यों ?

(ङ) 'अथैनं मनुष्याः उपस्थं कृत्वा उपासीदन्' (शतपथ २।४।२।३) यहाँ क्या प्रजापतिके सामने मनुष्योंका गुप्त-अङ्ग निकालना माना जावेगा ? जो अर्थ 'वीर्य, उपस्थ' आदिका प्रतिपक्षी यहाँ करेंगे, वही महीधरभाष्यमें भी हो जायगा ?

(च) परमैश्वर्यकेलिए बैलसे, छेरीसे भोग करें' [उपयोग लें] (यजुः २१।६०) यह स्वा० द० जीका किया अर्थ है; तब क्या आक्षेप्ताओं-की वेद पढ़नेवाली स्त्रियोंका बैलसे और उनका स्वयं छेरीसे भोग

वा उपयोग लेना वही तथाकथित अश्वके भोग वा उपयोग जैसा माना जावेगा या नहीं ?

(ज) यदि नहीं; तो याज्ञिक-प्रक्रियामें भी ऐसी बात नहीं; वहां पर अश्व मृतक है, 'मेढ्रं ते शुन्धामि' (यजुः ६।१४) उसके अंग पृथक्-पृथक् शोधित कर रखे हैं; उससे मैथुन हो ही कैसे सकता है ? 'गणानां त्वा' इस यजुर्वेदके मन्त्रका ऐतरेय-ब्राह्मणसे 'ब्राह्मणस्पत्यम्' यह जो आक्षेप्ताओं-द्वारा अर्थ बताया जाता है, उन लोगोंको यह पता नहीं कि—यह याजुष-मन्त्रका अर्थ नहीं, किन्तु ऋग्वेदके 'गणानां' इस ब्रह्मणस्पतिवाले मन्त्रका अर्थ है। उसमें 'गर्भधं' आदि याजुषमन्त्रके पदोंकी व्याख्या है ही नहीं। जिन्हें यह पता नहीं; वे चले हैं महीधरके अर्थपर आक्षेप करने। यदि दोनों ऋग्वेद एवं यजुर्वेदके गणपति एक हैं; इसलिए याजुष-मन्त्रका ऋग्वेदके ऐतरेय-ब्राह्मणसे अर्थ किया जाता है; तब भी हमारा ही पक्ष सिद्ध हुआ कि अश्वमें उसी गणपति-देवताका आह्वान किया जा रहा है; उसी गणपतिदेवके तेजके आकर्षणार्थ प्रार्थना है; तब

(६) प्रतिपक्षिगण अश्वके...डरते हैं; और उससे स्त्रीके जीवित न रहनेकी शङ्का प्रकट करते हैं; पर उपवेद-आयुर्वेद पुरुषको ही 'वाजीकरण' औषधि देकर स्त्रीकेलिए 'अश्व' बनाया चाहता है; और वेद भी पुरुषके अंगको 'अश्वका अङ्ग' बनाया चाहता है। देखिये—'यावदंगीनं पारस्वतं हास्तिनं गार्दभं च यत्। यावद् अश्वस्य वाजिनः तावत् ते (पुरुषस्य) वर्धतां पसः, (अथर्व० ६।७२।३) पस 'शिश्न' को कहते हैं; देखिये इसपर स्वा० द०जीका यजुर्वेदभाष्य (२०।६)। तो क्या स्त्री उस पुरुषके अश्वके शिश्नसे जीवित रह सकेगी, जिसका वेद विधान कर रहा है? यदि यहां प्रतिपक्षी 'अश्व'का साक्षात् 'अश्व' अर्थ नहीं लेते; वैसे यहां पर भी वे 'अश्वशिश्न' खास अर्थ कैसे करते हैं ?

(१०) यह स्पष्ट किया जा चुका है कि—जो अर्थ श्रीमहीधराचार्यने किया है; वह शतपथब्राह्मणसे लिया है। सो जो तात्पर्य शतपथमें होगा, महीधरभाष्यमें भी वही तात्पर्य होगा। सो 'गर्भधं रेतः स्वयोनौ स्थापयति, अश्वशिश्नमुपस्थे कुरुते' आदिका अर्थ भी यही जान लेना चाहिये कि—स्त्री प्रजा-पशुरूप गर्भको धारण करनेवाले

गणपतिदेवके सोमरूप तेजको—जैसे कि वेदमें कहा है—'अयथ्ठं सोमो वृष्णोऽश्वस्य रेतः' (यजुः २३।६२)—प्रार्थित करके उसे अपने भीतर आकर्षित करनेकी भावना करती है। इसी भावनाके फलस्वरूप उसे चक्रवर्ती पुत्र पैदा होता है।

विवाह-संस्कारमें स्वा०द०ने संस्कारविधिमें 'इन्द्राग्नी... बृहस्पतिर्मरुतो ब्रह्म सोम इमां नारीं प्रजया वर्धयन्तु' (पृ० १५४-१५५) यह मन्त्र लिखा है। उसका अर्थ किया है—बृहस्पतिः—राजा, मरुतः—सभ्य मनुष्य...इस मेरी स्त्रीको प्रजासे बढ़ाया करते हैं' यह वरकी उक्ति है। तो क्या वरकी स्त्रीमें राजा और सभ्य मनुष्य मैथुन करते हैं? यदि नहीं, यह केवल आशीर्वादमात्र है, वैसे वहां भी गणपतिके तेजके आकर्षणकी भावनामात्र है। सो यहां अर्थ यह है—

'अश्वस्य—अश्नुते व्याप्नोति सर्वं जगद्-इति अश्वः, गणपतिदेवः (नमस्ते गणपतये...त्वमेव सर्वं खल्विदं ब्रह्मासि' इति गणपत्युपनिषदुक्तेः) तस्य गणपतिदेवस्य शिश्नम्-'शिश्नं श्नथतेः' (निरुक्त ४।१६।६) श्नथयति—ताडयति हिनस्ति वा विघ्नरूपं तम इति शिश्नम्, शेषति—हिनस्ति वा प्रतिबन्धकतामिति वा शिश्नम्, शश प्लुतगतौ-शशति शीघ्रं व्याप्नोति इति वा शिश्नम्, शिनोति-तीक्ष्णीभवति इति वा शिश्नम्' (सर्वत्र पृषोदरादिः (६।३।१०६) शिश्नं-तेज इत्यर्थः; तद् व्यापकं गणपति-तेज आकृष्य भक्त्या स्वयोनौ—कर्मफलोत्पादके कारणभूतस्वसूक्ष्मशरीरान्तः फलोत्पादन-पर्यन्तं सूक्ष्मरूपेण धारयति। वाजी—वेगवान् बलवान् वृषा-

अथवा—'मम योनिर्महद् ब्रह्म तस्मिन् गर्भं दधाम्यहम्' (गीता १४।३)के अनुसार प्रकृतिरूप-पत्नीमें चिदाभासरूप गर्भका आधान करनेवाले गणपतिदेवका मैं आह्वान करती हूँ; यह अर्थ है, शेष पूर्ववत्।

यहां अश्वके मृतक होनेसे उससे मैथुन असम्भव है; जबकि जीवितके साथ भी वैसा नहीं हो सकता। तब जिस-यज्ञमें अपने पतिसे भी कामवासना आदिका निषेध होता है, उसीमें मृत-अश्वके साथ वासनारूप-ग्राम्यधर्म कैसे हो सकता है? तब यहां पूर्व कहा हुआ अर्थ ही वास्तविक है। उक्त शब्द परोक्ष-वृत्तिसे कहे गये हैं। क्या कभी आक्षेप्ताओंकी स्त्रियां अपने मृतक-पतिसे मैथुन कर सकती हैं? यदि नहीं; तब मृतक-अश्वसे ही वैसे कैसे हो सकता है? अतः गणपतिदेवका तेज ही यहां प्रार्थित किया गया है। इस अवसरपर अश्वकी तीन-परिक्रमा शतपथ (१३।२।८।४) और कातीयश्रौतसूत्र (२०।६।१३) के अनुसार की जाती हैं, परिक्रमा देव-पूजामें ही हुआ करती है; सो यह स्पष्ट देवपूजा ही है। इसी दैवी तेजके आकर्षणके फलस्वरूप महिषीका चक्रवर्ती-लड़का उत्पन्न

कर्मकाण्डमें भी अश्वमहिषी-प्रसङ्गमें कोई सम्भोगका सम्बन्ध नहीं दीखता; क्योंकि अश्व मृतक है; तब केवल मृतक-अश्वके पृथग्भूत और संशोधित अङ्गका स्पर्शमात्र, *उपस्थ (उत्सङ्ग, गोदमें, अथवा अपने अङ्गपर) स्थापनमात्र ही इष्ट है, वहाँ विलासिता न होनेसे तथा भावना दूषित न होनेसे पातिव्रत्य-भंगकी आशङ्का भी नहीं होती, क्योंकि-वह भी शास्त्राज्ञानुसार पतिकी आज्ञासे उसके यज्ञकी पूर्त्यर्थ किया जाता है। गायके स्तन वा मूत्रस्थानका पुरुष स्पर्श करते हैं; तो क्या वहाँ पुरुषोंको स्त्रीके अङ्गोंके स्पर्शका विचार आ जाता है? वा उन्हें उससे काम-वासना हो जाती है? यदि नहीं; तब स्त्रीको ही घोड़ेके अङ्गके स्पर्शमात्रसे काम-वासना कैसे उत्पन्न हो जावेगी? क्या वह मनुष्य है? प्रतिपक्षियोंको जो ऐसी-वासना उत्पन्न हो जाती है; उसका कारण नियोग आदिकी कामुकताके प्रचारसे मस्तिष्कमें विकृतिका उत्पन्न हो जाना है। प्रतिपक्षी लोग नियोगसे वा विधवा-विवाहसे मृतककी पत्नीके अङ्गमें अन्य पुरुषके अङ्गका स्पर्शमात्र तो क्या; उसमें तो विलास भी करवाते हैं; वहाँ उनको उस पत्नीके पातिव्रत्य-भङ्गकी शङ्का ही नहीं होती। यदि वे उसे अपने अभिमत-शास्त्रके अर्थके अनुसार व्यवहार करानेसे उसके पातिव्रत्यके भङ्गकी शङ्का नहीं करते; तब इस-कर्मकाण्डमें शङ्का करना अपने नियोग वा विधवा-विवाहसे आँख मूँद लेना है। जिस प्रकार आप लोग यहाँ उपहास

*उपस्थके उत्सङ्ग-अर्थमें शतपथ-ब्राह्मणकी साक्षी हम दे चुके हैं।

करते हैं; वैसे नियोगमें आप लोगोंका भी उपहास होता है, पर विचार करनेसे यह सब आक्षेप कट जाते हैं। प्रसव करनेमें डाक्टर भी स्त्रीकी योनिका स्पर्श कर रहे होते हैं। उसमें हाथ भी डाल रहे होते हैं; इससे क्या उस स्त्रीका आप पतिव्रत्यभङ्ग मान लेंगे? विवाहको ही ले लीजिये; इसके अङ्ग-गर्भाधानमें ही क्या अश्लीलता नहीं है? पर शास्त्रानुसार व्यवहारसे वहाँ धर्म्यता मान ली जाती है; अश्वमेधमें तो न कोई कामवासना है, न ही विलास वा सम्भोग ही; तब बलात् वहाँ समागम वा सम्भोग बताना प्रतिपक्षियोंका अपने कलुषित-हृदयका ही यह कलुषित-विचार है, प्रकृतमें ऐसी कोई बात नहीं।

यदि वादी ऐसा मानते हैं; और अपनेको वेद-प्रेमी मानते हैं; तो वे जरा अथर्ववेदके कुन्तापसूक्तपर दृष्टि डालें। उसमें मन्त्र है—'महानग्नी उपब्रूते अश्वस्य आवेशितं पसः' (२०।१३६।६) इस मन्त्रमें महानग्नी स्त्रीमें 'अश्वस्य पस आवेशितम्'का अर्थ क्या करेंगे? इन्हीं अश्वमेधके मन्त्रों तथा कुन्तापसूक्तोंसे त्रस्त होकर आर्यसमाजके एक अन्वेषक-विद्वान्ने अपने काँगड़ी वेद-सम्मेलनके सभापति-भाषण (११ अप्रैल १९५०)के ४२ पृष्ठमें कहा है—'प्रतिवर्ष भारतके भिन्न-भिन्न प्रदेशोंके वेदोंके विद्वान् एक केन्द्रिय-स्थानपर एकत्रित हों,...अश्वमेधसूक्त, कुन्तापसूक्त, तथा 'त्रीणि शता त्री सहस्राणि अग्निं त्रिंशच्च देवाः' 'इन्द्रो दधीचो अस्थिभिः' इत्यादि मन्त्रोंमें विशेषरूपसे विचार किया जाए, जो वेदोंका अनुशीलन करनेवालोंकेलिए विशेष कठिनाई उपस्थित करते हैं'। इससे स्पष्ट है कि—

अश्वमेधसूक्तके उक्त मन्त्रोंका जो अर्थ स्वा० द० जीने किया है, वह उन्हें भी सन्तोषप्रद प्रतीत नहीं हुआ; उसमें उन्हें भी उनकी प्रसह्यकारिता मालूम होती है।

इसपर उत्तर यह है कि—इन अर्थोंके करनेसे यदि श्री-महीधराचार्यको अपवादित किया जाता है; तो इसका भाव यह हुआ कि—वेदमें तथाकथित अश्लील वर्णन नहीं हो सकता। पर ऐसा कहना अज्ञान है। वेदमें सर्वाङ्गीणता होती है। सर्वाङ्गतामें सब कुछ होता है। यदि वेदमें ऐसे वर्णन अश्लील माने जावें; तो 'रेतो मूत्रं विजहाति योनिं प्रविशदिन्द्रियम्' (यजुः १९।७६) इस मन्त्रका अर्थ आर्यसमाजी-आचार्य अपने पास वेद पढ़नेवाली १७।२४ वर्षकी कुमारियोंको क्या बताते हैं? 'यस्यां बीजं मनुष्या वपन्ति। यस्यामुशन्तः प्रहराम शेपं' (ऋ० १०।८५।३७) इस मन्त्रका अर्थ कुमारियोंको क्या पढ़ाते हैं? वा विवाहित हो रही हुईको स्पष्ट बताते हैं? 'मेढ्रं ते शुन्धामि पायुं ते शुन्धामि' (यजु० ६।१४) इस मन्त्रका अर्थ कुमारियोंको क्या पढ़ाते हैं? क्या यह तथाकथित अश्लीलता है या नहीं?

Saivya mistakenly marries a dog, believing it to be her husband,

📚Vishnu Purana 3.18.64-67📚
With the eye of divine intelligence she knew that her own husband had been regenerate as a dog, and going once to the city of Vaidisa she saw the dog, and recognised her former lord in him. Knowing that the animal was her husband, she placed upon his neck the bridal garland, accompanying it with the marriage rites and prayers…"

Refutation-

In the Vishnu Purana Amsa 3 Adhaya 18 Geeta Press Gorakhpur , there is no indication that Shaivya married a dog. Upon recognising her husband reborn as a dog, she simply treated him with respect, offered him food, and reminded him of the actions that led to his fall. The narrative then recounts his successive births as a dog, jackal, wolf, vulture, crow, and peacock, with Shaivya meeting him in each life and reminding him of his true identity. Only after he regained human form did their marriage take place, making the claim of a “dog marriage” unsupported by the source.

सुना जाता है, पूर्वकालमें पृथिवीतलपर शतधनु नामसे विख्यात एक राजा था। उसकी पत्नी शैव्या अत्यन्त धर्मपरायणा थी ॥ ५३ ॥ वह महाभागा पतिव्रता, सत्य, शौच और दयासे युक्त तथा विनय और नीति आदि सम्पूर्ण सुलक्षणोंसे सम्पन्ना थी ॥ ५४॥ उस महारानीके साथ राजा शतधनुने परम समाधिद्वारा सर्वव्यापक, देवदेव श्रीजनार्दनकी आराधना की ॥ ५५॥ वे प्रतिदिन तन्मय होकर अनन्यभावसे होम, जप, दान, उपवास और पूजन आदिद्वारा भगवान्‌की भक्तिपूर्वक आराधना करने लगे ॥ ५६ ॥ हे द्विज! एक दिन कार्तिकी पूर्णिमाको उपवास कर उन दोनों पति-पत्नियोंने श्रीगंगाजीमें एक साथ ही स्नान करनेके अनन्तर बाहर आनेपर एक पाखण्डीको सामने आता देखा ॥ ५७॥ यह ब्राह्मण उस महात्मा राजाके धनुर्वेदाचार्यका मित्र था; अतः आचार्यके गौरववश राजाने भी उससे मित्रवत् व्यवहार किया ॥ ५८ ॥ किन्तु उसकी पतिव्रता पत्नीने उसका कुछ भी आदर नहीं किया; वह मौन रही और यह सोचकर कि मैं उपोषिता (उपवासयुक्त) हूँ उसे देखकर सूर्यका दर्शन किया ॥ ५९ ॥ हे द्विजोत्तम! फिर उन स्त्री-पुरुषोंने यथारीति आकर भगवान् विष्णुके पूजा आदिक सम्पूर्ण कर्म विधिपूर्वक किये ॥ ६० ॥ राजा शतधनुने उपवास-अवस्थामें पाखण्डीसे वार्तालाप किया था। अतः उस पापके कारण उसने कुत्तेका जन्म लिया ॥ ६२ ॥ तथा वह शुभलक्षणा काशीनरेशकी कन्या हुई, जो सब प्रकारके विज्ञानसे युक्त, सर्वलक्षणसम्पन्ना और जातिस्मरा (पूर्वजन्मका वृत्तान्त जाननेवाली) थी ॥ ६३ ॥ राजाने उसे किसी वरको देनेकी इच्छा की, किन्तु उस सुन्दरीके ही रोक देनेपर वह उसके विवाहादिसे उपरत हो गये ॥ ६४॥
तब उसने दिव्य दृष्टिसे अपने पतिको श्वान हुआ जान विदिशा नामक नगरमें जाकर उसे वहाँ कुत्तेकी अवस्थामें देखा ॥ ६५ ॥ अपने महाभाग पतिको श्वानरूपमें देखकर उस सुन्दरीने उसे सत्कारपूर्वक अति उत्तम भोजन कराया ॥ ६६ ॥ उसके दिये हुए उस अति मधुर और इच्छित अन्नको खाकर वह अपनी जातिके अनुकूल नाना प्रकारकी चाटुता प्रदर्शित करने लगा ॥ ६७ ॥ उसके चाटुता करनेसे अत्यन्त संकुचित हो उस बालिकाने कुत्सित योनिमें उत्पन्न हुए उस अपने प्रियतमको प्रणाम कर उससे इस प्रकार कहा- ॥ ६८ ॥ “महाराज ! आप अपनी उस उदारताका स्मरण कीजिये जिसके कारण आज आप श्वान-योनिको प्राप्त होकर मेरे चाटुकार हुए हैं॥ ६९ ॥ हे प्रभो! क्या आपको यह स्मरण नहीं है कि तीर्थस्नानके अनन्तर पाखण्डीसे वार्तालाप करनेके कारण ही आपको यह कुत्सित योनि मिली है?” ॥ ७० ॥
श्रीपराशरजी बोले- काशिराजसुताद्वारा इस प्रकार स्मरण कराये जानेपर उसने बहुत देरतक अपने

पूर्वजन्मका चिन्तन किया। तब उसे अति दुर्लभ निर्वेद प्राप्त हुआ ॥ ७१ ॥ उसने अति उदास चित्तसे नगरके बाहर आ प्राण त्याग दिये और फिर शृगाल-योनिमें जन्म लिया ॥ ७२ ॥ तब काशिराजकन्या दिव्य दृष्टिसे उसे दूसरे जन्ममें शृगाल हुआ जान उसे देखनेके लिये कोलाहल पर्वतपर गयी ॥ ७३ ॥ वहाँ भी अपने पतिको शृगाल-योनिमें उत्पन्न हुआ देख वह सुन्दरी राजकन्या उससे बोली- ॥ ७४ ॥ " हे राजेन्द्र ! श्वान-योनिमें जन्म लेनेपर मैंने आपसे जो पाखण्डीसे वार्तालापविषयक पूर्वजन्मका वृत्तान्त कहा था क्या वह आपको स्मरण है?" ॥ ७५ ॥ तब सत्यनिष्ठोंमें श्रेष्ठ राजा शतधनुने उसके इस प्रकार कहनेपर सारा सत्य वृत्तान्त जानकर निराहार रह वनमें अपना शरीर छोड़ दिया ॥ ७६ ॥ फिर वह एक भेड़िया हुआ; उस समय भी अनिन्दिता राजकन्याने उस निर्जन वनमें जाकर अपने पतिको उसके पूर्वजन्मका वृत्तान्त स्मरण कराया ॥ ७७ ॥ [उसने कहा- "हे महाभाग ! तुम भेड़िया नहीं हो, तुम राजा शतधनु हो। तुम [अपने पूर्वजन्मोंमें] क्रमशः कुक्कुर और शृगाल होकर अब भेड़िया हुए हो" ॥ ७८ ॥ इस प्रकार उसके स्मरण करानेपर राजाने जब भेड़ियेके शरीरको छोड़ा तो गृध्र-योनिमें जन्म लिया। उस समय भी उसकी निष्पाप भार्याने उसे फिर बोध कराया ॥ ७९ ॥ 'हे नरेन्द्र ! तुम अपने स्वरूपका स्मरण करो; इन गृध्र-चेष्टाओंको छोड़ो। पाखण्डीके साथ वार्तालाप करनेके दोषसे ही तुम गृध्र हुए हो' ॥ ८० ॥

योनिमें भी पूर्वजन्मका स्मरण कराये जानेपर राजाने अपने फिर दूसरे जन्ममें काक-योनिको प्राप्त होनेपर भी अपने पतिको योगबलसे पाकर उस सुन्दरीने कहा- ॥ ८१ ॥ "हे प्रभो! जिनके वशीभूत होकर सम्पूर्ण सामन्तगण नाना प्रकारकी वस्तुएँ भेंट करते थे वही आप आज काक-योनिको प्राप्त होकर बलिभोजी हुए हैं"॥ ८२ ॥ इसी प्रकार काक-प्राण छोड़ दिये और फिर मयूर-योनिमें जन्म लिया ॥ ८३ ॥

महायज्ञका अनुष्ठान किया; उस यज्ञमें अवभृथ-स्नानके मयूरावस्थामें भी काशिराजकी कन्या उसे क्षण-क्षणमें अति सुन्दर मयूरोचित आहार देती हुई उसकी टहल करने लगी ॥ ८४ ॥ उस समय राजा जनकने अश्वमेध नामक समय उस मयूरको स्नान कराया ॥ ८५ ॥ तब उस सुन्दरीने स्वयं भी स्नान कर राजाको यह स्मरण कराया कि किस प्रकार उसने श्वान और शृगाल आदि योनियाँ ग्रहण की थीं ॥ ८६ ॥ अपनी जन्म-परम्पराका स्मरण होनेपर उसने ही पुत्ररूपसे जन्म लिया ॥ ८७ ॥ अपना शरीर त्याग दिया और फिर महात्मा जनकजीके यहाँ

तब उस सुन्दरीने अपने पिताको विवाहके लिये प्रेरित किया। उसकी प्रेरणासे राजाने उसके स्वयंवरका आयोजन किया ॥ ८८ ॥ स्वयंवर होनेपर उस राजकन्याने स्वयंवरमें आये हुए अपने उस पतिको फिर पतिभावसे वरण कर लिया ॥ ८९ ॥ उस राजकुमारने काशिराजसुताके साथ नाना प्रकारके भोग भोगे और फिर पिताके परलोकवासी होनेपर विदेहनगरका राज्य किया ॥ ९० ॥ उसने बहुत-से यज्ञ किये, याचकोंको नाना प्रकारसे दान दिये, बहुत-से पुत्र उत्पन्न किये और शत्रुओंके साथ अनेकों युद्ध किये ॥ ९१ ॥ इस प्रकार उस राजाने पृथिवीका न्यायानुकूल पालन करते हुए राज्य-भोग किया और अन्तमें अपने प्रिय प्राणोंको धर्मयुद्धमें छोड़ा ॥ ९२ ॥ तब उस सुलोचनाने पहलेके समान फिर अपने चितारूढ पतिका विधिपूर्वक प्रसन्न मनसे अनुगमन किया ॥ ९३॥ इससे वह राजा उस राजकन्याके सहित इन्द्रलोकसे भी उत्कृष्ट अक्षय लोकोंको प्राप्त हुआ ॥ ९४ ॥

अपने पूर्वार्जित पुण्यका फल प्राप्त कर लिया ॥ ९५ ॥
हे द्विज ! इस प्रकार मैंने तुमसे पाखण्डीसे सम्भाषण करनेका दोष और अश्वमेध यज्ञमें स्नान करनेका माहात्म्य वर्णन कर दिया ॥ ९६ ॥ इसलिये पाखण्डी और पापाचारियोंसे कभी वार्तालाप और स्पर्श न करे; विशेषतः नित्य-नैमित्तिक कर्मोंके समय और जो यज्ञादि क्रियाओंके लिये दीक्षित हो उसे तो उनका संसर्ग त्यागना अत्यन्त आवश्यक है ॥ ९७ ॥ जिसके घरमें एक मासतक नित्यकर्मोंका अनुष्ठान न हुआ हो उसको देख लेनेपर बुद्धिमान् मनुष्य सूर्यका दर्शन करे ॥ ९८ ॥ फिर जिन्होंने वेदत्रयीका सर्वथा त्याग कर दिया है तथा जो पाखण्डियोंका अन्न खाते और वैदिक मतका विरोध करते हैं उन पापात्माओंके दर्शनादि करनेपर तो कहना ही क्या है ? ॥ ९९ ॥ इन दुराचारी पाखण्डियोंके साथ वार्तालाप करने, सम्पर्क रखने और उठने-बैठनेमें महान् पाप होता है; इसलिये इन सब बातोंका त्याग करे ॥ १०० ॥ पाखण्डी, विकर्मी, विडाल-व्रतवाले, दुष्ट, स्वार्थी और बगुला-भक्त लोगोंका वाणीसे भी आदर न करे ॥ १०१ ॥ इन पाखण्डी, दुराचारी और अति पापियोंका संसर्ग दूरहीसे त्यागने योग्य है। इसलिये इनका सर्वदा त्याग करे ॥ १०२ ॥

It is said that in ancient times there was a king on earth named Shatadhanu. His wife, Shaivya, was extremely devoted to righteousness—truthful, pure, compassionate, humble, wise, and adorned with every noble quality. Together they worshipped the all-pervading Lord of the gods, Shri Janardana, through deep meditation.

Day after day, absorbed in devotion, they performed homa, japa, charity, fasting, and worship with unwavering love for the Lord. One day, on the full moon of Kartika, they both fasted and bathed together in the holy Ganga. Upon coming out of the water, they saw a heretic. This man was a friend of the king's archery teacher, and so, out of respect for the teacher, the king treated him warmly. But Shaivya, being chaste and observing a fast, did not honor him—she remained silent and, after seeing him, turned her gaze to the sun.

Afterwards, the couple performed their worship of Vishnu. Yet, because the king had conversed with the heretic while fasting, he incurred sin and was reborn as a dog. The queen, however, was reborn as the daughter of the king of Kashi, blessed with beauty, learning, all auspicious qualities, and the gift of remembering past lives. When her father wished to marry her off, she refused, knowing her true husband's fate.

Through divine vision, she saw her husband living as a dog in Vidisha. She went there and fed him excellent food. The dog showed her affection according to his nature, and she, distressed, bowed to him and reminded him of his past—how speaking with a heretic after a holy bath had brought him to such a birth.

The dog remembered and, filled with detachment, left the city and died, being born again as a jackal. The princess found him again and repeated the reminder. He died in the forest and became a wolf. She sought him out once more and told him of his past births as dog and jackal. He died and was born as a vulture, then as a crow, then as a peacock—each time found and reminded by the faithful princess, who fed and cared for him.

During King Janaka's Ashvamedha sacrifice, the peacock was bathed, and the princess again reminded him of all his former lives. Then he was reborn as her own son, born in King Janaka's household. When he came of age, the princess had her father arrange her svayamvara, and she chose him once more as her husband.

He enjoyed royal pleasures with her, inherited the throne of Videha, performed many sacrifices, gave gifts, fathered many sons, and fought many battles. In the end, he died in a righteous war, and the princess, as before, mounted his funeral pyre and followed him.

Thus purified, they both attained an eternal realm even higher than Indra's heaven, enjoying the rare bliss of perfect union.

From this, it is taught that conversing with heretics is a grave sin, especially during sacred duties and rites, and that their association should be avoided altogether. One should never show them honor or keep their company, for such contact brings great spiritual harm.

तब उसने दिव्य दृष्टिसे अपने पतिको श्वान हुआ जान विदिशा नामक नगरमें जाकर उसे वहाँ कुत्तेकी अवस्थामें देखा॥ ६५॥ अपने महाभाग पतिको श्वानरूपमें देखकर उस सुन्दरीने उसे सत्कारपूर्वक अति उत्तम भोजन कराया॥ ६६॥ उसके दिये हुए उस अति मधुर और इच्छित अन्नको खाकर वह अपनी जातिके अनुकूल नाना प्रकारकी चाटुता प्रदर्शित करने लगा॥ ६७॥ उसके चाटुता करनेसे अत्यन्त संकुचित हो उस बालिकाने कुत्सित योनिमें उत्पन्न हुए उस अपने प्रियतमको प्रणाम कर उससे इस प्रकार कहा—॥ ६८॥ "महाराज! आप अपनी उस उदारताका स्मरण कीजिये जिसके कारण आज आप श्वान-योनिको प्राप्त होकर मेरे चाटुकार हुए हैं॥ ६९॥ हे प्रभो! क्या आपको यह स्मरण नहीं है कि तीर्थस्नानके अनन्तर पाखण्डीसे वार्तालाप करनेके कारण ही आपको यह कुत्सित योनि मिली है?"॥ ७०॥

फिर वह एक भेड़िया हुआ; उस समय भी अनिन्दिता राजकन्याने उस निर्जन वनमें जाकर अपने पतिको उसके पूर्वजन्मका वृत्तान्त स्मरण कराया॥ ७७॥ [उसने कहा—] "हे महाभाग! तुम भेड़िया नहीं हो, तुम राजा शतधनु हो। तुम [अपने पूर्वजन्मोंमें] क्रमशः कुक्कुर और शृगाल होकर अब भेड़िया हुए हो"॥ ७८॥ इस प्रकार उसके स्मरण करानेपर राजाने जब भेड़ियेके शरीरको छोड़ा तो गृध्र-योनिमें जन्म लिया। उस समय भी उसकी निष्पाप भार्याने उसे फिर बोध कराया॥ ७९॥ 'हे नरेन्द्र! तुम अपने स्वरूपका स्मरण करो; इन गृध्र-चेष्टाओंको छोड़ो। पाखण्डीके साथ वार्तालाप करनेके दोषसे ही तुम गृध्र हुए हो'॥ ८०॥

📚Shiva Purana 5.4.21📚
The sun of fierce rays, deluded by Shiva's Maya became lustful on seeing a mare and assumed the form of a horse."

Refutation-

Coming on to Shiva Purana, UmaSamhita 5.4.21 –

According to R.C. Hazra, the Uma Saṁhitā of the Shiva Purāṇa is a very late addition. He notes that it draws heavily from the Jñāna Saṁhitā, which itself is dated to around 950 CE. Based on this, it can be reasonably inferred that the Uma Saṁhitā was incorporated into the Shiva Purāṇa sometime after the 10th century CE.

IV. The Bhaumasaṃhitā,[391] also called Auma/Umāsaṃhitā, is represented in the class B editions only. The text introduces Kṛṣṇa on a visit to Kailāsa and performing penance there to Śiva, in order to obtain a son. He meets Upamanyu, and requests him to tell him about the greatness of Śiva. Upamanyu complies, and praises Śiva and his trident; he extols Śiva's power to save his devotees from hell. This discussion leads into several chapters on different types of sins, and on the description of hell and the suffering in it. Ways to avoid this suffering include gifts of food, performing penance, listening to the purāṇas, etc. The saṃhitā subsequently describes the seven dvīpas of the earth, and other component parts of the universe. It ends with discourses on a variety of topics, such as the development of man, from the foetus, through childhood, youth, marriage, old age, etc.; creation and manvantaras; etc. In Hazra's opinion the text borrows most of its chapters from the Jñānasaṃhitā.

XIII. The Jñānasaṃhitā[400] has already been referred to on several occasions in this description of the Śiva°, because, in Hazra's opinion, other saṃhitās borrowed verses and even chapters from it. The text recognizes the Vedas as the highest authority, but it was Śiva, as ṛgyajuḥsāmarūpin, who communicated them to Viṣṇu. Śiva shall be worshiped with Vedic mantras, even though the saṃhitā does not, therefore, reject the authority of the Tantras and eventual Śiva worship with Āgamic rather than Vedic mantras. The nirguṇa Śiva is identical with the parabrahma; in his saguṇa form he manifests himself as Rudra. Prakṛti was born from Śiva's wish, and, from her, were born the other gods including Brahmā and Viṣṇu. This saṃhitā, like some of those discussed earlier, strongly encourages liṅga worship as the ideal way to worship Śiva himself. It urges worship under the guidance of a competent teacher; worship will lead to bhakti, then to jñāna, and, ultimately, to vijñāna, i.e. the realization that the only real thing is Śiva. Hazra points out that the text was influenced by the Kumārasambhava, Raghuvaṃśa, and Kirātārjunīya. He surmises that it may have been composed in Banaras, by someone who was also familiar with the banks of the Narmadā, not before A. D. 950.

The Śiva Purāṇa, as a whole, is one of the most composite and unwieldy Purāṇas, having been composed and expanded by different authors over various periods. There exist two primary versions: the Bombay 1884, Venkat 1895–96, and Venga Manuscript (Class A); and the Venkat 1906, 1965 Pandita Pustakalaya Manuscript (Class B). According to R.C. Hazra, the sections found in the Class A Manuscript are older and more authentic, whereas those in the Class B Manuscript (Including Uma Samhita) are very recent compositions . Most significantly, the older and more authentic Class A Manuscript does not contain the Uma Saṁhitā.

saṃhitās, with different titles and different arrangements; two of their saṃhitās are not even listed in the Śiva° passages.[387] The following is a comparative survey of the saṃhitās, in the two passages of the Śiva° itself, and in the two sets of editions — which from now on I will refer to as class A and class B editions.

📚Matsya Purana 11.34-37📚
The sun, after thus getting his power modified by Visvakarma, went out in the form of a horse and enjoyed himself in the company of Sanjna, who, not recognising him and taking him for another person, became terrified, but was helpless; she consequently ejected the semen virile through her nostrils, out of which Asvinikumaras, called otherwise Nasatyas and Dasras, were born. They are called Nasatyas, because they were born from the nose (nasa) and Dasras, because they were born as Sons. Afterwards, Sanjna recognised her Lord and became pleased, and went with her Lord in a vamana to heaven."

त्वष्टाद्वारा संज्ञाका पता बतला दिये जानेपर वे देवेश्वर भगवान् सूर्य भूलोकमें जा पहुँचे। वहाँ उनके द्वारा संज्ञासे अश्विनीकुमारोंकी उत्पत्ति हुई- यह एकदम तथ्य बात है। संज्ञाकी नासिकाके अग्रभागसे उत्पन्न होनेके कारण वे दोनों नासत्य और दस्त्र नामसे भी विख्यात हुए। कुछ दिनोंके पश्चात्

अश्वरूपधारी सूर्यदेवको पहचानकर त्वाष्ट्री (संज्ञा) परम सन्तुष्ट हुई और हर्षपूर्ण चित्तसे पतिके साथ विमानपर बैठकर स्वर्गलोक (आकाश) को चली गयी। (छायाकी संतानोंमें) तपोधन सावर्णि मनु आज भी सुमेरुगिरिपर विराजमान हैं। शनिने अपनी तपस्याके प्रभावसे ग्रहोंकी समता प्राप्त की।

After Tvaṣṭṛ revealed the identity, the lord of the gods, Surya, reached the earthly realm. There, through her, the Ashvini Kumāras were born—this is an established fact. Since they emerged from the front part of her nose, they also became famous by the names Nāstya and Dāstra. After a few days, recognizing the horse-shaped Surya Deva, Tvaṣṭṛ's daughter (Sanjñā) was fully satisfied, and with a joyful heart, she boarded a celestial vehicle with her husband and went to Svarga-loka (heaven). Among the children of Chhāyā, Tapodhana Sāvarṇi Manu still reigns on Mount Sumeru. Shani attained equality among the planets through the influence of his penance.

As clearly stated in Slokas 7–8 of Mahabharata Adi Parva (Gita Press edition), Rishi Kindama and his wife had transformed themselves into a stag and a doe and were mating in deer form for the purpose of begetting progeny.

This does not fall under the definition of bestiality, which is sexual intercourse between a human and an animal. In this incident, both partners were originally human but had assumed animal forms; thus, it was intercourse between two beings of the same (transformed) species.

While they were in union, King Pandu shot arrows at the pair, fatally wounding them. Upon being struck, Rishi Kindama and his wife reverted to their human forms and, in their grief and anger, cursed King Pandu.

Definition of Bestiality

sexual relations between a human being and a lower animal bestiality noun

bes·ti·al·i·ty ˌbes-chē-ˈa-lə-tē ˌbesh-, ˌbēs- ˌbēshplural bestialities

Synonyms of bestiality >

1 : sexual relations between a human being and a lower animal

In the Mahābhārata, Ādi Parva, Adhyāya 117, verses 7–8 describe a Rishi and his wife transformed into a deer and a doe, engaging in mating. Since they are humans in transformed forms, this act is not bestiality.

राजन्! उस मृगके रूपमें एक महातेजस्वी तपोधन ऋषिपुत्र थे, जो अपनी मृगीरूपधारिणी पत्नीके साथ तेजस्वी मृग बनकर समागम कर रहे थे ।। ७ । वे उस मृगीसे सटे हुए ही मनुष्योंकी-सी बोली बोलते हुए क्षणभरमें पृथ्वीपर गिर पड़े। उनकी इन्द्रियाँ व्याकुल हो गयीं और वे विलाप करने लगे ।। ८ ।।

Verse 7:
O King! That deer was in fact a highly radiant sage's son, endowed with great spiritual power, who had assumed the form of a deer along with his wife, who had taken the form of a doe. They had transformed into these forms and were engaged in union.

Verse 8:
While still in union with the doe, the sage's son(in the form of a deer) , speaking in a human voice, suddenly fell to the ground. His senses were agitated, and he began to wail in distress.

Even Chatpgt says same thing in answer to this question regarding the same Story of Rishi Kindama

No, this is not bestiality.
Both the sage and his wife were humans who had consciously assumed animal forms through yogic or magical means. Their union was between two humans in animal form, not between species.

With reference to this, they relate a legend, Saranyu daughter of Tvastr bore twins, Yama and Yaml, to Vivasvat the sun. She having substituted another lady of similar appearance, and having assumed the shape of a mare, ran away. He, Vivasvat, the sun, having also assumed the shape of a horse, pursued her, and joined her. Hence the Ashvins were born.”

Rig Veda 10.17.1-2

"Tvaṣṭā celebrates the marriage of his daughter; therefore, the whole world is assembled; but themother of Yama, the newly-married wife of the mighty Vivasvat, disappeared.

Refutation –

In Nirukta 12.10 (Hindi translation, Chaukhamba Publications), the birth of the Ashvinī Kumāras is described from the Ashva-rūpa Āditya (Sun) and Saraṇyū. The text itself defines Saraṇyū not as a mortal woman, but as a personification of a cosmic phenomenon—specifically, the shadow or night that follows when Prabhā (light) departs from the Earth. It states that the period of Saraṇyū lies between Vṛṣākapāyī and Uṣā, meaning after the evening twilight and before the morning twilight. Āditya here refers to the Sun, which is also a celestial deity, not a human being. This makes it absolutely clear that the account is symbolic and cosmological, involving deified natural forces—not a literal human relationship—thus the vulgar interpretations pushed by detractors are baseless distortions of Vedic metaphor.

(१) सरण्यू-(क) जब प्रभा पृथिवी से चली जाती है तब उस छाया या रात्रि को सरण्यू कहा जाता है। सरण्यू का काल वृषाकपायी के बाद और उषा के पूर्व होता है अर्थात् सायंकालीन सन्ध्या के पश्चात् और प्रातःकालीन सन्ध्या के पूर्व तक के समय को सरण्यू कहा जाता है।

(ख) ऐतिहासिक लोग सरण्यू को त्वष्टा की पुत्री मानते हैं जिसने सूर्य के सम्पर्क से यम और यमी— इन जुड़वे भाई और भगिनी को पैदा किया है, पुनः घोड़ी का रूप बनाकर सूर्य से दूर भाग गयी। तब सूर्य ने अश्व का रूप बनाकर उसका पीछा किया जिससे दोनों अश्विनौ की उत्पत्ति हुई।

(ग) 'सरण्यूः सरणात्' सरण करने के कारण इसे सरण्यू कहा जाता है। यह शब्द सरणार्थक 'सृ' धातु से 'अन्युच्' प्रत्यय (उणादि ३.८१) करके बना है। निरुक्तकारों के अनुसार यह वृषाकपायी (सायंकालीन सन्ध्या से आगे को गयी होती है, अतः सरण्यू कहलाती है।

(घ) ऐतिहासिकों के अनुसार यह यम-यमी को पैदा करने के बाद अपने प्रतिरूप अन्य को अपना प्रतिनिधि बनाकर और स्वयं घोड़ी का रूप धारण करके सूर्य से सरक गयी-दूर चली गयी, अतः सरण्यू कही जाती है।

(२) नैरुक्त 'द्वामिथुना' का अर्थ मध्यम (अन्धकार) तथा माध्यमिकावाक् (निस्तब्धता) करते हैं, किन्तु ऐतिहासिक इसका अर्थ यम-यमी करते हैं।

(ऋ० १०.१७.१)

त्वष्टा दुहितुर्वहनं करोतीतीदं विश्वं भुवनं समेति, इमानि सर्वाणि च

Ācārya Skanda Svāmi in his Bhāṣya on Nirukta 12.10, explained that Saraṇyū is not a human woman nor an anthropomorphic figure, but the reddish sky at the junction of night and day. The Vedic statement that the rays of the Sun "hide" something means that they conceal the tender reddish glow of dawn (Vṛṣākapāyinī) from mortals, who cannot perceive that subtle stage. When the reddish orb (Aruṇa) rises, the rays reveal another form of the same hue—Saraṇyū—making the dawn-light more visible. The Aśvins are said to "carry" this light, not physically, but symbolically, as they represent the twofold state of darkness and brightness that mediates the transition from night into day. As this reddish form intensifies into daylight, it also embodies duality (Yama–Yamī), form, and speech.

In another symbolic verse, Tvaṣṭṛ is described as the "middle portion," and his daughter is Uṣas (the dawn). Her "union" with the Sun is nothing but the merging of dawn into the rising orb. Thus the imagery of "wife," "mother," or "marriage" is only metaphorical: dawn belongs to the Sun, accompanies him, dissolves into him, and inspires all beings to awaken and act in accordance with their natural duties. By divine law, night and dawn are spoken of as the Sun's companions and even "mother," not in a physical sense but in a cosmic one. Therefore this story is, in fact, a profound Vedic allegory of light, transition, and cosmic action, confirmed by the ancient commentary tradition.

The Vedic sages received divine knowledge. The rays of the sun are said to hide or take away something — what do they hide?
They hide the reddish light of dawn (called Vṛṣākapāyinī) — the early light seen at sunrise.

From whom is it hidden?
From humans — meaning, ordinary people can't see or grasp that divine light clearly.

Later, another form, similar in color and name, was made — called Saraṇyū. When the reddish dawn (Aruṇa) appears, the light of Saraṇyū is given again by the sun's rays, making it more visible.

That light is then carried by the Ashvin twins, not in a physical way, but meaning they hold within themselves both darkness and light — they are a balance of night and day.

That reddish form of dawn gradually becomes more and more bright as the sun rises.

Now, the two twins (male and female — Yama and Yamī) represent this dual nature, and even middle speech (the kind of speech that exists between thought and voice) is connected with this form. So, this reddish form includes three things: form, duality, and speech.

In this Vedic verse (ṛc), Tvaṣṭā is in the middle portion (madhyamastama-bhāgaḥ – middle-most part), and his daughter is Uṣas (the dawn). Since she is born at sunrise, she is carried or enters (vahati) into the Sun (āditya) — thus the 'marriage' is symbolic of union.

The Sun (Tvaṣṭā or Vivasvat), by entering the night (his daughter in the form of darkness or Uṣas), 'performs the act' (karoti) — this represents the transition between night and day.

Therefore, this entire world (sarvaṁ bhūtajātaṁ) comes together (sameti) and unites with its respective actions (svaiḥ karmabhiḥ saṁbadhyate).
As the dawn rises, darkness fades; hence at sunrise (udite uṣasi), darkness (tam) disappears, and the Sun rises (udeti ādityaḥ).

This belief or metaphysical understanding leads all living beings (sarvaprāṇinaḥ) to begin performing their natural duties or actions (svakarmāṇi).
That is the meaning here: the cosmic process inspires action.

Thus, the Sun (Yama āditya) has his 'mother' in this symbolic relationship — either due to companionship (sāhacaryāt) or the act of essence transfer (rasa-haraṇa – absorption of essence).
She becomes his 'mother', but not only in that sense.

What more?
Because of shared union (abhigamana-sāmānyāt) with Vivasvat, she becomes his wife (jāyā) — and, as Viśvarūpā (universal form), she disappears (nanāśa), gets dissolved.
When the Sun rises, she merges into it — meaning she dissolves into that very form.

"Abhisamāgacchatīti svaiḥ karmabhiriti vākyasheṣaḥ" – She enters or unites, the sentence implies, with her own natural actions.

Also: "rātriḥ ādityasya" — the night is said to belong to the Sun, and by the term 'rātri' (night), since Uṣas (dawn) is a part of it (eka-deśa), she is being referred to here.
Owing to this relationship, she is called his mother by divine law (deva-dharma).

She is born... (ja—) but not to be given as a gift (na dāna-yena antar-dhīyata) – i.e., she is not transferred in the ordinary worldly sense, hence her transcendental or divine nature is established (iti siddham).

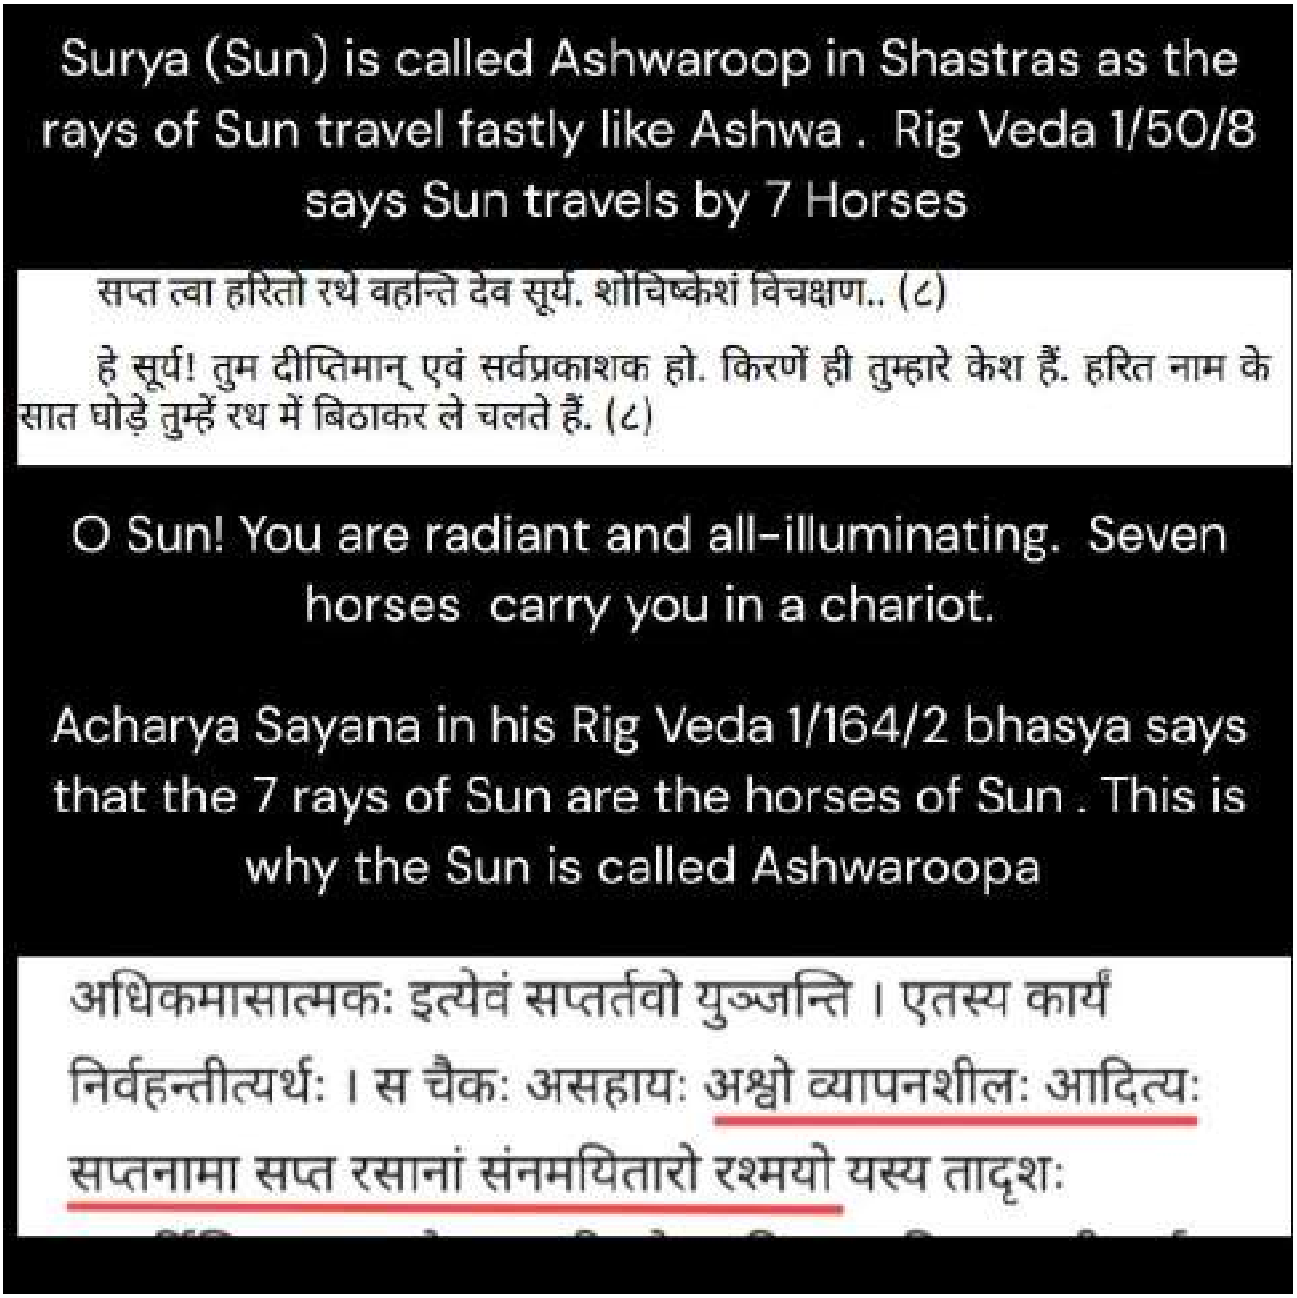
Surya (Sun) is called Ashwaroop in Shastras as the rays of Sun travel fastly like Ashwa . Rig Veda 1/50/8 says Sun travels by 7 Horses- O Sun! You are radiant and all-illuminating. Seven horses carry you in a chariot. Acharya Sayana in his Rig Veda 1/164/2 bhasya says that the 7 rays of Sun are the horses of Sun . This is why the Sun is called Ashwaroop



Claims-

📚Narada Purana 2.58.18-25📚
After having obtained that excellent boon from the Lord, Vyasa, the son of Satyavati, was one day engaged in churning the sacrificial sticks, with the desire of making a fire (for sacrificial purpose). At that time, the illustrious sage happened to see a heavenly damsel called Ghrtaci who, in consequence of her brilliant splendour, possessed excellent beauty. Seeing that celestial damsel, in that forest, the great sage Vyasa became instantly passionately enamoured of her. After making Vyasa deeply agitated with passion, the most beautiful Ghrtaci, transforming herself into a she-parrot, approached him. Even after seeing the celestial lady disguised in another form, he was overcome with cupid (passionate love) who spread in every part of his body, due to the inevitably of Destiny (what was to happen) the heart of the sage was fascinated by the (beautiful) form (of Ghrtaci). With the desire to do this (the kindling of fire) while he was suppressing his passion with special efforts, all of sudden his semen fell on the churning sticks. It was thus that the great ascetic Suka was born, while Vyasa continued the churning of sacrificial sticks.

Refutation-

If one reads Narada Purana Purva, Book II, Chapter 58 in full, the context becomes clear and the allegation collapses. The chapter narrates that Vyāsa Deva undertook an intense and prolonged penance on Mount Meru to please Mahādeva, with the desire to be blessed with a son of extraordinary power and fame. Despite extreme hardships, Vyāsa steadfastly maintained his austerities and yoga practice until Mahādeva, moved by his devotion, granted him the boon: a son whose brilliance would be celebrated across the three worlds. Later, as destiny ordained under that very boon, Vyāsa was churning sacrificial sticks (araṇi) when the apsarā Ghṛtācī appeared before him in her celestial beauty. Overcome by the divine māyā that was part of the boon's fulfilment—not through any voluntary lapse—Vyāsa's seed fell onto the sacrificial sticks, from which his son Śuka (also called Sūta in some accounts) was miraculously born. There was no physical union, no act with an animal, and no moral breach—only the unfolding of a divine birth exactly as foreordained by Mahādeva's blessing.

Devarṣi Sanandana said)
In ancient times, Lord of the Devas, Mahadeva Shankara, was sporting upon the lofty peak of Mount Meru, which was covered with oleander groves, surrounded by His earthly attendants, the Bhūtaganas. In those primeval days, the daughter of the King of Mountains (Pārvatī Devī) was also present there (either born there or having arrived there). O foremost of sages! At that very place, Lord Krishna Dvaipāyana (Veda Vyāsa), absorbed in yoga, engaged himself in deep austerities for the purpose of obtaining a son. His wish was to have a son who would be endowed with the brilliance of fire, earth, sky, and wind. With this resolve, he worshipped the Lord of the Devas in a manner that is most difficult for those of undisciplined mind to perform. At first, Vyāsa worshipped the many-formed Umāpati Mahādeva subsisting only on air. On that peak of Meru resided the Brahmarṣis, Devarṣis, the Lokapālas, the eight Vasus, the Sādhyas, the Ādityas, the Rudras, the Sun, the Moon, the Gandharva Viśvāvasu and others, Siddhas, and Apsarās. There, Lord Rudra Mahādeva, adorned with a garland of auspicious oleander flowers, shone like the autumn full moon. In that divine and delightful forest, filled with the Lord and the Devarṣis, Vyāsa, endowed with supreme yoga, continued his worship for the sake of obtaining a son. During this period of austerity, his complexion did not become pale, nor did he feel any weariness. This was a wondrous event for the entire three worlds. Instead of fatigue or weakness, his matted locks blazed like tongues of fire, radiating the splendour of his great penance. O Nārada! By such austerity and devotion, Umāpati Maheśvara became exceedingly pleased and prepared to grant him a boon. Then Lord Tryambaka, smiling, spoke to Vyāsa. ।।2–10।।

"Although the context of the Nārada Purāṇa (2.58) itself makes the story of Śukadeva's birth clear, let us also consider the explanation of Paṇḍit Madhvācārya Śāstrī on this episode, as given in Purāṇa Digdarśana (p. 691/788)."

समाधान उत्क्त कथा में भी व्यास जी के अमोघवीर्य की ही महिमा लक्षित होती है । जब कि तप के प्रभाव से रजोवीर्य के त्रिना भी मानसी सन्तान का उत्पन्न हो जाना नेदादि शास्त्रों में लिखा है, तब स्थूल शरीर की कारण सामग्री से परिपूरित अमोध वीर्य के द्वारा पुत्र का उत्पन्न हो जाना किसी प्रकार भी असम्भव नहीं कहा जा सकता। मानसी किंवा तापसी सृष्टि का वर्णन वेदों में डंके की चोट किया है, यथा– (क) मनसो रेतः प्रथमं यदासीत् । (अथर्व १६ । ५२ । १) (ख) श्रद्धाया दुहिता तपसोऽधिजाता स्वसा ऋषीणां भूतकृतां बभूव । (अथर्व ६ । १३३ ।४) अर्थात् (क) सृष्टि के आरम्भ में 'मनसो रेतः' ही था। (ख) श्रद्धा की पुत्री तप से उत्पन्न हुई थी, सूत्रधार ऋषियों को बहिन लगती थी। मानसिक वीर्य जो कि सृष्टि के इसलिए व्यास जी ने अपने अमोघवीर्यगत एक विशिष्ट कीटाणु को पूर्वप्रशित पद्धति के अनुसार परिपुष्ट करके पुत्ररूप में परिणत कर लिया तो इसमें आश्चर्य की क्या बात हुई ?

Even in the cited narrative, the glory of Vyāsa Ji's infallible virility (amogha-vīrya) is clearly evident. The scriptures, including the Vedas and allied texts, affirm that through the power of austerity (tapas), even the subtlest reproductive essence (rajo-vīrya) can give rise to mental progeny (mānasa santāna). Therefore, the birth of a son through the fully potent, materially enriched amogha-vīrya cannot be deemed impossible by any means. The concept of mental or ascetic creation

(mānasa or tāpasī sṛṣṭi) is boldly proclaimed in the Vedas, as seen in the following verses: (a) "The first seed of creation was born of the mind." — Atharva Veda 16.52.1 (b) "The daughter of Faith (śraddhā) was born of austerity; she became the sister of the sages, the creators of beings." — Atharva Veda 6.133.4

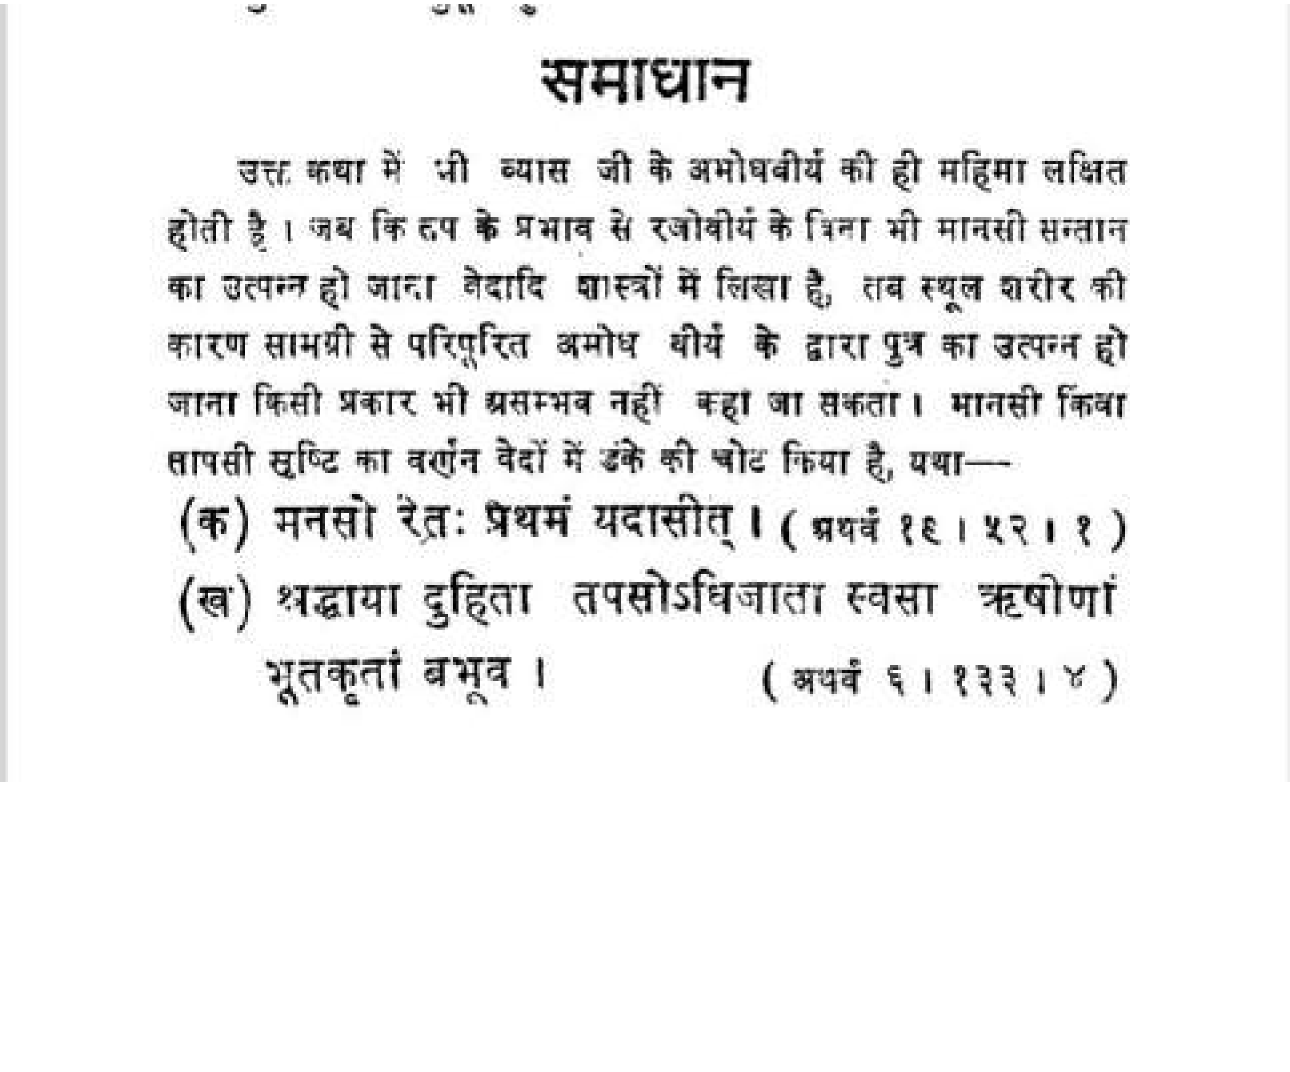
Thus, in the beginning, creation emerged from the mental seed (manaso retaḥ). The daughter of Faith, born of tapas, was considered the sister of the founding sages. Therefore, when Vyāsa Ji, through his amogha-vīrya, cultivated a specific germ using the method of pre-infusion (pūrvapraśita paddhati) and transformed it into a son, what is there to be surprised about?



समाधान

उक्त कथा में भी व्यास जी के अमोघवीर्य की ही महिमा लक्षित होती है। जब कि तप के प्रभाव से रजोवीर्य के बिना भी मानसी सन्तान का उत्पन्न हो जाना वेदादि शास्त्रों में लिखा है, तब स्थूल शरीर की कारण सामग्री से परिपूरित अमोघ वीर्य के द्वारा पुत्र का उत्पन्न हो जाना किसी प्रकार भी असम्भव नहीं कहा जा सकता। मानसी किंवा तापसी सृष्टि का वर्णन वेदों में डंके की चोट किया है, यथा—

(क) मनसो रेत: प्रथमं यदासीत्। (अथर्व १६ । ५२ । १)

(ख) श्रद्धाया दुहिता तपसोऽधिजाता स्वसा ऋषीणां भूतकृतां बभूव। (अथर्व ६ । १३३ । ४)

(६९८)　　　　　　　पुराण दिग्दर्शन

अर्थात्—(क) सृष्टि के आरम्भ में 'मनसो रेत:'=मानसिक वीर्य ही था। (ख) श्रद्धा की पुत्री तप से उत्पन्न हुई थी, जो कि सृष्टि के सूत्रधार ऋषियों को बहिन लगती थी।

इसलिए व्यास जी ने अपने अमोघवीर्यगत एक विशिष्ट कीटाणु को पूर्वप्रदर्शित पद्धति के अनुसार परिपुष्ट करके पुत्ररूप में परिणत कर लिया तो इसमें आश्चर्य की क्या बात हुई ?

E.g. (1) The word “Prajapati” means ‘one who protects all creatures;’ as such it can be taken as a name of the Sun; and it is an ordinary fact that towards morning the sun reaches the early Dawn, (‘Usha’); and as the early Dawn is brought about by the approach of the Sun, it is called his “daughter;” and it is the fact of the Sun letting his rays fall in (or on) the Dawn that has been figuratively spoken of as the intercourse of a man with a woman.

When the assembly of sages could not free King Veṇa from his attachment and such thoughts, all the great sages became extremely angry with him. They seized the mighty king and began churning his left thigh. From that churning of his left thigh, a very short man of dark complexion emerged, who stood there folding his hands in fear. O best of the twice-born! Seeing this distressed man, Sage Atri said to him: "Nishīd!" (meaning, "Sit down!"). Hence, he was called Nishad, and he became the progenitor of the Nishad lineage as well as the creator of the fishermen, born from the sins of Veṇa.

This is also mentioned in Shiva Purana, Shiva Purana, UmaSamhita 5.35.32-34 "He assumed the form of a horse and approached her for sexual indulgence with her who could not be overwhelmed by any living being due to her lustre and observance of restraint. O sage, in the course of the sexual activity she suspected him to be another man. Hence she received the semen through the mouth into the nostril.

Refutation-

Coming on to Shiva Purana, UmaSamhita 5.35.32-34 –

According to R.C. Hazra, the Uma Saṁhitā of the Shiva Purāṇa is a very late addition. He notes that it draws heavily from the Jñāna Saṁhitā, which itself is dated to around 950 CE. Based on this, it can be reasonably inferred that the Uma Saṁhitā was incorporated into the Shiva Purāṇa sometime after the 10th century CE.

IV. The Bhaumasaṃhitā,[391] also called Auma/Umāsaṃhitā, is represented in the class B editions only. The text introduces Kṛṣṇa on a visit to Kailāsa and performing penance there to Śiva, in order to obtain a son. He meets Upamanyu, and requests him to tell him about the greatness of Śiva. Upamanyu complies, and praises Śiva and his trident; he extols Śiva's power to save his devotees from hell. This discussion leads into several chapters on different types of sins, and on the description of hell and the suffering in it. Ways to avoid this suffering include gifts of food, performing penance, listening to the purāṇas, etc. The saṃhitā subsequently describes the seven dvīpas of the earth, and other component parts of the universe. It ends with discourses on a variety of topics, such as the development of man, from the foetus, through childhood, youth, marriage, old age, etc.; creation and manvantaras; etc. In Hazra's opinion the text borrows most of its chapters from the Jñānasaṃhitā.

XIII. The Jñānasaṃhitā[400] has already been referred to on several occasions in this description of the Śiva°, because, in Hazra's opinion, other saṃhitās borrowed verses and even chapters from it. The text recognizes the Vedas as the highest authority, but it was Śiva, as ṛgyajuḥsāmarūpin, who communicated them to Viṣṇu. Śiva shall be worshiped with Vedic mantras, even though the saṃhitā does not, therefore, reject the authority of the Tantras and eventual Śiva worship with Āgamic rather than Vedic mantras. The nirguṇa Śiva is identical with the parabrahma; in his saguṇa form he manifests himself as Rudra. Prakṛti was born from Śiva's wish, and, from her, were born the other gods including Brahmā and Viṣṇu. This saṃhitā, like some of those discussed earlier, strongly encourages liṅga worship as the ideal way to worship Śiva himself. It urges worship under the guidance of a competent teacher; worship will lead to bhakti, then to jñāna, and, ultimately, to vijñāna, i.e. the realization that the only real thing is Śiva. Hazra points out that the text was influenced by the Kumārasambhava, Raghuvaṃśa, and Kirātārjunīya. He surmises that it may have been composed in Banaras, by someone who was also familiar with the banks of the Narmadā, not before A. D. 950.

The Śiva Purāṇa, as a whole, is one of the most composite and unwieldy Purāṇas, having been composed and expanded by different authors over various periods. There exist two primary versions: the Bombay 1884, Venkat 1895–96, and Venga Manuscript (Class A); and the Venkat 1906, 1965 Pandita Pustakalaya Manuscript (Class B). According to R.C. Hazra, the sections found in the Class A Manuscript are older and more authentic, whereas those in the Class B Manuscript (Including Uma Samhita) are very recent compositions . Most significantly, the older and more authentic Class A Manuscript does not contain the Uma Saṁhitā.

saṃhitās, with different titles and different arrangements; two of their saṃhitās are not even listed in the Śiva° passages.[387] The following is a comparative survey of the saṃhitās, in the two passages of the Śiva° itself, and in the two sets of editions — which from now on I will refer to as class A and class B editions.

Śiva°	Class A Bombay 1884 Veṅkaṭ. 1895–96 Vaṅga.		Class B Veṅkaṭ. 1906, 1965 Paṇḍitapustakālaya Tr. AITM
I. Vidyeśvara	XIII. Jñāna	ch. 78	Vidyeśvara/	ch. 25
II. Raudra	Vidyeśvara	25	Vighneśa
III. Vaināyaka		(Vaṅga 16)	Rudra	197
IV. Bhauma/Auma	Kailāsa	12	Śatarudra	42
V. Mātṛ(purāṇa)	XIV. Sanatkumāra	59	Koṭirudra	43
VI. Rudraikādaśa	Vāyu/Vāyavīya		Umā/Auma	51
VII. Kailāsa	pūrvabhāga	30	Kailāsa	23
VIII. Śatarudra	uttarabhāga	30	Vāyavīya

X. Sahasrakoṭirudra			uttarabhāga	41
XI. Vāyavīya
XII. Dharma(purāṇa)

It is clear from all this that the Śiva° is one of the more composite and unwieldy purāṇas, sections of which "were written by different hands in different climes and ages;" it is also evident that "there were different traditions regarding the text of the Śiva-purāṇa."[388] Hazra, who did not include the Śiva° in his volume on the mahāpurāṇas, later published an extensive and comparative study of the various saṃhitās, which is repeatedly referred to in these pages. He came to the conclusion that the saṃhitās contained in the class A editions were generally the older ones, and that all other sections, manuscripts of which are rare, and the contents of which largely depend on the earlier saṃhitās as well as on other purāṇas, are more recent. In view of the great disparity between the two sets of editions, I will follow the order of the saṃhitās as set forth in the purāṇa itself.

Shiva's Oral Sex with a Parrot,

📚Brahma Purana 4.58.16.26📚
At the instance of Devas the Fire-god assumed the form of a parrot and went to the place where the lord of the worlds was sporting with Uma. Then the Fire-god went ahead timidly in the form of a parrot. The carrier of the Havyas (Fire-god) could not go through the doorway. Then he went to the window sill and remained there with face turned down and trembling. On seeing him Sambhu in that secret place laughingly said to Uma. See, O gentle lady, the parrot that is the Fire-god himself who has come here at the instance of Devas. Parvati bashfully said to the lord, “O lord, enough”. The lord of Devas called the Fire-god moving about in front of him. in the form of a bird and said, “O Agni, you have been recognised through various ways. Do not speak anything. Open your mouth. Take this in and carry it with you.” After saying this lord Sambhu discharged a great deal of semen into the mouth of Fire-god. With this semen within him Agni could not at all go. Utterly tired, Agni sat down on the bank of Gaṅga. He then discharged a greater portion of that semen into Krttikas wherefrom Karttika was born.”

The Gautamī-māhātmya (chaps. 70-175), which was certainly composed by somebody living about the river Godāvarī, is a distinct 'work' (pustakam) by itself. It is called a 'highly meritorious Purāṇa' declared by Brahmā (cf. Br 175, 78 and 87). The place which it occupies in the Brahma-p. was not meant for it, because it divides the chapters on Puruṣottamakṣetra-māhātmya. The way in which chap. 176 opens, shows that it immediately followed chap. 69. Moreover, in chap. 176 there is no hint from which we may conclude that the Māhātmya was there. In Br 179, 2 the sages refer to Bhāratavarṣa (chap. 27) and Puruṣottama-kṣetra, of which, they say, Vyāsa told them elaborately, but they do not mention the Gautamī-māhātmya which also precedes chap. 179 in our edition. So, it is clear that the Māhātmya was not originally there. In the Veṅk. ed. it is placed at the end. This Māhātmya was attached to the Brahma-p. later than the chapters on Orissa, for the Nāradīya-p. (I, 92), which gives the contents of the present

The Gautamīmāhātmya, also called Godāvarīmāhātmya, of which there exist several separate manuscripts[112] and which has also been separately edited,[113] calls itself a purāṇa,[114] and must originally have been a distinct book. It interrupts the section on Puruṣottamakṣetra, and has been inserted exactly in the middle of the Brahma°.[115] It describes the sacred places along the Godāvarī river.

Because it was by the influence of the seed that even the sages) born from the lower wombs became worshiped and praised. Therefore, the seed is actually praised.

So what Manu Smriti 10.72 says that even some born from Lower Wombs like Deer Womb etc became Rishi due to the power and influence of Seed . So does that mean someone was having Sexual intercourse with Animals and releasing their seed inside them ? A Strict NO !

Lets see some Traditional Commentaries on Manu Smriti 10.72

Sarvagya Narayana Bhasya says – सर्वज्ञनारायणः । यद्येवं तथापि बीजस्यातिप्राधान्याद्बीजशुद्धिरेव ग्राह्येति स्वमतमुपसंहरति यस्मादिति । • तिर्यग्जाऋष्यश्वङ्गादयः पूजिताअभवन् । प्रशस्ताश्वऋषयोब्रह्मर्षयः ॥ ७२ ॥Even if that is so (i.e., even if tapas, śruta, etc., are important), still, due to the extreme importance given to seed (lineage), only purity of lineage (bīja-śuddhi) is to be accepted — thus is concluded by some, beginning with the phrase 'yasmat' (because). Beings such as Ṛṣyaśṛṅga and others, though born of non-human (animal) origin (tiryak-jā), were indeed respected. Similarly, respected and praised sages like the Brahmarṣis were born from pure lineage

Kulluka Bhatta bhasya says – कुल्लूकः । इदानींबीजशथान्यपक्षेदृष्टान्तमाह यस्मादिति । यस्माद्बीजमाहात्म्येन तिर्यग्जातिहरिण्यादिजाता-पि ऋष्यश्वादयोमुनित्वंप्राप्ताः पूजिताश्वाभिवाद्यत्वादिना वेदज्ञानादिना प्रशस्तावाचा संस्तुतास्तस्माद्बीजंप्रस्तूयते । एतच्च बीजप्राधान्यनिगमनं बीजयोन्योर्मध्ये बीजोत्कृष्टा जातिः प्रधानमित्येवंपरतया बोद्धव्यम् ॥ ७२ ॥
Now, in support of the doctrine that seed (lineage) is primary, an illustrative example is provided, beginning with 'yasmat' (because): Because, due to the greatness of the bīja (seed/lineage), even beings born from non-human species such as a deer (hariṇī), like Ṛṣyaśṛṅga and others, attained the status of sages (munitva), and were worshipped, honored with salutations, praised with refined speech, and possessed knowledge of the Vedas. Therefore, the seed is emphasized. This is the conclusion in favor of the primacy of bīja. Among bīja (seed) and yoni (womb), the bīja is considered superior, and thus the jāti (birth/class) is regarded as the chief factor — this is the intended meaning."

Raghavanda Bhasya says – राघवानन्दः । हरिण्यादिजाता ऋष्यश्वादयस्तिर्यग्जाः प्रशस्ताः अन्येषु सत्सु ऋषिषु दशरथयऋष्य-शृङ्गःप्राशस्त्यंगतः । तिर्यग्जोपि संस्क्रियते तज्जातेरपर्युदस्तत्वात् । न शुद्रे पातकंकिंचिन्नच संस्कारमर्हतीतिशुदजातेः पर्युदस्तत्वान्नपारशवादेः संस्कारइतिभावः ॥ ७२
Ṛṣyaśṛṅga and others, though born from a deer and hence of non-human origin (tiryak-jāti), were nonetheless revered sages. Among other noble sages, even Ṛṣyaśṛṅga, the son of Daśaratha, attained prominence and respect. Thus, even one born of non-human origin can undergo sanctification (saṁskāra), because such a birth is not excluded from eligibility (aparyudasta). On the other hand, a Śūdra, even though human, is considered to fall under sin (pātaka) and is therefore not eligible for saṁskāra. Hence, due to the exclusion of the Śūdra's birth from scriptural eligibility, saṁskāras like the Vedic upanayana are not performed for them."

Sarvagya Narayana Bhasya says – सर्वज्ञनारायणः । यद्येवं तथापि बीजस्यातिप्राधान्याद्बीजशुद्धिरेव ग्राह्येति स्वमतमुपसंहरति यस्मादिति । • तिर्यग्जात्रऋष्यश्वङ्गादयः पूजिताअभवन् । प्रशस्ताश्वत्रऋषयोब्रह्मर्षयः ॥ ७२ ॥

Traditional Acharyas like Raghvananda , Kulluka Bhatta and Sarvagya Narayana had quoted the example of Rishi Ṛṣyaśṛṅga explaining Manu 10.72 and the importance of Seed .

According to the Mahabharata, Vibhandaka, a renowned sage and a son of Kashyapa, travels in Mahahrada, when he sees Urvashi, the most beautiful apsara (nymph). Aroused, he emits his seed, which fell into the river. A doe, who is a cursed apsara, swallows it and becomes pregnant due to the sage's miraculous powers. After she gives birth to a boy, she is liberated from the curse and returns to heaven. The boy is born with horns and because of which, he is named Rishyasringa. Vibhandaka decides to raise him isolated from society. Rishyasringa grows up in his father's ashram in the forest, unaware of existence of any female. He practices brahmacharya and acquires magical and miraculous powers due to his chastity

O King! One day when Rishi Vibhandaka was bathing in water, he saw Urvashi Apsara and his semen got discharged. At that time a deer, driven by thirst, came there and drank the semen along with the water. Due to this she became pregnant. She was a celestial maiden in her previous birth. The creator of the world, Lord Brahma had promised her that she would be freed from that birth after becoming a deer and giving birth to a sage. Brahma's words are infallible and no one can avert the law of the gods, that is why Vibhandak's son Maharishi Rishyashringa was born from the womb of a deer. Thus its clear from Traditional Commentaries on Manu Smriti 10.72 and Mahabharta Vana Parva Adhaya 110 that Manu 10.72 refers to some circumstances described in Mahabharta and Ramayana where Animals like Deer unknowingly drank the Virya of Powerful Rishi and because of the miraculous powers of Rishis they were born as Sages to Deers and other Animals and grew up to become Powerful celibate Rishis . Thus Manu Smriti 10.72 has nothing to do with Bestiality nor having intercourse with Animals

A demon named Rambha, distinct from the Apsara named Rambha, was a devoted worshipper of the fire god Agni. He fervently desired to have offspring. Upon hearing his prayer, Agni granted his request and instructed him to engage in immediate copulation with any species, promising him the fulfillment of his wish for progeny,

📚Devi Bhagavatam Purana 5.2.27-50📚
Vyasa said :– O king! Hearing thus the sweet words of Fire, Rambha quitted the hold of his hairs and said :– O Lord of the Devas! If thou art pleased, grant my desired boon that a son be born unto me, who will destroy the forces of my enemy and who will conquer the three worlds. And that son be invincible in every way by the Devas, Danavas and men, very powerful, assuming forms at will, and respected by all. The Fire said :– O highly Fortunate! You will get your son, as you desire; therefore desist now from your attempting suicide. O highly fortunate Rambha! With any female of whichever species, you will co-habit, you will get a son, more powerful than you; there is no doubt in this. Vyasa said :– O king! Hearing thus the sweet words of the Fire as desired, Rambha, the chief of the Danavas, went, surrounded by Yaksas, to a beautiful place, adorned with picturesque sceneries; when one lovely she-buffalo, who was very maddened with passion, fell to the sight of Rambha. And he desired to have sexual intercourse with her, in preference to other women. The she-buffalo, too, gladly yielded to his purpose and Rambha had sexual intercourse with her, impelled as it were by the destiny. The she-buffalo became pregnant with his semen virile…"

The question, both in the tradition and in modern scholarship, whether the Devībhāgavata° or the Vaiṣṇava Bhāgavata° is the true and original Śrīmad-bhāgavata° has been discussed under the Bhāgavata°. It should be noted in this connection that the term Devībhāgavata° appears only in the chapter colophons, and in the text of the last two skandhas; elsewhere in the text the purāṇa refers to itself either as Bhāgavata° or Śrīmadbhāgavata°, once as Satī° (1.3.41). The text also repeatedly refers to itself as "the best of purāṇas" (purāṇottama), and declares that "there are many other purāṇas devoted to Hari and Rudra, but they are not worth one-sixteenth part of this Devībhāgavata" (12.13.25–26).

Hazra[174] sees arguments both for the Devībhāgavata° having been composed in Bengal and outside Bengal. He therefore concludes that "the author of the Devībhāgavata was a Smārta Śākta Brahmin of Bengal and . . . he migrated to Benares (probably because it was the best place of residence for a Devī-worshipper), lived there for a long time, and then wrote the Devī-bhāgavata."

Ramachandran[175] dated the Devībhāgavata° "not later than the 6th century A.D.," based on his belief that the story of the penance of Nara and Nārāyaṇa, as related in the fourth skandha, inspired the relief in the Gupta temple at Deogarh. His arguments did not find acceptance with other scholars,[176] and, in general, the text has been dated much later. Farquhar[177] assigned it to his A.D. 900–1350 period. Hazra[178] narrowed the period down to "the eleventh or twelfth century A.D." Lalye[179] proposes a gradual growth of the text, through five different stages which cannot be dated separately; in any case the final stage must have been reached in the eleventh century.

With this the allegations of Bestiality in Sanatan Dharma stands debunked

Response to Hinduscript and Vedkabhed . Refutation of Incest in Hinduism

Allegations-

1. Brahma's Incest With his Daughter

📚Matsya Purana 3.30-44📚
With this view, He began to invoke Gayatri. After some time the goddess Gayatri, known under different names, viz. – Satarupa, Savitri, Sarasvati, Brahmani, etc., appeared in the form of a girl from the half portion of Brahma's body who at the first sight mistakenly took Her for His daughter. Afterwards, the Creator, seeing that form of exquisite beauty, was fired with love and repeatedly uttered, "What an enchanting form!" At this, the Manasa putras of Brahma, i.e., Vasistha, etc., taking Savitri for their sister, began to express their feelings….. Brahma, fired with passion in her company, married Satarupa and began to pass his days in enjoyment inside a lotus. He enjoyed the company of Savitri for hundred years, and after a long time Manu was born to them." (source)

In Chapter 4 of the Matsya Purana, there is a conversation between Manu and the Vishnu avatar Matsya that justifies Brahma's actions by explaining that Devas beget progeny in diverse ways,

📚Matsya Purana 4.1-11📚
The king said, "O Merciful! I feel awfully grieved to hear that Lord Brahma married Angaja. Pray, tell me why he was not regarded as having committed a fearful sin by having done so. Remove my doubts, O, Master of the Universe! by graciously explain to me why the offspring of Brahma were allowed to intermarry in their paternal circle without any regard for close-knit kinship." The Lord Fish replied: "O king! such doubts only arise in the case of mankind, for men have atomic bodies and beget children in a different way, while the primeval creation is celestial in which Rajoguna predominates. The Devas not have supersensious bodies and they beget progeny in quite different ways. The celestial forms come into being in other ways, and it is very difficult for men having sensuous bodies to understand this great secret. Only supernatural intellect causes celestial creation; therefore those alone can understand its great sect who themselves possessed with such an intellect… O, '´ing! the question of any prescribed order on prohibition does not arise in the deeds of the Devas. Only Their desire is taken into considered in whatever they do. Other beings reap the fruits of their karma (doings) which the Devas do not. No doubts should therefore be raised regarding the doings of the Devas, nor should beings having sensuous bodies think of doing the same deed. Besides this, as Lord, Brahma is the governor of the Vedas, so is the goddess Gayatri of the Brahmans (the sacred text, i.e., the Vedas). She is the better-half of the Lord, and this is why she appeared from his body...He committed no sin by marrying Her. In spite of all this, Lord Brahma felt ashamed for not being able to suppress His passion in presence of His manasa sons

📚Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.12.28-31📚
O Vidura, we have heard that Brahmã had a daughter named väk who was born from his body and who attracted his mind toward sex, although she was not sexually inclined towards him. Thus, finding their father so deluded in an act of immorality, the sages headed by Marici, all sons of Brahma, spoke as follows with great respect. O father, this performance in which you are endeavoring to complicate yourself was never attempted by any other Brahmã, nor by anyone else, nor by you in previous kalpas, nor will anyone dare to attempt it in the future. You are the supreme being in the universe, so how is it that you want to have sex with your daughter and cannot control your desire? Even though you are the most powerful being, this act does not suit you because your character is followed for spiritual improvement by people in general." (source)

📚Skanda Purana 3.1.40.6-12📚
Prajpati (i.e. Brahma) was formerly deluded, O Brahmanas. He desired like a lover of his own daughter named Vac (Speech) joyously. This daughter of Prajapati became ashamed on noticing his lecherous love for her. Hence she assumed the form of a Rohita deer. Inclined to have sexual dalliance with her, Brahma too took the form of a deer. As she went ahead in the guise of a female deer, he too followed her. On seeing him intent on having sexual intercourse with his daughter, all the deities condemned him: 'This Brahma is committing a deed that should not be done, i.e. attempt to have sexual union with one's own daughter. Thus they censured the creator and the Lord of the worlds. On seeing Paramesthin (Brahma) engaged in the forbidden act, Lord Hara took up the Pinaka bow and assumed the form of a hunter. He fitted one arrow to his bow. He drew the bow string as far as his ear and hit Brahma with his sharp arrow. Struck down by the arrow of the Annihilator of the three Puras, Brahma fell down on the ground." (source)

📚Skanda Purana 2.3.2.3-5📚
Formerly, in the beginning of Kṛtayuga, Brahmā attempted to have sexual intercourse with his own daughter who was richly endowed with beauty and youth. On seeing him like that I cut off his head with a sword into five parts in a great fury. Taking the skull (sticking to) the hand that attempted the murder of Brahmā, I immediately left the place in order to resort to various Tīrthas in heaven, earth and nether worlds and performed penances as well.

Refutation –

Perspective 1

We know the term Prajapati is used for Brahma in Puranas . The Same term Prajapati is used for Sun in Vedas at several places because Sun is responsible for life on Earth . So Sun is Prajapati [Brahma] .

1- यो हं वे सविता स प्रजापतिः। (Satapatha 12.3.5.2)

2- प्रजापतिर्यं सविता। (Tandya Brahmana 8.2.10)

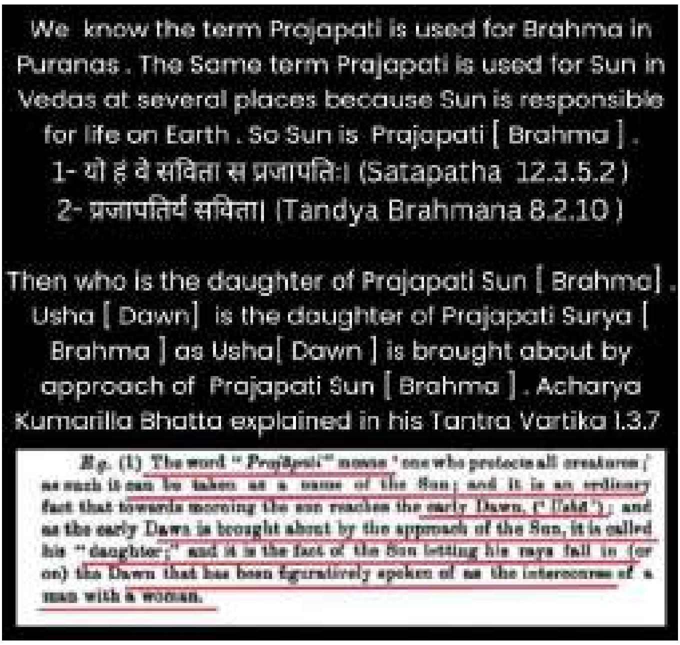
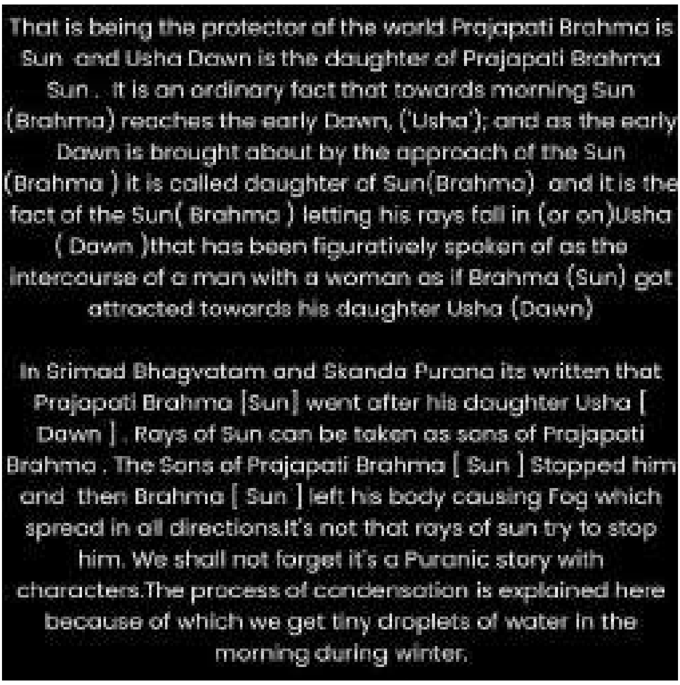
Then who is the daughter of Prajapati Sun [Brahma] . Usha [Dawn] is the daughter of Prajapati Surya [Brahma] as Usha[Dawn] is brought about by approach of Prajapati Sun [Brahma] . Acharya Kumarilla Bhatta explained in his Tantra Vartika 1.3.7

. (1) The word "Prajapati" means 'one who protects all creatures;' as such it can be taken as a name of the Sun; and it is an ordinary fact that towards morning the sun reaches the early Dawn, ('Usha'); and as the early Dawn is brought about by the approach of the Sun, it is called his "daughter;" and it is the fact of the Sun letting his rays fall in (or on) the Dawn that has been figuratively spoken of as the intercourse of a man with a woman.

That is being the protector of the world Prajapati Brahma is Sun and Usha Dawn is the daughter of Prajapati Brahma Sun . It is an ordinary fact that towards morning Sun (Brahma) reaches the early Dawn, ('Usha'); and as the early Dawn is brought about by the approach of the Sun (Brahma) it is called daughter of Sun(Brahma) and it is the fact of the Sun(Brahma) letting his rays fall in (or on)Usha (Dawn)that has been figuratively spoken of as the intercourse of a man with a woman as if Brahma (Sun) got attracted towards his daughter Usha (Dawn)

In Srimad Bhagvatam and Skanda Purana its written that Prajapati Brahma [Sun] went after his daughter Usha [Dawn] . Rays of Sun can be taken as sons of Prajapati Brahma . The Sons of Prajapati Brahma [Sun] Stopped him and then Brahma [Sun] left his body causing Fog which spread in all directions.It's not that rays of sun try to stop him. We shall not forget it's a Puranic story with characters.The process of condensation is explained here because of which we get tiny droplets of water in the morning during winter.





There is another Perspective too – Perspective 2

Gopatha Brahmana 1/2/10-11 says that Brahma is mind
ऊर्ध्वं यच् च किं च मनसैव करोति तद् ब्रह्म ते ब्रूमो मन एव ब्रह्मा मनो ब्रह्म मनो देव इति

Taittriya Samhita 6/1/2/2 says that Saraswati is speech
मेधया हि मनसा पुरुषो यज्ञम् अभिगच्छति सरस्वत्यै पूष्णे ऽग्नये स्वाहेत्य् आह वाग् वै सरस्वती पृथिवी पूषा

तस्य [पुरुषस्य] मन एव ब्रह्मा। (Kaushitaki Brahmana 17/7)

प्रजापतिर्वै मनः । (Satapatha Brahmana 4/1/1/22)

वाग् वै सरस्वती । (Kaushitaki Brahmana 5/1)

वाक् सरस्वती। (Satapatha Brahmana 7/5/1/31))

वाक् तु सरस्वती । (Aitreya Brahmana 1/3)

Prajapati or Brahma is called 'Mind Saraswati is the name of speech. The mind comes before speech, so whatever is first thought through the mind is then said through speech. That mind in the form of Prajapati Brahma controlled Saraswati in the form of speech.

The mind comes before speech, so whatever is first thought through the mind is then said through speech. That mind in the form of Prajapati Brahma controlled Saraswati in the form of speech . It means that speech originates from the power of the mind. That is why both of them have been described here as father and daughter. When the father, in the form of mind inseminates his daughter in the form of speech with प्रेरणारूप वीर्या then only a son in the form of words is born from her

Pandit Madhavacharya Shastri explained it as-

मनःस्वरूपो ब्रह्मा मे ज्ञानरूपो महेश्वरः ।।५८।। वागधिष्ठात्री देवी या सा स्वयं च सरस्वती ।।५६।। अर्थात्- मनः ही ब्रह्मा है, ज्ञान को महेश्वर समझो तथा वाणी की अधिष्ठात्री देवी ही सरस्वती है ।
यहां इतना और भी समझ लेना आवश्यक है कि इस कथा के अध्यात्म-प्रधान रूपक में – मरीचि आदि पुत्रों का समझाना घटित नहीं होता था, अतएव ब्रह्मवैवर्त में श्री वेदव्यास जी ने उक्त घटना के बजाय यह प्रकट किया है कि 'पुत्री के पीछे भागते हुये ब्रह्मा को उसके पुत्र महादेव ने सावधान किया ।' इस अंश का तात्पर्य यह है कि वाणी का अनुगमन करते हुए मन को विवेक बार २ सावधान करता है। यही इस कथा का 'आध्यात्मिक-अर्थ' है, जिससे मनोविज्ञान का एक अद्भुत रहस्य प्रकट होता है ।

To make this spiritual meaning clear, Lord Śrī Krishna, who, in response to Śrī Rādhā's question, says:

manassvarūpo brahmā me jñānarūpo maheśvaraḥ
(verse 58)

vāgadhiṣṭhātrī devī yā sā svayaṃ ca sarasvatī (verse 56)

Meaning:

The mind is my form as Brahmā; knowledge is my form as Maheśvara (Śiva); and the presiding goddess of speech is Sarasvatī herself.

It is important to further understand that, in the spiritually symbolic version of this tale, the narrative involving Mārīci and other sons (i.e., their attempt to dissuade Brahmā) is not relevant. Hence, Sage Vedavyāsa presents the story as:

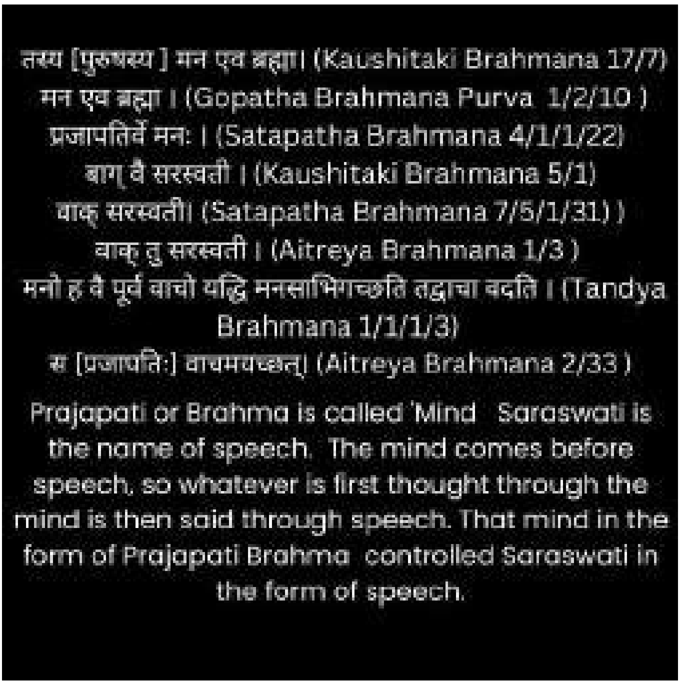
“As Brahmā chased after his daughter, it was his son Mahādeva (Śiva) who warned him.”

The meaning behind this is: as the mind chases after speech, it is discrimination (viveka), represented by Śiva, which again and again warns the mind. This is the true spiritual meaning of the tale — revealing a profound mystery of psychology (manovijñāna).



The mind comes before speech, so whatever is first thought through the mind is then said through speech. That mind in the form of Prajapati Brahma controlled Saraswati in the form of speech . It means that speech originates from the power of the mind. That is why both of them have been described here as father and daughter. When the father, in the form of mind inseminates his daughter in the form of speech with प्रेरणारूप वीर्य then only a son in the form of words is born from her

उससे शब्दरूप पुत्र उत्पन्न होता है, जो ब्रह्मवैवर्त पुराण में उक्त आध्यात्मिक अर्थ को स्पष्ट करने के लिए श्रीराधा जी के पूछने पर श्रीकृष्ण भगवान् कहते हैं—

मनःस्वरूपो ब्रह्मा मे ज्ञानरूपो महेश्वरः ॥५८॥
वागधिष्ठात्री देवी या सा स्वयं च सरस्वती ॥५६॥

अर्थात्—मन ही ब्रह्मा है, ज्ञान को महेश्वर समझो तथा वाणी की अधिष्ठात्री देवी ही सरस्वती है।

यहाँ इतना और भी समझ लेना आवश्यक है कि इस कथा के अध्यात्म-प्रधान रूपक में—मरीचि आदि पुत्रों का समझाना घटित नहीं होता था, अतएव ब्रह्मवैवर्त में श्री वेदव्यास जी ने उक्त घटना के बजाय यह प्रकट किया है कि 'पुत्री के पीछे भागते हुये ब्रह्मा को उसके पुत्र महादेव ने सावधान किया।' इस अंश का तात्पर्य यह है कि वाणी का अनुगमन करते हुए मन को विवेक बार २ सावधान करता है। यही इस कथा का 'आध्यात्मिक-अर्थ' है, जिससे मनोविज्ञान का एक अद्भुत रहस्य प्रकट होता है।

To make this spiritual meaning clear, Lord Śrī Krishna, who, in response to Śrī Rādhā's question, says:
manassvarūpo brahmā me jñānarūpo maheśvaraḥ (verse 58)
vāgadhiṣṭhātrī devī yā sā svayaṃ ca sarasvatī (verse 56)
Meaning:
The mind is my form as Brahmā; knowledge is my form as Maheśvara (Śiva); and the presiding goddess of speech is Sarasvatī herself.

Similar explanation has been given by कृष्णनारायण प्रसाद 'मागध' – वाणी प्रकाशन। -१९९९

वैदिक साहित्य में प्रजापति को बहुधा मन '98 एवं वाक् को सरस्वती' 99 कहा गया है। मन की सत्ता वाक् से पूर्ववर्त्तिनी होती है। पहले मन संकल्प करता है। दुपरांत वह वाक् (वाणी) द्वारा प्रकट होता है। अव्यक्त ब्रह्मा ने सृष्टि (अपने को अनेक रूपों में व्यक्त) करने का मन में संकल्प किया। मन के संकल्प से वाक् की उत्पत्ति हुई। इस पारस्परिक संबंध के कारण 'मन' को पिता (प्रजापति ब्रह्मा) और 'वाक्' को दुहिता (सरस्वती) कहा गया। मन रूपी पिता के वाक् रूपी दुहिता में प्रेरणारूप वीर्याधान किए जाने पर शब्द रूप पुत्र की उत्पत्ति होती है। मन की अपेक्षा वाक् सूक्ष्म होती है। अतः उसके लिए भागवतकार द्वारा प्रयुक्त 'तन्वीं' सार्थक विशेषण है। कामना करना मन का धर्म है। इसीलिए आख्यान में मनरूपी प्रजापति को 'सकाम' और वाक् को 'अकामा' कहा गया है। प्रथम उत्पन्न होने के कारण मन को 'स्वयम्भू' भी कहा जाना सार्थक है। इस प्रकार सृष्टि-विद्या के गूढ़ आध्यात्मिक रहस्य को इस आख्यान के मिस मनोवैज्ञानिक रूप में प्रस्तुत करना पुराणकार का लक्ष्य रहा है।

Vāk as "Sarasvatī".
The existence of the mind precedes speech (vāk).
First, the mind conceives a thought, and afterward, it manifests through vāk (speech).

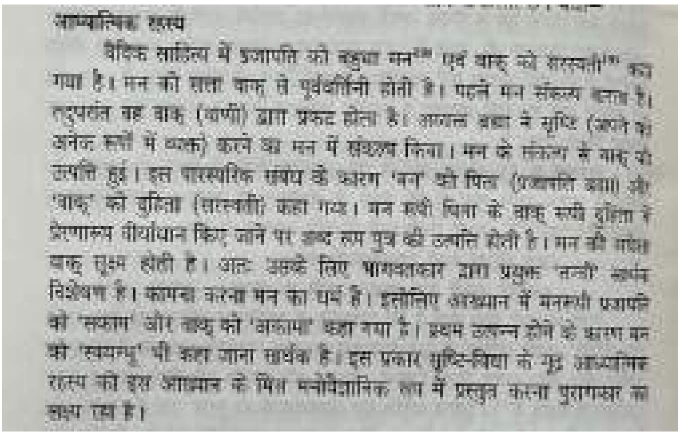
The unmanifest Brahmā resolved in his mind to manifest creation (himself in multiple forms).
From the mental resolution, vāk emerged.

Due to this mutual relationship, the mind is called the father (Prajāpati Brahmā), and vāk is called the daughter (Sarasvatī).

When the mind, in the form of a father, deposits inspiration (vīrya) into vāk, in the form of the daughter, the child in the form of words (śabda) is born.
Compared to the mind, vāk is more subtle.
Therefore, the adjective "tanvīm" (delicate) used by the Bhāgavata author for her is appropriate.

Desire is a natural trait of the mind.
Hence, in the narrative, the mind-like Prajāpati is called "sakāma" (with desire) and vāk is called "akāmā" (without desire).
Being the first to emerge, it is appropriate to refer to the mind as "Svayambhū" (self-born).

In this way, the deep spiritual mystery of the science of creation has been presented in psychological terms through this narrative by the Purāṇa authors.



आध्यात्मिक रहस्य

वैदिक साहित्य में प्रजापति को बहुधा मन एवं वाक् को सरस्वती कहा गया है। मन की सत्ता वाक् से पूर्ववर्तिनी होती है। पहले मन संकल्प करता है, तदुपरांत वह वाक् (वाणी) द्वारा प्रकट होता है। अव्यक्त ब्रह्मा ने सृष्टि (अपने को अनेक रूपों में व्यक्त) करने का मन में संकल्प किया। मन के संकल्प से वाक् की उत्पत्ति हुई। इस पारस्परिक संबंध के कारण 'मन' को पिता (प्रजापति ब्रह्मा) और 'वाक्' को दुहिता (सरस्वती) कहा गया। मन रूपी पिता के वाक् रूपी दुहिता में प्रेरणारूप वीर्याधान किए जाने पर शब्द रूप पुत्र की उत्पत्ति होती है। मन की अपेक्षा वाक् सूक्ष्म होती है। अतः उसके लिए भागवतकार द्वारा प्रयुक्त 'तन्वीं' सार्थक विशेषण है। कामना करना मन का धर्म है। इसीलिए आख्यान में मनरूपी प्रजापति को 'सकाम' और वाक् को 'अकामा' कहा गया है। प्रथम उत्पन्न होने के कारण मन को 'स्वयम्भू' भी कहा जाना सार्थक है। इस प्रकार सृष्टि-विद्या के गूढ़ आध्यात्मिक रहस्य को इस आख्यान के मिस मनोवैज्ञानिक रूप में प्रस्तुत करना पुराणकार का लक्ष्य रहा है।

The episode of Brahmā

श्रीकृष्ण उवाच

[illegible]

Śrī Kṛṣṇa said- Nārāyaṇa compassionately again started speaking to Brahmā and all those present there looking at the Gaṅgā took to be for my illusion.

नारायण उवाच

[illegible]

Nārāyaṇa said: O four-faced Brahmā get up and go to your abode You will surely meet with welfare. Taking a bath in the river Gaṅgā you will be relieved of the curse with my command.

[illegible]

Sage in case you feel truthful and are peace at heart. All these sacred places including yourself are desirous of the touch of Viṣṇu but since you have defiled the nature you have earned a sin. You will therefore be relieved of a sin. The arrogance is the seed of all the sins and misfortunes.

You immediately move on to my infallible place of Goloka. Reaching there you will achieve Sarasvatī who is the form of Prakṛti and always bestows welfare.

[illegible]

O virtuous one, you own Prakṛti, who happens to be the seed of the universe. You have performed tapas, for a kalpa.

[illegible]

Because of the curse of the wicked women no body would recite your mantra but you will be adored together with the other gods.

[illegible]

Since you are the creator of the universe and always remain engrossed in your own soul, you are the form of all and are adorable by all.

[illegible]

Thereafter Brahmā the teacher of the universe took bath in the Gaṅgā at my command and left for Goloka.

[illegible]

Thereafter all the gods, the sages reciting my spotless glory again and again left for their respective abodes.

ब. खगोलीय/ज्योतिषीय आधार

पूर्व उल्लिखित ऐतरेय ब्रा. की गाथा का उत्तरार्द्ध प्रजापति-नक्षत्र मृग (ORION) अथवा रोहिणीनक्षत्र का रूपकात्मक विवरण प्रस्तुत करता है। ब्रह्म पु. के पंचतीर्थ-माहात्म्य वर्णन में इसी की कथा का रूप दिया गया है। उसमें कथावाचक स्वयं ब्रह्मा हैं। उन्होंने कहा है कि सावित्री, गायत्री, श्रद्धा, मेधा और सरस्वती मेरी श्रेष्ठ कन्याएँ हैं। इनमें एक को मैंने अलौकिक रूपवती बनाया। उसके अद्वितीय सौंदर्य को देख स्वयं मेरी बुद्धि विकृत हो गयी। कामवश मैंने जब उसे पकड़ना चाहा, तब वह भाग खड़ी हुई। जब वह मृगी बन कर भागने लगी, तब मैंने मृग बन कर उसका पीछा किया। यह देख शंकरजी के रक्षार्थ प्रभु मृग-व्याध का रूप धारण कर, धनुष ताने मेरे पीछे-पीछे दौड़े।

166 / प्रजापति ब्रह्मा

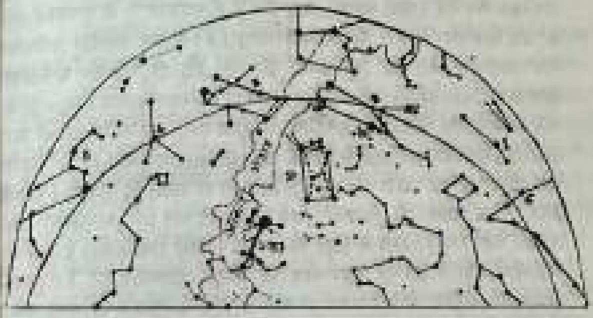
रो. = रोहिणी (मृगी)
प्र. = प्रजापति (मृग)



रो.-रोहिणी, प्र.-प्रजापति, 1. मेष, 2. वृष, 3. कन्या, 4. कर्क, 5. सिंह, 6. मीन

ऊपरि चित्र का नक्षत्र-समूह उत्तरी गोलार्द्ध (भारत सहित एशिया, यूरोप उत्तरी अमेरिका) में शिशिर ऋतु (पौष-माघ, स्थूलतः मध्य दिसंबर से मध्य फरवरी) की रात्रियों के प्रथम प्रहर में दक्षिण की ओर देखने पर सिर के ऊपर दिखायी पड़ता है। द्वितीय प्रहर में यह पश्चिम की ओर ढलने लगता है, तब गाथा में वर्णित दृश्य प्रत्यक्ष हो उठता है। चित्र में, आकाश-गंगा के पश्चिम, दिखायी पड़ने वाला वृहत् और चमकीला नक्षत्र-समूह प्रजापति (Constellation of ORION) है। प्राचीन भारतीय खगोलविदों के अनुसार प्रजापति नक्षत्र-समूह में पाँच प्रमुख नक्षत्र हैं—रोहिणी (Alldebaran), मृगशिरा, आर्द्रा, मृगव्याध (Sirius) और पुनर्वसु (Pollux)। अपेक्षया सूर्य और चंद्रमा के भ्रमण-पथ के निकट रोहिणी दिखायी पड़ती है। रोहिणी का अर्थ मृगी (रोहित) है। यह वृष राशि (Taurus) का सर्वाधिक चमकीला और रक्तवर्णी नक्षत्र है। रोहिणी के नीचे उत्तर-पूर्व में (बायीं ओर) उसका अनुगमन करने वाला मृगरूप धारी प्रजापति (ORION) बीच में है। चतुष्कोण बनाने वाले प्रजापति-समूह के चार तारे ही मृग की चार टाँगें हैं एवं चतुष्कोण के ऊपर दिखायी पड़ने वाला तीन तारों से निर्मित त्रिकोण ही मृग का सिर अर्थात् मृगशिरा नक्षत्र है—'एतद् वै प्रजापतेः

शिरो यन्मृगशीर्षम् (शतपथ ब्रा. 2/1/2/8)। उसके नीचे उत्तर-पूर्व में (बाएँ कर) दिखाई पड़ने वाले 'मृग-व्याध' रूपी रुद्र (Canis Major या Great Dog) की आकृति अगल-बगल के तारों को मिला कर बनती है—लगता है कि कोई व्याध (व्याध) कमर में शस्त्र लटकाए, एक हाथ में धनुष लिए मृगरूपधारी प्रजापति का पीछा कर रहा है। वह बाण छोड़ चुका है। मृग के शरीर के अंदर एक रेखा में अवस्थित तीन तारे (आर्द्रा नक्षत्र ; लोकभाषा में तीनडड़िया) ही मृगव्याध रूपी रुद्र के द्वारा छोड़े गए त्रिकांड बाण (इषुस्त्रिकाण्डा) हैं। प्राचीन भारतीय खगोलविदों ने जिस तारा-समूह को रुद्र (मृग-व्याध) कहा है, उसे ही पश्चिमी खगोलविदों ने मृगव्याध (Canis Major या Great Dog) कहा है। रुद्र-मृगव्याध तारा-समूह ही नहीं, अपितु संपूर्ण गोलार्द्ध का सर्वाधिक चमकीला तारा 'मृग-व्याध' (Sirius या Dog Star) है। मृग-व्याध (Sirus) से रोहिणी (Aldebaran) तक एक सीध में काल्पनिक रेखा खींचने पर वह आर्द्रा (ORION'S BELT) से होकर ही गुजरेगी। रोहिणी के ऊपर दायीं ओर वाले (छह, पाश्चात्य विचार के अनुसार सात जिन्हें 'सप्तस्वसा'—Seven Sisters कहा गया है) तारों के समूह की आख्या कृत्तिका (Pleiades) है। शास्त्रों एवं ज्योतिषीय ग्रंथों में इस पूरे नक्षत्र-मंडल की आख्या 'रोहिणी शकट' है। बृहत्संहिता (47/4) के अनुसार रोहिणी-शकट के बीच से अग्नि के गुजरने पर बारह वर्षों तक वर्षा नहीं होती है। तैत्तिरीय सं. (4/4/10) में विभिन्न नक्षत्रों और उनके स्वामियों का उल्लेख हुए हैं। तदनुसार रोहिणी के स्वामी प्रजापति (रोहिणी नक्षत्रं प्रजापतिर्देवता) एवं आर्द्रा के स्वामी रुद्र (आर्द्रा नक्षत्रं रुद्रो देवता) कहे गए हैं। इससे भी आख्यान के खगोलीय आधार का संकेत होता है।

महाभारतीय आख्यान (सौप्तिक पर्व, अ. 18) की याज्ञिक व्याख्या भी इसी खगोलीय तथ्य का पोषक है। उसके अनुसार देवयज्ञ में रुद्र को भाग नहीं मिला। अतः वे कुपित हो धनुष-बाण लिए यज्ञ-स्थान पर गए। उन्हें कुपित देख देवता भयभीत हो उठे। कुपित रुद्र ने यज्ञ (यज्ञ प्रजापति) के हृदय में बाण से आघात किया। तब अग्नि सहित यज्ञ (यज्ञ प्रजापति) मृग का रूप धारण कर वहाँ से भाग चला और आकाश में पहुँच कर (प्रजापति नक्षत्र-समूह के रूप में) प्रकाशित होने लगा। आकाश में भी रुद्र (मृगव्याध रूप में, आर्द्रा नक्षत्र जिनका त्रिकाण्ड बाण है) उसके पीछे लगे रहते हैं। दक्षयज्ञ-विध्वंस-आख्यान (महाभा. 12/283/36 एवं आगे) में भी इसका अधूरा रूप मिलता है। ऐतरेय ब्रा. (3/3/9) की गाथा के खगोलीय तथ्य से पुष्पदंत पूर्णतः परिचित थे—उनके शिवमहिम्न-स्तोत्र का अग्रांकित बाइसवाँ श्लोक उसी से प्रेरित प्रतीत होता है—

प्रजानाथं नाथ प्रसभमभिकं स्वां दुहितरं/गतं रोहिद्भूतां रिरमयिषुमृष्यस्य वपुषा।
धनुष्पाणेर्यातं दिवमपि सपत्राकृतममुं/त्रसन्तं तेऽद्यापि त्यजति न मृगव्याधरभसः॥

ख. आधिभौतिक तथ्य

इस आख्यान में सृष्टिविकास को आधिदैविक तथ्य के रूप में उपस्थित किया गया है। वैदिक गाथाओं की त्रिविध व्याख्या का मार्ग यास्क ने प्रशस्त किया था। उक्त आधार पर इसकी भी व्याख्या की जाती है। कृष्ण यजुर्वेद की काठक सं (12/5 एवं 27/1) के अनुसार वाक् प्रजापति की पुत्री एवं पत्नी (शक्ति) दोनों है। उनके परस्पर संयोग से प्रजा वर्गों की उत्पत्ति होती है। तदुपरांत वाक् (प्रजापति की शक्ति) प्रजापति में ही प्रविष्ट हो जाती है–

प्रजापतिर्वै इदमासीत्। तस्य वाक् द्वितीया आसीत्। ताम् मिथुनं समभवत् सा गर्भमधत्त सा अस्मादपाक्रामत्। सा इमाः प्रजाः असृजत्। सा प्रजापतिमेव पुनः प्राविशत्।

शतपथ ब्रा. में प्रजापति और वाक् के मानसिक संयोग से वसुओं, रुद्रों, आदित्यों एवं विश्वेदेवों की उत्पत्ति का वर्णन मिलता है[110]। पंचविंश ब्रा. के अनुसार आरंभ में प्रजापति और वाक् दो ही तत्त्व थे–'प्रजापतिर्वै इदं एक आसीत् तस्य वाक् स्व आसीद् वाग् द्वितीया।' अस्तु, वाक् (स्त्री लिंग) की कल्पना ब्रह्म (नपुंसक लिंग एवं पुंलिंग ब्रह्मा)–पत्नी के रूप में किया जाना अस्वाभाविक नहीं है। बृहद्देवता (5/97-103) में [illegible] यज्ञ करते समय प्रजापति का शरीरिणी वाक् को देख कर विकार ग्रस्त होने के उल्लेख में भी कदाचित् इसी ओर संकेत हुआ है।

सर्ग की सलिलोत्पत्ति (देखिए 1/7) के वर्णन में उल्लेख किया जा चुका है कि सृष्टि-रचना की कामना करने पर स्वयम्भू प्रजापति (पुराणों के ब्रह्मा) अपनी इच्छा से अपने भीतर ही मूल रचनात्मक उपादान (मातृतत्त्व) की सृष्टि करता है। स्वयम्भू जिस मातृ-तत्त्व की सृष्टि करता है, वह उसका अविभाज्य अंग होता है। मनुस्मृति (1/32) में भी दोनों अविभाज्य तत्त्व ही स्वीकृत हुए हैं। हरिवंश पु. के अनुसार तप में ब्रह्मा अकेले रम नहीं सके तो उन्होंने एक शुभलक्षणा भार्या उत्पन्न की जो उनके शरीर का आधा भाग थी। वह लोकों की सृष्टि करने में समर्थ थी। उससे संसर्ग कर उन्होंने [illegible] प्रजापतियों, सागरों, सरिताओं की सृष्टि की[111]। ब्रह्मा का अपनी देह के दो भाग (प्रथमार्द्ध को पुरुष रूप और द्वितीयार्द्ध को स्त्रीरूप) करने के उल्लेख किंचित् शब्दांतर से कई पुराणों में हुए हैं[112]। भविष्य पु. में इतना और कहा है कि ब्रह्मा ने उस स्त्रीरूप से विराट् की सृष्टि की[113]। मत्स्य पु. (3/30-43) वर्णित आख्यान में भी कहा गया है कि सृष्टि करने की इच्छा से तप करने पर ब्रह्मा का कल्मष रहित शरीर दो भागों में विभक्त हो गया–आधाभाग स्त्रीरूप और आधाभाग पुरुष रूप हो गया। स्त्री रूप आधे भाग की अभिधा 'शतरूपा' (अलौकिक माया) हुई। यही सावित्री, गायत्री, सरस्वती और ब्रह्माणी भी कही गयी है। 'स्वदेहसम्भूता', आत्मजा गायत्री के मनोहर रूप पर ब्रह्मा मुग्ध हो गए[114]। आगे उसी में कहा गया है ब्रह्मा ने अनिंदिता शतरूपा का पाणिग्रहण किया जिससे स्वायम्भुव मनु, जिसे विराट् भी कहा जाता है, की उत्पत्ति

ख. खगोलीय/ज्योतिषीय आधार

पूर्व उल्लिखित ऐतरेय ब्रा. की गाथा का उत्तरार्द्ध प्रजापति-नक्षत्र सूमूह (ORION) अथवा रोहिणीशकट का रूपकात्मक विवरण प्रस्तुत करता है। ब्रह्म पु. के पंचतीर्थ-माहात्म्य वर्णन में इसी को कथा का रूप दिया गया है। उसमें कथावाचक स्वयं ब्रह्मा हैं। उन्होंने कहा है कि सावित्री, गायत्री, श्रद्धा, मेधा और सरस्वती मेरी ज्येष्ठ कन्याएँ हैं। इनमें एक को मैंने अलौकिक रूपवती बनाया। उसके अद्वितीय सौंदर्य को देख स्वयं मेरी बुद्धि विकृत हो गयी। कामवश मैंने जब उसे पकड़ना चाहा, तब वह भाग खड़ी हुई। जब वह मृगी बन कर भागने लगी, तब मैंने मृग बन कर उसका पीछा किया। यह देख लोकधर्म के रक्षार्थ शंभु मृग-व्याध का रूप धारण कर, धनुष ताने मेरे पीछे-पीछे दौड़े।

उन्होंने मुझसे कहा- 'मैं तुम्हारा वध करूँगा।' फलतः उनसे पिण्ड छुड़ा कर मैंने अपनी वह कन्या विवस्वान को सौंप दी 207। इसे अग्रांकित आकाशीय चित्र से समझा जा

उपरि चित्र का नक्षत्र-समूह उत्तरी गोलार्द्ध (भारत सहित एशिया, यूरोप उत्तरी अमेरिका) में शिशिर ऋतु (पौष-माघ, स्थूलतः मध्य दिसंबर से मध्य फरवरी) की रात्रियों के प्रथम प्रहर में दक्षिण की ओर देखने पर सिर के ऊपर दिखायी पड़ता है। द्वितीय प्रहर में यह पश्चिम की ओर ढलने लगता है, तब गाथा में वर्णित दृश्य प्रत्यक्ष हो उठता है। चित्र में, आकाश-गंगा के पश्चिम, दिखायी पड़ने वाला बृहत् और चमकीला नक्षत्र-समूह प्रजापति (Constellation of ORION) है। प्राचीन भारतीय खगोलविदों के अनुसार प्रजापति नक्षत्र-समूह में पाँच प्रमुख नक्षत्र हैं- रोहिणी (Alldebaran), मृगशिरा, आर्द्रा, मृगव्याध (Sirius) और पुनर्वसु (Pollux)। अपेक्षया दांयीं ओर चंद्रमा के भ्रमण-पथ के निकट रोहिणी दिखायी पड़ती है। रोहिणी का अर्थ मृगी (रोहित) है। वह वृष राशि (Taurus) का सर्वाधिक चमकीला और रक्तवर्णी नक्षत्र है। रोहिणी के नीचे उत्तर-पूर्व में (बायीं ोर) उसका अनुगमन करने वाला मृगरूप धारी प्रजापति (ORION) बीच में है।

चतुष्कोण बनाने वाले प्रजापति-समूह के चार तारे ही मृग की चार टाँगें हैं एवं चतुष्कोण के ऊपर दिखायी पड़ने वाला तीन तारों से निर्मित त्रिकोण ही मृग का सिर अर्थात् मृगशिरा नक्षत्र है- 'एतद् वै प्रजापतेः

शिरो यन्मृगशीर्षम्' (शतपथ ब्रा. 2/1/2/8)। उसके नीचे उत्तर-पूर्व में (बायीं ओर) दिखायी पडने वाले 'मृगव्याध' रूपी रुद्र (Canis Major या Great Dog) की बध की आकृति अगल-बगल के तारों को मिला कर बनती है- लगता है कि कोई व्यक्ति (व्याध) कमर में शस्त्र लटकाए, एक हाथ में धनुष लिए मृगरूपधारी प्रजापति का पीछा कर रहा है। वह वाण छोड़ चुका है। मृग के शरीर के अंदर एक रेखा में अवस्थित तीन तारे (आर्द्रा नक्षत्र; लोकभाषा में तीनडड़िया208) ही मृगव्याध रूपी रुद्र के द्वारा छोड़े गए त्रिकांड वाण (इषुस्त्रिकाण्डः) हैं। प्राचीन भारतीय खगोलविदों ने जिस तारा-समूह को रुद्र (मृग-व्याध) कहा है, उसे ही पश्चिमी खगोलविदों ने बृहत्श्वान (Canis Major या Great Dog) कहा है। रुद्र-मृगव्याध तारा-समूह का ही नहीं, अपितु संपूर्ण गोलार्द्ध का सर्वाधिक चमकीला तारा 'मृग-व्याध' (Sirus या Dog Star) है। मृग-व्याध (Sirus) से रोहिणी (Aldebaran) तक एक सीध में काल्पनिक रेखा खींचने पर वह आर्द्रा (ORION'S BELT) से होकर ही गुजरेगी। रोहिणी के ऊपर दायीं ओर वाले (छह, पाश्चात्य मिथक के अनुसार सात जिन्हें 'सप्तस्वसा'- Seven Sisters कहा गया है) तारों के समूह की आख्या कृतिका (Pleiades) है। शास्त्रों एवं ज्योतिषीय ग्रंथों में इस पूरे नक्षत्र-मंडल की आख्या 'रोहिणी-शकट' है। बृहत्संहिता (47/4) के अनुसार रोहिणी-शकट के बीच से शनि के गुजरने पर बारह वर्षों तक वर्षा नहीं होती है। तैत्तिरीय सं. (4/4/10) में विभिन्न नक्षत्रों और उनके स्वामियों के उल्लेख हुए हैं। तदनुसार रोहिणी के स्वामी प्रजापति (रोहिणी नक्षत्रं प्रजापतिर्देवता) एवं आर्द्रा के स्वामी रुद्र (आर्दा नक्षत्रं रुद्रो देवता) कहे गए हैं। इससे भी आख्यान के खगोलीय आधार का संकेत होता है।
महाभारतीय आख्यान (सौप्तिक पर्व, अ. 18) की याज्ञिक व्याख्या भी इसी खगोलीय तथ्य का पोषक है। उसके अनुसार देवयज्ञ में रुद्र को भाग नहीं मिला। अतः वे कुपित हो धनुष-वाण लिए यज्ञ-स्थान पर गए। उन्हें कुपित देख देवता भयभीत हो उठे। कुपित रुद्र ने यज्ञ (यज्ञ प्रजापति) के हृदय में वाण से आघात किया। तब अग्नि सहित यज्ञ (यज्ञ प्रजापति) मृग का रूप धारण कर वहाँ से भाग चला और आकाश में पहुँच कर (प्रजापति नक्षत्र-समूह के रूप में) प्रकाशित होने लगा। आकाश में भी रुद्र (मृगव्याध रूप में, आर्द्रा नक्षत्र जिनका त्रिकाण्ड वाण है) उसके पीछे लगे रहते हैं 209। दक्षयज्ञ-विध्वंस-आख्यान (महाभा. 12/288/36 एवं आगे) में भी इसका अधूरा रूप मिलता है। ऐतरेय ब्रा. (3/3/9) की गाथा के खगोलीय तथ्य से पुष्पदंत पूर्णतः परिचित थे उनके शिवमहिम्न स्तोत्र का अग्रांकित बाइसवाँ श्लोक उससे प्रेरित प्रतीत होता है-
प्रजानायं नाथ प्रसभमभिकं स्वां दुहितरं गतं रोहिद्भूतां रिरमयिषुमृष्यस्य व्युषा । धनुष्याणेर्यातं दिवमपि सपत्राकृतममुं त्रसन्तं तेऽद्यापि त्यजति न मृगव्याधरभसः ।।

. Astronomical/Astrological Basis

The latter part of the previously mentioned Aitareya Brahmana legend presents an allegorical depiction of the Prajapati-Nakshatra constellation group (ORION) or the Rohini-Shakat (the chariot of Rohini). In the Brahma Purana's description of the sanctity of the Panchatirtha (the five sacred spots), this has been presented as a narrative. In this tale, the narrator is Brahma himself. He says:

"Savitri, Gayatri, Shraddha, Medha, and Saraswati are my eldest daughters. I made one of them extraordinarily beautiful. On seeing her unparalleled beauty, my intellect ecame deluded. Driven by desire, when I tried to seize her, she fled. When she transformed into a deer and ran away, I too became a deer and chased her. Witnessing this, for the protection of cosmic order (lokadharma), Shambhu (Shiva) assumed the form of a deer-hunter, drew his bow, and began chasing after me.”

He said to me, “I shall slay you.” As a result, freeing myself from him, I handed over that daughter of mine to Vivasvan (the Sun God).

This can be understood through the sky chart marked above. The constellation depicted in the chart appears overhead when looking southward during the early part of the night in the winter season (Paush–Magh months, roughly mid-December to mid-February) in the Northern Hemisphere (including India, Asia, Europe, and North America). During the second watch of the night, it begins to descend westward, and at that time, the scene described in the legend visually manifests.

In the chart, the large and luminous star group seen to the west of the Milky Way is Prajapati (the constellation of ORION). According to ancient Indian astronomers, there are five major stars or nakshatras (lunar mansions) in the Prajapati constellation group: Rohini (Aldebaran), Mrigashira, Ardra, Mrigavyadha (Siriu and Punarvasu (Pollux).

Rohini is visible relatively to the right, near the Moon’s orbital path. The term Rohini literally means “the doe” (female deer, Rohit). It is the brightest and reddish star in the Taurus constellation. Below Rohini, toward the northeast (to the left), Prajapati (ORION), in the form of a deer pursuing her, is seen in the middle.

The four stars that form a quadrilateral in the Prajapati group represent the four legs of the deer, and the triangle formed by three stars appearing above this quadrilateral is the head of the deer, i.e., the Mrigashira nakshatra — “Etad vai Prajapateh…” (This indeed is of Prajapati).

The head is what is called Mrigashirsha (the Head of the eer)” (Shatapatha Brahmana 2.1.2.8). Below it, toward the northeast (to the left), appears the figure of Rudra as the Deer-Hunter (Mrigavyadha), formed by connecting the stars of Canis Major or the Great Dog. It looks like a man (a hunter), with a weapon tied at his waist, holding a bow in one hand and chasing the deer-shaped Prajapati. He has already released an arrow.

Inside the body of the deer, there are three stars aligned in a row (these correspond to the Ardra Nakshatra, popularly known as "Teen Dandiyan" or "Three Sticks" in folk language). These three stars are the three-parted arrow (Trikanda Vaan) shot by Rudra in the form of the Mrigavyadha.

The star cluster that ancient Indian astronomers referred to as Rudra (the Deer-Hunter) is the same one Western astronomers named Canis Major or the Great Dog. The brightest star not only in this group but in the entire visible hemisphere is the Mrigavyadha (Sirius or the Dog Star).

If one draws an imaginary straight line from Mrigavyadha (Sirius) to Rohini (Aldebaran), it will pass directly through Ardra (Orion's Belt). Above Rohini and toward the right, there is a cluster of six stars (called seven in Western mythology, known as the Seven Sisters or Pleiades) — this group is called Krittika in Indian astronomy.

In scriptures and astrological texts, this entire star region is referred to as Rohini-Shakat (the Chariot of Rohini). According to the Brihat Samhita (47.4), if Saturn passes through the center of Rohini-Shakat, it causes a drought lasting twelve years.

The Taittiriya Samhita (4.4.10) mentions various nakshatras and their presiding deities. Accordingly, Rohini's deity is Prajapati (Rohini Nakshatram Prajapatir Devata), and Ardra's deity is Rudra (Ardra Nakshatram Rudro Devata). This also points to the astronomical basis of the myth.

The Mahabharata narrative (Sauptika Parva, Chapter 18) also supports this celestial interpretation. According to it, during the sacrificial ritual (Devayajna), Rudra did not receive his share, and thus, angered, he went to the sacrificial site with bow and arrow. Seeing him enraged, the gods were terrified. Rudra, in his fury, struck the heart of the yajna (i.e., Prajapati) with an arrow. Then the yajna, along with Agni (fire), took the form of a deer and fled, eventually rising into the sky and becoming the constellation of Prajapati. Even in the sky, Rudra, in the form of Mrigavyadha, continues to pursue him — his arrow being the three stars of Ardra (Orion's Belt).

A partial version of this story is also found in the tale of Daksha Yajna's destruction (Mahabharata 12.288.36 onward).

Pushpadanta was fully aware of the astronomical facts related to the Aitareya Brahmana (3.3.9) tale. The twenty-second verse of his Shivamahimna Stotra seems to be directly inspired by this:

प्रजानायं नाथ प्रसभमभिकं स्वां दुहितरं गतं रोहिद्भूतां रिरमयिषुमृष्यस्य व्युषा । धनुष्पाणेर्यातं दिवमपि सपत्राकृतममुं त्रसन्तं तेऽद्यापि त्यजति न मृगव्याधरभसः ।।

This interpretation is given by Acharya Sayana in his Commentary on Aitareya Brahmana 3/33 and as well

सा० भा०- स रुद्रोऽभ्यायत् य बाणयुक्तं धनुरभित आकृष्य तं प्रजापतिमविध्यत्। ऋश्यमृगरूपः स प्रजापतिर्विद्धः सन्नूर्ध्वमुख उदप्रपतत् प्रकर्षेणोत्पतनमकरोत्। तमेत-मुत्पतितमृश्यमृगरूपं प्रजापतिमाकाशे दृष्ट्वा सर्व एव ते जना मृग इत्याचक्षते, रोहिण्या-र्द्रयोर्नक्षत्रयोर्मध्येऽवस्थितं मृगशीर्षनक्षत्रं कथयन्ति, नक्षत्ररूपेण निष्पन्न इत्यर्थः। 'य उ एव' यस्तु रुद्रो 'मृगव्याधो' मृगघाती स रुद्र आकाशे दृश्यमानः स उ एव लोकप्रसिद्धो मृगव्याध आसीत्। या दुहिता रोहिता रोहिद् रक्तवर्णा मृगी सेयमाकाशे रोहिणीनक्षत्र-मभूत्। यो एव या तु रुद्रेण प्रेरितेषुस्त्रिकाण्डाऽनीकं शल्यस्तेजनमित्यवयवत्रयोपेता सो एव सैव लोकप्रसिद्धा काण्डत्रयोपेतेषुर्बाणोऽभवत्।।

That Rudra approached, who had a bow with an arrow set upon it, and having fully drawn it, he struck Prajāpati. Prajāpati, who had taken the form of a Ṛśya-mṛga (a kind of antelope or deer), was hit, and looking upwards, he leapt up — he made a great upward flight.
Seeing this Prajāpati in the form of an Ṛśya-mṛga who had thus leapt into the sky, all the people (sages, observers) began to call it 'Mṛga' (deer).
They refer to the Mṛgaśīrṣa Nakṣatra (a lunar constellation) as being located between the stars Rohiṇī and Ārdrā — meaning it has become established in the form of a star (nakṣatra).
The one who (shot the arrow), that Rudra, who is the 'Mṛgavyādha' (hunter of the deer), is seen in the sky — he himself became the popularly known figure of the celestial Mṛgavyādha (hunter of the deer).
And the daughter, the reddish-colored deer-like one (mṛgī), who is Rohiṇī (literally meaning 'reddish' or 'blood-colored'), she became the celestial star Rohiṇī in the sky.
And that very object (the arrow) which Rudra sent forth — composed of three parts: Trikāṇḍa (threefold shaft), Śalya (the point), and Tejana (the fiery power) — that itself became the celestial arrow seen in the sky, renowned for its triple structure

सा० भा०—स रुद्रोऽभ्यायत् य बाणयुक्तं धनुरभित आकृष्य तं प्रजापतिमविध्यत्। ऋश्यमृगरूपः स प्रजापतिर्विद्धः सन्नूर्ध्वमुख उदप्रपतत् प्रकर्षेणोत्पतनमकरोत्। तमेत-मुत्पतितमृश्यमृगरूपं प्रजापतिमाकाशे दृष्ट्वा सर्व एव ते जना मृग इत्याचक्षते, रोहिण्या-र्द्रयोर्नक्षत्रयोर्मध्येऽवस्थितं मृगशीर्षनक्षत्रं कथयन्ति, नक्षत्ररूपेण निष्पन्न इत्यर्थः। 'य उ एव' यस्तु रुद्रो 'मृगव्याधो' मृगघाती स रुद्र आकाशे दृश्यमानः स उ एव लोकप्रसिद्धो मृगव्याध आसीत्। या दुहिता रोहिता रोहिद् रक्तवर्णा मृगी सेयमाकाशे रोहिणीनक्षत्र-मभूत्। यो एव या तु रुद्रेण प्रेरितेषुस्त्रिकाण्डाऽनीकं शल्यस्तेजनमित्यवयवत्रयोपेता सो एव सैव लोकप्रसिद्धा काण्डत्रयोपेतेषुर्बाणोऽभवत्।।

Shatapatha Brahmana (2/1/2/8-9) too states that the Mrigashira Nakshatra is referred to as Prajapati (Brahma) and Rohini Nakshatra as the daughter of Prajapati (Brahma) (Mrigashira Nakshatra)

रोहिणी नक्षत्र में ही पशु अग्नियों का आधान करते हैं कि मनुष्यों की इच्छा तक चढ़ सकें (रोहेम)। उन्होंने मनुष्यों की कामनाओं तक रोहण किया। और जो कामना पशुओं की मनुष्यों के प्रति पूरी हुई, वही पशुओं के प्रति उसकी पूरी होगी जो इस रहस्य को समझकर रोहिणी नक्षत्र में अग्न्याधान करता है ।।७।।
मृगशीर्ष नक्षत्र में भी अग्न्याधान हो सकता है, क्योंकि मृगशीर्ष प्रजापति का सिर है। श्री ही शिर है। इसलिए जो मनुष्य जाति में श्रेष्ठ होता है उसको कहते हैं कि यह जाति का शिर है। जो इस रहस्य को समझकर मृगशीर्ष नक्षत्र में अग्न्याधान करता है वह श्री को प्राप्त होगा ।।८।।
अब मृगशीर्ष नक्षत्र में अग्न्याधान न करने की (युक्ति कुछ लोग यह देते हैं) कि यह प्रजापति का शरीर है। जब इसको देवों ने त्रिकाण्ड तीर से बींधा तो कहते हैं कि उसने शरीर त्याग दिया। इसलिए यह शरीर केवल वास्तु, अयज्ञिय (यज्ञ न करने योग्य) और निर्वीर्य हो गया । इसलिए मृगशीर्ष में अग्न्याधान न करेः।।६।।
परन्तु वह कर सकता है। यह जो प्रजापति का शरीर है, न तो वास्तु है, न ही अयज्ञिय और न निर्वीर्य (इसलिए मृगशीर्ष में अग्न्याधान करे) । पुनर्वसु नक्षत्र में पुनराधेय कर्म करे। ऐसा आदेश है ।।१०।।

“One should also perform the ignition of the sacred fire (Agnyaadhan) during the Rohini Nakshatra, because it was during Rohini Nakshatra that Prajapati, desiring progeny, performed Agnyaadhan. As a result, progeny was born, uniform and flawless, resembling Rohini (the red cow). Therefore, Rohini Nakshatra is considered similar to the Rohini cow.
Hence, whoever understands this secret and performs Agnyaadhan during Rohini Nakshatra flourishes with offspring and cattle. (Verse 6)

It is also during Rohini Nakshatra that the sacrificial fires related to animals are established, so that they may ascend to the level of human desires (Rohem – rise).
The fires rose to fulfill human desires.
And just as the animals’ desires toward humans were fulfilled, so too will the humans’ desires toward the animals be fulfilled — for the one who, understanding this secret, performs Agnyaadhan during Rohini Nakshatra. (Verse 7)

Agnyaadhan can also be performed during the Mrigashirsha Nakshatra, because Mrigashirsha is considered the head of Prajapati.
'Shri' (wealth, prosperity) is connected with the 'head.' Therefore, the one who is foremost among a community is called 'the head of the community.'
Thus, whoever understands this secret and performs Agnyaadhan during Mrigashirsha Nakshatra will attain prosperity (Shri). (Verse 8)

Now, some people argue against performing Agnyaadhan during Mrigashirsha Nakshatra, saying that it represents the body of Prajapati.
When the gods pierced it with a threefold arrow (Trikanda Teer), it is said that he (Prajapati) abandoned his body.
Hence, they claim, this body became merely a physical mass, unfit for sacrifice (Ayajniya), and devoid of potency (Nirvirya).
Therefore, according to them, Agnyaadhan should not be performed during Mrigashirsha. (Verse 9)

However, it can indeed be performed.
This body of Prajapati is neither a mere mass (Vastu), nor unfit for sacrifice (Ayajniya), nor devoid of potency (Nirvirya).
Thus, Agnyaadhan may be performed during Mrigashirsha.
During the Punarvasu Nakshatra, the rite of re-establishment (Punaradheya) should be performed.
Such is the instruction. (Verse 10)

Allegations-

Another way the story goes is that Brahma had an incestuous relationship with his daughter, with the purpose of creating living beings,

📚Brihadaranyaka Upanishad 1.4.3📚
He was not at all happy. Therefore people (still) are not happy when alone. He desired a mate. He became as big as man and wife embracing each other. He parted this very body into two. From that came husband and wife. Therefore, said Yajnavalkya, this (body) is one-half of oneself, like one of the two halves of a split pea. Therefore this space is indeed filled by the wife. He was united with her. From that men were born."

📚Brihadaranyaka Upanishad 1.4.4📚
She thought, 'How can he be united with me after producing me from himself? Well, let me hide myself.' She became a cow, the other became a bull and was united with her; from that cows were born. The one became a mare, the other a stallion; the one became a she-ass, the other became a he-ass and was united with her; from that one-hoofed animals were born. The one became a she-goat, the other a he-goat; the one became a ewe, the other became a ram and was united with her; from that goats and sheep were born. Thus did he project every-thing that exists in pairs, down to the ants."

Refutation-

Brihadaranyak upnishad (1/4/3)clearly tells that they are ternally Husband and wife . In this context of Brihadaranyaka Upanishad, only husband and wife are clearly described and nowhere Father and Daughter is described

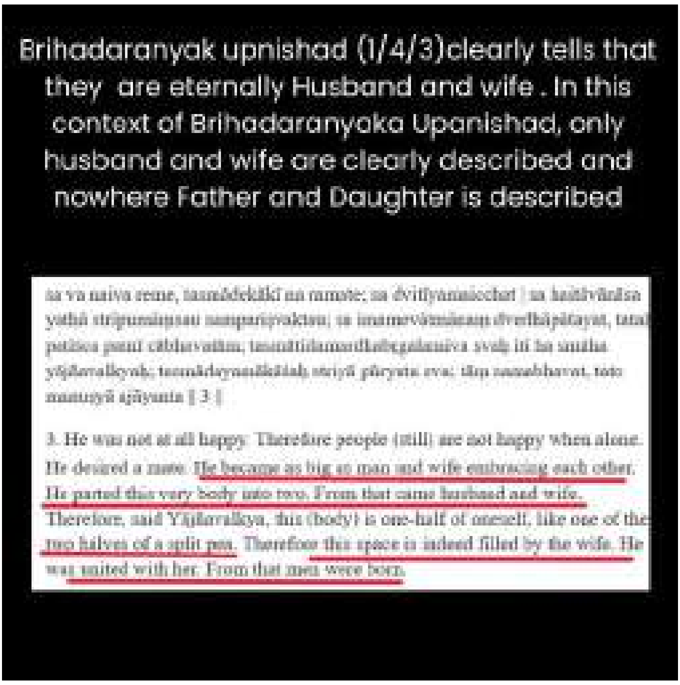
He was not at all happy. Therefore people (still) are not happy when alone. He desired a mate. He became as big as man and wife embracing each other. He parted this very body into two. From that came husband and wife. Therefore, said Yājñavalkya, this (body) is one-half of oneself, like one of the two hálves of a split pea. Therefore this space is indeed filled by the wife. He was united with her. From that men were born.



Brihadaranyaka Upanishad 1.4.3 by Geeta Press Gorakhpur – Here Manu and Shatrupa are eternally husband and wife

वह रममाण नहीं हुआ। इसीसे एकाकी पुरुष रममाण नहीं होता। उसने दूसरेकी इच्छा की। वह जिस प्रकार परस्पर आलिङ्गित स्त्री और पुरुष होते हैं वैसे ही परिमाणवाला हो गया। उसने इस अपने देहको ही दो भागोंमें विभक्त कर डाला उससे पति और पत्नी हुए। इसलिये यह शरीर अर्द्धबृगल (द्विदल अन्नके एक दल) के समान है-ऐसा याज्ञवल्क्यने कहा। इसलिये यह [पुरुषार्द्ध] आकाश स्त्रीसे पूर्ण होता है। वह उस (स्त्री) से संयुक्त हुआ; उसीसे मनुष्य उत्पन्न हुए हैं ॥ ३ ॥

"He did not find delight (in being alone). Therefore, a solitary person does not find delight. He desired another. He became of the same measure (form) as a man and woman embracing one another. He then divided this very body into two parts; from that arose husband and wife. That is why this body is like a split pea or grain – so said Yājñavalkya.

Hence, this [half-man] is completed by the woman, like space is completed (filled) by the woman. He united with her; and from that union, human beings were born." (Verse 3)

स वै नैव रेमे तस्मादेकाकी न रमते स द्वितीयमैच्छत्। स हैतावानास यथा स्त्रीपुमांसौ सम्परिष्वक्तौ स इममेवात्मानं द्वेधापातयत्ततः पतिश्च पत्नी चाभवतां तस्मादिदमर्धबृगलमिव स्व इति ह स्माह याज्ञवल्क्यस्तस्मादयमाकाशः स्त्रिया पूर्यत एव तां समभवत्ततो मनुष्या अजायन्त॥ ३॥

वह रममाण नहीं हुआ। इसीसे एकाकी पुरुष रममाण नहीं होता। उसने दूसरेकी इच्छा की। वह जिस प्रकार परस्पर आलिङ्गित स्त्री और पुरुष होते हैं वैसे ही परिमाणवाला हो गया। उसने इस अपने देहको ही दो भागोंमें विभक्त कर डाला। उससे पति और पत्नी हुए। इसलिये यह शरीर अर्धबृगल (द्विदल अन्नके एक दल) के समान है—ऐसा याज्ञवल्क्यने कहा। इसलिये यह [पुरुषार्द्ध] आकाश स्त्रीसे पूर्ण होता है। वह उस (स्त्री) से संयुक्त हुआ। उसीसे मनुष्य उत्पन्न हुए हैं॥ ३॥

Shri Shankaracharya (490 BCE) too told the same thing in his bhasya that they are eternally Husband and wife

उससे उस द्विधा पातनसे पति और पत्नी हुए-यह लौकिक पति-पत्नियों [के पति-पत्नी नाम] का निर्वचन किया गया है। इसीसे, क्योंकि यह जो स्त्री है शरीरका ही पृथग्भूत अर्धभाग है, इसलिये यह शरीर आत्माका अर्धबृगल है।

“From that splitting into two, husband and wife came into being — this explains the origin (etymological explanation) of the worldly terms ‘husband’ and ‘wife.’

And because the woman is a separated half-part of the same body, therefore this body is like a split grain (half of a whole) of the self (ātman).”

Brahmanas speaks of this illicit relationship as well,

📚Aitareya Brahmana 6.5.27📚
For the semen is like something unspeakable secretly poured forth into the womb. The sperm becomes blended. For when Prajapati had carnal intercourse with his daughter, his sperm was poured forth upon the earth (and was mixed up with it. This was done for making the sperm produce fruit.”

📚Pancavimsa Brahmana 8.2.10📚
Prajapati went on top of his own daughter Usas. His semen flew away. It was poured on this (the earth). He made it perfect, [thinking]: "Let this [Semen] of mine not be spoiled." He made it [something] real, namely, cattle."

📚Shatapatha Brahmana 1.7.4.1-3📚
Prajapati set his mind on his own daughter, either Sky or Dawn. 'May pair with her; he wished. He made love to her. That indeed was a sin for the gods: a 'He who acts thus towards his own daughter, our sister, [commits a sin].' Those gods then said to this god who is lord of cattle. 'An act of transgression he commits who acts thus towards his own daughter, our sister. Pierce him.' Rudra, having aimed [him], pierced him. In the middle [of the act, his semen spurted forth. Thus indeed it was."

Prajapati is Sun in Vedas

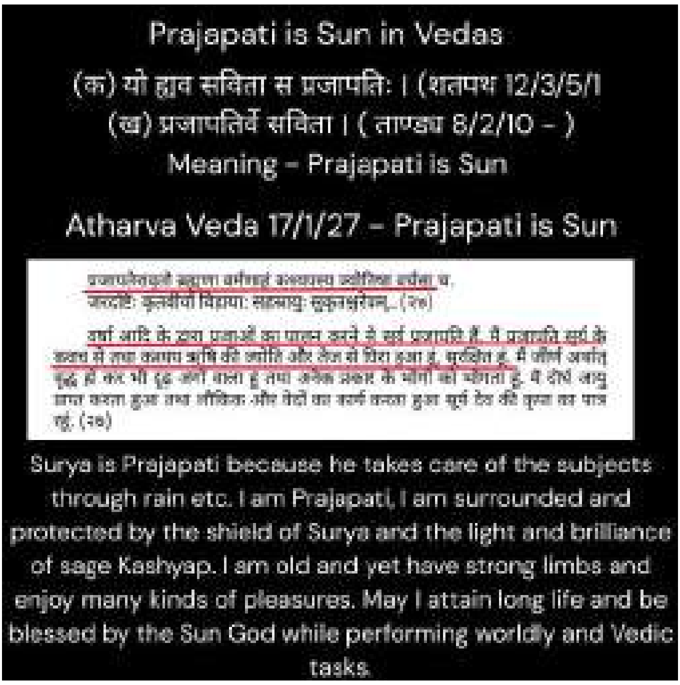
(क) यो ह्यव सविता स प्रजापतिः । (शतपथ 12/3/5/1

(ख) प्रजापतिर्वै सविता । (ताण्ड्य 8/2/10 –)

Meaning – Prajapati is Sun

Atharva Veda 17/1/27 – Prajapati is Sun

Atharva Veda 17/1/27 – Surya is Prajapati because he takes care of the subjects through rain etc. I am Prajapati, I am surrounded and protected by the shield of Surya and the light and brilliance of sage Kashyap. I am old and yet have strong limbs and enjoy many kinds of pleasures. May I attain long life and be blessed by the Sun God while performing worldly and Vedic tasks.



Rig Veda 4.52.1 tells that Usha is daughter of Sun

Rig Veda 4.52.1-Usha, the daughter of the Sun, who is well praised, the able leader of all living beings and gives birth to the best fruits, appears and destroys the darkness after the night has passed.

Atharva Veda 19.12.1 tells that Usha is the sister of Night and destroys night . Thus Usha is Dawn

Atharva Veda 19.12.1 – As soon as Usha arrives, she dispels the darkness of her sister night. After this Usha opens the worldly and Vedic path completely.

Rig Veda 10.61.14 states जिस समय काली रात लाल रंग वाली उषाओं में बदलने लगती है, उस समय मैं तुम्हारा आह्वान करता हूं – "At the time when the dark night begins to turn into the red-hued dawn (Usha) I invoke you."

It is written in Nirukta (2.18) as well as in the Uṇādi Sūtra (4.235) that Uṣā (the dawn) is that which dispels the darkness of night. The time that follows the night, when the darkness begins to fade away — that early morning period is called Uṣā (dawn).N

Nirukta 2/18

उषाः कस्मादुच्छतीति सत्या रात्रेरपरः कालः ।
कस्मात् किस कारण से उषाः उषा कहा जाता है? क्योंकि उच्छतीति सत्या (अन्धकार को) निवारित करती हुई रहती है-दूर करती हुई रहती है। रात्रः रात्रि का अपरः कालः उत्तरवती (पिछला) काल होता है।
विमर्श-

"Why is the dawn (Uṣā) called Uṣā? Because she 'ucchatīti satyā' — she removes, dispels (the darkness). The period following the night is known as Uṣā, the later (subsequent) part of the night, i.e., the early morning."

Discussion (Vimarśa):
The term Uṣā is derived from the root "ucch" (to rise, to remove), indicating that Uṣā is the one who removes darkness — hence, she is called Uṣā. She signifies the later phase of the night, when the darkness begins to withdraw, and light begins to appear. Thus, Uṣā represents the transition from night to day, symbolizing hope, awakening, and illumination.

In the Nirukta, Uṣā is described as a deity associated with the heavenly realm (dyuloka).

In Chapter 12 of the Nirukta, a list of deities associated with the dyuloka (celestial region) is given, where Uṣā is mentioned second, right after the Aśvins, as a deity of the heavenly sphere.

That is why in the Brāhmaṇa texts, Uṣā is referred to as a deity of the dyuloka. Whether one says "Uṣā" or "deity of the dyuloka", both refer to the same entity — there is no disagreement in this regard.

Furthermore, regarding Uṣā — the deity of the dyuloka — it is written in the Nirukta that she spreads light across half the region of the sky before the sun rises. This is what we commonly know as dawn or uṣā-kāla (the time of Uṣā in the early morning).

Now then, from here onwards, the dyusthānāḥ — the deities f the celestial realm (dyuloka) — are being explained.

(2. Uṣas / Ushas)
Uṣā, of the root vaṣṭiḥ meaning "to shine, radiate beauty," is derived from the verb root uśch (उच्छी) in the sense of radiating or rising. One Uṣā is mādhyamikā, the intermediate — the other kind of Uṣā associated with the mid-region (antarikṣa) and related to lightning.
But here, this Uṣā is dyusthānīya — the heavenly Uṣā.

Vedic Mantra (Ṛgveda 1.92.13):

uṣas tac citram ābharāsmabhyam vājinīvati yena tokaṁ ca tanayaṁ ca dhāmahe
Translation: O Uṣā! Bring us that brilliant (wealth), rich in horses, by which we may sustain our offspring and their children.

Explanation:

The word Uṣā refers to the early morning light before sunrise — she is a dyuloka-sthānīya (heavenly) goddess. The word "Uṣā" is derived from two different roots:

- From the root vaś (वश्) meaning "to shine or radiate beauty" → implying her role in spreading brilliance and charm.
- From the root uśch (उच्छी) meaning "to rise or emit" → again suggesting the dawning or emitting of light.

There is another intermediate Uṣā (antarikṣa-sthānīya), signifying lightning or brilliance in the mid-region — but the current context is about the celestial Uṣā, associated with the dawn.

Mantra meaning:

This Uṣā, belonging to the region of space (rajas), in the eastern half of the sky — before the Sun rises — anoints everything with light (bhānuṁ añjate), illuminating all. She awakens all beings (ketum akrat) and makes them aware.

Like warriors who cleanse and polish their weapons (dhṛṣṇavaḥ āyudhāni iva), preparing them for battle, similarly, this Uṣā brightens the world, energizing it for the day ahead.

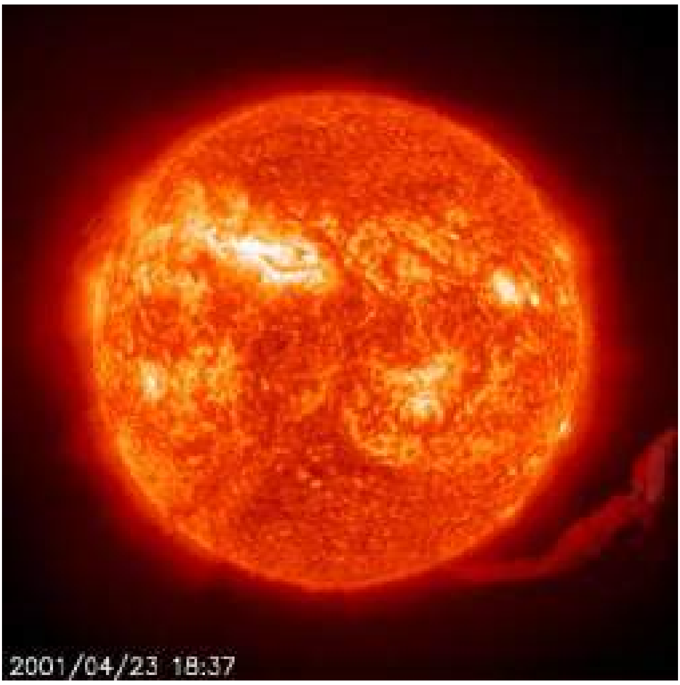
Who is Prajapati here ?

Sun is Prajapati



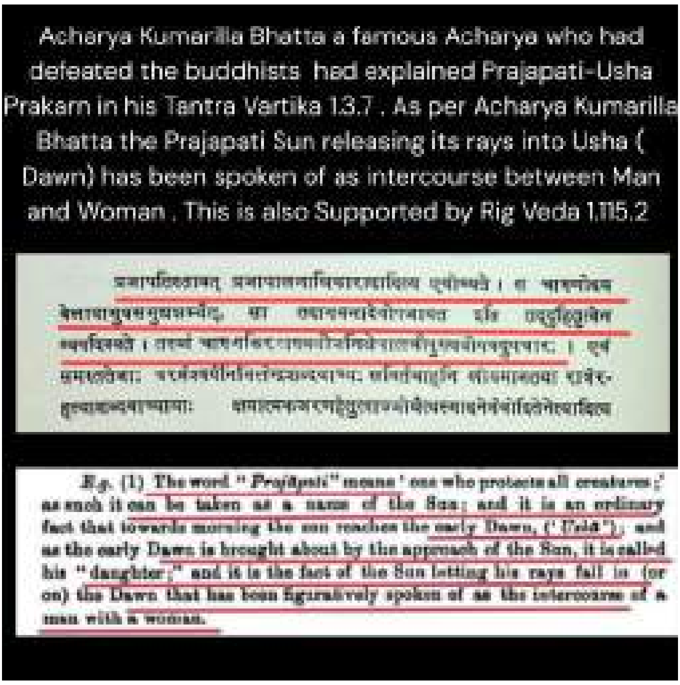
Who is Usha here ?

Usha is Dawn

Acharya Kumarilla Bhatta a famous Acharya who had defeated the buddhists had explained Prajapati-Usha Prakarn in his Tantra Vartika 1.3.7. As per Acharya Kumarilla Bhatta the Prajapati Sun releasing its rays into Usha (Dawn) has been spoken of as intercourse between Man and Woman. This is also Supported by Rig Veda 1.115.2

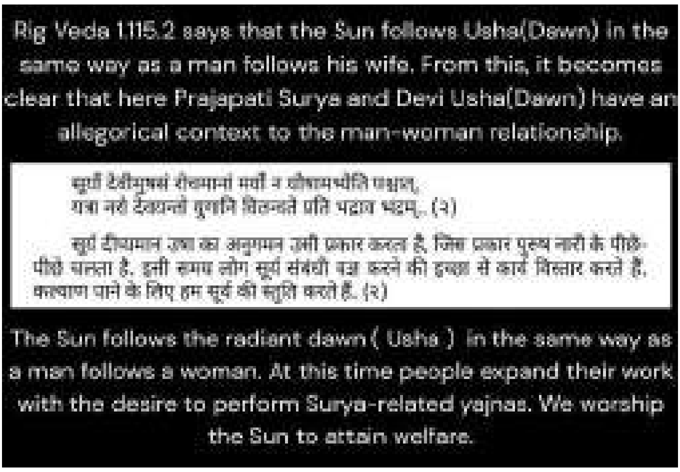
प्रजापतिस्तावत् प्रजापालनाधिकारादादित्य एवोच्यते । स चारुणोदय वेलायामुषसमुद्यन्नभ्यैत्, सा तदागमनादेवोपजायत इति तदुहितृत्वेन व्यपदिश्यते । तस्यां चारुणकिरगाख्यबीजनिक्षेपात्स्त्रीपुरुपयोगवदुपचारः । एवं समस्ततेजाः परमैश्वर्यनिमित्तेन्द्रशब्दवाच्यः सवितैवानि लीयमानतया रात्रेर-हल्याशब्दवाच्यायाः क्षयात्मकज रणहेतुत्वाज्जीर्यत्यस्मादनेनैवोदितेनेत्यादित्य

E.g. (1) The word "Prajapati" means 'one who protects all creatures;' as such it can be taken as a name of the Sun; and it is an ordinary fact that towards morning the sun reaches the early Dawn, ('Usha'); and as the early Dawn is brought about by the approach of the Sun, it is called his "daughter;" and it is the fact of the Sun letting his rays fall in (or on) the Dawn that has been figuratively spoken of as the intercourse of a man with a woman.



Rig Veda 1.115.2 says that the Sun follows Usha(Dawn) in the same way as a man follows his wife. From this, it becomes clear that here Prajapati Surya and Devi Usha(Dawn) have an allegorical context to the man-woman relationship.

सूर्य दीप्यमान उषा का अनुगमन उसी प्रकार करता है, जिस प्रकार पुरुष नारी के पीछे-पीछे चलता है. इसी समय लोग सूर्य संबंधी यज्ञ करने की इच्छा से कार्य विस्तार करते हैं. कल्याण पाने के लिए हम सूर्य की स्तुति करते हैं. (२)
The Sun follows the radiant dawn (Usha) in the same way as a man follows a woman. At this time people expand their work with the desire to perform Surya-related yajnas. We worship the Sun to attain welfare.



Sayancharya bhasya on Rig Veda 1.115.2 explains it further-

"सूर्यः "देवीं दानादिगुणयुक्तां "रोचमानां दीप्यमानाम् "उषसं "पश्चात् "अभ्येति उषसः प्रादुर्भावानन्तरं तामभिलक्ष्य गच्छति । तत्र दृष्टान्तः । "मर्यो "न "योषाम् । यथा कश्चिन्मनुष्यः शोभनावयवां गच्छन्तीं युवतिं स्त्रियं सततमनुगच्छति तद्वत् । "यत्र यस्यामुषसि जातायां "देवयन्तः देवं द्योतमानं सूर्यं यष्टुमिच्छन्तः "नरः यज्ञस्य नेतारो यजमानाः "युगानि । युगशब्दः कालवाची । तेन च तत्र कर्तव्यानि कर्माणि लक्ष्यन्ते यथा दर्शपूर्णमासौ इति । अग्निहोत्रादीनि कर्माणि "वितन्वते विस्तारयन्ति । यद्वा । देवयन्तो देवयागार्थं धनमात्मन इच्छन्तो यजमानपुरुषा युगानि हलावयवभूतानि कर्षणाय वितन्वते प्रसारयन्ति । तामुषसमनुगच्छतीत्यर्थः । एवंविधं "भद्रं कल्याणं सूर्यं "प्रति "भद्राय कल्याणरूपाय कर्मफलाय' स्तुमः इति शेषः । यद्वा । देवयन्तः देवकामा यजमाना युगानि युग्मानि भूत्वा पत्नीभिः सहिताः सन्तो भद्रं कल्याणम् अग्निहोत्रादिकं कर्म भद्राय तत्फलार्थं प्रति प्रत्येकं यस्यामुषसि प्रवृत्तायां वितन्वते विस्तारयन्ति ॥ मर्यः । 'मृङ् प्राणत्यागे'। छन्दसि निष्टर्क्य इत्यादौ यत्प्रत्ययान्तो निपात्यते । ' यतोऽनावः' इत्याद्युदात्तत्वम् । युगानि ।

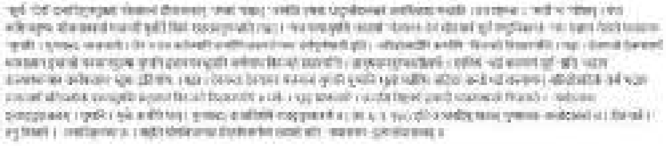
The Sun follows the radiant goddess Uṣas, who is endowed with divine qualities such as generosity and shines brilliantly. After Uṣas manifests, the Sun, drawn by her beauty, proceeds after her—just as a young man constantly follows a graceful young woman. When Uṣas rises, the worshippers (devayantaḥ), desiring to behold the shining deity (the Sun), prepare to offer their worship. The word yugāni refers to time cycles or ritual periods, such as the new and full moon sacrifices, during which obligatory rites like Agnihotra are performed and expanded. Alternatively, yugāni may refer to the components of a plough, indicating that these sacrificers—desiring divine rewards and wealth—engage in agricultural labor by spreading their yokes for plowing. Thus, it is said that they follow Uṣas into activity. This benevolent and auspicious Sun is praised for auspicious purposes—the fruitful results of sacred actions. Or again, devayantaḥ, the sacrificers, paired with their wives (yugāni as conjugal pairs), perform auspicious acts like Agnihotra during the rise of Uṣas, each extending their rituals in pursuit of divine blessings.

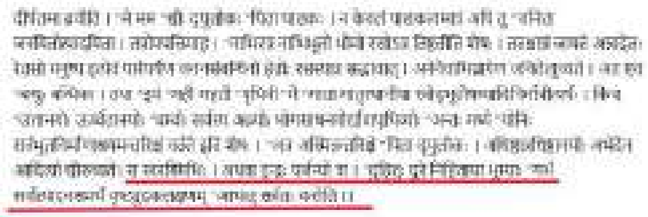


. Then what is the semen of Prajapati Sun here ? Rig Veda 1.164.33 Sayana Bhasya tells that Father form Sun impregnates his daughter Usha/Heaven with Sun rays form Virya/Semen which gives rise to all living beings . Thus the Semen here is Sun rays only

Sayancharya bhasya on Rig Veda 1.164.33

“स स्वरश्मिभिः । अथवा इन्द्रः पर्जन्यो वा । दुहितुः दूरे निहिताया भूम्याः गर्भं सर्वोत्पादनसमर्थं वृष्ट्युदकलक्षणम् आधात् सर्वतः करोति ।।”

“He, with his own rays places the seed (garbha), capable of producing all beings and characterized by rain or water, into the daughter , who is situated afar. He causes this (fertilization) from all directions.”



स स्वरश्मिभिः । अथवा इन्द्रः पर्जन्यो वा । दुहितुः दूरे निहिताया भूम्याः गर्भं सर्वोत्पादनसमर्थं वृष्ट्युदकलक्षणम् आधात् सर्वतः करोति ।।

Meaning of Rudra Punishing Prajapati here in this Prakaran

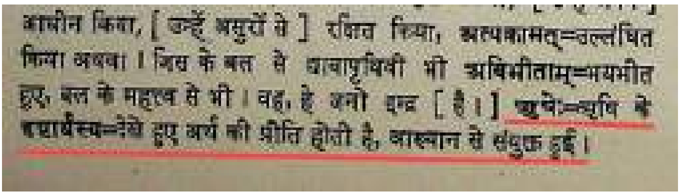
In this Prakaran in Aitreya Brahmana 3/33 and Satapatha Brahmana 1.7.4. its written that Rudra punished Prajapati with his Bow ? So whats the meaning of this prakaran

To understand this i will quote Nirukta 10/10

he very first thing to understand is that the style in which the sages (ṛṣis) present the meanings of mantras is ākhyāyikā in Nature .In Nirukta (10.10), the great sage Yāska states:

"ṛṣer dṛṣṭārthasya prītir bhavati ākhyāna-saṁyuktā" —

That is: A sage finds joy in conveying the meaning of what he has perceived (through intuition or vision) by combining it with a narrative (ākhyāna), i.e., symbolic or imaginative stories. These stories are not mere fiction; they serve to convey both natural (cosmic or physical) and didactic (educational/moral) meanings behind the mantra.



आधीन किया, [उन्हें असुरों से] रक्षित किया, अस्पकामत्=उल्लंघित
किया अथवा । जिस के बल से द्यावापृथिवी भी अबिभीताम्=भयभीत
हुए, बल के महत्त्व से भी । वह, हे जनो इन्द्र [है ।] ऋषेः=ऋषि के

In the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa 1.7.4 which contains the Same Prajapati-Usha Prakaran as in Rig Veda 10.61.5-7 , Aitreya Brahmana 3/33 the episode of Prajāpati and Uṣā is referred to as a "Prāśitraharaṇa Ākhyāna", meaning it is presented purely as a narrative or story. Therefore, the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa itself classifies it as an ākhyāna (allegorical or symbolic tale).

सप्तमाध्याये चतुर्थं ब्राह्मणम्

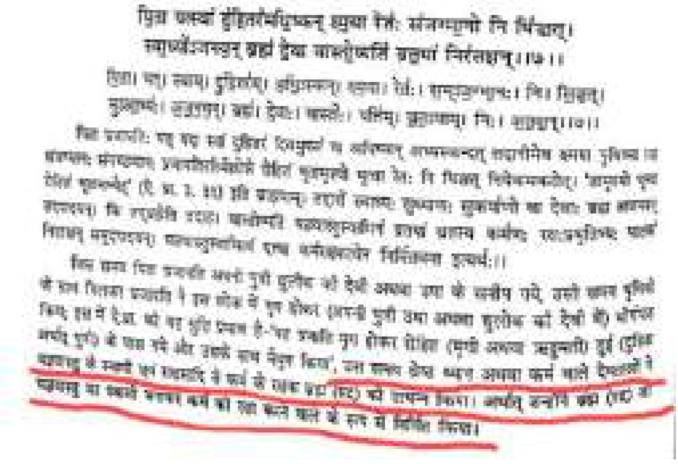
१.७.४.१ प्रजापतिर्ह वै स्वां दुहितरमभिदध्यौ। दिवं वोषसं वा
मिथुन्येनया स्यामिति ताꣳ सम्बभूव ॥१॥
पदपाठः – प्रजापतिर्ह वै स्वां दुहितरमभिदध्यौ-दिवं वा.

In the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, the episode of Prajāpati and Uṣā is referred to as the "Prāśitra-haraṇa Ākhyāna", which means it is presented merely as a story or allegorical narrative, not as a historical or factual account. That is why the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa itself classifies this as an "ākhyāna" (tale or parable), indicating its symbolic or illustrative nature.

Rig Veda 10/61/5-7 Sayanacharya commentary

> "यज्ञकर्म के स्वामी एवं रक्षक के रूप में कर्म के समय ध्यान अथवा कर्म करने वाले देवताओं ने रुद्र (रू) का उत्पन्न किया। अर्थात् उन्होंने ब्रह्म (रू) को यज्ञकर्म तथा स्वामी भाव अर्थात कर्म की रक्षा करने वाले के रूप में निर्मित किया।"

> "As the master and protector of the sacrificial act (yajña-karma), during the performance of the ritual, the deities conceived Rudra (Rū). That is, they created Brahman (Rū) in the form of the guardian and lord of the sacrificial act."



Ācārya Sāyaṇa has written in his commentary on the Ṛgveda (10.61.7) that when Prajāpati, the father, committed an improper act with his daughter Uṣā, the noble gods at that time manifested Rudra, who is also referred to here as Vāstoṣpati Brahman, the protector of righteous actions (karma). That is, when there was harm or corruption of actions due to sin, the gods called upon Rudra to safeguard the sanctity of karma.

Whenever there is damage to karmic order due to sin, Rudra — the Supreme Being — arises to protect dharma by punishing the wrongdoers. We will understand this further through narratives (ākhyānas) found in the Brāhmaṇa texts as revealed by the sages.

Shatpath Brahman (1/7/4/3)

It is stated in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa (1.7.4.3) that for this sinful act of Prajāpati, the gods told Rudra: "Prajāpati has committed the sin of incest with his own daughter; therefore, punish him." (Atmospheric phenomenon between Dawn and Sun as per Kumarilla Bhatta and Rig Veda which I had already explained before) And Rudra killed Prajāpati with a sharp arrow.

That is, the sages (ṛṣis), through the personification of two natural elements — the Sun (Sūrya) and Dawn (Uṣā) — conveyed through a symbolic story that in Vedic Dharma, anyone who commits a sin such as incest with one's own daughter shall receive the punishment of death in the same manner.

इन देवों ने प्रसिद्ध जो यह स्विष्टकृत् रूपात्मक 'रुद्र' पशुओं का स्वामी अर्थात् शासक है उससे यह जो प्रजापति मर्यादा का अतिक्रमण कर रहा है कि अपनी पुत्री तथा हमारी बहन (उषा) के साथ इस प्रकार का सहवास जन्य अपराध अर्थात् अत्याचारात्मक व्यवहार करता है उसको अपने तीव्र बाणों से बींध दो ऐसा कहा (निवेदन किया)। देवों का आर्त्तनाद तुनकर क्रुद्ध हुआ वह 'रुद्र' अपने रौद्र रूप से विशेष प्रयत्न पूर्वक अर्थात् निशाना साधकर उस प्रजापति को अपने तीक्ष्ण बाण से बींध दिया। उस समय प्रजापति का वीर्य स्खलित होने वाला ही था, कि रुद्र का बाण उसे आहत कर दिया। फलतः प्रजापति का आधा वीर्य बाहर स्खलित हो गया। क्योंकि यह बात इस प्रकार ही हुई।

The gods then invoked the well-known Sviṣṭakṛt form of Rudra, who is the lord and ruler of all beings (paśus), and said to him:

"This Prajāpati, who is crossing the bounds of ighteousness by engaging in a sinful act of union with his own daughter — our sister Uṣā — is committing an offense born of lust and aggression. Pierce him with your sharp arrows.”

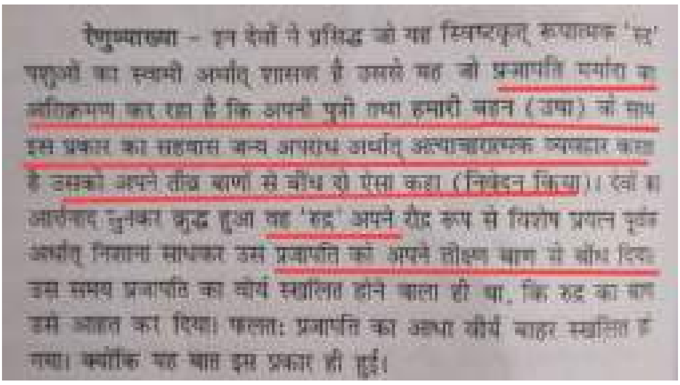
Hearing the anguished plea of the gods, Rudra became enraged. Taking on his fierce (raudra) form, he deliberately aimed and struck Prajāpati with his piercing arrow.

At that very moment, Prajāpati was on the verge of discharging his seed, but before he could, Rudra’s arrow struck him. As a result, half of Prajāpati’s seed was expelled externally.



ऐतुम्व्याख्या – इन देवों ने प्रसिद्ध जो यह स्विष्टकृत् रूपात्मक 'रुद्र' पशुओं का स्वामी अर्थात् शासक है उससे यह जो प्रजापति मर्यादा का अतिक्रमण कर रहा है कि अपनी पुत्री तथा हमारी बहन (उषा) के साथ इस प्रकार का सहवास जन्य अपराध अर्थात् अत्याचारात्मक व्यवहार करता है उसको अपने तीव्र बाणों से बींध दो ऐसा कहा (निवेदन किया)। देवों का आर्तनाद सुनकर क्रुद्ध हुआ वह 'रुद्र' अपने रौद्र रूप से विशेष प्रयत्न पूर्वक अर्थात् निशाना साधकर उस प्रजापति को अपने तीक्ष्ण बाण से बींध दिया। उस समय प्रजापति का वीर्य स्खलित होने वाला ही था, कि रुद्र का बाण उसे आहत कर दिया। फलतः प्रजापति का आधा वीर्य बाहर स्खलित हो गया। क्योंकि यह बात इस प्रकार ही हुई।

These type of myths originate when people compare the divine with mortals. In श्रुतिशास्त्र, Daksha is described as – दक्षं सर्वस्य जगतो निर्माणे समर्थं प्रजापतिम् । यद्वा । प्राणरूपेण सर्वेषु प्राणिषु व्याप्य वर्तमानं हिरण्यगर्भम् । 'प्राणो वै दक्षः' (तै. सं. २. ५. २. ४) इति श्रुतेः । – Daksha, the Prajapati with the potential to create the universe, the one who pervades every living creature in the form of प्राण. So प्राण-दक्ष.
Do mortals and Daksha Prajapati anyway seem alike? The mlecchas commenting on Prajapati don’t have even a basic idea of terms such as Prajapati, Hiranyagarbha, etc. Besides, only morons would find similarity between mortal women and twilight which happens to be a natural phenomena.
Anyway, let’s have a look at one of the most common sources of this myth -दक्षश्च मोहितशंभोर्मायया ब्रह्मणस्सुतः भ्रातृभिस्स भगिन्यां वै भोक्तुकामोऽभवत्पुरा ।। [शिवपुराणम्/संहिता ५ (उमासंहिता)/अध्यायः ०४] -Daksha, deluded by Shiva’s Maya, had a desire to have conjugal pleasures from his sister (Sandhya).
Now, we should understand the form of Prajapati Daksha and Sandhya in this context. According to श्रुति and निरुक्त, Daksha is also referred to as sun. And Sandhya is obviously twilight. Sandhya devi’s upper body is the morning twilight – प्रातस्संध्याभवत्सा तु अहोरात्रादिमध्यगा II Her lower body is the evening twilight – तच्छेषभागस्तस्यास्तु अहोरात्रांतमध्यगा सा सायमभवत्संध्या पितृप्रीतिप्रदा सदा ॥
Do these deities seem comparable to humans? Not even in the slightest. In this context, Prajapati Daksha has to be interpreted as sun. In निरुक्तशास्त्रम् ११.२३, there are verses that describe मित्र-वरुण as day and night and Aditi as the conjoining phase between these two phases – अहोरात्र मित्रावरुणौ। तयोर्या सन्धिवेला तस्या प्रथममवस्यायरसानुप्रदानसंबन्धार्तो मध्यमामदितिमभिप्रत्योच्यते। Similarly, प्रजापति दक्ष had been described as father of अदिति – तदेवं दक्षस्य जन्मनि उदये चार्धवर्तिन्यादित्ये यतो वा लब्धात्मिका त्वम् अपि अहोरात्रे उभे विवाससि परिचरसि सर्वतो व्याप्नोपि । It says that when the sun (दक्ष) rises, at that time in the conjoining phase, अदिति partially pervades day and night.

Similarly, the relation of दक्ष with संध्या in this puranic context, has to be interpreted as the relation of sun and the evening. And, it shouldn't be compared with the incest committed by mortals because none of the characters in this story are mortals.

My dear King, Lord Krsna forcibly took away Princess Mitravinda, the daughter of His aunt Rajädhidevi, before the eyes of the rival kings.

Refutation –

VALIDITY OF MARRIAGE BETWEEN COUSINS!
In the Vedic system of marriage, the importance of the gotra, or family linkage, was stressed. Cousin brothers & sisters were allowed to get married, only if they did not belong to the same gotra, or family.
Gotra is always defined with respect of father's linkage, Hence children are always awarded by the father's gotra, irrespective of what ever the gotra of mother is !

वैदिक विवाह की व्यवस्था में गोत्र तथा पारिवारिक संबंध को महत्व दिया गया है। भाई - बहन को विवाह की अनुमति मात्र तभी दी जाती थी, जब वे एक ही गोत्र या परिवार से संबंधित न हों।

गोत्र को सदैव पिता के संबंध (पितृ पक्ष) में परिभाषित किया जाता है, अत: एक मानुष्य (पुरुष या स्त्री) को सदैव पिता के गोत्र से सम्मानित किया जाता है, इसमें माता के गोत्र का स्थान नहीं !

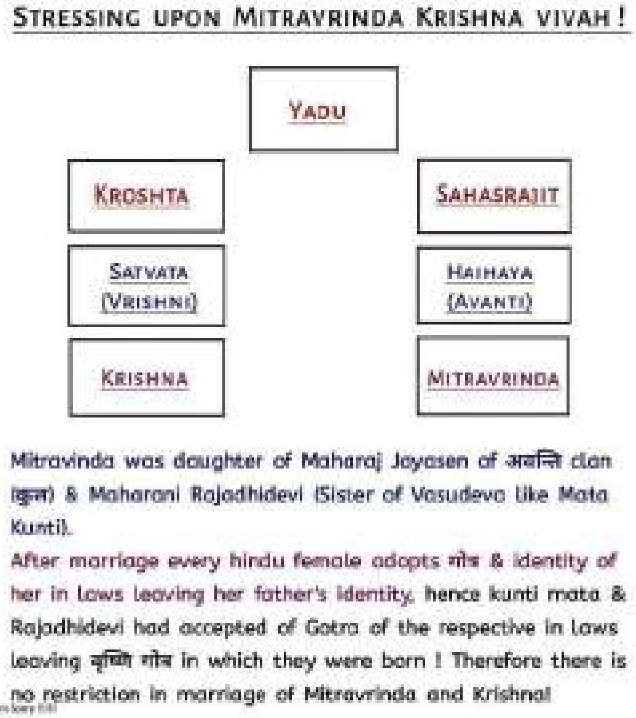
STRESSING UPON MITRAVRINDA KRISHNA VIVAH!

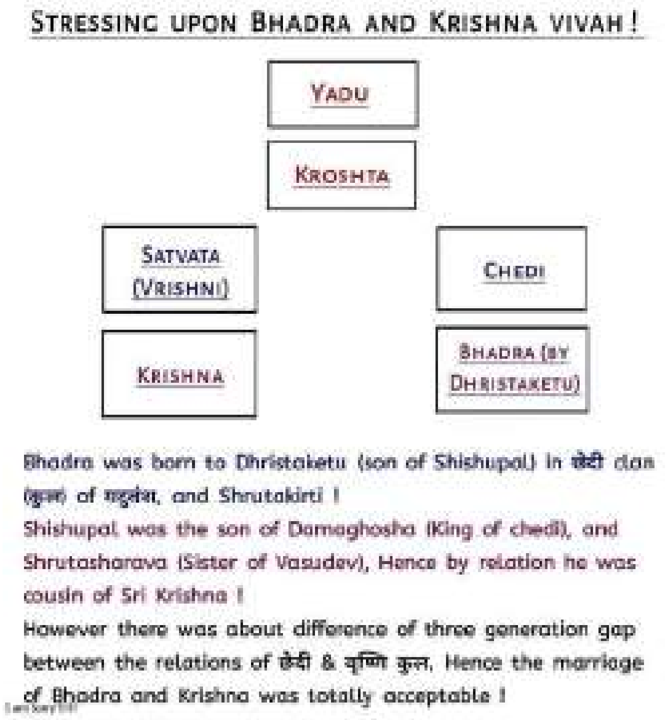
Mitravinda was daughter of Maharaj Jayasen of अवन्ति clan (कुल) & Maharani Rajadhidevi (Sister of Vasudeva like Mata Kunti).
After marriage every hindu female adopts गोत्र & identity of her in laws leaving her father's identity, hence kunti mata & Rajadhidevi had accepted of Gotra of the respective in laws leaving वृष्णि गोत्र in which they were born! Therefore there is no restriction in marriage of Mitravrinda and Krishna!



STRESSING UPON BHADRA AND KRISHNA VIVAH!

Bhadra was born to Dhristaketu (son of Shishupal) in छेदी lan (कुल) of यदुवंश, and Shrutakirti !

Shishupal was the son of Damaghosha (King of chedi), and Shrutasharava (Sister of Vasudev), Hence by relation he was cousin of Sri Krishna !
However there was about difference of three generation gap between the relations of छेदी & वृष्णि कुल, Hence the marriage of Bhadra and Krishna was totally acceptable !



STRESSING UPON ARJUN Subhadra VIVAH!
Maharaj Shursen was from the वृष्णि clan (कुल/गोत्र) of यदुवंश, & so was the gotra of Vasudev, followed by Krishna, Balram & Subhadra ! Vichitraviry (Younger son Shantanu) begotted Dhritrasth & Pandu, Hence Pandav got their gotra in कुरुवंश!
Hence Marriage of Shubhadra & Arjun was totally acceptable as they were different kul and gotra !

. Manu's Incest With his Daughter

📚Shatapatha Brahmana 1.8.1.9-11📚
Manu said to her, 'Who art thou?' 'Thy daughter,' she replied. 'How, illustrious one, (art thou) my daughter?' he asked… With her he went on worshipping and performing austerities, wishing for offspring. Through her he generated this race, which is this race of Manu; and whatever blessing he invoked through her, all that was granted to him. Now this (daughter of Manu) is essentially the same as the Idâ; and whosoever, knowing this, performs with (the) Idâ, he propagates this race which Manu generated; and whatever blessing he invokes through it (or her), all that is granted to him."

He (the sage or the narrator) said —
"She who gave birth to me, I belong to her alone."
Even she was under your control.
So, either she knew this (truth) or she did not — but she came to you on her own.
She approached Manu.

Then Manu asked her: "Who are you?"
She replied: "I am your daughter."
He said: "O Lady, how can you be my daughter?"

She answered:
"It is I who offered those oblations into the waters — clarified butter (ghee), curd, milk, fresh butter (āmikṣā). Through that offering, I generated you. I am a wish or blessing (āśiḥ).
Therefore, assign me a role in the sacrifice.
If you do so, you will gain much: abundant progeny and wealth in cattle.
And whatever blessings you hope for through me — all of them shall be fulfilled."

So he assigned her (the goddess, the blessing) a role in the middle of the sacrifice, i.e., between the Prayāja and Anuyāja offerings.
That middle portion of the sacrifice is the essence — that which lies between the preliminary and concluding offerings.

Whatever blessings Manu had hoped for through her — she fulfilled them all.

When the deed was done in mid-heaven in the proximity of the father working his will, and the daughter coming together, they let the seed fall slightly; it was poured upon the high place of sacrifice. When the father united with the daughter, then associating with the earth, he sprinkled it with the effusion[Semen]: then the thoughtful gods begot Brahma : they fabricated the lord of the hearth (of sacrifice); the defender of sacred rites\

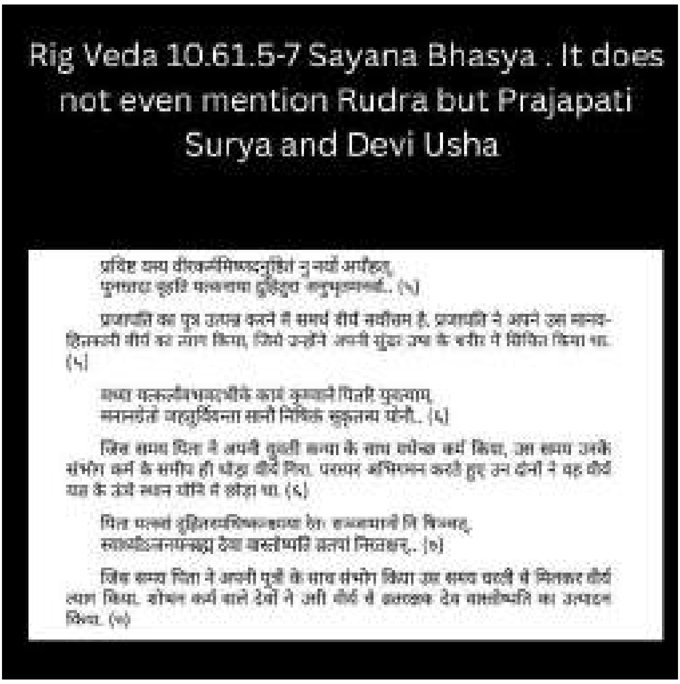
Rig Veda 10.61.5-7 Sayana Bhasya . It does not even mention Rudra but Prajapati Surya and Devi Usha



Prajapati is Sun in Vedas

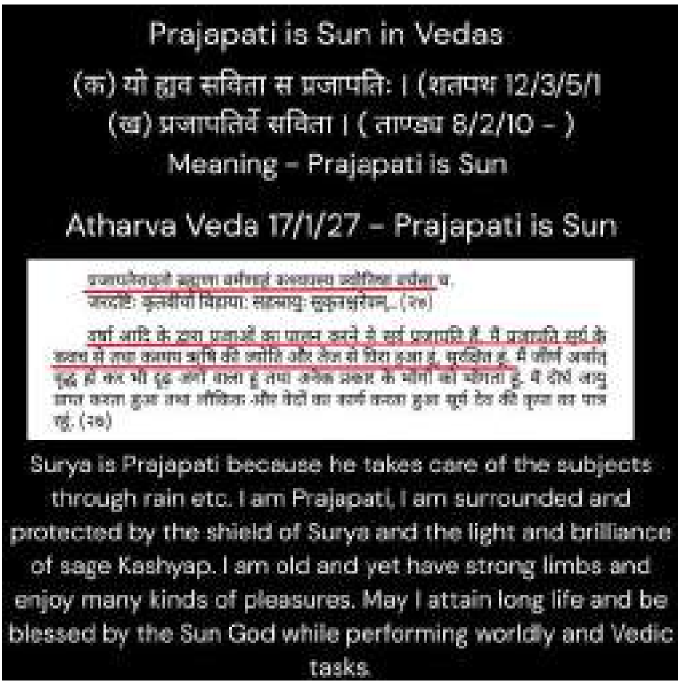
(क) यो ह्याव सविता स प्रजापतिः । (शतपथ 12/3/5/1

(ख) प्रजापतिर्वे सविता । (ताण्ड्य 8/2/10 –)

Meaning – Prajapati is Sun

Atharva Veda 17/1/27 – Prajapati is Sun

Atharva Veda 17/1/27 – Surya is Prajapati because he takes care of the subjects through rain etc. I am Prajapati, I am surrounded and protected by the shield of Surya and the light and brilliance of sage Kashyap. I am old and yet have strong limbs and enjoy many kinds of pleasures. May I attain long life and be blessed by the Sun God while performing worldly and Vedic tasks.



Rig Veda 4.52.1 tells that Usha is daughter of Sun

Rig Veda 4.52.1-Usha, the daughter of the Sun, who is well praised, the able leader of all living beings and gives birth to the best fruits, appears and destroys the darkness after the night has passed.

Atharva Veda 19.12.1 tells that Usha is the sister of Night and destroys night . Thus Usha is Dawn

Atharva Veda 19.12.1 – As soon as Usha arrives, she dispels the darkness of her sister night. After this Usha opens the worldly and Vedic path completely.

Rig Veda 10.61.14 states जिस समय काली रात लाल रंग वाली उषाओं में बदलने लगती है, उस समय मैं तुम्हारा आह्वान करता हूं – "At the time when the dark night begins to turn into the red-hued dawn (Usha) I invoke you."

It is written in Nirukta (2.18) as well as in the Uṇādi Sūtra (4.235) that Uṣā (the dawn) is that which dispels the darkness of night. The time that follows the night, when the darkness begins to fade away — that early morning period is called Uṣā (dawn).N

Nirukta 2/18

उषाः कस्मादुच्छतीति सत्या रात्रेरपरः कालः ।
कस्मात् किस कारण से उषाः उषा कहा जाता है? क्योंकि उच्छतीति सत्या (अन्धकार को) निवारित करती हुई रहती है-दूर करती हुई रहती है। रात्रः रात्रि का अपरः कालः उत्तरवती (पिछला) काल होता है।
विमर्श-

"Why is the dawn (Uṣā) called Uṣā? Because she 'ucchatīti satyā' — she removes, dispels (the darkness). The period following the night is known as Uṣā, the later (subsequent) part of the night, i.e., the early morning."

Discussion (Vimarśa):
The term Uṣā is derived from the root "ucch" (to rise, to remove), indicating that Uṣā is the one who removes darkness — hence, she is called Uṣā. She signifies the later phase of the night, when the darkness begins to withdraw, and light begins to appear. Thus, Uṣā represents the transition from night to day, symbolizing hope, awakening, and illumination.

In the Nirukta, Uṣā is described as a deity associated with the heavenly realm (dyuloka).

In Chapter 12 of the Nirukta, a list of deities associated with the dyuloka (celestial region) is given, where Uṣā is mentioned second, right after the Aśvins, as a deity of the heavenly sphere.

That is why in the Brāhmaṇa texts, Uṣā is referred to as a deity of the dyuloka. Whether one says "Uṣā" or "deity of the dyuloka", both refer to the same entity — there is no disagreement in this regard.

Furthermore, regarding Uṣā — the deity of the dyuloka — it is written in the Nirukta that she spreads light across half the region of the sky before the sun rises. This is what we commonly know as dawn or uṣā-kāla (the time of Uṣā in the early morning).

Now then, from here onwards, the dyusthānāḥ — the deities of the celestial realm (dyuloka) — are being explained.

(2. Uṣas / Ushas)
Uṣā, of the root vaṣṭiḥ meaning "to shine, radiate beauty," is derived from the verb root uśch (उच्छी) in the sense of radiating or rising. One Uṣā is mādhyamikā, the intermediate — the other kind of Uṣā associated with the mid-region (antarikṣa) and related to lightning.
But here, this Uṣā is dyusthānīya — the heavenly Uṣā.

Vedic Mantra (Ṛgveda 1.92.13):

uṣas tac citram ābharāsmabhyam vājinīvati yena tokaṁ ca tanayaṁ ca dhāmahe
Translation: O Uṣā! Bring us that brilliant (wealth), rich in horses, by which we may sustain our offspring and their children.

Explanation:

The word Uṣā refers to the early morning light before sunrise — she is a dyuloka-sthānīya (heavenly) goddess. The word "Uṣā" is derived from two different roots:

- From the root vaś (वश्) meaning "to shine or radiate beauty" → implying her role in spreading brilliance and charm.
- From the root uśch (उच्छी) meaning "to rise or emit" → again suggesting the dawning or emitting of light.

There is another intermediate Uṣā (antarikṣa-sthānīya), signifying lightning or brilliance in the mid-region — but the current context is about the celestial Uṣā, associated with the dawn.

Mantra meaning:

This Uṣā, belonging to the region of space (rajas), in the eastern half of the sky — before the Sun rises — anoints everything with light (bhānuṁ añjate), illuminating all. She awakens all beings (ketum akrat) and makes them aware.

Like warriors who cleanse and polish their weapons (dhṛṣṇavaḥ āyudhāni iva), preparing them for battle, similarly, this Uṣā brightens the world, energizing it for the day ahead.

E.g. (1) The word "Prajâpati" means 'one who protects all creatures;' as such it can be taken as a name of the Sun; and it is an ordinary fact that towards morning the sun reaches the early Dawn, ('Usha'); and as the early Dawn is brought about by the approach of the Sun, it is called his "daughter;" and it is the fact of the Sun letting his rays fall in (or on) the Dawn that has been figuratively spoken of as the intercourse of a man with a woman.

Rig Veda 1.115.2 says that the Sun follows Usha(Dawn) in the same way as a man follows his wife. From this, it becomes clear that here Prajapati Surya and Devi Usha(Dawn) have an allegorical context to the man-woman relationship.

सूर्य दीप्यमान उषा का अनुगमन उसी प्रकार करता है, जिस प्रकार पुरुष नारी के पीछे-पीछे चलता है. इसी समय लोग सूर्य संबंधी यज्ञ करने की इच्छा से कार्य विस्तार करते हैं. कल्याण पाने के लिए हम सूर्य की स्तुति करते हैं. (२)
The Sun follows the radiant dawn (Usha) in the same way as a man follows a woman. At this time people expand their work with the desire to perform Surya-related yajnas. We worship the Sun to attain welfare.

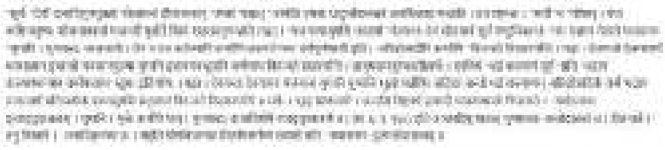
The Sun follows the radiant goddess Uṣas, who is endowed with divine qualities such as generosity and shines brilliantly. After Uṣas manifests, the Sun, drawn by her beauty, proceeds after her—just as a young man constantly follows a graceful young woman. When Uṣas rises, the worshippers (devayantaḥ), desiring to behold the shining deity (the Sun), prepare to offer their worship. The word yugāni refers to time cycles or ritual periods, such as the new and full moon sacrifices, during which obligatory rites like Agnihotra are performed and expanded. Alternatively, yugāni may refer to the components of a plough, indicating that these sacrificers—desiring divine rewards and wealth—engage in agricultural labor by spreading their yokes for plowing. Thus, it is said that they follow Uṣas into activity. This benevolent and auspicious Sun is praised for auspicious purposes—the fruitful results of sacred actions. Or again, devayantaḥ, the sacrificers, paired with their wives (yugāni as conjugal pairs), perform auspicious acts like Agnihotra during the rise of Uṣas, each extending their rituals in pursuit of divine blessings.



. Then what is the semen of Prajapati Sun here ? Rig Veda 164.33 Sayana Bhasya tells that Father form Sun

impregnates his daughter Usha/Heaven with Sun rays form Virya/Semen which gives rise to all living beings . Thus the Semen here is Sun rays only

Sayancharya bhasya on Rig Veda 1.164.33

“स स्वरश्मिभिः । अथवा इन्द्रः पर्जन्यो वा । दुहितुः दूरे निहिताया भूम्याः गर्भं सर्वोत्पादनसमर्थं वृष्ट्युदकलक्षणम् आधात् सर्वतः करोति ।।”

“He, with his own rays places the seed (garbha), capable of producing all beings and characterized by rain or water, into the daughter , who is situated afar. He causes this (fertilization) from all directions.”

6. Sasadvani Impregnated his Own Daughter

📚Rig Veda 3.31.1📚
The sonless father, regulating (the contract), refers to his grandson, (the son) of his daughter, and relying on the efficiency of the rite, honours (his son-in-law) with valuable gifts; the father, trusting to the impregnation of the daughter, supports himself with a tranquil mind.

Kushika, in the course of discussion, explains a certain point of Shastra (scriptural law):

> "For a father without sons, a daughter becomes his heir when declared a putrikā (appointed daughter)."

Why?
Because the son born of her is said to be his (the father's) son through her.

A father who is sonless, and gives his daughter in marriage to another family, with the understanding that the son born from her will be considered his own, is called "Vahni" (one who offers himself to the sacred fire of lineage).

Such a father "commands" (śāsat) — meaning, lays down a ritual and legal condition:

> "I offer to you this adorned daughter, though she has no brothers.
> The son born through her shall be my son."

This is supported by the Smṛti (Vasiṣṭha Dharmasūtra 17.17).

In accordance with this instructional tradition (anuśāsana), the putrikā's son (grandson) becomes obligated to perform the funeral rites, oblations, and other ancestral duties for his maternal grandfather — as though he were his own son.

What must the father do?

A wise man, knowing that:

> "The son born of this daughter will become my sustainer in the world beyond," he should select as her husband (jāmātā):

> one capable of righteous offspring, > who bears the energy of procreation, > who will properly honor the daughter, > and who is capable of producing a son with her.

Such a man must be honored and worshipped by the father — with clothes, ornaments, and respect — as the means to achieve posterity.

Thus, the maternal grandfather becomes linked to the line of his daughter's son (nāptṛ-bhavam gacchati) — i.e., he is ritually and spiritually connected to his grandson as if he were his own son.

However, if the man unites with the woman only for pleasure, without any intent for procreation — motivated solely by desire and bodily union, and not by the intention of generating a son — then that act does not serve the ritual or spiritual purpose.

Yāska, too, says this in the Nirukta (3.4):

> "The husband of the daughter becomes the agent of progeny.
> He ensures the daughter attains the state of having a son.
> 'Duhitā' means 'she who is milked' or 'well placed at a distance' — > and from her arises the daughter's son (dauhitra), the grandson."

Thus, a wise father who desires to offer his seed in the sacrificial act of progeny, whose essence (retas) arises from the limbs of Vāc (speech) and Aṅga (body), and is born from the heart — he should conduct proper rites and honor the daughter and her husband, as a sacred act, acknowledging the divine continuity of life.

7. Yajnavalkya Accidentally Impregnates his Own Sister

📚Skanda Purana 5.3.42.8-23📚
She attended to his needs and stayed there performing penance. On a certain occasion, she had her monthly course during the day when she took her bath. She saw a rag kept concealed and so wore it as her undergarment. In the meantime, at night Yajnavalkya had an erotic dream in a place where there was none. As a result of the dream, there was an emission of semen in his loin cloth. It resembled a drop of blood. Since he was refulgent with his austere penance, it had the lustre of fire. The poor Brahmana woke up and found the piece of cloth defiled. He thought it not worthy of being touched and so cast it off and washed himself clean in accordance with the injunctions in the Smiti texts. Bath at night has been prohibited. So the Brahmana went to sleep again. At midnight the woman took this cloth and covered her vaginal aperture…Listen to what he said, O king: "O lady of auspicious Vratas, it is none of your faults nor mine. Of the foetus in your womb, fate alone is the cause. It has to be carefully preserved by you forever. It should not be destroyed. It should be awaited till the whole period is over." The chaste lady was ashamed. Yet she said in distress, "So be it". She nurtured the child in the womb till the normal delivery. As soon as the child was born, the Brāhmaṇa lady came to the root of a banyan tree. Abandoning the child there"

Refutation-

This allegation distorts the Skanda Purāṇa account by ignoring its own context. In V.iii.42.8–12, Yājñavalkya's sister wears a loincloth without knowing it had been soiled during his involuntary nocturnal emission caused by a dream — there was no intercourse, no intent, and no awareness from either side. The text itself explicitly states in V.iii.42.16–24 that neither Yājñavalkya nor his sister was at fault and that the conception was entirely due to destiny (daiva), a common motif in Purāṇic narratives to introduce a fated sage-hero. The child, Pippalāda, was later abandoned under a banyan tree not out of cruelty but in accordance with divine will, and was protected and nourished miraculously until he grew into a great ṛṣi. The story is symbolic, not a moral lapse, and portrays the inevitability of cosmic destiny, not incestuous intent.

8. Sanajjata Accidentally had Sex with his Own Mother

📚Brahma Purana Gautami Mahatmya 22.8-10📚
Her son too wandered over many countries as a lecherous debauchee. As time passed he too came to Janasthana and lived there. The son of Dhrtavrata, the brahmin (Sanajjata) was desirous of a harlot. The lady Mahi too wanted men who would lavishly spend money on her. Due to the curious turn of fate the mother and the son had sexual union. She did not recognise her son nor did he recognize his mother

The Gautamī-māhātmya (chaps. 70-175), which was certainly composed by somebody living about the river Godāvarī, is a distinct 'work' (pustakam) by itself. It is called a 'highly meritorious Purāṇa' declared by Brahmā (cf. Br 175, 78 and 87). The place which it occupies in the Brahma-p. was not meant for it, because it divides the chapters on Puruṣottamakṣetra-māhātmya. The way in which chap. 176 opens, shows that it immediately followed chap. 69. Moreover, in chap. 176 there is no hint from which we may conclude that the Māhātmya was there. In Br 179, 2 the sages refer to Bhāratavarṣa (chap. 27) and Puruṣottama-kṣetra, of which, they say, Vyāsa told them elaborately, but they do not mention the Gautamī-māhātmya which also precedes chap. 179 in our edition. So, it is clear that the Māhātmya was not originally there. In the Veṅk. ed. it is placed at the end. This Māhātmya was attached to the Brahma-p. later than the chapters on Orissa, for the Nāradīya-p. (I, 92), which gives the contents of the present

The Gautamīmāhātmya, also called Godāvarīmāhātmya, of which there exist several separate manuscripts[112] and which has also been separately edited,[113] calls itself a purāṇa,[114] and must originally have been a distinct book. It interrupts the section on Puruṣottamakṣetra, and has been inserted exactly in the middle of the Brahma°.[115] It describes the sacred places along the Godāvarī river.

Manu Smriti. 11.170 Translation: Pandit Shree Jagannathshastri Tailang. Bharatiya Vidya Prakashan, Varanasi. First Edition. 2011.-

Sex with sister, friend’s wife, daughter-in-law, unwed virgin girl, Chāndāli etc. is a major sin, atoned only by death.

गुरुतल्प (गुरुपत्नीगमन) महापातकों में है, जिसका प्रायश्चित्त प्रधान रूप से मृत्यु का वरण है। सगी बहिन, मित्रपत्नी, पुत्रवधू, अविवाहित अक्षतयोनि कुमारी कन्याएं, चाण्डालादि अन्त्य जाति की स्त्रियां इन के साथ संभोग करने पर उसका प्रायश्चित्त वही है, जो गुरुपत्नी के साथ सम्भोग करने पर है ॥१७०॥

Gurutalpa (sexual intercourse with the wife of one’s guru) is among the Mahāpātakas (greatest sins), the principal expiation for which is the voluntary acceptance of death. The same expiation as for intercourse with the guru’s wife applies in cases of intercourse with one’s own sister, a friend’s wife, one’s daughter-in-law, an unmarried virgin girl of intact chastity (akṣatayoni), or women of the lowest castes such as Chāṇḍālas. ॥170॥

Response to Vedkabhed and Hinduscript . Refutation of Niyoga in Hinduism

Written by Rohan Saini in Uncategorized

This entire article is a response and rebuttal to the blogs called VedKaBhed and Hinduscript regarding their claims of "Niyoga in Hinduism".

WHAT IS NIYOG?
Niyoga was a practice that was allowed to make sure that woman experiences the pious feeling of becoming a mother during her lifetime.
Simply put, if a man failed in his responsibility to impregnate his wife, then-wife could seek permission from her husband to get impregnated by someone else. An exception was also made if the man died without becoming a father. Since humans are not perfect and Hindus know it from the beginning of time, various restrictions were laid to curtail the misuse of Niyoga.
WHEN YOU SHOULD DO NIYOG
Narada (12.82-88)-For this custom is practised only when the family threatens to become extinct, for the continuance of the lineage, and not from amorous desire.

IN KALIYUG NIYOG IS BANNED

1) This practice is forbidden in Apastamba Dharmasutra 2.27.2-7.
2) Mitākṣarā (2.136) as prohibiting niyoga;
3) Viramitrodaya, verses 64-68

WHAT IS NIYOG?

Niyoga was a practice that was allowed to make sure that woman experiences the pious feeling of becoming a mother during her lifetime.
Simply put, if a man failed in his responsibility to impregnate his wife, then-wife could seek permission from her husband to get impregnated by someone else. An exception was also made if the man died without becoming a father. Since humans are not perfect and Hindus know it from the beginning of time, various restrictions were laid to curtail the misuse of Niyoga.

WHEN YOU SHOULD DO NIYOG

Nārada (12.82-88)-For this custom is practised only when the family threatens to become extinct, for the continuance of the lineage, and not from amorous desire.

IN KALIYUG NIYOG IS BANNED

1) This practice is forbidden in Apastamba Dharmasutra 2.27.2-7.

Rules For performing Niyog

The woman would agree to this only for the sake of rightfully having a child and not for sexual pleasure.
The appointed man would do this for Dharma, considering it as his duty to help the woman bear a child and not for pleasure.

There will be no foreplay or contact of any kind with the upper body. The bodies of the female and male both are smeared with Ghee. There is a curtain between the male and the female so that none can see each other's face so that passion does not sneak into their minds. Only the legs of the female are kept uncovered. The male penetrates and ejaculates inside the woman and the process is completed.

The child, thus born would be considered the child of the husband-wife and not that of the appointed man.

The appointed man would not seek any paternal relationship or attachment to this child in the future.

To avoid misuse, a man was allowed a maximum of three times in his lifetime to be appointed in such a way.

Only Kshatriya Royal families and Widows have access to perform niyoga

Widows shall approach only her dead Husband's Brother for helping her to beget a child

This verse is quoted in Mitākṣarā (1.69), as enunciating the view that the sanction of the 'ksetraja' son pertains only to those cases where the bridegroom has died after the verbal betrothal;-again under 2.127, as describing the case in which alone 'niyoga' is permissible; and it adds that this verse implies that the man to whom a girl has been betrothed has become her 'husband' even before the marriage rites have been performed.

Mitākṣarā adds the following notes:-

When the 'husband' to whom the girl has been betrothed dies, then his 'own' ie., uterine brother, elder or younger, 'vindeta,' shall take her, i.e., marry her. It construes 'anena vidhānena' with the next verse.

Dharmashastras sanctioned Niyoga only for widows and kshatriyas.
Gautama (18.4-7). 'A woman whose husband is dead and who desires offspring may bear a son to her brother-in-iaw. She should obtain the permission of her elders and should have intercourse during her period only. On failure of her brother-in-law, she may obtain offspring from a Sapinda, a Sayotra, a Samānapravara or from one belonging to the same caste. Some people hold that she should do this with none hut her brother-in-law.' Do. (28.22-23).-'The widow may seek to raise up offspring to her deceased usband. A son begotten on a widow, whose brother-in-law is alive, by another relative, is excluded from inheritance.'

Baudhāyana (2.4.9-10). 'After the expiry of six months from her husband's death, she may, with the authority of her elders, bear a son to her brother-in-law, in case she has no son. They quote the following: -"A barren woman or one who has already borne sons, or one who is past childhearing, or one whose children are all dead, or one who is unwilling, must never be authorised or appointed to do this.""

Vasistha (17.56).-'After the completion of six months from the death of her husband, she shall bathe, and offer a funeral oblation to the husband. Then her father and brother shall assemble the elders who taught or sacrificed for her husband, as also his relatives, and authorise her to raise issue to her deceased husband. One should not thus appoint a widow who is either mad or ill-behaved or diseased; nor one who is very aged; sixteen years after maturity is the period for authorising a widow. Nor shall such an authorisation be made if the male entitled to approach her is sickly.'

Yājñavalkya (1.68-69).-'If a widow is without a son, her brother-in-law, or a Sapinda or a Sagotra,- smeared with butter, shall approach her during her period, being authorised to do so by the elders, for the purpose of obtaining a son for her. He shall approach her only till conception has taken place; doing otherwise, he would ecome an outcast. The son born in this manner is called Kşetraja.

Brhaspati (25.12-14).- 'The Niyoga (authorisation of a widow to raise offspring to her deceased husband), after having been declared by Manu, has been forbidden by himself; on account of the deterioration in the nature of the time-cycles, this cannot he done by all in the proper form. In the Kṛta, Tretā and Dvāpara cycles, men were imbued with austerities and with knowledge; in the Kali cycle a deterioration in the capacity of men has been brought about. Therefore the sons that were obtained by various methods by the ancient sages cannot he obtained by men now, on account of their being without that capacity.'
Narada (12.80-81).-'Should the husband of a childless woman die, she should go to her brother-in-law, through desire to obtain a son, after having received the necessary authorisation from her elders; and he shall have intercourse with her till a son is born. When a son is born, he must leave her. It would be sinful intercourse otherwise.'

husband, a woman may beget a son from a man of her own caste. If she is a child-widow, or has been forcibly abandoned by her husband, she shall go through the sacrament of marriage again, with any other man. But this remarriage of women, or the begetting of a son from the brother-in-law, or the freedom of women, should not be permitted during the Kali age; as during this age, men are inclined to be sinful.'

Niyoga has been Criticised as Pashu Dharma in Manu Smriti

Manu Smriti 9.66

यद्यपि राजा वेन के शासनकाल में मनुष्यों में नियोग का विधान कहा गया तथापि विद्वान् द्विजों द्वारा नियोग पशुधर्म कहकर ही विशेषरूप से निन्दित किया गया है ।। ६६ ।।

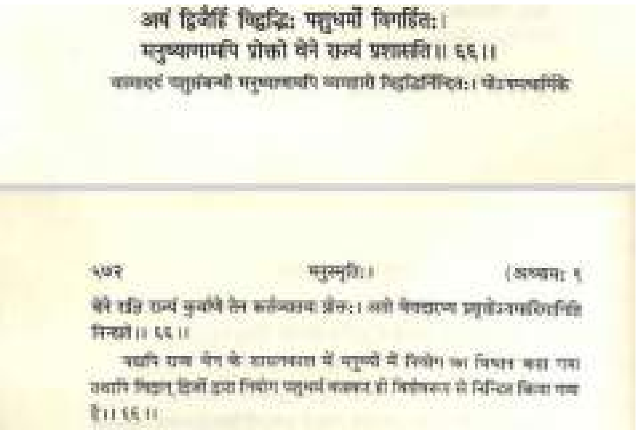
"Although during the reign of King Vena, the practice of niyoga (levirate union for progeny) was prescribed among men, yet the learned Brāhmaṇas especially condemned niyoga, calling it merely an animal-like practice." (66)

Acharya Kulluka Bhatta Bhasya-

यस्मादयं पशुसंबन्धी मनुष्याणामपि व्यवहारो विद्वद्भिर्निन्दितः। योऽयमधार्मिके वेने राज्ञि राज्यं कुर्वाणे तेन कर्तव्यातया प्रोक्तः । अतो वेनादारभ्य प्रवृत्तोऽयमादिमानिति निन्द्यते ।। ६६ ।।

"Because this practice, being connected with animals, was condemned even when adopted among men by the learned ones. It was prescribed only out of necessity during the reign of that unrighteous king Vena, while he held the kingdom. Therefore, since it originated beginning with Vena, it is regarded as blameworthy." (66)



Manu Smriti 9.68

अतः तभी से लेकर जो व्यक्ति अज्ञानवश मृतपति वाली विधवा स्त्री को सन्तान के लिए नियोगक्रिया हेतु प्रेरित करता है। साधु लोग उसकी विशेषरूप से निन्दा करते हैं।। ६८ ।।

“Therefore, from that time onward, whoever, out of ignorance, urges a widow whose husband has died to undergo niyoga (union for the sake of offspring), is especially censured by the virtuous.” (68)

Acharya Kulluka Bhatta bhasya –

वेनकालत्प्रभृति यो मृतभर्तृकादिस्त्रियं शास्त्रार्थाज्ञानादपत्यनिमित्तं देवरादौ नियोजयति तं साधवो नियतं गर्हयन्ते। अयं च स्वोक्तनियोगनिषेधः कलियुगविषयः । तदाह बृहस्पतिः- “उक्तो निरोगो मुनिना निषिद्धः स्वयमेव तु । युगक्रमादशक्योऽयं कर्तुमन्यैर्विधानतः ।। तपोज्ञानसमायुक्ताः कृतत्रेतायुगे नराः। द्वापरे च कलौ नृणां शक्तिहानिर्हि निर्मिता। अनेकधा कृताः पुत्रा ऋषिभिश्च पुरातनैः। न शक्यन्तेऽधुना कर्तुं शक्तिहीनैरिदंतनैः ।।” अतो यद्गोविन्दराजेन युगविशेषव्यवस्थामज्ञात्वा सर्वदैव संतानाभावे नियोगादनियोगपक्षः श्रेयानिति स्वमनीषया कल्पितं तन्मुनिव्याख्या-विरोधान्नाद्रियामहे। प्रायशो मनुवाक्येषु मुनिव्याख्यानमेव हि। नापराध्योऽस्मि विदुषां क्वाहं सर्वविदः कुधीः ।। ६८ ।।

From the time of King Vena onwards, whoever, out of ignorance of the true intent of the śāstras, causes a widow or any such woman to undergo niyoga (union with the husband's brother or another) for the sake of offspring, that person is censured by the virtuous. And this prohibition of niyoga is specific to the Kali Yuga. Hence Bṛhaspati has said:
'Niyoga, though once mentioned by the sage, was later forbidden by the sage himself. But due to the sequence of the Yugas, it cannot be practiced any longer in any prescribed manner. For men endowed with austerity and knowledge in the Kṛta and Tretā Yugas could (properly) perform it; but in Dvāpara and Kali, a decline of human power has been ordained. Many sons were indeed begotten by the sages of old in various ways, but now it cannot be practiced by the weakened men of the present time.'

Therefore, the view imagined by Govindarāja—namely, that since there is now generally no progeny, niyoga is preferable to aniyoga (non-niyoga)—is not accepted by us, because it contradicts the authoritative commentaries of the sages. In fact, in most of Manu's passages the sage-commentaries alone are authoritative. Nor am I guilty before the learned; for where am I, a fool, compared with the all-knowing?" (68)

ततः प्रभृति यो मोहात्प्रमीतपतिकां स्त्रियम्।
नियोजयत्यपत्यार्थं तं विगर्हन्ति साधवः॥ ६८॥

Why Niyog is banned in Kaliyuga

Brhaspati (25.12-14). The Niyoga (authorisation of a widow to raise offspring to her deceased husband), after having been declared by Manu, has been forbidden by himself; on account of the deterioration in the nature of the time-cycles, this cannot he done by all in the proper form. In the Krta, Treta and Dvāpara cycles, men were imbued with austerities and with knowledge; in the Kali cycle a deterioration in the capacity of men has been brought about. Therefore the sons that were obtained by various methods by the ancient sages cannot he obtained by men now, on account of their being without that capacity.'

It is quoted in Nrsimhaprasāda (Vyavahāra, 38a); in Smrticandrikā (Samskāra, p. 226), which says that this prohibition is meant for the Kali-age; and in Viramitrodaya (Vyavahāra, 186a).

Brahmapurāṇa (Aparārka, p. 97).-'On the death of her husband, or on her having abandoned her husband, a woman may beget a son from a man of her own caste. If she is a child-widow, or has been forcibly abandoned by her husband, she shall go through the acrament of marriage again, with any other man. But this remarriage of women, or the begetting of a son from the brother-in-law, or the freedom of women, should not be permitted during the Kali age; as during this age, men are inclined to be sinful.'

Apastamba (2.27.2-4).-'A husband shall not make over his wife, who occupies the position of a gentilis, to others (than to his gentiles), in order to cause children to be begotten for himself. For they declare that a bride is given to the family of her husband (and not to the husband alone). This is forbidden for the present age, on account of the incapacity of men's senses.'
In simple words in Kaliyug Men will be lusty this practice may be misused, In the 3 yugas sages had capacity to impregnent women even without having sexual intercourse but in kaliyug men are not capable to doing these

Allegations-

Tulsi Ramayana 1.188.1-4 “One day the king was sad at heart that he had no son. He hastened to his preceptorís residence and, falling at his feet, made many entreaties. He told the Guru all his joys and sorrows; the sage Vasista comforted him in many ways and said, “Take heart and wait; you will have four sons, who will be known throughout the three worlds and will rid the devotees of their fears”. Then Vasista invited the sage Sringi and had a noble sacrifice performed by him for the birth of a son to the king. When the sage devoutly offered oblations into the sacred fire, the fire-god appeared with an offering of rice boiled with milk in his hand. Said the fire-god, “Whatever Vasista has contemplated for you, that object is fully accomplished. Take this oblation, O king, and divide it in such proportions as you think fit.” Tr. Gita Press

It is also mentioned in Valmiki Ramayana,

Valmiki Ramayana, Bala Kanda 1, Sarga 16, Verse 26 “Then Dasharatha on entering palace chambers spoke this to queen Kausalya, “Receive this dessert to beget your son.”

Dr. B.R. Ambedkar wrote, “Rama’s birth is miraculous and it may be that the suggestion that he was born from a pinda prepared by the sage Shrung is an allegorical gloss to cover up the aked truth that he was begotten upon Kausalya by the sage Shrung, although the two did not stand in the relationship of husband and wife. In any case his birth, if not disreputable in its origin, is certainly unnatural."

Refutation-

I don't care what Dr BR Ambedkar said . He is not a Vedic Scholar nor he has knowledge of Sanskrit nor he Learnt Vedic Scriptures under an Authentic Acharya . BR Ambedkar told many terrible things about Islam and its Pedophile Rapist Prophet as well .

This halala Putra quoted Valmiki Ramayana and Ramcharitmanas you can read it nowhere its told that Bhagwan Shree Ram was born by Niyoga or something .

Thus power of devatas is intrinsic, while strength of asuras is obtained by boons. Both are under your control. Therefore we put forth all our problems before You and pray.

Surya was born to Aditi and Kashyapa. In this Surya vamsha was born Rama as son of Raja Dasharatha and his wife Kousalya after being worshipped by them through 'Putra kaameshti yaaga.'

Special Notes:

1. 'Aamshaavatara krithi' by Shri Narayana Pandithacharya has referred Padma purana and mentioned that Dasharatha is the avatara of Swayambhuva Manu.

Kaama (Prachyumana) and Aniruddha were born as Bharata and Shatrugna after Rama. . Sesha was born after Rama as Lakshmana son of Sumitra .

Special notes:

1. There are varied opinions with regard to the order of birth of Lakshmana and Bharata. Some are of the opinion that Bharata is elder while some have reasons to call Lakshmana elder.

The Four sons of Dasharatha

Shri Raama is the only son of Kausalya. Bharatha was the only son of Kaikeyi and Lakshmana and Shatraguna are sons of Sumitra. They were all sons of Dasharatha.

sankarshanaadhyaitribhireva roopai:
raavishta aaseet trishu teshu vishnu:
indroangade caiva tatoangado hi
balleo nitaantam ca babhoova shashvat ||78||

Shri Rama is Vaasudeva, and other three roopas of Shri Hari namely Sankarshana, Pradhyumna and Aniruddha are avesha in Lakshmana, Bharata and Shatrugna. Similarly Angada had aavesha of indra which made him strong.

Special Notes:

1. In some puranas it is mentioned that Shri Vaasudeva Sankarshana, Pradhyumna and Aniruddа have taken avatara as Raama, Lakshmana, Bharata and Shatrugna respectively. Vaalmiki Raamayа itself says so. In the sloka 'shankarshannadhyai........' Shrimadhacharya has given the right interpretation for this.

2. Vaasudeva is saakshat Raama. But in Lakshmana and others there is only avesha of the Lord Hari as Sankarshana, Pradhyumna and Aniruddha respectively. They are not saakshat avatara of the Lord.

Allegations-

Brahma had gone to sage Santanu's house, however, Santanu was not present at that time and Brahma was welcomed by Santanu's wife Amogha, seeing the beautiful wife of sage Santanu, Brahma ejaculated on their seat and left the house. When sage Santanu came to of all this, instead of becoming furious, he asked his wife Amogha to drink Brahma's semen in order to conceive a son, as commanded by her husband, Amogha drank the semen and was impregnated.

Padma Purana Section 1 Sṛṣṭi-khaṇḍa, Chapter 55, verses 19b-30a "There was a well-known sage, Śantanu by name, who was honoured by gods and whose lustre was like that of the lotus-born one (i.e. Brahmā). (His) beautiful and youthful (wife) was known as Amoghā. Once Brahmā went to her house to meet her husband (Śantanu). At that time, the best sage (i.e. Śantanu) had gone to the forest for (collecting) flowers etc... Seeing that woman of a spotless body, the Creator was overpowered with the passion of love... The semen of the supreme soul, Brahmā, fell on the bedstead.

Refutation-

Rc Hazra in his book Puranic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs page no 120 said that the chapters after chapter 43 in Shristi khanda (including chapter 55) are later interpolations into Padma Purana and was composed likely after the Satanic Islamic Muhammadans established their rule in India . So this chapter is a later interpolation and not part of Padma Purana originally

120 Purāṇic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs [CH

(5) SṚṢṬI-KHAṆḌA.[*]. This Khaṇḍa, which is assigned the fifth place in our edition, is really the first of the set. This position of the Khaṇḍa is betrayed by the mode of its beginning as well as by the sequence and contents of the five Parvans given in chap. 1.

This Khaṇḍa, as we have it now, can be rightly divided into two parts:

(1) chaps. 1-43 (verses 1-97)

and (2) chaps. 43 (verses 98 ff.) to the end.

It will be seen hereinafter that the chapters of the second part were added to the Sṛṣṭi-kh. after the Muhammadans had established kingdoms in India. Hence the chapters of the first part, which are of earlier date, are examined first.

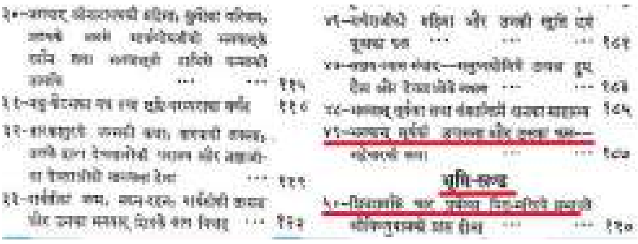
* The Sṛṣṭi-khaṇḍa in Bengal Mss consists only of 46 (or according to Aufrecht, 45) chapters. The corresponding chapters in a Bengal Ms. (No. 1681, D. U. Mss Lib.) of this Khaṇḍa and the ĀnSS ed. are given below:

upon them, it is difficult to say anything about the lower limit.

Chapters 43 (verses 98 ff.) to the end, which, according to our division, form the second part of the work, are not found in the Bengal Mss. So their comparatively late date can be well understood. These chapters were written and added to the Sṛṣṭi-kh. after the Muhammadans had established kingdoms in India. These foreigners have been called kings[] and scornfully described more than once under the names 'Turuṣka', 'Mleccha' and 'Yavana'[]. The descriptions are undoubtedly aimed at the Muhammadans who 'polluted' the society and the land of the Hindus by their contact and slaughter of cows. Hence the date of composition of this part of the Sṛṣṭi-kh. can by no means be placed earlier than 1000 A.D. Such a late date is supported by the contents also, which are replete with Tantric elements. The Āgamas have many times been mentioned as authorities along with the Vedas and the Purāṇas; the Tulasī plant has been glorified in highly extravagant language; and so on. As Hemādri quotes

* In connection with the quotations the following stories of the Padma-p. have been mentioned in the Adbhutasāgara:

Even Geeta Press Gorakhpur padma Purana has only 49 Chapters and no 55th chapter exists



THE TRUE CHARACTER OF BRAHMA JI FROM SRIMAD BHAGAVATAM

Brahma Ji is the master of all his senses, never speaks falsehood, never strays from the righteous path, and remains ever devoted to penance and austerities.

Srimad Bhagvatam 2/6/32-35

प्यारे नारद ! मैं प्रेमपूर्ण एवं उत्कण्ठित हृदयसे भगवान्के स्मरणमें मग्न रहता हूँ, इसीसे मेरी वाणी कभी असत्य होती नहीं दीखती, मेरा मन कभी असत्य संकल्प नहीं करता और मेरी इन्द्रियाँ भी कभी मर्यादाका उल्लंघन करके कुमार्गमें नहीं जातीं ।। ३३ ।। मैं वेदमूर्ति हूँ, मेरा जीवन तपस्यामय है, बड़े-बड़े प्रजापति मेरी वन्दना करते हैं और मैं उनका स्वामी पहले मैंने बड़ी निष्ठासे योगका सर्वांग अनुष्ठान किया था

Dear Nārada! With a heart full of love and longing, I remain absorbed in the remembrance of the Lord.
Because of this, my speech never appears to be false, my mind never forms false resolves, and my senses never violate propriety by straying onto the wrong path. (33)

I am the embodiment of the Vedas; my life is filled with austerity.
Great Prajāpatis offer me their reverence, and I am their master.
Earlier, with great steadfastness, I had performed the complete practice of Yoga, yet I could not come to know the true nature of my original cause the Supreme Self. (34)

Srimad Bhagvatam 2/9/3-8 Geeta Press Gorakhpur

ब्रह्माजीकी निष्कपट तपस्यासे प्रसन्न होकर भगवान्ने उन्हें अपने रूपका दर्शन कराया और आत्म-तत्त्वके ज्ञानके लिये उन्हें परम सत्य परमार्थ वस्तुका उपदेश किया (वही बात मैं तुम्हें सुनाता हूँ) ।।४।।
तीनों लोकोंके परम गुरु आदिदेव ब्रह्माजी अपने जन्मस्थान कमलपर बैठकर सृष्टि करनेकी इच्छासे विचार करने लगे . ब्रह्माजी तपस्वियोंमें सबसे बड़े तपस्वी हैं। उनका ज्ञान अमोघ है। उन्होंने उस समय एक सहस्र दिव्य वर्षपर्यन्त एकाग्र चित्तसे अपने प्राण, मन, कर्मेन्द्रिय और ज्ञानेन्द्रियोंको वशमें करके ऐसी तपस्या की, जिससे वे समस्त लोकोंको प्रकाशित करनेमें समर्थ हो सके ।।८।।

Pleased with Brahmā’s sincere and guileless austerity, the Lord granted him a vision of His own form and instructed him in the Supreme Truth – the ultimate reality so that he might gain knowledge of the Self. (4)

The supreme preceptor of the three worlds, the primordial deity Brahmā, seated upon the lotus – his place of birth – began to contemplate with the desire to create the universe.
Brahmā is the greatest of all ascetics. His knowledge is unfailing. At that time, for a thousand divine years, with a concentrated mind, he brought his life-breath, mind, organs of action, and organs of perception under control, performing such austerity that he became capable of illuminating all the worlds. (8)

ब्रह्माजी ! नाना प्रकारके कर्मसंस्कारोंके अनुसार अनेक प्रकारकी जीवसृष्टिको रचनेकी इच्छा होनेपर भी तुम्हारा चित्त मोहित नहीं होता, यह मेरी अतिशय कृपाका ही फल है ।।३४।। तुम सबसे पहले मन्त्रद्रष्टा हो। प्रजा उत्पन्न करते समय भी तुम्हारा मन मुझमें ही लगा रहता है, इसीसे पापमय रजोगुण तुमको बाँध

नहीं पाता ।।३५।। तुम मुझे भूत, इन्द्रिय, गुण और अन्तःकरणसे रहित समझते हो; इससे जान पड़ता है कि यद्यपि देहधारी जीवोंको मेरा ज्ञान होना बहुत कठिन है, तथापि तुमने मुझे जान लिया है ।।३६।। 'मेरा आश्रय कोई है या नहीं' इस सन्देहसे तुम कमलनालके द्वारा जलमें उसका मूल खोज रहे थे, सो मैंने तुम्हें अपना यह स्वरूप अन्तःकरणमें ही दिखलाया है ।।३७।।

O Brahmā! Even though, according to various karmic impressions, you have the desire to create many kinds of living beings, your mind is not deluded this is solely the result of My supreme grace. (34)

You are the very first seer of the mantras. Even while producing the creation, your mind remains fixed on Me; therefore, the sinful quality of rajas cannot bind you. (35)

You understand Me to be devoid of elements, senses, qualities, and the inner organ (mind); this shows that, although it is extremely difficult for embodied beings to know Me, you have indeed realized Me. (36)

When you wondered, “Do I have a source or not?” and searched for its root in the water through the stalk of the lotus, I revealed this very form of Mine to you within your own heart. (37)

Allegations-

A sage named Angira had also contracted Niyoga with the wife of Rathitara, Srimad Bhagavatam 9.6.2-3 "Rathītara had no sons, and therefore he requested the great sage Aṅgirā to beget sons for him. Because of this request, Aṅgirā begot sons in the womb of Rathītara's wife. All these sons were born with brahminical prowess.— Having been born from the womb of Rathītara's wife, all these sons were known as the dynasty of Rathītara, but because they were born from the semen of Aṅgirā, they were also known as the dynasty of Aṅgirā. Among all the progeny of Rathītara, these sons were the most prominent because, owing to their birth, they were considered brāhmaṇas."

श्रीशुकदेवजी कहते हैं— परीक्षित्! अंबरिषके तीन पुत्र थे— विरूप, केतुमान् और शम्भु। विरूपसे पुष्पद्रक्ष और उसका पुत्र स्थीतिर् हुआ ॥१९॥
स्थीतिर् सन्तानहीन था। वंश परम्पराकी रक्षा के लिये उसने अङ्गिरा ऋषिसे प्रार्थना की, उन्होंने उसकी पत्नीसे ब्रह्मतेजसे सम्पन्न कई पुत्र उत्पन्न किये ॥२०॥

Shri Shukadeva said—
O Parīkṣit! Ambarīṣa had three sons — Virūpa, Ketumān, and Śambhu.
From Virūpa was born Puṣpadrakṣa, and his son was Sthītiraḥ. ॥19॥

Sthītiraḥ was childless. For the protection of the family lineage, he prayed to the sage Aṅgirā.
Through his wife, empowered by the Brahmic radiance (spiritual potency), Angirā produced several sons. ॥20॥

Now read the line स्थीतिर् सन्तानहीन था। वंश परम्पराकी रक्षा के लिये उसने अङ्गिरा ऋषिसे प्रार्थना की,. For the protection of the family lineage, he prayed to the sage Aṅgirā. Here Sthītiraḥ was childless and for the protection of his family lineage he approached Sage Angira .

The Purpose of Niyoga was to save the family lineage from getting extinct and was practised only in these types of Extreme Situations

Niyoga was a practice that was allowed ɔ make sure that woman experiences the pious feeling of becoming a mother during her lifetime.

Simply put, if a man failed in his responsibility to impregnate his wife, then-wife could seek permission from her husband to get impregnated by someone else. An exception was also made if the man died without becoming a father. Since humans are not perfect and Hindus know it from the beginning of time, various restrictions were laid to curtail the misuse of Niyoga.

WHEN YOU SHOULD DO NIYOG

Narada (12.82-88)-For this custom is practised only when the family threatens to become extinct, for the continuance of the lineage, and not from amorous desire.

"The practice of Niyoga was instituted solely for the purpose of preserving the family lineage, and it was to be carried out free from lustful intent, motivated only by the duty of begetting progeny to prevent the extinction of the family line.Even Rishi Angira had to follow the Same instructions for Niyoga " only direct intercourse is allowed no foreplay with body(kissing,hugging, limbs etc)

Narada (12.82-88). He shall approach the woman, free from passion, and without amorous desire. He must have anointed his limbs with clarified butter, or with oil which has not lost its natural condition, and must turn away his face from hers and avoid the contact of limb with limb. For this custom is practised only when the family threatens to become extinct, for the continuance of the lineage, and not from amorous desire. He must not approach a woman who is with child, or blameworthy, or not duly authorised by her relations. Should a woman procreate a son with her brother-in-law without having been authorised

Yama (Vivādaratnākara, p. 446).-'When during her period, the woman has taken her bath, her brother-in-law, desiring an offspring for his deceased brother, may approach her during the dark night, with speech held in check, with a single cloth on, and his body anointed with clarified butter, and mind stricken with grief, avoiding the contact of his face and limbs with her face and limbs.'

After niyog he should never approach the women or her child again and should do penance

Yama (Vivādaratnākara, p. 446). A man desirous of securing offspring for bis dead brother, may beget a child on his widow; he shall leave her as soon as conception has taken place; he shall never approach her after she has got a child.'

Kātyāyana (Do., 449).-'After having carried out Niyoga, one should perform the prescribed penance for expiation.'

Sages Declare a window shouldn't do niyoga instead she should preserve her Chastity.

Parāśara (4.29). 'If, on the death of her husband, a woman remains firm in her chastity, she obtains heaven, on death, in the manner of the Religious Students.'

Do. (4.4.57-59).-'On the death of her husband, the chaste woman should either accompany him or observe the vows; she should not go to other houses; she should maintain chastity, control her passions and give up personal adornment.'

Yājñavalkya (1.87).-'She who is devoted to her husband's welfare, well-behaved, with senses under control, attains fame in this world and the supreme state, after death.'

This practice is criticized by rishi manu himself –

Manu Smriti 9.159

WHEN YOU SHOULD DO NIYOG

Nārada (12.82-88)-For this custom is practised only when the family threatens to become extinct, for the continuance of the lineage, and not from amorous desire.

"The practice of Niyoga was instituted olely for the purpose of preserving the family lineage, and it was to be carried out free from lustful intent, motivated only by the duty of begetting progeny to prevent the extinction of the family line.Even Rishi Vasistha had to follow the Same instructions for Niyoga “ only direct intercourse is allowed no foreplay with body(kissing,hugging,limbs etc)

After niyog he should never approach the women or her child again and should do penance

Sages Declare a window shouldn't do niyoga instead she should preserve her Chastity.

This practice is criticized by rishi manu himself

That woman, however, who from a longing for a child, disregards her husband, brings disgrace to herself in this world and falls off from her place in the other world.—(159).

raise upon my wife a few sons that shall be virtuous and wise.' Thus addressed, the Rishi endued with great energy, expressed his willingness. Thereupon king Vali sent his wife Sudeshna unto him. But the queen knowing that the latter was blind and old went not unto him, she sent unto him her nurse. And upon that Sudra woman the virtuous Rishi of passions under full control begat eleven children of whom Kakshivat was the eldest…Thy unfortunate queen Sudeshna, seeing me blind and old, insulted me by not coming herself but sending unto me, instead, her nurse.' The king then pacified that best of Rishis and sent unto him his queen Sudeshna.
The Rishi by merely touching her person said to her, 'Thou shalt have five children…"

Ved Vyas Said – "The wives of Vichitravīrya must observe a vow (vrata) in the manner prescribed by me for one full year—practicing self-restraint and performing it solely with the aim of begetting offspring. Only then will they be considered pure. Any woman who has not observed such a vow may not approach me."

"It is particularly important to note that Rishi Vyasa explicitly instructed Mata Satyavati that the wives of Vichitravīrya must observe a vow of purity and self-restraint for a full year, with the sole objective of begetting progeny. Had his intent been driven by lust, he would never have talked about imposing such a condition of discipline and sanctity. This clearly reflects that his purpose was entirely righteous and aimed at preserving the lineage through dharma."

"Mata Satyavati urged Rishi Vyasa to ct swiftly, not out of impatience, but because Hastinapur could not remain without a king for long. Without a ruler, the kingdom risked falling into disorder, dharma would decline, and divine balance would be lost. Her concern was for the stability of the state and continuation of the royal lineage."

Verse 43:
Satyavatī said, "Son! Do whatever is necessary so that these two queens may conceive quickly."

Verse 44:
"There is no king in the kingdom at present. Without a ruler, the people become orphaned and are destroyed. Sacrificial rites, charity, and other religious duties also disappear. In such a kingdom, there is neither rainfall nor the presence of the gods."

Verse 45:
"O Lord! You yourself consider—how can a kingdom remain protected and orderly without a king?

Vyasa said, "Mother! If I am to give a

Verse 47:
"If Kausalya (Ambikā) can endure my smell, form, attire, and body without fear or aversion, then she can conceive a noble son in her womb even today."

व्यासजी बोले—माँ! यदि मुझे समयका नियम न रखकर शीघ्र ही अपने भाईके लिये पुत्र प्रदान करना है, तो उन देवियोंके लिये यह उत्तम व्रत आवश्यक है कि वे मेरे असुन्दर रूपको देखकर शान्त रहें, डरें नहीं ॥ ४६ ॥

यदि कौसल्या (अम्बिका) मेरे गन्ध, रूप, वेष और शरीरको सहन कर ले तो वह आज ही एक उत्तम बालकको अपने गर्भमें पा सकती है ॥ ४७ ॥

"O graceful lady! Restore the declining Bharata dynasty. Give birth to a brilliant son, equal to Indra, the king of the gods. He alone will uphold the great burden of our royal legacy."

"It should therefore be clearly understood that Rishi Vyasa was entrusted with this responsibility in a grave and critical situation, solely to preserve and continue the lineage of the Kuru dynasty. His role was a dharmic duty—driven by necessity and Situation —not by any motive of lust."

WHAT IS NIYOG?

Niyoga was a practice that was allowed to make sure that woman experiences the pious feeling of becoming a mother during her lifetime.
Simply put, if a man failed in his responsibility to impregnate his wife, then-wife could seek permission from her husband to get impregnated by someone else. An exception was also made if the man died without becoming a father. Since humans are not perfect and Hindus know it from the beginning of time, various restrictions were laid to curtail the misuse of Niyoga.

BIRTH OF VIDUR JI EXPLAINED FROM MAHABHARATA

Vidura's birth was not an accident or he result of circumstance—it was preordained by divine will. According to the scriptures, Dharma was cursed by Maharṣi Māṇḍavya to take birth in the mortal world. As a result, Dharma incarnated as Vidura to guide the Kuru dynasty with wisdom and uphold righteousness during a time of great moral crisis.

The manner of his birth—through a maidservant—was simply the instrument of that divine plan, not the essence of it. Even though Rishi Vyāsa came to know later that the woman was not the queen but a maid, this only fulfilled what had already been destined. Far from being irregular, this ensured that Vidura, who represented pure dharma, would remain detached from royal ambition and courtly corruption, enabling him to serve as the kingdom's moral compass.

His life, character, and revered status in the Mahābhārata confirm that his birth was the result of higher design, not of human failing or deception.

MAHABHARAT ADI PARVA ADHAYA 105
GEETA PRESS GORAKHPUR

Verse 20:
After that, Satyavatī again requested him (Vyāsa) for another son. The great sage accepted his mother's command, saying, "Very well."

Verse 21:
Then, at the proper time, Devi Ambālikā gave birth to a son of pale complexion. He was radiating with divine brilliance.

Verse 22:
This was the same child whose sons became the mighty archers—the five Pāṇḍavas. After this, when the proper time arrived, Satyavatī once again appointed her elder daughter-in-law, Ambikā, to go to Vyāsa.

Verse 23:
But the beautiful Ambikā, comparable to a celestial maiden, thought about the sage's unpleasant appearance and smell, and out of fear, disobeyed Devi Satyavatī's command.

Verse 24:
Princess Ambikā of Kāśī adorned one of her maidservants, who was as beautiful as an apsarā, with her own ornaments and sent her to the dark-complexioned sage Vyāsa.

Verse 25:
When the sage arrived, the maidservant came forward to welcome him, offered her respects, and upon receiving his permission, sat on the bed and began serving him with reverence.

Verse 26–27 (combined):
Meeting him in private, the sage Vyāsa was greatly pleased with her. O King! When the sage, strict in observing his vows, rose after lying with her, he said, "O blessed one! You shall no longer remain a maidservant. In your womb will be born a most excellent child."

Verse 30 (summary of a previous section):
Śrī Kṛṣṇa Dvaipāyana Vyāsa informed Satyavatī of everything. He revealed the secret that Ambikā had deceived him by sending her maid in her place. Therefore, the child born from the womb of the maidservant—who was of the Śūdra class—would be a son.

Verse 31:
In this way, Vyāsa fulfilled his dharmic duty by obeying his mother's command. Then he met her again, informed her about the pregnancy, and disappeared from there.

Verse 32:
From Vyāsa, in the field of Vichitravīrya, were born these three sons, who were radiant like celestial beings and who expanded the Kuru dynasty.

. King Pandu was afflicted with a curse and thus couldn't approach his wife for exual intercourse. But he did not hesitate in ordering his wife to cohabit with other men,

Mahabharata 1.120.26-41 "Hearing these words of the ascetics, Pandu, remembering the loss of his procreative powers owing to the curse of the deer, began to reflect deeply. And calling his wedded wife the excellent Kunti, unto him, he told her in private, 'Strive thou to raise offspring at this time of distress… The religious institutes mention six kinds of sons that are heirs and kinsmen, and six other kinds that are not heirs but kinsmen. I shall speak of them presently. O Pritha, listen to me. They are: 1st, the son begotten by one's own self upon his wedded wife; 2nd, the son begotten upon one's wife by an accomplished person from motives of kindness; 3rd, the son begotten upon one's wife by a person for pecuniary consideration; 4th, the son begotten upon the wife after the husband's death; 5th, the maiden-born son; 6th, the son born of an unchaste wife; 7th, the son given; 8th, the son bought for a consideration; 9th, the son self-given; 10th, the son received with a pregnant bride; 11th, the brother's son; and 12th, the son begotten upon a wife of lower caste. On failure of offspring of a prior class, the mother should desire to have offspring of the next class. In times of distress, men solicit offspring from accomplished younger brothers. The self-born Manu hath said that men failing to have legitimate offspring of their own may have offspring begotten upon their wives by others, for sons confer the highest religious merit. Therefore, O Kunti, being destitute myself of the power of procreation, I command thee to raise good offspring through some person who is either equal or superior to me. O Kunti, listen to the history of the daughter of Saradandayana who was appointed by her lord to raise offspring. That warrior-dame, when her monthly season arrived, bathed duly and in the night went out and waited on a spot where four roads met. She did not wait long when a Brahmana crowned with ascetic success came there. The daughter of Saradandayana solicited him for offspring. After pouring libations of clarified butter on the fire (in the performance of the sacrifice known by the name of Punsavana) she brought forth three sons that were mighty car-warriors and of whom Durjay

After being cursed by Rishi Kindama, Maharaj Pandu renounced worldly pleasures and began to live a life of intense penance and austerity along with his wives. Through his sincere atonement and sinless living, he attained great spiritual power, becoming as radiant and influential (Prabhavshali) as a Brahmarishi.

One day, he saw a procession of sages and Brahmarishis journeying toward Brahmaloka to have the divine darshan of Pitamah Brahma Ji. Deeply inspired, Pandu wished to accompany them. However, he was restrained by a painful realization—he had not yet fulfilled his debt to the ancestors (Pitṛ-ṛṇa) since he remained childless. If he were to die without leaving behind progeny, his ancestors would surely face a fall from their celestial realms.

But due to the curse of Rishi Kindama, he was incapable of fathering children. This thought caused him immense grief and fear—of failing in his duties, of letting down his lineage, and of the destruction of his family line.

Torn by desperation and a deep sense of dharma, Pandu finally turned to Kunti, begging her to bear children—even if it meant doing so through another man. His plea was not born out of personal desire but from the weight of responsibility, fear of ancestral doom, and the torment of being unable to fulfill his sacred obligations.

Pandu said—
O exalted and revered sages! It is said that the gates of heaven remain closed for a childless person. I too am childless; hence, overwhelmed with sorrow, I wish to present a humble plea before you.

O ascetic sages! I have not yet been able to free myself from the debt owed to my ancestors, and that thought deeply troubles me. (Verses 15–16)

If I die in this childless state, then surely my forefathers will fall (from their heavenly abodes). A human being takes birth on this earth bearing four kinds of debts. (Verse 17)

(These four debts are:) the debt to the ancestors (Pitṛ-ṛṇa), the debt to the gods (Deva-ṛṇa), the debt to the sages (Ṛṣi-ṛṇa), and the debt to fellow human beings (Manuṣya-ṛṇa). All these debts must be repaid through righteous conduct. Those who do not properly fulfill these obligations in due time are not eligible to attain the virtuous realms. This is the principle established by the wise and learned. (Verses 18–19)

By performing sacrifices (yajñas), one satisfies the gods; and through self-study and austerity (tapas), one pleases the sages."

Allegations-

King Pandu also ordered his wife Kunti to conceive children with the Sun god Surya, Mahabharata 1.123.1-9 "Vaisampayana said, 'O Janamejaya, when Gandhari's conception had been a full year old, it was then that Kunti summoned the eternal god of justice to obtain offspring from him. And she offered without loss of time, sacrifices unto the god and began to duly repeat the formula that Durvasa had imparted to her some time before. Then the god, overpowered by her incantations, arrived at the spot where Kunti was seated in his car resplendent as the Sun. Smiling, he asked, 'O Kunti, what am I to give thee?' And Kunti too smiling in her turn, replied, 'Thou must even give me offspring.' Then the handsome Kunti was united (in intercourse) with the god of justice in his spiritual form and obtained from him a son devoted to the good of all creatures. And she brought his excellent child, who lived to cquire a great fame...And this first child of Pandu shall be known by the name of Yudhishthira. Possessed of prowess and honesty of disposition, he shall be a famous king, known throughout the three worlds.”

King Vyushitāśva indeed did the same as you have described. O blessed one, he was as radiant as the gods.” (Verse 2)

“This is what virtuous men call the ancient code of conduct. O royal maiden! Whatever a husband tells his wife—whether agreeable or disagreeable to her—must be carried out. This is the declaration of men learned in the Vedas. Especially, when a husband, though incapable of producing children himself, desires progeny, his words must be obeyed. (Verses 4–5)

O auspicious one with flawless limbs! O beloved with beautiful hair! I ask you to unite with a worthy Brahmin, one accomplished in austerity, and beget a virtuous son by my command. (Verses 6–7)

O fair-hipped one! Through your effort, may I attain the fate of those blessed with sons—this is my heartfelt desire." (Verse 8)

Vaishampayana said –
O Janamejaya! When King Pandu, the conqueror of enemy kingdoms, spoke thus, Kuntī, who was devoted to her husband's welfare and desirous of fulfilling his wishes, replied with these words: (Verse 9)

"O best of the Bharatas! O foremost among Kshatriyas! It is improper for a wife to have to be repeatedly requested by her husband just to please him—for it is indeed the woman's duty to always strive to please her husband. O mighty-armed one! Please hear what I have to say, for it will bring you great joy. (Verse 10)

In my youth, while I lived at my father's house, I was assigned the task of serving guests. There, I came across a stern and austere Brahmin named Durvāsā, whose ways and knowledge of dharma were unknown even to others. I served that reat soul, who had mastery over

तदनन्तर योगमूर्ति धारण किये हुए धर्मके साथ समागम करके सुन्दरांगी कुन्तीने एक ऐसा पुत्र प्राप्त किया, जो समस्त प्राणियोंका हित करनेवाला था ॥ ५ ॥

Mahābhārata, Ādi Parva (Adhaya 122 sloka 5): the verse states that Kuntī, “having united with Dharma in the form of a yogamūrti,” obtained a son. The word yogamūrti is critical—it means a manifestation assumed through yogic or mantra-based means, not an ordinary physical body.
When samāgama (union) is qualified by yogamūrti, it signifies a non-carnal meeting effected through spiritual invocation. In the narrative, Kuntī uses the mantra granted by Durvāsā to invoke the deity; conception is described as the deity's tejas (power/essence) entering the womb, an arrangement adopted precisely because ordinary intercourse was impossible in Pāṇḍu's case. Crucially, the text avoids sexual vocabulary (maithuna, rati, kāma-vikāra) and instead uses terms of invocation and manifestation. Therefore, while Kuntī indeed conceived and bore sons, the mechanism presented is mantra-mediated and yogic—not sexual intercourse with the Devas.

Allegations-

Allegations-

Matsya Purana 48.67-76 ”After that, King Bali appeased that sage and was furious with his wife; and sent her again well-dressed, after her toilet, to the sage, when the seer said. ”O. Devi! Cast off your bashfulness and then lick the whole of my body with your tongue, after rubbing it with salt, curds and honey; you will then attain your wish and get sons.” The queen followed the directions of the seer, but omitted to lick the hind private parts. When the sage said; ”O, blessed one! Your eldest son will be without that part of the body which you have omitted to lick.” The queen said:- ”Sire!

It is not worthy of you to bless me with such an offspring. Be pleased at my devotion and show your mercy to me.”
Dirghatama said:- ”

Here is Matsya Purana chapter 48 hindi translation by Choukhamba Publications

Rishi Dirghatama was blind from birth due to a curse by Brihaspati ji and thus could not engage in direct intercourse as part of the niyoga arrangement with Queen Sudeshna for begetting progeny. However, due to his intense tapas and yogic powers, he advised the queen to perform a symbolic act—smearing his body with purifying substances like salt, mud, and honey, and licking it without disgust—as a ritual to receive the spiritual seed . This was not a carnal act but a yogic and dharmic method suitable to the circumstances. The queen’s partial completion of the act led to the symbolic result that one son was born lacking a body part.

यह कहते ही बृहस्पति ने गर्भ को शाप देते कहा “तुम मेरे आनन्द अवसर पर मुझे निषेध कर रहे हो। ऐसी बातों के पाप से तुम बड़े समय तक अंधकार में रहोगे। इस शाप के कारण ममता के गर्भ से दीर्घतमा बालक पैदा हुआ। वह उशिज पुत्र तेजस्विता में बृहस्पतिवत् था।।४०-४२।

वह अखण्ड ब्रह्मचारी था। उशिजाश्रम में ही रहता था। उशिज ने वहीं रहते वृषभ से गो धर्म पढ़ा। भाई के आश्रम में रहते एक वृषभ वहां आया। वह यज्ञकार्यार्थ लाये कुश पर चलने-फिरने लगा। दीर्घतमा ने उस वृषभ के दोनों श्रृंग पकड़े। वृषभ

एकदम वहीं जड़-सा हो गया। विवश हो उसने कहा "हे महाबली ! मुझे छोड़ो ।।४३-४६ ।।

तात! आपके समान बली आज तक कोई नहीं मिला। मैं भी अद्वितीय बली रहा हूं। आपसे निवेदन है मुझे छोड़िये। मैं अति सन्तुष्ट हूं। बदले में वर ग्रहण करिये। तब दीर्घतमा ने कहा-मेरे जीवित रहते तुम कहां जा सकोगे? तुम जैसे पराये धन के भक्षक को कभी नहीं जाना। तुम चौपाय को नहीं छोडूंगा।।४७-४८।।

Verses 40–42:
At that moment, Bṛhaspati (the celestial preceptor) cursed the fetus and said:
"You are denying me at the most important moment.
Due to the sin of such an act, you shall remain in darkness (blindness) for a long time."
As a result of this curse, Dirghatama was born from the womb of Mamataa.
He was the son of Ushij and possessed brilliance equal to that of Bṛhaspati himself.

Verse 43:
He was a lifelong celibate (Akhaṇḍa Brahmachārī).
He resided in the ashram of Ushij, his father.

Verses 44–46:
While he was staying at his brother's hermitage, a bull arrived there (intended for a sacrificial ritual) and began roaming about on the sacred Kusha grass.
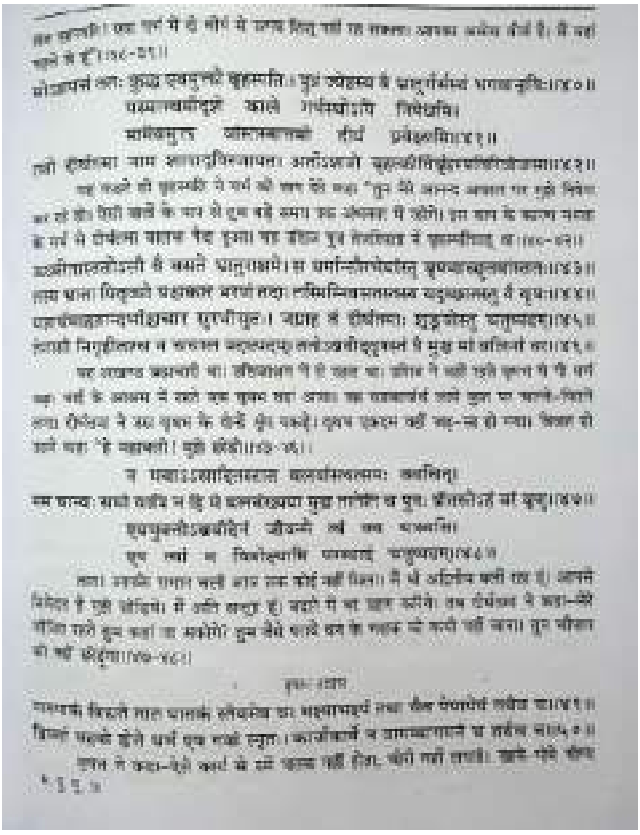
Dirghatama seized the bull by both its horns, and instantly, the bull became paralyzed and frozen in place.



बलि ने दीर्घतमा मुनि से पुत्र पाने हेतु वर मांगा कहा मेरी पत्नी के गर्भ से आप धर्मार्थ तत्वज्ञ पुत्र उत्पन्न हो ।।६०।।इस विनय निवेदन से बलि ने उनसे वर पाया, तब बलि ने वांछित सन्तानार्थ अपनी स्त्री सुदेष्णा को दीर्घतमा को दिया। पर वह ऋषि को अन्ध-वृद्ध जान उनके निकट नहीं गयी। उसने शूद्रकुलोत्पन्न घाय को उनके पास समागमार्थ भेजा। उस धाय से जितेन्द्रिय धार्मिक दीर्घतमा ने काक्षीवान् आदि कई पुत्र उत्पन्न किये, जिन्हें देख नृपति बलि ने दीर्घतमा से कहा।।६१-६३।।

राजोवाचराजा कहते हैं-क्या ऋषि धर्म चतुर समर्थ ब्रह्मवादी धार्मिक सदाचारी बुद्धिशाली सत्कर्मी पुत्र मेरा ही है? मुनि ने कहा-ये मेरे पुत्र हैं। हे दानवप्रवर! ये सभी अपनी सम्मति से शूद्रकुलोत्पन्न हैं। हे राजन्! सुदेष्णा ने अन्धा-बूढ़ा जान कर अपमानित किया। उसने शूद्रा धाय को मेरे पास भेजा।।६४-६६।।

King Bali requested a boon from Sage Dirghatama, asking: “May you bless me with a virtuous, wise son—born of my wife’s womb.”

Accepting his request, the sage agreed. King Bali then presented his wife Sudeshna to Dirghatama for the urpose of begetting a son. However, Sudeshna, perceiving the sage as blind and elderly, refused to approach him. Instead, she sent a maidservant of Shudra origin to him for physical union.

From this maidservant, the sage Dirghatama—self-controlled and righteous—fathered several sons, including Kakshivan and others. Upon seeing them, King Bali asked: "Are these wise, dharmic sons the ones destined to be mine?"

The sage replied: "These are my sons, O noble demon! They were born from the maidservant, with her consent. Your wife Sudeshna insulted me, thinking me blind and old, and sent a Shudra woman in her place."

ऋषि के वचन सुन कर बलि ने नाना विषय से उनको खुश किया। तब गृह आकर सुदेष्णा को बलि ने बहुत बुरा-भला कहा। तब पुनः वस्त्राभूषणों से अलंकृत करके ऋषि के पास मैथुनार्थ भेजा। ऋषि ने सुदेष्णा का पूर्व अपमानप्रद व्यवहार देख कर कहा- "अब तुम नमक, मिट्टी लगी तथा मधु लपेटे मेरे एड़ी से मस्तक

तक के देह को बिना घृणा चाटो। तब मनोनुकूल सन्तान मिलेगी"।।६७-६९।।

सुदेष्णा ने दीर्घतमा का सब आदेश पूरा किया। बस चाटते समय अपान (गुदा) को घृणा से छोड़ दिया। तब ऋषि ने कहा-चाटते हुए तुमने इसे घृणा से छोड़ा है, अतः प्रथम वाला कुमार बिना अपान ही पैदा होगा।। ७०-७१।।

सुदेष्णा कहती है-हे महाभाग! अपान रहित सन्तान मुझे मत दीजिये। अपने व्यवहार से आपको पूरा सन्तुष्ट किया। आप प्रसन्न हों।। ७२।।

दीर्घतमा कहते हैं-तुम्हारी त्रुटि से यह हुआ है। मेरा वचन अन्यथा नहीं होगा। पर चलो, यह फल यह पुत्र नहीं भोगेगा। उसका पुत्र वह फल भोगेगा। उसके देह में अपान भले न हो, सर्व इन्द्रियां रहेंगी। पौत्र एक योग्य व्यक्ति होगा। यह कह ऋषि ने अन्य अंग को छूआ और कहा।।७३-७४।।

हे सुन्दरी ! तुमने गुह्य इन्द्रिय छोड़ कर सर्वांग चाटा है। अतः तुम्हारे गर्भ से पूर्ण चन्द्र से मनोहर बालक होंगे। वे अति सुरूप, यज्ञ कार्य वाले, तेजवान्, सत्कर्मी होंगे। वे ५ तथा धार्मिक होंगे।।७५-७६।।

After hearing Sage Dirghatama's words, King Bali pleased him with various offerings. Upon returning home, Bali reproached his wife Sudeshna for her earlier disrespect and then dressed her in fine garments and ornaments, sending her back to the sage for union.

Dirghatama, remembering her previous insult and rejection, said: "To be blessed with a child as desired, you must now lick my body—coated with salt, earth, and honey—from heel to head without any disgust."

Sudeshna obeyed the command, but skipped the anus out of distaste. The sage then said: "You left that part out of revulsion, so your first son will be born without an anus."

Sudeshna begged: "O noble one! Please do not give me a son without an anus. I have followed your instructions and honored you—please be kind."

The sage replied: "Due to your error, the child will be born as foretold. But he will not suffer—his son shall carry the karmic fruit instead. Though lacking an anus, your son will be fully endowed with all other senses and will become the father of a virtuous and capable grandson."

Then, Dirghatama touched another part of her body and continued: "O beautiful one! Because you licked all parts but avoided the private organ, your womb shall produce children as splendid as the full moon—handsome, ritual-oriented, radiant, and virtuous. There will be five such righteous sons."

Allegations-

When Parashurama the sixth avatar of Vishnu annihilated Kshatriya men 21 times, the female Kshatriyas went to Brahmins to contract Niyoga and begat progeny who was Kshatriyas as the law of Niyoga is that the son belongs to the deceased father but not to the biological father who contracted Niyoga. Kshatriya women contracted Niyoga with Brahmin twenty-one times,

Brahmanda Purana 2.3.46.29-33 "After killing all the Ksatriyas on the surface of the Earth, Rama became calm... Ksatriya kings were begotten of the widowed wives of those Ksatriyas by Brahmanas. Again he (Rama) killed hundreds and thousands of such kings. In two years, Rama made the Earth devoid of Ksatriyas once again... Again, O king, enlightened Ksatriyas were procreated by the Brahmanas. Rama killed them entirely like the god of death, the destroyer of the Earth."

Mahabharata 1.104.4-7 "And the illustrious scion of Bhrigu's race, by means of his swift arrows annihilated the Kshatriya tribe one and twenty times. "And when the earth was thus deprived of Kshatriyas by the great Rishi, the Kshatriya ladies all over the land had offspring raised by Brahmanas skilled in the Vedas. It has been said in the Vedas that the sons so raised belongeth to him that had married the mother. And the Kshatriya ladies went in unto the Brahamanas ot lustfully but from motives of virtue.

Indeed, it was thus that the Kshatriya race was revived."

Refutation-

Same Facts and explanation as above –

The Purpose of Niyoga was to save the family lineage from getting extinct and was practised only in these types of Extreme Situations

Niyoga was a practice that was allowed to make sure that woman experiences the pious feeling of becoming a mother during her lifetime.
Simply put, if a man failed in his responsibility to impregnate his wife, then-wife could seek permission from her husband to get impregnated by someone else. An exception was also made if the man died without becoming a father. Since humans are not perfect and Hindus know it from the beginning of time, various restrictions were laid to curtail the misuse of Niyoga.
WHEN YOU SHOULD DO NIYOG
Narada (12.82-88)-For this custom is practised only when the family threatens to become extinct, for the continuance of the lineage, and not from amorous desire.

WHAT IS NIYOG?

Niyoga was a practice that was allowed to make sure that woman experiences the pious feeling of becoming a mother during her lifetime.
Simply put, if a man failed in his responsibility to impregnate his wife, then-wife could seek permission from her husband to get impregnated by someone else. An exception was also made if the man died without becoming a father. WHEN YOU SHOULD DO NIYOG
Nārada (12.82-88)-For this custom is practised only when the family threatens to become extinct, for the continuance of the lineage, and not from amorous desire.

only direct intercourse is allowed no foreplay with body(kissing,hugging, limbs etc)

Narada (12.82-88). He shall approach the woman, free from passion, and without amorous desire. He must have anointed his limbs with clarified butter, or with oil which has not lost its natural condition, and must turn away his face from hers and avoid the contact of limb with limb. For this custom is practised only when the family threatens to become extinct, for the continuance of the lineage, and not from amorous desire. He must not approach a woman who is with child, or blameworthy, or not duly authorised by her relations. Should a woman procreate a son with her brother-in-law without having been authorised

Yama (Vivādaratnākara, p. 446).-'When during her period, the woman has taken her bath, her brother-in-law, desiring an offspring for his deceased brother, may approach her during the dark night, with speech held in check, with a single cloth on, and his body anointed with clarified butter, and mind stricken with grief, avoiding the contact of his face and limbs with her face and limbs.'

After niyog he should never approach the women or her child again and should do penance

Yama (Vivādaratnākara, p. 446). A man desirous of securing offspring for bis dead brother, may beget a child on his widow; he shall leave her as soon as conception has taken place; he shall never approach her after she has got a child.'

ātyāyana (Do., 449).-'After having carried out Niyoga, one should perform the prescribed penance for expiation.'

Sages Declare a window shouldn't do niyoga instead she should preserve her Chastity.
Parāśara (4.29). 'If, on the death of her husband, a woman remains firm in her chastity, she obtains heaven, on death, in the manner of the Religious Students.'
Do. (4.4.57-59).-'On the death of her husband, the chaste woman should either accompany him or observe the vows; she should not go to other houses; she should maintain chastity, control her passions and give up personal adornment.'
Yājñavalkya (1.87).-'She who is devoted to her husband's welfare, well-behaved, with senses under control, attains fame in this world and the supreme state, after death.'
This practice is criticized by rishi manu himself –

Manu Smriti 9.159
That woman, however, who from a longing for a child, disregards her husband, brings disgrace to herself in this world and falls off from her place in the other world.-(159).

Niyoga is banned in Kaliyuga Because of the chances of its Misuse for Lustful purposes like Islamic Halala

Brhaspati (25.12-14). The Niyoga (authorisation of a widow to raise offspring to her deceased husband), after having been declared by Manu, has been forbidden by himself; on account of the deterioration in the nature of the time-cycles, this cannot he done by all in the proper form. In the Krta, Treta and Dvāpara cycles, men were imbued with austerities and with knowledge; in the Kali cycle a deterioration in the capacity of men has been brought about. Therefore the sons that were obtained by various methods by the ancient sages cannot he obtained by men now, on account of their being without that capacity.'

: is quoted in Nrsimhaprasāda

(Vyavahāra, 38a); in Smrticandrikā (Samskāra, p. 226), which says that this prohibition is meant for the Kali-age; and in Viramitrodaya (Vyavahāra, 186a).

Brahmapurāṇa (Aparārka, p. 97).-'On the death of her husband, or on her having abandoned her husband, a woman may beget a son from a man of her own caste. If she is a child-widow, or has been forcibly abandoned by her husband, she shall go through the sacrament of marriage again, with any other man. But this remarriage of women, or the begetting of a son from the brother-in-law, or the freedom of women, should not be permitted during the Kali age; as during this age, men are inclined to be sinful.'

Apastamba (2.27.2-4).-'A husband shall not make over his wife, who occupies the position of a gentilis, to others (than to his gentiles), in order to cause children to be begotten for himself. For they declare that a bride is given to the family of her husband (and not to the husband alone). This is forbidden for the present age, on account of the incapacity of men's senses.'

In simple words in Kaliyug Men will be lusty this practice may be misused, In the 3 yugas sages had capacity to impregnent women even without having sexual intercourse but in kaliyug men are not capable to doing these

Claims

📚Agni Purana 222.19-23📚
The woman (widow) who enters the (funeral) fire along with the (dead) husband would also reach heaven."

📚Kurma Purana 2.34.108b-109📚
A woman who enters the funeral pyre along with her husband, shall uplift him even if he is a Brahmana-slayer, an ungrateful fellow or one defiled by great sins. Learned men know this to be the greatest expiation for women."

📚Garuda Purana 1.107.29📚
A wife who dies in the company of her husband shall remain in heaven as many years as there are hairs on his person."

📚Garuda Purana 2.4.88-97📚
A woman who has been chaste and faithful to her husband should mount on the pyre after bowing to her (deceased) husband before the funeral rites start. One who gets away from the pyre due to fainting should observe the vow named prajapatya. One who ascends the pyre and follows up her husband stays in heaven for a period equal to the number of hair on the body, three and a half crore. Just as the snake-charmer takes out the snake from the hole so also she takes out her husband from hell and enjoys with him in paradise. She who ascends the pyre goes to heaven. She is praised by the celestial nymphs and enjoys with her husband so long as the fourteen Indras rule in heaven successively. Even if the man has killed a brahmana or a friend or any other person of noble conduct he is purified of sins by his wife who ascends his pyre. A woman who enters fire after the death of her husband prospers in the heaven like Arundhati. Until and unless the woman burns herself after her husband's death she is never released from the bond of her sex. A woman who follows her husband purifies the three families on her mother's side, the three families on her father's side and the three families on her husband's side."

📚Garuda Purana 2.40📚
Not knowing my duty I did not serve my husband, nor after his death enter the fire. Having become widowed I performed no austerities;–O Dweller in the Body, make reparation for whatever you have done!"

📚Garuda Purana 10.42📚
When a woman burns her body with her husband's, the fire burns her limbs only, but does not afflict her soul"

📚Garuda Purana 10.45-46📚
Likewise she who has joined her husband is never burnt. her inner soul becomes unified with that of her husband, by death. The woman who does not burn herself in the fire, on her husband's death, is certainly never released from feminine bodies"

📚Garuda Purana 10.48-50📚
The Woman who ascends the funeral pyre, when her husband is dead, becomes equal to Arundhati, and attains the heaven. She who goes with her husband purifies three families her mother's, her father's, and that into which she was given."

📚Brahma Purana Gautami Mahatmya 10.75📚
Dying immediately after the husband is the greatest duty of women. This is the path laid down in the Vedas. It is honoured in the world. Just as the snake-charmer forcibly takes out the snake from its hole, so also the woman who is accompanied by her husband shall go to heaven. The woman who follows her husband shall stay in heaven for as many years as there are hairs in a man's body, viz. three and a half crores of years."

📚Skanda Purana 3.2.7.53-58📚
A chaste woman who follows her husband from the house to the cremation ground for self-immolation undoubtedly attains the merit of a horse-sacrifice at every step. Just as a snake-catcher forcibly retrieves a snake from its hole, so also a chaste woman retrieves her husband from the messengers of Yama and goes to heave. On seeing a chaste woman the messengers of Yama flee. On seeing the splendour of a chaste woman even the sun feels burning sensation, even the fire gets burnt and all other luminaries begin to tremble. A chaste woman sportingly enjoys heavenly pleasures along with her husband for as many crores and ten thousand years as there are hairs on her body."

📚Narada Purana Uttarabhaga 30.87📚
With a great deal of merits the woman goes to the region of Visnu alongwith her husband if her body is cremated alongwith him. But a woman greedy of wealth and of her body (?) attains Yama's torture and the affliction of being born in base wombs of lower species."

📚Parashar Smriti 4.28📚
(source) A widow, who immolates herself on the same funeral pile with her deceased husband, resides in heaven for ten millions of years, which is the number of hairs on the human body."

📚Brihaspati Smriti 24.11📚
A wife is considered half the body (of her husband), equally sharing the result of his good or wicked deeds; whether she ascends the pile after him, or chooses to survive him leading a virtuous life, she promotes the welfare of her husband."

📚Vishnu Smriti 25.14📚
After the death of her husband, to preserve her chastity, or to ascend the pile after him."

📚Atri Samhita 1.209📚
The woman, who falls down from the funeral pyre, [of her husband], or who gets no menses on account of a disease, becomes purified by a Prajapatya and feeding ten Brahmanas."

📚Usana Smriti 3.119📚
The anniversary day of the death of the lady,, devoted to her husband, who ascends the same funeral pyre with him, arriving, two separate funeral balls (pindas) should be made. "

📚Daksha Samhita 4.19📚
A woman, who, after the demise of her husband, ascends the funeral pyre, becomes of good conduct and lives gloriously in the celestial region."

Refutation-

All of the Puranas and Smritis he quoted give the widows the option to commit Sati or to remarry or to remain celibate . So it was all the choice of the widow whether she wanted to commit Sati or not – no one could force her to commit Sati . We read in Smritis and Puranas that it was upon to woman if she want to commit Sati or not Vishnu Dharma Sutra 25.17 "A good wife, who perseveres in a chaste life after the death of her lord, will go to heaven like (perpetual) students, even though she has no son.

Parasara Smriti 4.29 "If a woman has led a continent life, after her lord departed this life, she wins a region of bliss after her death, like to the well-known male observers of a celibate life."

Agni Purana 222.20 "the lady practicing continence after the death of her husband, goes to heaven.

Brihaspati Smriti 24.11 "A wife is considered half the body (of her husband), equally sharing the result of his good or wicked deeds; whether she ascends the pile after him, or chooses to survive him leading a virtuous life, she promotes the welfare of her husband.

The Gautamī-māhātmya (chaps. 70-175), which was certainly composed by somebody living about the river Godāvarī, is a distinct 'work' (pustakam) by itself. It is called a 'highly meritorious Purāṇa' declared by Brahmā (cf. Br 175, 78 and 87). The place which it occupies in the Brahma-p. was not meant for it, because it divides the chapters on Puruṣottamakṣetra-māhātmya. The way in which chap. 176 opens, shows that it immediately followed chap. 69. Moreover, in chap. 176 there is no hint from which we may conclude that the Māhātmya was there. In Br 179, 2 the sages refer to Bhāratavarṣa (chap. 27) and Puruṣottama-kṣetra, of which, they say, Vyāsa told them elaborately, but they do not mention the Gautamī-māhātmya which also precedes chap. 179 in our edition. So, it is clear that the Māhātmya was not originally there. In the Veṅk. ed. it is placed at the end. This Māhātmya was attached to the Brahma-p. later than the chapters on Orissa, for the Nāradīya-p. (I, 92), which gives the contents of the present

The Gautamīmāhātmya, also called Godāvarīmāhātmya, of which there exist several separate manuscripts[112] and which has also been separately edited,[113] calls itself a purāṇa,[114] and must originally have been a distinct book. It interrupts the section on Puruṣottamakṣetra, and has been inserted exactly in the middle of the Brahma°.[115] It describes the sacred places along the Godāvarī river.

Further Shruti which is the highest authority-Vyasa Smriti 1.4 (In matters of discrepancy between the Satis, Smritis, and Puranas, the former should be held as decisive, whereas the Smritis should have preference in all topics where there would be a difference of opinion between them and the Puranaas) discourage this practice of Sati Pratha – Rig Veda 10/18/7-8 and Atharva Veda 18.3.2

Rig Veda 10/18/7-8

Let these women, noble wives living with their husbands, enter and live in their homes, and let them, decked with jewels with beauty aids, creams and unguents, free from sorrow and ill health and blest with noble children, move forward high in life.

Rise, O woman, to a new phase of life, your husband is now dead and gone. Come take the hand of this man from among the living who offers to take your hand and maintain you, and live in consort with this other and new husband of yours for a life time.

Atharva Veda 18.3.2

The explanation of the mantra given in Rigveda (10/18/8) is given in Taittireeya Aranyaka (6/1) and Acharya Sayana has given a commentary on it – O woman! Your husband has died, you are sitting near his dead body. Get up and go away from your lifeless husband. Move in the direction of life and strive for life. After your husband's death you may wish to remarry. But first, remember the life you spent with your husband and honor his memory. This proves that the principle of widow remarriage is found in Vedic rituals, but the practice of burning oneself along with the husband is not at all Vedic.

The explanation of the mantra given in Rigveda (10/18/8) is given in Taittireeya Aranyaka (6/1) and Acharya Sayana has given a commentary on it - O woman! Your husband has died, you are sitting near his dead body. Get up and go away from your lifeless husband. Move in the direction of life and strive for life. After your husband's death you may wish to remarry. But first, remember the life you spent with your husband and honor his memory.
This proves that the principle of widow remarriage is found in Vedic rituals, but the practice of burning oneself along with the husband is not at all Vedic.

Atharva Veda 9/5/27-28 prescibes Widow remarriage instead of Sati

जो दक्षिणा से प्रकाशित अज को पंचौदन के रूप में दान करता है, वह पुनर्विवाहिता के साथ समान लोकों में निवास करता है

The woman who having married her former husband loses him (on death) and remarries and thus takes to the other, second, husband, and the husband and wife both submit their immortal souls clad in new existential identity of conjugality to each other and to the Lord divine, they never separate.

The other, second, husband becomes one in life, in the home and in the family with the remarried wife and attains equality of good fortune if he submits his immortal soul of five-fold existence clad in light and generosity to the Lord divine Medhatithi, the most important commentator on Manu Smriti admonishes the practice of Sati in the harshest words comparing it black magic. He calls the practce of Sati as Asastriya and adharma.

There were old commentators who were opposed to the practice of sati. Medhātithi on Manu V. 157 (Kāmam tu &c.) compares this practice to śyenayāga which a man performed by way of black magic to kill his enemy. He says[1479] that though Aṅgiras allowed 'anumaraṇa' it is suicide and is really forbidden to women. Just as the Veda says 'śyenenābhicaran yajet' and yet śyenayāga is not looked upon as dharma, but rather as adharma (vide Śabara on Jaimini I. 1. 2), so, though Aṅgiras speaks of it, it is really adharma; and that a woman who is in a hurry and extremely anxious to secure heaven quickly for herself and her husband might act according to Aṅgiras, still her action is aśāstrīya (not in accordance with the śāstras); besides anvārohaṇa is opposed to the Vedic text 'one should not leave this world before one has finished one's allotted span of life'." The Mit. on Yāj. I. 86 combats these means 'one should not waste one's life for securing heavenly bliss which is fleeting and insignificant as compared with the supreme bliss of Brahma knowledge'. As the woman in anumaraṇa desires only heaven, she is not doing anything contrary to the śruti texts. This is the reasoning of the Mitākṣarā which looks like special pleading. Aparārka p. 111, the Madanapārijāta p. 199, Par. M. II. part I pp. 55–56 follow the reasoning of the Mit. and add that the Vedic text about the allotted span of life is a general rule, while the smṛti about anumaraṇa is a special or exceptional śāstra and so there is no contradiction as the rule applies to all cases outside the excepted one. The Madanapārijāta (p. 200) further explains that the texts about purifying a husband guilty of brāhmaṇa murder are not to be taken literally but only as hyperbolically extolling anvārohaṇa.

The Sm. C. also expressly says that anvārohaṇa,[1480] though recommended by the Viṣṇu Dh. S. (25. 14) and Aṅgiras, is inferior to brahmacarya (leading a celibate life), since the rewards of anvārohaṇa are inferior to those of brahmacarya.

Mahābhārata indicates that even among Kshatriyas, women immolating themselves on their husband's pyre was a very rare exception, rather than the rule- Mahabharat Shanti Parva Adhaya 42 sloka 10

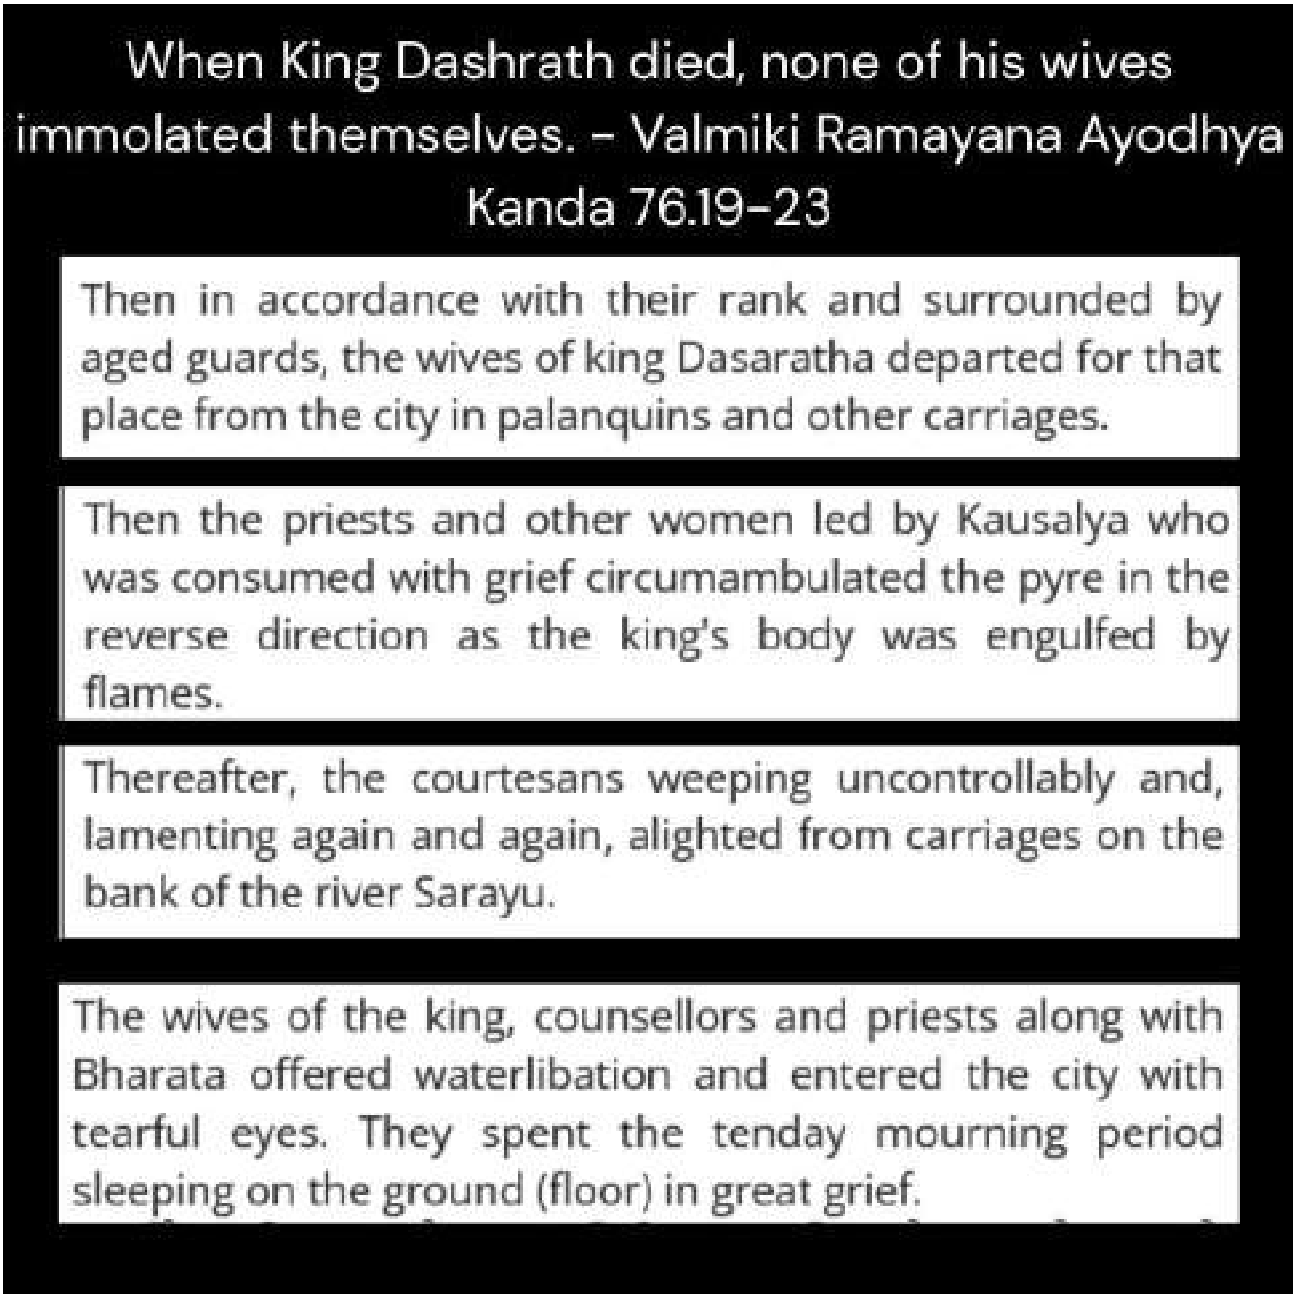
When King Dashrath died, none of his wives immolated themselves. – Valmiki Ramayana Ayodhya Kanda 76.19-23

Then in accordance with their rank and surrounded by aged guards, the wives of king Dasaratha departed for that place from the city in palanquins and other carriages

Then the priests and other women led by Kausalya who was consumed with grief circumambulated the pyre in the reverse direction as the king’s body was engulfed by flames.

Thereafter, the courtesans weeping uncontrollably and, lamenting again and again, alighted from carriages on the bank of the river Sarayu.

The wives of the king, counsellors and priests along with Bharata offered waterlibation and entered the city with tearful eyes. They spent the tenday mourning period sleeping on the ground (floor) in great grief.



From the above evidences it must be clear that whether to commit Sati or Not was the sole choice and decision of the widow . This practice was very rare and uncommon . Morever Higher Scriptures too has discouraged this practice of Sati Pratha large. Colebrooke, who had spent the best part of his life in Bengal and who was a profound Sanskrit scholar, observes in a paper written about 1795 A. D. 'Happily the martyrs of this superstition have never been numerous. It is certain that the instances of the widow's sacrifices are now rare'.[1489] The very fact that there was no disturbance of peace or ebullition of popular feeling or even any great verbal protest from the vast Hindu population (except a petition to the Privy Council) against Bentinck's sweeping measure indicates two things, viz. that the burning of widows was a rare occurrence and that people were not very keen on observing the practice nor had they any very deep-seated convictions about its absolute religious necessity.[1490]

Historical Context of Sati Pratha

Foreign travel writer Pietro Della vale: "Burning of women upon the death of their husband is AT THEIR OWN CHOICE.... indeed few practice it."

writes from the Relation of Onesicritus; but also the chaste Wives of the Thracians, as appears by Julius Solinus. But this burning of Women upon the death of their Husbands is at their own choice to do it or not, and indeed few practice it; but she who does it acquires in the Nation a glorious name of Honour[1] and Holiness. 'Tis most usual among great persons, who prize Reputation at a higher

The fact that women comitted Sati completely VOLUNTARY at their own choice is established by many eye witness: Deodorus Siculus: He witnessed a sati funeral where he saw 2 wives of a man who were literally fighting for the right to commit sati with their husband.

34 [1] Such rivalry appeared on this occasion. Although the law ordered only one of Ceteus' wives to be cremated with him, both of them appeared at his funeral, contending for the right of dying with him as for a prize of valour. [2] When the generals undertook to decide the matter, the younger wife claimed that the other was pregnant and for that reason could not take advantage of the law; and the elder asserted that more justly should the one who had the precedence in years have precedence in honour, for in all other matters those who are older are regarded as having great precedence over the younger in respect and honour. [3] The generals, ascertaining

British eye witness themselves mentioned in their records, that relatives often discouraged women to commit sati. But in most cases its the women who is so adamant that they are helpless. Here is an example. Wright records of one such instance where a woman threatened her relatives and nearby people who tried to stop her from committing sati.

Wright records that the widow 'continually made use of the expression: "All your remonstrances are perfectly unavailing; it is now necessary for me to become suttee; if you persist in your remonstrances I will curse you."

The relatives, supposedly fearing the legendary curse of the sati, are said to have complied with her wishes and built the pyre. Her parting words were reported to have been, "Set fire to the pile; if you refuse to do so, I will curse you".

British Magistrate W. Wright was an eyewitness to a Sati, where not only the girl's parents but even parents in-laws tried to dissuade her to commit Sati. She threatened her relatives & forcefully committed Sati 9 years after her husband's death.

nine years after her husband's death, to commit sati. She resolved to die through the rite of anoomarana with a stringed instrument that had belonged to her husband. According to Wright, her parents, in-laws and police officers sought in vain to dissuade her. Wright records that the widow 'continually made use of the expression: "All your remonstrances are perfectly unavailing; it is now necessary for me to become suttee; if you persist in your remonstrances I will curse you."'[41] The relatives, supposedly fearing the legendary curse of the sati, are said to have complied with her wishes and built the pyre. Her parting words were reported to have been, "Set fire to the pile; if you refuse to do so, I will curse you".'[42] Colonial officials systematically ignored such evidence of the widows as subjects

The above example suggests three points: 1. The eye witness who recorded the incident & testimony of the Sati isn't Hindu to whitewash a crime of murder. 2. The witness recorded not only her own parents but parents in law as well trying to dissuade her which suggests she couldn't be brainwashed by any of them. 3. She committed Sati after 9 years of her husband's death implying nobody forced her when her husband actually died.

Greek historian Herodotus observed how wives fight amongst themselves to commit Sati and relies on their husband's friend to confirm who should be chosen. The wives used to feel deeply dishonoured, & take it sorely to heart if they aren't chosen to be Sati.

Herodotus 5.5:

Those who dwell above the Crestonaeans have a custom of their own: each man having many wives, at his death there is great rivalry among his wives, and eager contention on their friends' part, to prove which wife was best loved by her husband; and she to whom the honour is adjudged is praised by men and women, and then slain over the tomb by her nearest of kin, and after the slaying she is buried with the husband. The rest of the Τὸ αὐτὸ καὶ Ἡρόδοτος ἐν πέμπτῃ ἱστοριῶν παρὰ Σκυθῶν τῶν ὕπερθεν Κρηστοναίων γίγνεσθαι λέγει. The sentence summing up the account of Nicolaus of Damascus draws readers' attention to book 5 of Herodotus' Historiae, wrongly comparing Indian widows with the Scythian ones. This mistake is easy to explain as a confusion of two Herodotean passages concerning women's deaths after their husbands' deaths. Apart from the account about the Thracians, Herodotus speaks of the custom of slaughtering and burying one of the concubines of the dead kings among the Scythians (4.71).

[46] Among Greek and Roman accounts of Indian satī the motif of widows' competition was repeated by Propertius (3.13.15-24; cf. n. 42 above), Valerius Maximus (2.6.14; 1st cent. AD), Plutarch (Mor. 499; before 50-after 120), Aelian (VH 7.18; ca. 175-ca. 235), Solinus (52.30; 3rd cent.) and Servius (Comment. in Verg. Aen. 5.95; 4th cent.).

[47] The similarity of the descriptions by Diodorus and by Herodotus was mentioned by Winternitz 1920, 71 (who, however, noticed also an Indian colour in the depiction of the competition of both wives of Ceteus, referring to MBh. 1.116); Thompson 1928, 21; Hornblower 1981, 151 n. 200. Heckel and Yardley (1981, 306, 308, 310) reject the hypothesis of Herodotus' influence on Greek and Latin sources about satī including Diodorus' account. They are followed by Garzilli (1997, 215, 341). For an opposite view, see Fisch 2006, 218-20 who emphasizes the probability of Herodotus' impact on Diodorus' account (in 19.33).

wives take this sorely to heart, deeming themselves deeply dishonoured (trans. by A.D. Godley).[48]

Portuguese writer Duarte Barbosa witnessed that when a king would die, his wives will be in haste to immolate themselves, they would compete amongst themselves who will die first.

He even wrote that not just women, many men used to commit Sati as well.

well. So great is the haste of those who wish to burn themselves first, that it is something wonderful, and many men, confidants of the king, burn themselves with him. These people eat meat, fish, and all other viands, only cow is forbidden them by their creed. There is another sect of Gentiles who are called Bramans, who are priests and directors of the houses of prayer. These do not eat meat or fish, they marry only one wife, and if she dies they do not marry again: their children inherit their property. They Akhbar Sin Wa'L Hind (AD 851) is also one of the earliest foreign mentions of Sati and they say that women themselves immolated voluntarily & if they do not wish they didn't.

3. SATI IN CEYLON, THE AKHBAR AL –SIN WA'L – HIND, COMPILED IN AD 851 (AHMAD 1989: 53)

Sometimes when a king is cremated, his wife enters the fire and burns herself along with him, but if they do not wish, they do not do so.

Muruj-Al-Zehab, written by Al-Masudi an ancient book describes Sati was voluntary practice not forced.

408 EL-MAS'ÚDÍ'S MEADOWS OF GOLD,

the dead with their cattle, utensils, arms, and ornaments. When a man dies, his wife is burnt alive with him; but, when the wife dies, her husband is not burnt. If a bachelor dies, he is married after his death. Women are glad to be burnt; for they cannot enter into paradise by themselves. This usage prevails also among the Hindus, as we have said. But the Hindus never burn a woman with her husband, unless it is her own wish.

It is often noted that British abolished Sati to help Hindu woman from so called evil Hindootva. The truth is in pre British India, widows were supported through revenue free pand grants from local Indian rulers. When East India company took over, they stopped any form of grants to widows to maximise their own revenue & fill up their own pockets. Many helpless widows started committing Sati, years after their husband's death which prompted British to Ban sati.

Such an understanding has been deeply problematized by the recent work of Indrani Chatterjee. She has documented the fact that, in pre-British India, the widows were supported through revenue-free land grants by the local rulers, Hindu or Muslim. When the East India Company took over the function of collecting revenue, it started cancelling all eleemosynary allotments of this kind to maximize its profits. The widows then committed Sati as a form of cultural protest, to which the British were as culturally insensitive as the Chinese are to Tibetan self-immolations. The fact that many of the widows were committing Sati in their middle age, many years after the passing away of their husbands, seems to confirm this. Therefore, the British finally decided to ban it. If these facts are kept in mind, then the abolition of Sati, far from being a humanitarian act, begins to look more and more like a cover-up of commercial rapacity.[10]

A different light on the practice of sati is also cast by analyzing the ages of its victims. Whereas many studies have tended to emphasize the young ages of widows in any given year, almost half of them were 50 and over, and two-thirds 40 years and more (see Table 4). In 1818, out of 839 cases 123, or 14.6 percent, were 70 and over; but only 98, or 11.6 percent, aged 25 or under. The overwhelming majority, as in other years, were 40 years and more. As the official report concluded in presenting these statistics, "a great proportion of these acts of self-devotion have not taken place in youth, or even in the vigor of age; but a period when life, in the common course of nature, must have been near its close."[77]

The 1829 Sati Abolishment Act itself noted : 1. Sati was not enjoined by Hindu religion as a duty. 2. Practice of Sati is almost non existent 3. Hindus themselves consider the practice of Sati unlawful & wicked . Sati was also voluntary.

The Bengal Sati Regulation, 1829

(Bengal Regulation No. 17 of 1829)

[Passed by the Governor-General-in-Council on the 4th December, 1829]

A Regulation for declaring the practice of sati, or of burning or burying alive the widows of Hindus illegal, and punishable by the Criminal Courts.

The practice of sati, or of burning or burying alive the widows of Hindus is revolting to the feelings of human nature; it is nowhere enjoined by the religion of the Hindus as an imperative duty; on the contrary, a life of purity and retirement on the part of the widow is more especially and preferably inculcated and by a vast majority of that people throughout India the practice is not kept up nor observed: in some extensive District it does not exist; in those in which it has been most frequent it is notorious that, in many instances, acts of atrocity have been perpetrated which have been shocking to the Hindu themselves, and in their eyes unlawful and wicked.

The measures hitherto adopted to discourage and prevent such acts have failed of success, and the Governor-General-in-Council is deeply impressed with the conviction that the abuses in question cannot be effectually put an end to without abolishing the practice altogether.

SATI WAS A RARE AND VOLUNTARY ACT. Since many people are dumb here's a caveat: I DO NOT SUPPORT SATI. The purpose of this article isnt to support the practice but to correct a narrative established by colonial history . And i am not saying this out of fear of backlash. But because Sati isn't APPROVED BY VEDAS. In fact most of our sages forbade us from this practice. Medhatithi called the practice of Sati Adharma. A few sages who permitted it, didn't anywhere command it should be forced on any woman, and also suggested widowhood.

There is no Vedic passage which can be cited as incontrovertibly referring to widow-burning as then current, nor is there any mantra which could be said to have been repeated in very ancient times[1462] at such burning nor do the ancient gṛhya-sūtras contain any direction prescribing the procedure of widow burning. It therefore appears probable that the practice arose

The authors of the Dharmasutras and writers of the early Smritis, while detailing the duties of wives and widows, did not exalt sati. Manu did not prescribe the rite. The Manu Smriti (placed by G. Buhler between the second century BC and the second century AD), stated that women are to be regarded as way of black magic to kill his enemy. He says[1479] that though Aṅgiras allowed 'anumaraṇa' it is suicide and is really forbidden to women. Just as the Veda says 'śyenenābhicaran yajet' and yet śyenayāga is not looked upon as dharma, but rather as adharma (vide Śabara on Jaimini I. 1. 2), so, though Aṅgiras speaks of it, it is really adharma; and that a woman who is in a hurry and extremely anxious to secure heaven quickly for herself and her husband might act according to Aṅgiras, still her action is aśāstrīya (not in accordance with the śāstras); besides anvārohaṇa is opposed to the Vedic text 'one should not leave this world before one has finished one's allotted span of life'." The Mit. on Yāj. I. 86 combats these means 'one should not waste one's life for securing heavenly bliss which is fleeting and insignificant as compared with the supreme bliss of Brahma knowledge'. As the woman in anumaraṇa desires only heaven, she is not doing anything contrary to the śruti texts. This is the reasoning of the Mitākṣarā which looks like special pleading. Aparārka p. 111, the Madanapārijāta p. 199, Par. M. II. part I pp. 55–56 follow the reasoning of the Mit. and add that the Vedic text about the allotted span of life is a general rule, while the smṛti about anumaraṇa is a special or exceptional śāstra and so there is no contradiction as the rule applies to all cases outside the excepted one. The Madanapārijāta (p. 200) further explains that the texts about purifying a husband guilty of brāhmaṇa murder are not to be taken literally but only as hyperbolically extolling anvārohaṇa.

Further Shruti which is the highest authority-Vyasa Smriti 1.4 discourage this practice of Sati Pratha - Rig Veda 10/18/7-8 and Atharva Veda 18.3.2

Meaning

Let these women, noble wives living with their husbands, enter and live in their homes, and let them, decked with jewels with beauty aids, creams and unguents, free from sorrow and ill health and blest with noble children, move forward high in life.

Meaning

Rise, O woman, to a new phase of life, your husband is now dead and gone. Come take the hand of this man from among the living who offers to take your hand and maintain you, and live in consort with this other and new husband of yours for a life time.

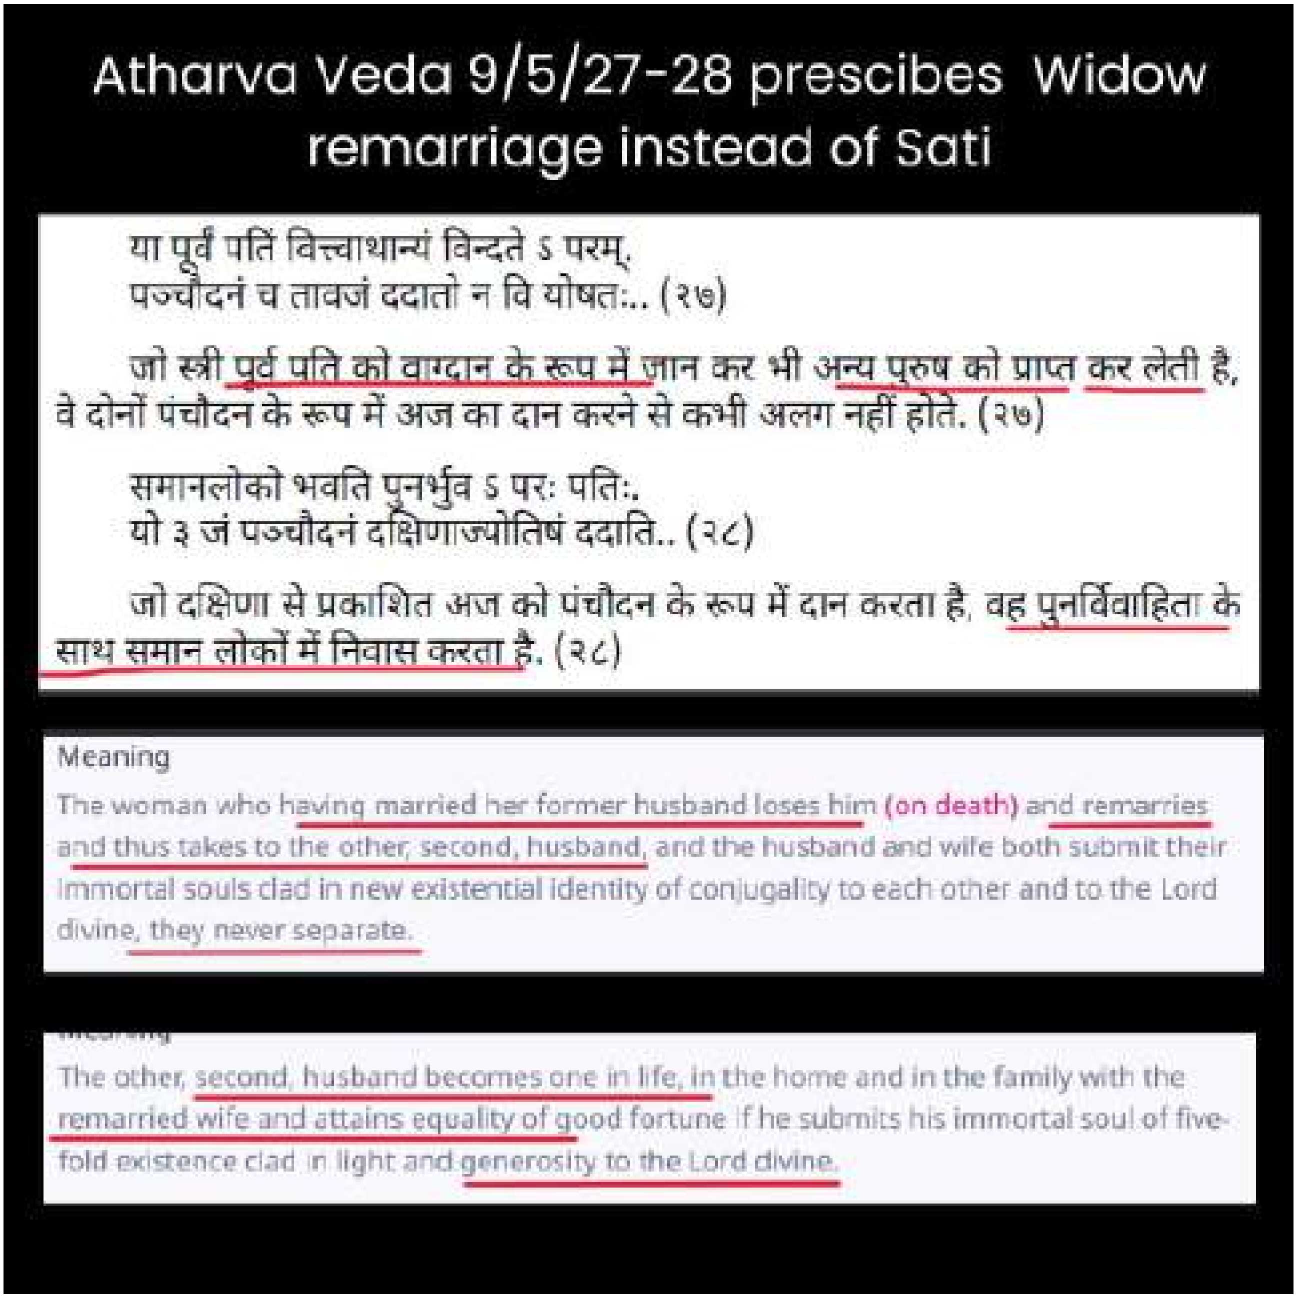
सुवर्णं हस्तादाददाना मृतस्य श्रियै ब्रह्म-

The explanation of the mantra given in Rigveda (10/18/8) is given in Taittireeya Aranyaka (6/1) and Acharya Sayana has given a commentary on it - O woman! Your husband has died, you are sitting near his dead body. Get up and go away from your lifeless husband. Move in the direction of life and strive for life. After your husband's death you may wish to remarry. But first, remember the life you spent with your husband and honor his memory.

This proves that the principle of widow remarriage is found in Vedic rituals, but the practice of burning oneself along with the husband is not at all Vedic.



Now for those Dead corpse Worshipping Christian Missionaries crying and spreading misinformation on Sati Pratha Christianity enabled 1000s of women to be brutally molested, burned alive, mutilate their breasts & genitalia with false accusations of witchcraft & justifying it with bible.

We all have heard how witches were burned. But the process was even more brutal than u can imagine. It literally gave me shivers to read and write it down here. Once a woman was blamed of witchcraft it was hard to escape conviction.

The process of persecuting witches was more horrifying than we can imagine. Women were stripped naked, their body hair were shaved and entire naked body was examined for satan’s imprint by Christian inquisitors.

The process of formally persecuting witches followed the harshest inquisitional procedure. Once accused of witchcraft, it was virtually impossible to escape conviction. After cross-examination, the victim's body was examined for the witch's mark. The historian Walter Nigg described the process: ...she was stripped naked and the executioner shaved off all her body hair in order to seek in the hidden places of the body the sign which the devil imprinted on his cohorts. Warts, freckles, and birthmarks were considered certain tokens of amorous relations with Satan.[51]

Warts, freckles or even birth mark was enough to accuse any woman of witchcraft. And if that was not found in any woman's body they were pricked with needles in the eyes to someway establish any woman as a witch.

Should a woman show no sign of a witch's mark, guilt could still be established by methods such as sticking needles in the accused's eyes. In such a case, guilt was confirmed if the inquisitor could find an insensitive spot during the process.[52]

After that these women were forced to confess their guilt by brutal torture. They were tortured so much that the victims accused of witchcraft would gladly confess to escape the tortures of Christian inquisitors.

Confession was then extracted by the hideous methods of torture already developed during earlier phases of the Inquisition. "Loathe they are to confess without torture," wrote King James I in his Daemonologie.[53] A physician serving in witch prisons spoke of women driven half mad:

...by frequent torture... kept in prolonged squalor and darkness of their dungeons... and constantly dragged out to undergo atrocious torment until they would gladly exchange at any moment this most bitter existence for death, are willing to confess whatever crimes are suggested to them rather than to be thrust back into their hideous dungeon amid ever recurring torture.[54]

After confessing their crime that they didn't even commit, women were dragged to be burned in public square. Their tongues were chopped off to prevent them from speaking to public. The level of brutality surpasses every crime the world has ever witnessed.

> Unless the witch died during torture, she was taken to the stake. Since many of the burnings took place in public squares, inquisitors prevented the victims from talking to the crowds by using wooden gags or cutting their tongue out.[55] Unlike a heretic or a Jew who would usually be burnt alive only after they had

Today Christian apologists pretending to act holier than thou wont tell you how common was molestation and mutilation of women under their religion. While torturing women, when the inquisitors used to get aroused they would blame the woman for their arousal & punishment her by mutilating her breast and genitalia with pincers, pliers and red hot iron.

Sexual mutilation of accused witches was not uncommon. With the orthodox understanding that divinity had little or nothing to do with the physical world, sexual desire was perceived to be ungodly. When the men persecuting the accused witches found themselves sexually aroused, they assumed that such desire emanated, not from themselves, but from the woman. They attacked breasts and genitals with pincers, pliers and red-hot irons. Some rules condoned sexual

For people who dont know a pincer typically looks like the picture below. These are the object with which their body used to be mutilated.

Even small children werent spared of such horrific brutality. Children of accused were tortured in such a brutal way to force their parents to accept their crimes they didn't commit. Young children were openly flogged in public while their mothers were openly burned at stake.

The horror of the witch hunts knew no bounds. The Church had never treated the children of persecuted parents with compassion, but its treatment of witches' children was particularly brutal. Children were liable to be prosecuted and tortured for witchcraft: girls, once they were nine and a half, and boys, once they were ten and a half.[58] Younger children were tortured in order to elicit testimony that could be used against their parents.[59] Even the testimony of two-year-old children was considered valid in cases of witchcraft though such testimony was never admissible in other types of trials.[60] A famous French magistrate was known to have regretted his leniency when, instead of having young children accused of witchcraft burned, he had only sentenced them to be flogged while they watched their parents burn.[61]

Many apologists still justify such beastiality by accusing the women of some crime. These women were innocent. Father Cornelius confessed in 1592 that accused women were tortured brutally to make them confess of crimes THEY HAVE NEVER DONE.

In 1592 Father Cornelius Loos wrote:

Wretched creatures are compelled by the severity of the torture to confess things they have never done... and so by the cruel butchery innocent lives are taken; and, by a new alchemy, gold and silver are coined from human blood.[49]

In many parts of Europe trials for witchcraft began exactly as the

This admonishing of witchcraft was done to anybody for political reasons. Literally anybody could be blamed and held accountable for nearly every problem in society.

Witches were held accountable for nearly every problem. Any threat to social uniformity, any questioning of authority, and any act of rebellion could now be attributed to and prosecuted as witchcraft. Not surprisingly, areas of political turmoil and religious strife experienced the most intense witch hunts. Witch-

Christian inquisitors would blame anyone to snatch away their wealth. Once they were punished for the crimes they didn't do, their wealth would be captured by these evil men of the religion.

> uncertain of its future."[7] By adding witchcraft to the crimes it persecuted, however, the Inquisition exposed a whole new group of people from whom to collect money. It took every advantage of this opportunity. The author Barbara Walker notes: Victims were charged for the very ropes that bound them and the wood that burned them. Each procedure of torture carried its fee. After the execution of a wealthy witch, officials usually treated themselves to a banquet at the expense of the victim's estate.[8]

This is the reality of their religion. It isnt mere preaching that converted people to Christianity. It was always brutality. This practice of witchhunt was so brutal that R.H Robbins called it "the shocking nightmare, the foulest crime & the deepest shame of western civilisation"

> The Reformation did not convert the people of Europe to orthodox Christianity through preaching and catechisms alone. It was the 300 year period of witch-hunting from the fifteenth to the eighteenth century, what R.H. Robbins called "the shocking nightmare, the foulest crime and deepest shame of western civilization,"[1] that ensured the European abandonment of the belief in magic. The Church created the elaborate concept of devil worship and then, used the persecution of it to wipe out dissent, subordinate the individual to authoritarian control, and openly denigrate women.

Inquisitors who wrote Malleus Maleficarum "The Hammer of the witches" explained women are more likely to become witch than men. Thus enabling & justifying more crime against women.

woman." The Inquisitors who wrote the Malleus Maleficarum, "The Hammer of the Witches," explained that women are more likely to become witches than men:

> 'Because the female sex is more concerned with things of the flesh than men;' because being

King James I estimated that of those persecuted under the false accusation of witchcraft, 80 to 90 % were women.

King James I estimated that the ratio of women to men who "succumbed" to witchcraft was twenty to one.[12] Of those formally persecuted for witchcraft, between 80 to 90 percent were women.[13]

Response to Vedkabhed and Hinduscript . Refutation of Ejaculating Gods and Rishis in Hinduism

This entire article is a response and rebuttal to the blogs called VedKaBhed and Hinduscript regarding their claims of " Ejaculating Gods and Rishis in Hinduism".

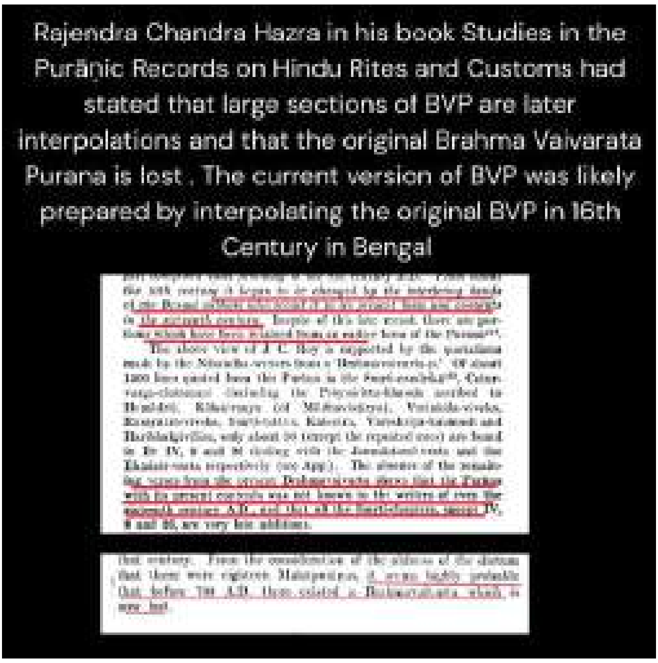
Refutation –

Rajendra Chandra Hazra in his book Studies in the Purāṇic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs had stated that large sections of BVP are later interpolations and that the original Brahma Vaivarata Purana is lost. The current version of BVP was likely prepared by interpolating the original BVP in 16th Century in Bengal.



Archaelogical survey of India prepared a critical edition of Brahma Vaivarat Purana based on the different manuscripts found all over India and prepared a critical edition in which they removed all those interpolated chapters and portions. I am providing the link of Critical edition Brahma Vaivarata Purana Volume 1 and 2 translated by Ram Sharma Acharya QR code provided here

Brahma ejaculates on seeing Sati,

📚Shiva Purana 2.2.19.16-29📚
O sage, while going round the fire, the feet of Sati protruded out of the cloth that covered them. I looked at them. My mind being fflicted by love I stared at the limbs of Sati. O excellent brahmin, I was deluded by Siva's Mäyã. The more I stared at the beautiful limbs of Sati eagerly the more I became thrilled like a love-afflicted man. Staring thus at the chaste daughter of Daksa and being afflicted by the cupid, O sage, I craved to see her face. Since she was bashful in the presence of Siva I could not see her face. She did not show out her face on account of shyness. Then I began to consider proper means whereby I could see the face. Afflicted much by the cupid, I pitched upon the production of airful smoke as the means thereof. Then lord Siva, the supreme God, indulged in many sports, covered his eyes (apparently) afflicted by smoke. Then, O sage, afflicted by the cupid and delighted in the heart of hearts, I lifted her veil and stared into the face of Sati. I looked at the face of Sati many a time. I was helpless in curbing the onset of a sensuous organism. Four drops of my semen virile got displaced and fell on the ground like drops of dew as a result of staring into her face. O sage, then I was stunned into silence. I was surprised. I became suspicious. I covered up the semen drops lest anyone should see them."

📚Shiva Purana 2.3.49.3-11📚
Then according to the worldly convention, Pārvatī and Śiva performed the circumambulation round the fire, O dear. The husband of Pārvatī exhibited a wonderful feat. O celestial sage, listen to that. I shall mention it out of love for you. On that occasion, deluded by Śiva's power of illusion I stared at the feet of the goddess as well as the crescentshaped nails. On seeing them, O celestial sage, I became overwhelmed by passion. My mind was greatly disturbed. Deluded by the cupid I stared at her limbs frequently. Then, immediately after staring at them, my semen dropped on the ground. I, the grandfather, was ashamed by the emission of my semen. O sage, I pressed the penis secretly with my feet. O Nārada, on coming to know of it, the great God Śiva became furious. le wanted to kill me immediately because I was overwhelmed by lust. O Nārada, there was great hue and cry everywhere. All the people trembled. Even Viṣṇu, the sustainer of the universe, was terrified. O sage, then Viṣṇu and other gods eulogised Śiva who was blazing furiously and who attempted to kill me.

Pandit Madhavacharya Shastri explained in his Purana Digdarshan Page 421 about Brahma Balakhilya

The real meaning here should be understood as Brahm-Maya or Purusha – Prakriti are Shiva and Parvati respectively . Their marriage celebration and union represents the creation of the universe . Surya Bhagvan [Sun] who is the architect of this creation should be understood here as Brahma . In Vedas Surya Bhagvan[Sun] is undertood as the architect of the creation

1- सूर्य आत्मा जगतस्तस्थुषश्च – Yajur Veda 7/42

2- जापतिः सविता भूत्वा प्रजा असृजत । (Taittriya 1/6/4/1)

That is, Surya is the soul of the movable and immovable world and Prajapati created the people by becoming Surya.

So, at the beginning of the creation, when the union of Purush [Shiva] and Prakriti [Parvati] began to take place, at that time, according to "पद्भ्यां भूमिः (Yajur Veda 31.13), seeing the चरणस्थानीया भूमि of Prakriti [Parvati] , the Tejas of Brahma in the form of the Sun was scattered and the same Tejas got spread in the from of condensed igneous vapor due to the coordination of many divine powers, which even today animates all living beings by transforming into the life-giving element of Oxygen . This is the meaning of the birth of बालखिल्यों in Vedas and Puranas . Current science reveals the only life-giving air as the basis of life and the basis of this oxygenation epends only on sunlight. That is why in both the Vedas and the Puranas, the close relationship of the बालखिल्यों with the Sun has been revealed. Such as- उद्यन्नु खलु वा आदित्यः सर्वाणि भूतानि प्राणयति तस्मादेनं प्राण इत्याचक्षते । (ऐतरेय 5/31] – That is, the Rising Sun gives Prana [Life] to all living beings, hence the Sun is called Prana . It is described in Shatapatha Brahmana that all the Ishtikkas named बालखिल्यों who are worshiped in the Yagya are representations of Prana life itself The main meaning of this narrative is to present the science of life, which has been briefly expressed and explained here

वास्तविक भाव

ब्रह्म-माया अथवा पुरुष और प्रकृति ही यहाँ शिव और गौरी समझने चाहियें। इनका विवाह = ऐक्य = मिथुनीभाव सृष्टि रचना का उपलक्षण है, और इस रचना कार्य के सूत्रधार सूर्य भगवान् को ही यहाँ ब्रह्मा समझना चाहिए। वेदों में सूर्य भगवान् को सृष्टिकार्य का सर्वेश्वर माना है, यथा—

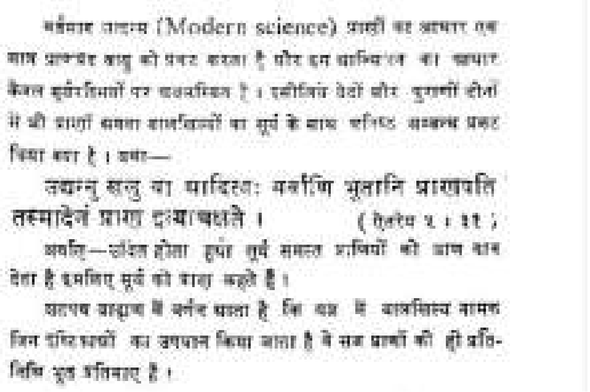
(क) सूर्य आत्मा जगतस्तस्थुषश्च। (यजु० ७।४२)

(ख) प्रजापतिः सविता भूत्वा प्रजा असृजत।

(तैत्तिरीय १।६।४।१)

अर्थात्—(क) सूर्य जंगम और स्थावर जगत् का आत्मा है (ख) प्रजापति ने सूर्य बनकर प्रजा की रचना की।

सो सृष्टि के प्रारम्भ में जब पुरुष और प्रकृति का मिथुनीभाव सम्पन्न होने लगा उस समय 'पद्भ्यां भूमिः' (यजु ३१।१३) के अनुसार प्रकृति की चरणस्थानीय भूमि को देखकर सूर्य रूप ब्रह्मा का तेज छिटक पड़ा और वही तेज अनेक दिव्य शक्तियों के तारतम्य से घनीभूत आग्नेय वाष्प में व्याप्त हो गया, जो कि अभी तक भी प्रकाशक सूर्यरश्मियों द्वारा जीवमात्र को प्राणप्रद तत्त्व (Oxygen) के रूप में परिणत होकर अनुप्राणित करता है। यही बालखिल्यों की उत्पत्ति का तात्पर्य है।



उद्यन्नु खलु वा आदित्यः सर्वाणि भूतानि प्रणयति तस्मादेनं प्राण इत्याचक्षते । (ऐतरेय ५ । ३१ ;)

Rc Hazra in his book Puranic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs page no 120 said that the chapters after chapter 43 in Shristi khanda (including chapter 55) are later interpolations into Padma Purana and was composed likely after the Satanic Islamic Muhammadans established their rule in India . So this chapter is a later interpolation and not part of Padma Purana originally

120 Purāṇic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs [CH

(5) SṚṢṬI-KHAṆḌA.* This Khaṇḍa, which is assigned the fifth place in our edition, is really the first of the set. This position of the Khaṇḍa is betrayed by the mode of its beginning as well as by the sequence and contents of the five Parvans given in chap. 1.

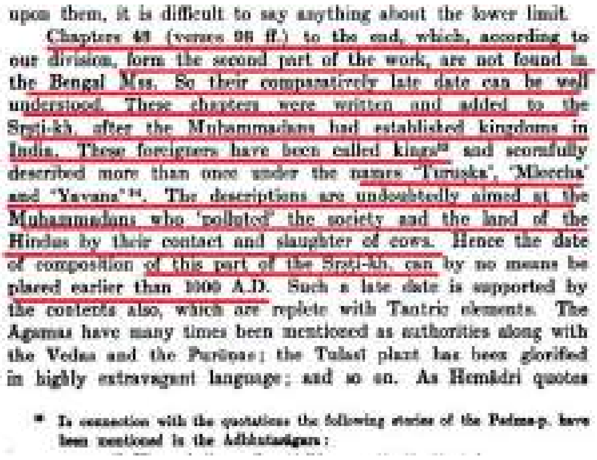
This Khaṇḍa, as we have it now, can be rightly divided into two parts:

(1) chaps. 1-43 (verses 1-97)

and (2) chaps. 43 (verses 98 ff.) to the end.

It will be seen hereinafter that the chapters of the second part were added to the Sṛṣṭi-kh. after the Muhammadans had established kingdoms in India. Hence the chapters of the first part, which are of earlier date, are examined first.

* The Sṛṣṭi-khaṇḍa in Bengal Mss. consists only of 46 (or according to Aufrecht, 45) chapters. The corresponding chapters in a Bengal Ms. (No 1081, D. U. Mss Lib.) of this Khaṇḍa and the Ānss ed. are given below:



upon them, it is difficult to say anything about the lower limit.

Chapters 49 (verses 98 ff.) to the end, which, according to our division, form the second part of the work, are not found in the Bengal Mss. So their comparatively late date can be well understood. These chapters were written and added to the Sṛṣṭi-kh. after the Muhammadans had established kingdoms in India. These foreigners have been called kings[13] and scornfully described more than once under the names 'Turuṣka', 'Mleccha' and 'Yavana'[14]. The descriptions are undoubtedly aimed at the Muhammadans who 'polluted' the society and the land of the Hindus by their contact and slaughter of cows. Hence the date of composition of this part of the Sṛṣṭi-kh. can by no means be placed earlier than 1000 A.D. Such a late date is supported by the contents also, which are replete with Tantric elements. The Āgamas have many times been mentioned as authorities along with the Vedas and the Purāṇas; the Tulasī plant has been glorified in highly extravagant language; and so on. As Hemādri quotes

* In connection with the quotations the following stories of the Padma-p. have been mentioned in the Adbhutasāgara:

Even Geeta Press Gorakhpur padma Purana has only 49 Chapters and no 55th chapter exists

Brahma discharged his semen on seeing Rati with lust,

📚Brahma Viavarta Purana Brahma Khanda 4.10-13📚
Both of them bowed in reverence to lord Krishna and thereafter they took their seats over the gem-studded thrones. Kamadeva carried a bow of flowers and the arrows which were known as Marana, Stambhana, Jrmbhana, Soçana and Unmadana. In order to test the effectiveness of his arrows, Kamadeva shot all the five arrows at the same time. As a result of this all the people became passionate. Finding Rati there, the Semen of Brahmä fell but Brahma, the best of the vogis, concealed the same with his costumes out of shame

Refutation-

Brahma Viavarta Purana Brahma Khanda 4.10-13 The name of this chapter is ४. सृष्टि निरूपणम् २ meaning the creation of Universe from God's seed . So even a dumb person can understand this talks about creation of Universe from Seed of God

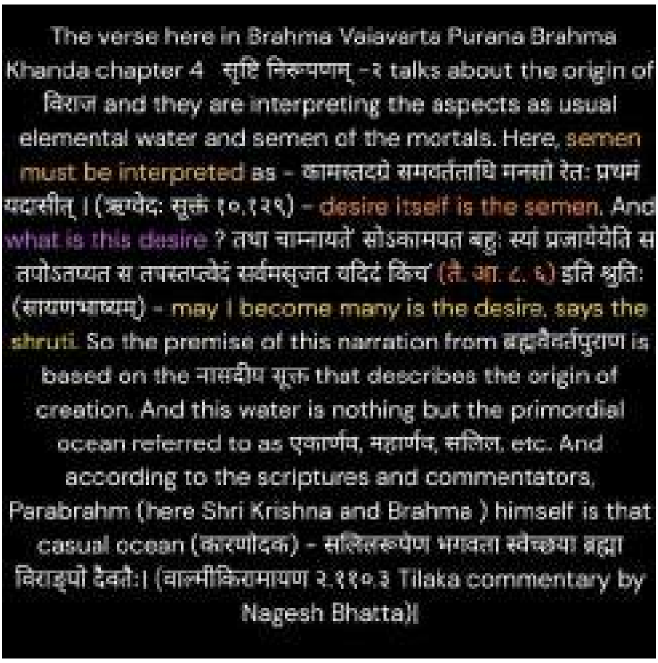
The verse here in Brahma Vaiavarta Purana Brahma Khanda chapter 4 सृष्टि निरूपणम् -२ talks about the origin of विराज and they are interpreting the aspects as usual elemental water and semen of the mortals. Here, semen must be interpreted as – कामस्तदग्रे समवर्तताधि मनसो रेतः प्रथमं यदासीत् । (ऋग्वेदः सूक्तं १०.१२९) – desire itself is the semen. And what is this desire ? तथा चाम्नायते' सोऽकामयत बहुः स्यां प्रजायेयेति स तपोऽतप्यत स तपस्तप्त्वेदं सर्वमसृजत यदिदं किंच' (तै. आ. ८. ६) इति श्रुतिः (सायणभाष्यम्) – may I become many is the desire, says the shruti. So the premise of this narration from ब्रह्मवैवर्तपुराण is based on the नासदीय सूक्त that describes the origin of creation. And this water is nothing but the primordial ocean referred to as एकार्णव, महार्णव, सलिल, etc. And according to the scriptures and commentators,

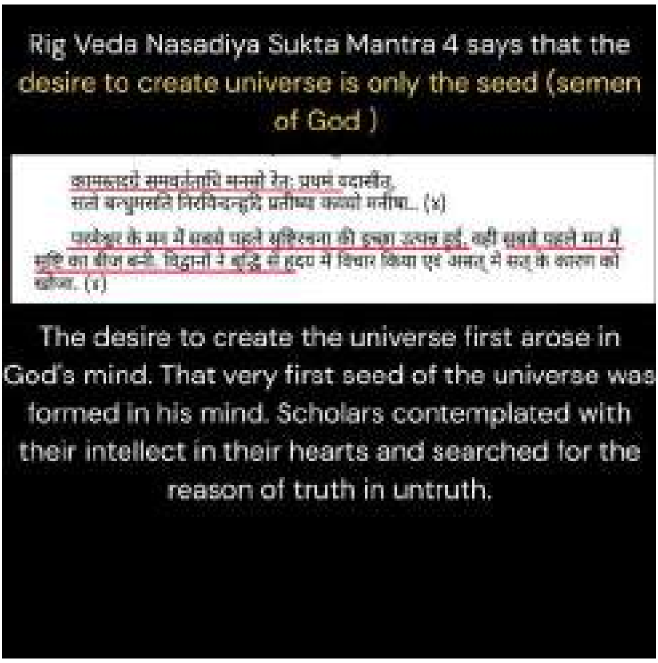
Parabrahm (here Shri Krishna and Brahma) himself is that casual ocean (कारणोदक) – सलिलरूपेण भगवता स्वेच्छया ब्रह्मा विराङ्पो दैवतैः। (वाल्मीकिरामायण २.११०.३ Tilaka commentary by Nagesh Bhatta)I



Rig Veda Nasadiya Sukta Mantra 4 says that the desire to create universe is only the seed (semen of God)

परमेश्वर के मन में सबसे पहले सृष्टिरचना की इच्छा उत्पन्न हुई. वही सबसे पहले मन में सृष्टि का बीज बनी. विद्वानों ने बुद्धि से हृदय में विचार किया एवं असत् में सत् के कारण को खोजा. (४)

The desire to create the universe first arose in God's mind. That very first seed of the universe was formed in his mind. Scholars contemplated with their intellect in their hearts and searched for the reason of truth in untruth.



Acharya Sayana explained in his commentary on Rlg Veda 10.129.4 as

ननूक्तरीत्या यदीश्वरस्य पर्यालोचनं जगतः पुनरुत्पत्तौ कारणं तदेव किंनिबन्धनमित्यत आह कामस्तदग्र इति । "अग्रे अस्य विकारजातस्य सृष्टेः प्रागवस्थायां परमेश्वरस्य मनसि "कामः "समवर्तत सम्यगजायत । सिसृक्षा जातेत्यर्थः । ईश्वरस्य सिसृक्षा वा किंहेतुकेत्यत आह मनस इति । "मनसः अन्तःकरणस्य संबन्धि वासनाशेषेण मायायां विलीनेऽन्तःकरणे समवेतम् । सामान्यापेक्षमेकवचनम् । सर्वप्राण्यन्तःकरणेषु समवेतमित्यर्थः । एतेनात्मनो गुणाधारत्वं प्रत्याख्यातम् । तादृशं "रेतः भाविनः प्रपञ्चस्य बीजभूतं "प्रथमम् अतीते कल्पे प्राणिभिः कृतं पुण्यात्मकं कर्म "यत् यतः कारणात् सृष्टिसमये "आसीत् अभवत् । भूष्णु वर्धिष्ण्वजायत परिपक्वं सत् फलोन्मुखमासीदित्यर्थः । तत्ततो हेतोः फलप्रदस्य सर्वसाक्षिणः कर्माध्यक्षस्य परमेश्वरस्य मनसि सिसृक्षा अजायतेत्यर्थः । तस्यां च जातायां स्रष्टव्यं पर्यालोच्य ततः सर्वं जगत् सृजति । तथा चाम्नायते -' सोऽकामयत बहुः स्यां प्रजायेयेति स तपोऽतप्यत स तपस्तप्त्वेदं सर्वमसृजत यदिदं किंच ' (तै. आ. ८. ६) इति श्रुतिः । आत्मनेत्थमवगमितेऽर्थे विद्वदनुभवमप्यनुग्राहकत्वेन प्रमाणयति सत इति । "सतः सत्त्वेन इदानीमनुभूयमानस्य सर्वस्य जगतः "बन्धुं बन्धकं हेतुभूतं कल्पान्तरे प्राण्यनुष्ठितं कर्मसमूहं "कवयः क्रान्तदर्शना अतीतानागतवर्तमानाभिज्ञा योगिनः "हृदि हृदये निरुद्ध्या "मनीषा मनीषया बुद्ध्या । ' सुपां सुलुक्०' इति तृतीयाया लुक् । "प्रतीष्य विचार्य । ' अन्येषामपि' इति सांहितिको दीर्घः । "असति सद्विलक्षणेऽव्याकृते कारणे "निरविन्दन् निष्कृष्यालभन्त । विविच्याजानन्नित्यर्थः ।।

Now, if according to the Nānūkta (interpretive method), we consider that the will or contemplation (paryālocanam) of the Lord (Īśvara) is the cause of the creation of the world, then one might ask: "What is the basis or cause of that will?" To answer this, it is said: "Kāmaḥ tad agre" —
"Desire existed in the beginning."

That is, before the manifestation of this entire world of modifications (vikāra-jāta), in the primordial state (prāg-avasthā), desire (kāmaḥ) arose in the mind (manas) of the Supreme Lord (Parameśvara). It means: the urge to create (sṛṣṭi-kāmanā) was born in Him.

Now, one might question: "What was the cause of this creative urge in the Lord?"
To this, it is answered: "From the mind" (manasaḥ).

That is, from the internal faculty (antaḥkaraṇa) — in which the latent impressions (vāsanās) were merged within Māyā — the mind took form. The word is singular (manasaḥ), though it refers to all minds collectively, indicating the general principle. Thus, it means that desire arose in the universal mind, merged in Māyā, before manifestation.

By this, the idea that the Ātman (Self) is the substratum of qualities (guṇas) is refuted.

Such a "desire" (kāmaḥ) becomes the seed (bīja) of the future projection of the universe — it is based upon the puṇya (virtuous) actions performed by beings in a previous cosmic cycle (kalpa). That karma (yat) becomes the cause (kāraṇāt) at the time of creation (sṛṣṭi-samaya).

This karma becomes bhūṣṇu — powerful, and vardhiṣṇu — ever-growing; that is, it becomes ripe and ready to bear fruit.

Therefore, due to this cause — the karmic impressions — the Lord (karma-adhyakṣaḥ, the supervisor of karma, and sarva-sākṣī, the witness of all) develops the desire to create. In His mind, the will to manifest arises.

Having formed this intention (sṛṣṭikāmanā), He contemplates on what to create — and then creates the entire universe.

This is also confirmed in the scripture (āmnāya):

"So'kāmayata – bahu syām prajāyeyeti. Sa tapo'tapyata, sa tapas taptvā idaṁ sarvam asṛjata yad idaṁ kiñca"
(Taittirīya Āraṇyaka 8.6)
— "He desired: 'May I become many, may I be born.' He performed tapas (austerity), and having done so, He created all this — whatever exists."

Having thus understood this process, it is further supported by the experience of the wise (vidvat-anubhava), which acts as a further means of valid knowledge (pramāṇa) due to its grace (anugrahakatva).

Now, this entire world (jagat) — experienced now (idānīm anubhūyamānasya) — originates from sat (Being), and the wise seers (kavayaḥ) who are knowers of the three times (past, present, future) and who possess deep yogic insight (krānta-darśanāḥ) — they recognize in their hearts (hṛdi) by concentrated intellect (manīṣayā), that:

The bond or cause (bandhuḥ) of this current world is the collection of karmas performed by beings in previous cycles — karmas that remain even when the subtle cause (avyākṛta) — the unmanifest — exists in a dormant (asat) state distinct from the manifest (sat).

Thus, they discover (niravindan) — that is, extract and realize — the cause by deliberation (pratīṣya), by internal discrimination.

The term "asati sad-vilakṣaṇe avyākṛte kāraṇe niravindan" — means: "In the unmanifest cause (avyākṛta), which is distinct from the manifest (sat), they discern the source."

Brahma ejaculated upon gazing nymphs with well built and erotic bodies,

📚Brahma Viavarta Purana Krishna Janma Khanda 131.14-19📚
Looking at their well built body, the flesh, smiling faces and the pelvic region, Brahma was infested with passion. O Brahmana, Brahma could not control himself and his emen fell. Brahma feeling ashamed hid it in a cloth and after the music was over, Brahma getting infatuated with passion took out the cloth and threw it out in the ocean. Thereafter, a divine immense lustre, emerged out of the water and sat in the lap of Brahma, who was feeling ashamed seated in the court of Visnu. In the meantime, getting angry Varuna came out of the water and bowing in reverence to the gods he tried to take away the boy with him. The boy on the other hand started crying and caught hold of Brahma. But Brahma could not speak anything getting ashamed."

Brahma discharged his semen on seeing the toe of Parvati!,

📚Brahma Purana 4.3.17-22📚
During the course of touching the slab, Siva urged by Visnu, touched the toe of the right foot of the goddess with his hand. Performing the sacrifice there near Siva, I saw her. My semen got ejaculated due to my evil mind on seeing the toe. In the entire three worlds, who is not deceived by Cupid? Defiled and ashamed, I scattered the ejaculated semen in small droplets. From the minute particles of my semen the Valakhi- lyas" were born. Then there was a great commotion caused by Devas. Overwhelmed by shame, I stood up from my seat and started. Even as Devas watched silently, O Nárada, I went ahead. On seeing me go, Mahâdeva spoke to Nandin:

Siva said: Call Brahma here. I shall make him free from sin.

The Gautami-māhātmya (chaps. 70-175), which was certainly composed by somebody living about the river Godāvarī, is a distinct 'work' (purāṇam) by itself. It is called a 'highly meritorious Purāṇa' declared by Brahmā (cf. Br 175, 78 and 83). The place which it occupies in the Brahma-p. was not meant for it, because it divides the chapters on Puruṣottamakṣetra-māhātmya. The way in which chap. 176 opens, shows that it immediately followed chap. 69. Moreover, in chap. 176 there is no hint from which we may conclude that the Māhātmya was there. In Br 176, 2 the sages refer to Bhāratavarṣa (chap. 27) and Puruṣottama-kṣetra, of which, they say, Vyāsa told them elaborately, but they do not mention the Gautami-māhātmya which also precedes chap. 176 in our edition. So, it is clear that the Māhātmya was not originally there. In the Venk. ed. it is placed at the end. This Māhātmya was attached to the Brahma-p. later than the chapters on Orissa, for the Nāradīya-p. (I, 92), which gives the contents of the present with a discussion of Sāṃkhya and Yoga (234–245).

The Gautamīmāhātmya, also called Godāvarīmāhātmya, of which there exist several separate manuscripts and which has also been separately edited, calls itself a purāṇa, and must originally have been a distinct book. It interrupts the section on Puruṣottamakṣetra, and has been inserted exactly in the middle of the Brahma. It describes the sacred places along the Godāvarī river.

ऋषियों ने पूछा- 'हे सत्तम! पूर्वकाल में वे सप्तर्षिगण किस प्रकार मानसिक संकल्प से उत्पन्न हुए ? और किस प्रकार ब्रह्मा के पुत्र माने गये इस वृत्तान्त को हमें बतलाइये । ऋषियों की ऐसी बातें सुनकर पुराणों के विशेषज्ञ महातेजस्वी सूत ने उस शुभ कथा को बतलाया ।। १५ ।।

The sages asked, "O best one! In ancient times, how did those Seven Sages (Saptarṣis) come into being through mental resolve, and in what manner were they regarded as the sons of Brahmā? Please tell us this account." Hearing the words of the sages, the highly radiant Sūta, an expert in the Purāṇas, narrated that auspicious story. (15)

किस प्रकार स्वायंभुव मन्वन्तर में वे सप्तर्षिगण सिद्धि को प्राप्त हुए और फिर वैवस्वत मन्वन्तर में महादेव के शाप से अपनी सिद्धिदात्री तपस्या से च्युत हुए और मर्त्यलोक में आकर उत्पन्न हुए – यह मैं कहता हूँ। ये सप्तर्षिगण जनलोक में एक बार जन्म लेते हैं। जनलोक में आकर उन महाभाग्यशाली सप्तर्षियों ने आपस में यह सलाह की और एक-दूसरे से कहा कि वरुण यज्ञ के समाप्त हो जाने पर चाक्षुष मन्वन्तर में हम सभी पितामह ब्रह्मा जी के आत्मज होंगे, उस समय पुनः हमारा कल्याण होगा ।। १६-१९ ॥

त्रायंभुव मन्वन्तर में सत्य आचरण के लिए वे महर्षिगण शिव

द्वारा अभिशप्त किये गये थे और पुनः जन्म धारणकर जनलोक से स्वर्गलोक को गये थे। देव के महान् यज्ञ में वरुण का शरीर धारण कर सन्तानोत्पत्ति की कामना से अपने वीर्य को अग्नि में हवन करते समय ब्रह्मा से ऋषियों का द्वितीय बार प्रादुर्भाव हुआ यह हम लोगों ने सुना है। भृगु, अङ्गिरा, मरीचि, पुलस्त्य, पुलह, क्रतु, अत्रि और वसिष्ठ – ये आठ ब्रह्मा के पुत्र हैं। २०-२२ ॥

I shall now tell you how, in the Svāyambhuva Manvantara, those Seven Sages attained perfection, and then, in the Vaivasvata Manvantara, by the curse of Mahādeva, were deprived of their perfection-granting austerities, descended to the mortal world, and were born again. These Seven Sages take birth once in the world of Jana-loka.

Coming to Jana-loka, those greatly fortunate Saptarṣis consulted among themselves and said to one another:
"After the completion of Varuṇa's sacrifice, in the Cākṣuṣa Manvantara, we shall all be the self-born sons of Grandfather Brahmā. At that time, our welfare will again be secured." (16–19)

In the Svāyambhuva Manvantara, for upholding righteous conduct, those great sages were cursed by Śiva, and after taking birth again, went from Jana-loka to Svarga-loka. During the great sacrifice of the gods, when assuming the form of Varuṇa and desirous of offspring, they offered their seed into the fire as an oblation—at that time, the sages had their second manifestation from Brahmā. This we have heard.

Bhṛgu, Aṅgiras, Marīci, Pulastya, Pulaha, Kratu, Atri, and Vasiṣṭha—these eight are the sons of Brahmā. (20–22)

वरुण के उस विशाल यज्ञ में सभी देवता सम्मिलित हुए थे, यज्ञ के सभी अंग एवं वषट्कार मूर्ति धारण कर उपस्थित थे । सहस्रों साम एवं यजुर्वेद के मूर्त स्वरूप थे, पदक्रम से विभूषित ऋग्वेद भी वहाँ पर मूर्तमान था । ओंकार रूप मुख से उज्ज्वल, यज्ञ कार्य में प्रयुक्त होनेवाले सूक्त, ब्राह्मण एवं मन्त्र भाग से संयुक्त वृत्त से संबलित यजुर्वेद वहाँ अति शोभा पा रहा थे। सभी गेय पदों को पुरःसर कर विश्वावसु आदि गन्धों के साथ वृत्त से संवलित सामवेद अपने सभी उपकरणों से संयुक्त शोभित हो रहा थे ॥ २३-२६ ॥

अतिघोर कृत्या (हत्या) आदि विधियों से तथा प्रत्यङ्गिरस आदि आभिचारिक प्रयोगों से युक्त होकर एक ही सिर में शरीर धारणकर उपस्थित था। इन सबों के अतिरिक्त लक्षण, स्वर, स्तोभ, निरुक्त, स्वरों की भक्ति आश्रयस्वरूप वषट्कार, निग्रह, ग्रह आदि भी उपस्थित थे। दीप्ता, दीप्त, इला, देवी, सभी दिशाएँ, विदिशाएँ, दिक्पालगण, देवकन्याएँ, देवपत्नियाँ, मातायें तथा आयु- ये सब भी स्वरूप धारण कर वरुण का रूप धारण करने वाले देव के अग्नि मुख में हवन करते समय उपस्थित रहे ।। २७-२९ ॥

स्वयंभू ब्रह्म जी का वीर्य पृथ्वी पर स्खलित हो गया। ब्रह्मर्षि के भाव से प्रभावित निश्चित विधान के कारण पितामह ने पृथ्वी पर स्खलित अपने वीर्य को घृत की भाँति खुवा पर रखकर मन्त्रों का विधिवत् उच्चारणकर हवन कर दिया। प्रजापति ने इस प्रकार अनेक जीव समूहों की सृष्टि की लोक में परम तेजोमय, किन्तु पृथ्वी पर गिर पड़ने के कारण कुछ क्षीण तेजवाले उस वीर्य से सत्त्वगुण, रजोगुण एवं तमोगुणमय सृष्टि उत्पन्न हुई। इन उपर्युक्त तीनों गुणों से सम्पन्न वह तेज आकाशमण्डल में देदीप्यमान हुआ । तमोगुणमय तेजस्विता के कारण सभी जीवसमूह उत्पन्न हुए ।। ३१-३४ ।।

जिस समय ब्रह्मा ने घृत के पात्र में अपने वीर्य को लेकर अग्नि में हवन किया उस समय उनके कर्मज पुत्रों की उत्पत्ति हुई । अग्नि में वीर्य के हवन कर देने पर महर्षियों का प्रादुर्भाव हुआ। सातों ऋषियों के शरीर उज्ज्वल एवं देदीप्यमान थे, तथा बालकों के सभी गुण उनमें पाये जाते थे। पहली बार अग्नि में ीर्य के हवन करने पर लपटों से कवि (भृगु) निकले। इस प्रकार ज्वाला का भेदनकर निकलते हुए कवि को देखकर

हिरण्यगर्भब्रह्मा ने कहा, यतः अग्नि ज्वाला से प्रकट होते समय आपने 'भृगु' इस प्रकार का उच्चारण किया है, अतः उनका नाम भी
भृगु हुआ ॥ ३५-३७ ॥
इस प्रकार अग्नि ज्वाला का भेदनकर प्रादुर्भूत होनेवाले उस ब्रह्मर्षि को देखकर महादेव ने कहा- प्रभो ! पुत्र प्राप्ति की कामना से मैं दीक्षा ग्रहण कर इस यज्ञ को कर रहा था, अतः यह ब्रह्मर्षि मेरा पुत्र हो । जब भृगु मेरा ही पुत्र हो-ऐसा शिव जी ने प्रकट किया ।। ३८ ॥

In that great sacrifice of Varuṇa, all the gods were assembled. All the components of the sacrifice and the deity embodying the exclamation vaṣaṭ were present there in embodied form. There were thousands of personified forms of the Sāma and Yajur Vedas, and the Ṛgveda, adorned with the arrangement of padakrama, was also manifest there.

The Yajurveda, with its mouth radiant in the form of the sacred syllable "Oṁ," combined with hymns (sūktas), brāhmaṇas, and mantra sections used in sacrificial rites, and enriched with metrical patterns (vṛtta), shone splendidly. The Sāmaveda, adorned with metrical patterns and accompanied by Viśvāvasu and other Gandharvas, was resplendent, equipped with all its musical instruments and all its chantable verses placed in the forefront. (23–26)

The fierce goddess Kṛtyā (personification of destructive acts such as killing), together with abhichāra rites like Pratyangiras, appeared with a single head and a body, all in embodied form. Along with them were also present the aspects of phonetics (lakṣaṇa), tonal accents (svara), choral fillers (stobha), etymology (nirukta), the vaṣaṭ-call as the refuge of intonation devotion, as well as elements like restraint (nigraha) and grasp (graha). Also present were the shining goddesses Dīptā and Dīptī, the goddess Ilā, the quarters (diśas), the intermediate directions (vidiśas), the guardians of the quarters (dikpālas), divine maidens, wives of the gods, mothers, and the goddess of lifespan (Āyus). All of these, in their respective forms, were present when the deity who had assumed the form of Varuṇa was offering oblations into the fire. (27–29)

The seed of the self-born Brahmā fell to the earth. Influenced by the mood of a Brahmarṣi and by the fixed sacrificial procedure, the Grandfather (Pitāmaha) took his seed, which had fallen on the earth, placed it on the sacrificial ladle (khūvā) as if it were ghee, and, reciting the mantras in the proper manner, offered it into the fire.

From that act, Prajāpati created numerous groups of living beings. From that seed, luminous yet somewhat diminished in radiance because it had fallen on the earth, arose a creation consisting of the three qualities—sattva, rajas, and tamas. That brilliance, possessing these three qualities, shone forth in the heavens. Because of its tāmasika radiance, all the various classes of beings were produced. (31–34)

When Brahmā took his seed in a vessel of ghee and offered it into the fire, his sons born of action (karmaja-putras) came forth. Upon the oblation of the seed into the fire, the great sages appeared. The bodies of the seven sages were bright and radiant, possessing all the attributes of childhood.

At the first oblation of the seed into the fire, the sage Kavi (Bhṛgu) emerged from the flames. Seeing Kavi emerge in this way, breaking through the fire's blaze, Hiraṇyagarbha Brahmā said, "Since you uttered the word 'Bhṛgu' at the moment you appeared from the blaze of fire, therefore your name shall be Bhṛgu." (35–37)

Thus, seeing that Brahmarṣi, who had emerged breaking through the fire's flames, Mahādeva said, "O Lord! I undertook this acrifice, having received the vow, for the sake of obtaining a son. Therefore, let this Brahmarṣi be my son." In this way, Śiva declared that Bhṛgu was his very own son. (38)

तदनन्तर स्वयंभू ने कहा कि-ऐसा ही होगा। तब शिव ने भृगु को अपने पुत्र रूप में स्वीकार किया । इसी कारणवश भृगु गोत्र में उत्पन्न होने वाले वरुण वंशीय कहलाते हैं। वे प्रभु भृगु भगवान् शिव की सन्तान हुए । तदनन्तर भगवान् ब्रह्मा ने पुनः द्वितीय बार वीर्य को यज्ञाग्नि के अंगार के ऊपर आहुति डाला जिससे उन अंगारों पर अङ्गों-प्रत्यङ्गों समेत अङ्गिरा ऋषि प्रादुर्भूत हुए ॥ ३८-४० ॥

ब्रह्मा की इस अभिनव सम्भूति को प्रकट हुआ देख अग्नि ने कहा- ब्रह्मन्! मैंने आपके वीर्य को धारण किया था, अतः यह दूसरा पुत्र मेरा हो। सभा में प्रधान के पद पर समासीन ब्रह्मा ने अग्नि की प्रार्थना का अनुमोदन किया कि ऐसा ही हो। यही कारण है कि अङ्गिरा गोत्र वाले अग्निगोत्रीय भी कहे जाते हैं ऐसा हमने सुना है। तदनन्तर लोकसृष्टिकर्ता ब्रह्मा ने छह बार अग्नि में अपने वीर्य की आहुति दी, जिससे छह ब्राह्मण उत्पन्न हुए ऐसा सुना जाता है। जिससे सर्वप्रथम अग्नि की मरीचियों से मरीचि नामक पुत्र उत्पन्न हुआ । यतः उस क्रतु (यज्ञ) में एक अन्य चौथा पुत्र भी उत्पन्न हुआ अतः उसका नाम क्रतु रखा गया। मैं तृतीय हूँ- ऐसा कहते हुए यतः एक अन्य पाँचवें पुत्र की उत्पत्ति हुई अतः वह अत्रि नाम से प्रसिद्ध हुआ। एक अन्य पुत्र अपने तीक्ष्ण केशों के कारण पुलस्त्य नाम से स्मरण किया गया ।। ४१-४५ ।।

लम्बे कशों के साथ उत्पन्न होने के कारण पुलह नाम प्रसिद्ध हुआ। वसु (अन्नादि सामग्री) के मध्य से उत्पन्न होने के कारण समस्त वसुधा का आश्रयभूत वसुमान् नाम हुआ। तत्त्वों के जाननेवाले ब्रह्मवादी लोग उसे वशिष्ठ नाम से पुकारते है। ये ब्रह्मा के छह मानसिक पुत्र महर्षि कहे गये हैं ।॥ ४६-४७ ।।

ये सब-के-सब लोक की सन्तान वृद्धि करने वाले हैं, और इन्हीं लोगों ने प्रजाओं की वृद्धि की है। इसी कारण ये ब्रह्मा के पुत्र कहे गये हैं। दूसरे पितर नामक लोकविख्यात ऋषिगण भी उत्पन्न हुए। वे लोकप्रसिद्ध सात

Then Svayambhū (Brahmā) said, “So it shall be.” Thereupon Śiva accepted Bhṛgu as his own son. For this reason, those born in the Bhṛgu lineage are called of the Varuṇa line. Thus, Lord Bhṛgu became the son of Lord Śiva.

After that, Lord Brahmā again, for the second time, offered his seed into the embers of the sacrificial fire, from which, upon those embers, the sage Aṅgiras appeared, complete with limbs and body. (38–40)

Seeing this fresh manifestation of Brahmā, Agni said, “O Brahman, I had carried your seed; therefore, let this second son be mine.” Brahmā, seated in the assembly as the chief, approved Agni’s request, saying, “So be it.” For this reason, those of the Aṅgiras lineage are also called of the Agni lineage—thus have we heard.

Then, the Creator of the worlds, Brahmā, offered his seed into the fire six more times, from which six Brāhmaṇas are said to have been born. From the rays (marīci) of the fire, the first-born was the son named Marīci. Because in that sacrifice (kratu) yet another, the fourth son, was produced, he was named Kratu. Saying “I am the third,” and because yet another, the fifth son, was produced, he became famous by the name Atri. Another son, due to his sharp hair, was remembered as Pulastya. (41–45)

Another, born with long hairs, became famous as Pulaha. One, born in the midst of vasu (materials such as food, etc.), and serving as the support of the entire earth (vasudhā), was named Vasumān. The knowers of truth, the Brahmavādins, call him Vasiṣṭha.

These six great sages are said to be the mental sons of Brahmā. (46–47)

All of them were propagators of progeny in the worlds, and it is they who caused the increase of beings. For this reason, they are called sons of Brahmā. Another group of world-renowned sages, known as the Pitṛs ("Forefathers"), was also born

In Vāyu Purāṇa 2.4.29–31, we learn that the narrative concerns the birth of the Prajāpatis and the Seven Ṛṣis. To bring them forth and initiate creation, Brahmā Deva released his powerful tejas—the creative energy inherent in him—which produced the fourfold categories of living beings. This tejas was then offered as a homa in the yajña, resulting in the manifestation of the Seven Sages and the Prajāpatis.

As confirmed in Śrīmad Bhāgavatam, 10th Skandha, Chapter 71, Verse 8, Brahmā Deva is but an instrument in the creation of living beings, all of whom are ultimately born of Brahman (Śrī Hari).

You are the formless Time-spirit who, as the Supreme Lord, are the real cause of the creation and destruction of the universe, while gods Brahmā and Rudra are mere instruments. So Bhima will be the mere instrumental cause of killing Jarā-sandha while (as a matter of fact) you are the real slayer

8. You are the formless Time-spirit who, as the Supreme Lord, are the real cause of the creation and destruction of the universe, while gods Brahmā and Rudra are mere instruments. So Bhīma will be the mere instrumental cause of killing Jarāsandha while (as a matter of fact) you are the real slayer.

Mahābhārata, Anuśāsana Parva, Adhyāya 85, Verses 102–104, makes it clear that the tejas of Brahmā Deva is not mortal human semen, but the triguṇātmaka creative energy of Brahmā. This divine power, composed of sattva, rajas, and tamas, generates various forms of living beings according to the predominance of each quality.

शक्तिशाली ब्रह्माजीने उस त्रिगुणात्मक वीर्यसे चतुर्विध प्राणिसमुदायको जन्म दिया। उनके वीर्यका जो रजोमय अंश था, उससे जगत्में तैजस प्रवृत्तिप्रधान जंगम प्राणियोंकी उत्पत्ति हुई ।। १०२ ।।

The powerful Brahma, through his threefold Trigunatmaka Tejas (creative energy), gave birth to the fourfold categories of living beings. From the rajas-dominant portion of his virya, the tejas-filled and activity-oriented mobile beings (creatures that move) came into existence in the world.

From the tamas-dominated portion (of Brahma's Tejas), tamasic entities—such as immobile beings like trees and other stationary forms—manifested. The sattvic portion, however, became interwoven into both the rajas and tamas. This sattva guna, which is the essence of light and consciousness (buddhi), is eternal in nature. Furthermore, the entire cosmos—comprising space (akasha) and all elements—is a manifestation of that buddhi, and thus, an expression of that very sattvic essence.

Therefore, O Lord, the sattva guna and the supreme radiance present in all beings have originated from that very Tejas of Brahma

When Brahma's Tejas (creative essence) was offered into the fire as an oblation, three embodied beings (shariradhari purushas) emerged from it. Each of them was endowed with qualities arising from the specific guna (fundamental trait) that had caused their creation.

THE TRUE CHARACTER OF BRAHMA JI FROM SRIMAD BHAGAVATAM

Brahma Ji is the master of all his senses, never speaks falsehood, never strays from the righteous path, and remains ever devoted to penance and austerities.

Srimad Bhagvatam 2/6/32-35

प्यारे नारद ! मैं प्रेमपूर्ण एवं उत्कण्ठित हृदयसे भगवान्के स्मरणमें मग्न रहता हूँ, इसीसे मेरी वाणी कभी असत्य होती नहीं दीखती, मेरा मन कभी असत्य संकल्प नहीं करता और री इन्द्रियाँ भी कभी मर्यादाका उल्लंघन करके कुमार्गमें नहीं

जातीं ।। ३३ ।। मैं वेदमूर्ति हूँ, मेरा जीवन तपस्यामय है, बड़े-बड़े प्रजापति मेरी वन्दना करते हैं और मैं उनका स्वामी पहले मैंने बड़ी निष्ठासे योगका सर्वांग अनुष्ठान किया था

Dear Nārada! With a heart full of love and longing, I remain absorbed in the remembrance of the Lord.
Because of this, my speech never appears to be false, my mind never forms false resolves, and my senses never violate propriety by straying onto the wrong path. (33)
I am the embodiment of the Vedas; my life is filled with austerity.
Great Prajāpatis offer me their reverence, and I am their master. Earlier, with great steadfastness, I had performed the complete practice of Yoga, yet I could not come to know the true nature of my original cause the Supreme Self. (34)

Srimad Bhagvatam 2/9/3-8 Geeta Press Gorakhpur

ब्रह्माजीकी निष्कपट तपस्यासे प्रसन्न होकर भगवान्ने उन्हें अपने रूपका दर्शन कराया और आत्म-तत्त्वके ज्ञानके लिये उन्हें परम सत्य परमार्थ वस्तुका उपदेश किया (वही बात मैं तुम्हें सुनाता हूँ) ।।४।।
तीनों लोकोंके परम गुरु आदिदेव ब्रह्माजी अपने जन्मस्थान कमलपर बैठकर सृष्टि करनेकी इच्छासे विचार करने लगे .
ब्रह्माजी तपस्वियोंमें सबसे बड़े तपस्वी हैं। उनका ज्ञान अमोघ है। उन्होंने उस समय एक सहस्र दिव्य वर्षपर्यन्त एकाग्र चित्तसे ापने प्राण, मन, कर्मेन्द्रिय और ज्ञानेन्द्रियोंको वशमें करके

ऐसी तपस्या की, जिससे वे समस्त लोकोंको प्रकाशित करनेमें समर्थ हो सके ।।८।।

Pleased with Brahmā's sincere and guileless austerity, the Lord granted him a vision of His own form and instructed him in the Supreme Truth – the ultimate reality so that he might gain knowledge of the Self. (4)
The supreme preceptor of the three worlds, the primordial deity Brahmā, seated upon the lotus – his place of birth – began to contemplate with the desire to create the universe.
Brahmā is the greatest of all ascetics. His knowledge is unfailing. At that time, for a thousand divine years, with a concentrated mind, he brought his life-breath, mind, organs of action, and organs of perception under control, performing such austerity that he became capable of illuminating all the worlds. ब्रह्माजी ! नाना प्रकारके कर्मसंस्कारोंके अनुसार अनेक प्रकारकी जीवसृष्टिको रचनेकी इच्छा होनेपर भी तुम्हारा चित्त मोहित नहीं होता, यह मेरी अतिशय कृपाका ही फल है ।।३४।। तुम सबसे पहले मन्त्रद्रष्टा हो। प्रजा उत्पन्न करते समय भी तुम्हारा मन मुझमें ही लगा रहता है, इसीसे पापमय रजोगुण तुमको बाँध नहीं पाता ।।३५।। तुम मुझे भूत, इन्द्रिय, गुण और न्तःकरणसे रहित समझते हो; इससे जान पड़ता है कि यद्यपि

देहधारी जीवोंको मेरा ज्ञान होना बहुत कठिन है, तथापि तुमने मुझे जान लिया है ।।३६।। 'मेरा आश्रय कोई है या नहीं' इस सन्देहसे तुम कमलनालके द्वारा जलमें उसका मूल खोज रहे थे, सो मैंने तुम्हें अपना यह स्वरूप अन्तःकरणमें ही दिखलाया है ।।३७।।
O Brahmā! Even though, according to various karmic impressions, you have the desire to create many kinds of living beings, your mind is not deluded this is solely the result of My supreme grace. (34)
You are the very first seer of the mantras. Even while producing the creation, your mind remains fixed on Me; therefore, the sinful quality of rajas cannot bind you. (35)
You understand Me to be devoid of elements, senses, qualities, and the inner organ (mind); this shows that, although it is extremely difficult for embodied beings to know Me, you have indeed realized Me. (36)
When you wondered, “Do I have a source or not?” and searched for its root in the water through the stalk of the lotus, I revealed this very form of Mine to you within your own heart. (37)

📚Brahma Viavarta Purana Brahma Khanda ′.23-25📚
Thereafter because of the arrows of love, the semen of Lord Krsna also fell but he placed the same in the water in that assembly. After a thousand years it emerged in the form of an egg. From that egg a gigantic universal form came out, which happens to be the base of the entire Universe. His single hair-pit could accommodate a complete universe. It is harder than the hardest and nothing else is bigger than it.

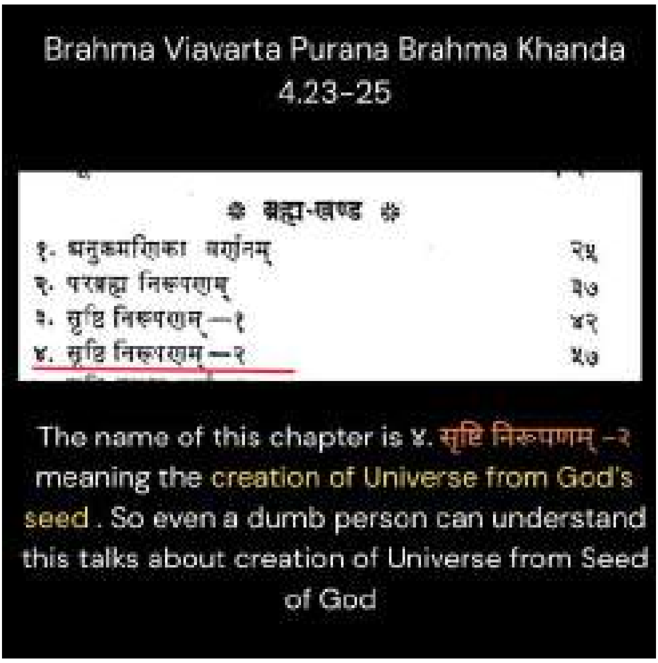
Refutation-

Brahma Viavarta Purana Brahma Khanda 4.23-25

The name of this chapter is ४. सृष्टि निरूपणम् -२ meaning the creation of Universe from God's seed . So even a dumb person can understand this talks about creation of Universe from Seed of God



The verse here in Brahma Vaiavarta Purana Brahma Khanda chapter 4 सृष्टि निरूपणम् -२ talks about the origin of विराज and they are interpreting the aspects as usual elemental water and semen of the mortals. Here, semen must be interpreted as – कामस्तदग्रे समवर्तताधि मनसो रेतः प्रथमं यदासीत् । (ऋग्वेदः सूक्तं १०.१२९) – desire itself is the semen. And what is this desire ? तथा चाम्नायते' सोऽकामयत बहुः स्यां प्रजायेयेति स तपोऽतप्यत स तपस्तप्त्वेदं सर्वमसृजत यदिदं किंच' (तै. आ. ८.) इति श्रुतिः (सायणभाष्यम्) – may I become many is the desire, says the shruti. So the premise of this narration from ब्रह्मवैवर्तपुराण is based on the नासदीय सूक्त that describes the origin of creation. And this water is nothing but the primordial ocean referred to as एकार्णव, महार्णव, सलिल, etc. And according to the scriptures and commentators,

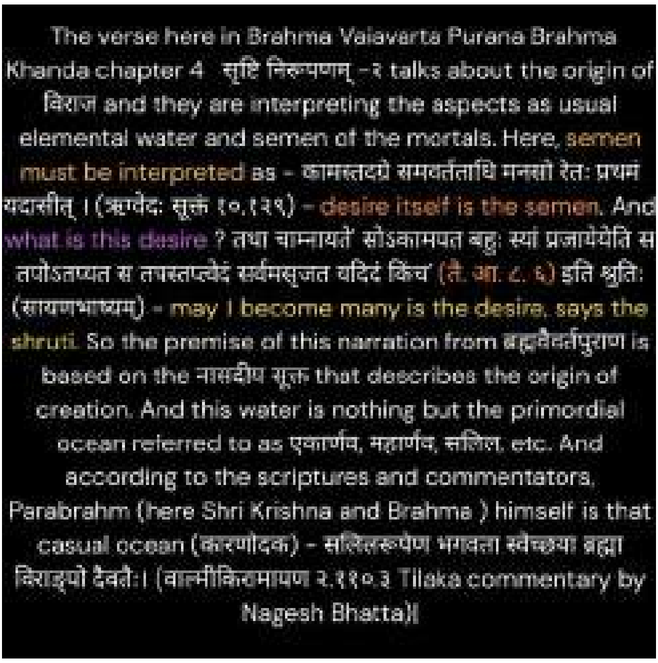
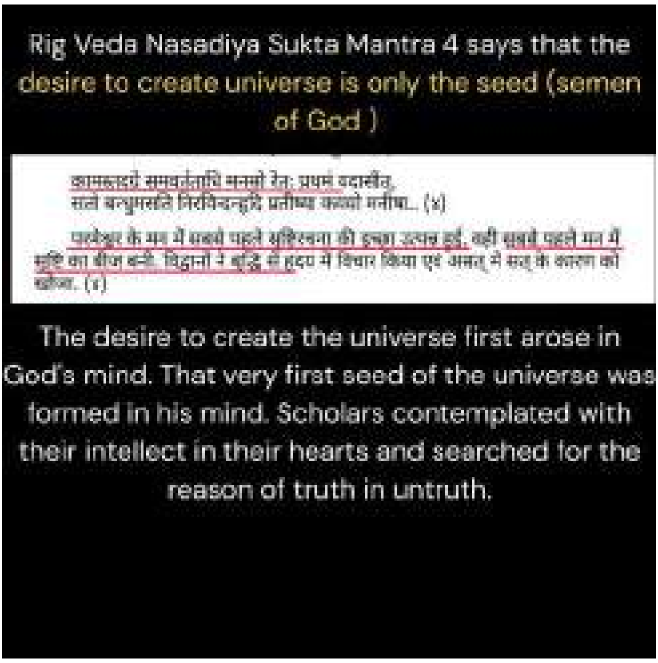
Parabrahm (here Shri Krishna and Brahma) himself is that casual ocean (कारणोदक) – सलिलरूपेण भगवता स्वेच्छया ब्रह्मा विराड्पो दैवतैः। (वाल्मीकिरामायण २.११०.३ Tilaka commentary by Nagesh Bhatta)I



Rig Veda Nasadiya Sukta Mantra 4 says that the desire to create universe is only the seed (semen of God)

परमेश्वर के मन में सबसे पहले सृष्टिरचना की इच्छा उत्पन्न हुई. वही सबसे पहले मन में सृष्टि का बीज बनी. विद्वानों ने बुद्धि से हृदय में विचार किया एवं असत् में सत् के कारण को खोजा. (४)

The desire to create the universe first arose in God's mind. That very first seed of the universe was formed in his mind. Scholars contemplated with their intellect in their hearts and searched for the reason of truth in untruth.



Acharya Sayana explained in his commentary on RIg Veda 10.129.4 as

ननूक्तरीत्या यदीश्वरस्य पर्यालोचनं जगतः पुनरुत्पत्तौ कारणं तदेव किंनिबन्धनमित्यत आह कामस्तदग्र इति । "अग्रे अस्य विकारजातस्य सृष्टेः प्रागवस्थायां परमेश्वरस्य मनसि "कामः "समवर्तत सग्यगजायत । सिसृक्षा जातेत्यर्थः । ईश्वरस्य सिसृक्षा वा किंहेतुकेत्यत आह मनस इति । "मनसः अन्तःकरणस्य संबन्धि वासनाशेषेण मायायां विलीनेऽन्तःकरणे समवेतम् । सामान्यापेक्षमेकवचनम् । सर्वप्राण्यन्तःकरणेषु समवेतमित्यर्थः । एतेनात्मनो गुणाधारत्वं प्रत्याख्यातम् । तादृशं "रेतः भाविनः प्रपञ्चस्य बीजभूतं "प्रथमम् अतीते कल्पे प्राणिभिः कृतं पुण्यात्मकं कर्म "यत् यतः कारणात् सृष्टिसमये "आसीत् अभवत् । भूष्णु वर्धिष्णवजायत परिपक्वं सत् फलोन्मुखमासीदित्यर्थः । तत्ततो हेतोः फलप्रदस्य सर्वसाक्षिणः कर्माध्यक्षस्य परमेश्वरस्य मनसि सिसृक्षा अजायतेत्यर्थः । तस्यां च जातायां स्रष्टव्यं पर्यालोच्य ततः सर्वं जगत् सृजति । तथा चाम्नायते -' सोऽकामयत बहुः स्यां प्रजायेयेति स तपोऽतप्यत स तपस्तप्त्वेदं सर्वमसृजत यदिदं किंच ' (तै. आ. ८. ६) इति श्रुतिः । आत्मनेत्थमवगमितेऽर्थे विद्वदनुभवमप्यनुग्राहकत्वेन प्रमाणयति सत इति । "सतः सत्त्वेन इदानीमनुभूयमानस्य सर्वस्य जगतः "बन्धुं बन्धकं हेतुभूतं कल्पान्तरे प्राण्यनुष्ठितं कर्मसमूहं "कवयः क्रान्तदर्शना अतीतानागतवर्तमानाभिज्ञा योगिनः "हृदि हृदये निरुद्धया "मनीषा मनीषया बुद्ध्या । ' सुपां सुलुक्०' इति तृतीयाया लुक् । "प्रतीष्य विचार्य । ' अन्येषामपि' इति सांहितिको दीर्घः । "असति सद्विलक्षणेऽव्याकृते कारणे "निरविन्दन् निष्कृष्यालभन्त । विविच्याजानन्नित्यर्थः ।।

Now, if according to the Nānūkta (interpretive method), we consider that the will or contemplation (paryālocanam) of the Lord (Īśvara) is the cause of the creation of the world, then one might ask: “What is the basis or cause of that will?” To answer this, it is said:

“Kāmaḥ tad agre” —
“Desire existed in the beginning.”

That is, before the manifestation of this entire world of modifications (vikāra-jāta), in the primordial state (prāg-avasthā), desire (kāmaḥ) arose in the mind (manas) of the Supreme Lord (Parameśvara). It means: the urge to create (sṛṣṭi-kāmanā) was born in Him.

Now, one might question: “What was the cause of this creative urge in the Lord?”
To this, it is answered: “From the mind” (manasaḥ).

That is, from the internal faculty (antaḥkaraṇa) — in which the latent impressions (vāsanās) were merged within Māyā — the mind took form. The word is singular (manasaḥ), though it refers to all minds collectively, indicating the general principle. Thus, it means that desire arose in the universal mind, merged in Māyā, before manifestation.

By this, the idea that the Ātman (Self) is the substratum of qualities (guṇas) is refuted.

Such a “desire” (kāmaḥ) becomes the seed (bīja) of the future projection of the universe — it is based upon the puṇya (virtuous) actions performed by beings in a previous cosmic cycle (kalpa). That karma (yat) becomes the cause (kāraṇāt) at the time of creation (sṛṣṭi-samaya).

This karma becomes bhūṣṇu — powerful, and vardhiṣṇu — ever-growing; that is, it becomes ripe and ready to bear fruit.

Therefore, due to this cause — the karmic impressions — the Lord (karma-adhyakṣaḥ, the supervisor of karma, and sarva-sākṣī, the witness of all) develops the desire to create. In His mind, the will to manifest arises.

Having formed this intention (sṛṣṭikāmanā), He contemplates on what to create — and then creates the entire universe.

This is also confirmed in the scripture (āmnāya):

"So'kāmayata – bahu syām prajāyeyeti. Sa tapo'tapyata, sa tapas taptvā idaṁ sarvam asṛjata yad idaṁ kiñca"
(Taittirīya Āraṇyaka 8.6)
— "He desired: 'May I become many, may I be born.' He performed tapas (austerity), and having done so, He created all this — whatever exists."

Having thus understood this process, it is further supported by the experience of the wise (vidvat-anubhava), which acts as a further means of valid knowledge (pramāṇa) due to its grace (anugrahakatva).

Now, this entire world (jagat) — experienced now (idānīm anubhūyamānasya) — originates from sat (Being), and the wise seers (kavayaḥ) who are knowers of the three times (past, present, future) and who possess deep yogic insight (krānta-darśanāḥ) — they recognize in their hearts (hṛdi) by concentrated intellect (manīṣayā), that:

The bond or cause (bandhuḥ) of this current world is the collection of karmas performed by beings in previous cycles — karmas that remain even when the subtle cause (avyākṛta) — the unmanifest — exists in a dormant (asat) state distinct from the manifest (sat).

Thus, they discover (niravindan) — that is, extract and realize — the cause by deliberation (pratīṣya), by internal discrimination.

The term "asati sad-vilakṣaṇe avyākṛte kāraṇe niravindan" — means: "In the unmanifest cause (avyākṛta), which is distinct from the manifest (sat), they discern the source."

4. Mitra and Varuna

Mitra and Varuna are recounted to have emitted semen upon seeing Apsara Urvashi,

📚Nirukta 5.13📚
Urvashi is (the name of) a naiad, (so called because) she pervades wide regions (uru + as- to pervade '), or she pervades by means of thighs [Sexual Intercourse]...On seeing her, the seminal fluid of Mitra and Varuna fell down.”

📚Shrimad Bhagavatam 6.18.6📚
Upon seeing Urvaśī, the celestial society girl, both Mitra and Varuṇa discharged semen, which they preserved in an earthen pot. The two sons Agastya and Vasiṣṭha later appeared from that pot, and they are therefore the common sons of Mitra and Varuṇa. Mitra begot three sons in the womb of his wife, whose name was Revatī. Their names were Utsarga, Ariṣṭa and Pippala.”

📚Shrimad Bhagavatam 9.13.6📚
After saying this, Mahārāja Nimi, who was expert in the science of spiritual knowledge, gave up his body. Vasiṣṭha, the great-grandfather, gave up his body also, but through the semen discharged by Mitra and Varuṇa when they saw Urvaśī, he was orn again.”

📚Shiva Purana 5.4.23-24📚
Formerly the two gods Mitra and Varuna, while performing a severe penance, were fascinated and deluded by Siva's Mayã. On seeing the youthful maiden Ürvasi, both of them had the emission of their semen. Mitra deposited his semen in a pot and Varuna in water."

📚Brihad Devata 5.149-150📚
Of these two Adityas, when they saw the nymph Urvasi at a sacrificial session, the semen was effused. It fell into a jar containing water that stood overnight. Now at the same moment two vigorous ascetics, the seers Agastya and Vasistha, there came into being.

Acharya Skandaswami ji wrote that Urvashi refers to vidyut (electricity/lightning) and Vasistha refers to hidden collected water. Mitra and Varuna are air and sun respectively, and Vishvadeva is light rays. The water on earth is drawn upwards due to sun and air therefore, it has been referred to as Maitravaruna (born from Mitra and Varuna). Here kumbha has been interpreted as Pushkara which refers to water and antariksha (space/atmosphere). But here it has been referred to as antariksha. So the virya of Mitra and Varuna (rainwater) is held up in the atmosphere.

📚Brahma Purana 4.58.16.26📚
At the instance of Devas the Fire-god assumed the form of a parrot and went to the place where the lord of the worlds was sporting with Uma. Then the Fire-god went ahead timidly in the form of a parrot. The carrier of the Havyas (Fire-god) could not go through the doorway. Then he went to the window sill and remained there with face turned down and trembling. On seeing him Sambhu in that secret place laughingly said to Uma. See, O gentle lady, the parrot that is the Fire-god himself who has come here at the instance of Devas. Parvati bashfully said to the lord, "O lord, enough". The lord of Devas called the Fire-god moving about in front of him. in the form of a bird and said, "O Agni, you have been recognised through various ways. Do not speak anything. Open your mouth. Take this in and carry it with you." After saying this lord Sambhu discharged a great deal of semen into the mouth of Fire-god. With this semen within him Agni could not at all go. Utterly tired, Agni sat down on the bank of Gaṅga. He then discharged a greater portion of that semen into Krttikas wherefrom Karttika was born."

5. Prajapati

📚Aitareya Brahmana 6.5.27📚
For the semen is like something unspeakable secretly poured forth into the womb. The sperm becomes blended. For when Prajapati had carnal intercourse with his daughter, his sperm was poured forth upon the earth and was mixed up with it. This was done for making the sperm produce fruit.”

📚Pancavimsa Brahmana 8.2.10📚
Prajapati went on top of his own daughter Usas. His semen flew away. It was poured on this (the earth). He made it perfect, [thinking]: “Let this Semen of mine not be spoiled.” He made it [something] real, namely, cattle.”

Refutation-

Prajapati is Sun in Vedas

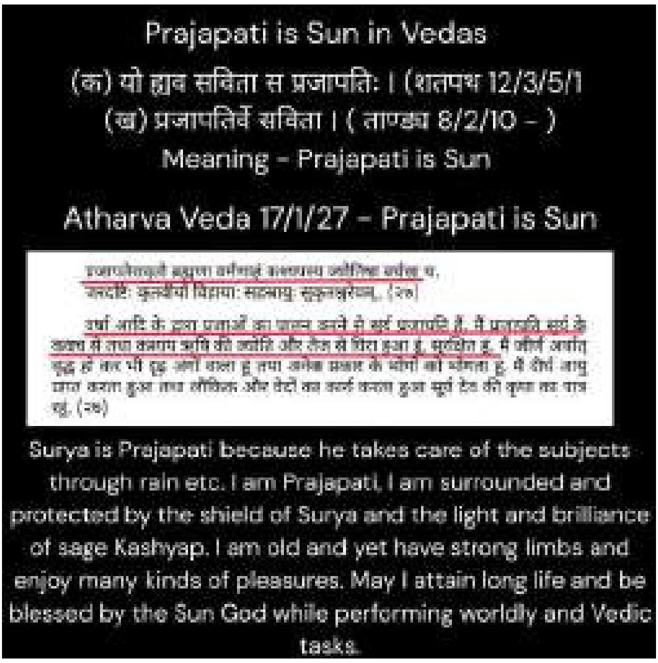
(क) यो ह्यव सविता स प्रजापतिः । (शतपथ 12/3/5/1

(ख) प्रजापतिर्वे सविता । (ताण्ड्य 8/2/10 –)

Meaning – Prajapati is Sun

Atharva Veda 17/1/27 – Prajapati is Sun

Atharva Veda 17/1/27 – Surya is Prajapati because he takes care of the subjects through rain etc. I am Prajapati, I am surrounded and protected by the shield of Surya and the light and brilliance of sage Kashyap. I am old and yet have strong limbs and enjoy many kinds of pleasures. May I attain long life and be blessed by the Sun God while performing worldly and Vedic tasks.



Rig Veda 4.52.1 tells that Usha is daughter of Sun

Rig Veda 4.52.1-Usha, the daughter of the Sun, who is well praised, the able leader of all living beings and gives birth to the best fruits, appears and destroys the darkness after the night has passed.

Atharva Veda 19.12.1 tells that Usha is the sister of Night and destroys night . Thus Usha is Dawn

Atharva Veda 19.12.1 – As soon as Usha arrives, she dispels the darkness of her sister night. After this Usha opens the worldly and Vedic path completely.

Rig Veda 10.61.14 states जिस समय काली रात लाल रंग वाली उषाओं में बदलने लगती है, उस समय मैं तुम्हारा आह्वान करता हूं – "At the time when the dark night begins to turn into the red-hued dawn (Usha) I invoke you."

It is written in Nirukta (2.18) as well as in the Uṇādi Sūtra (4.235) that Uṣā (the dawn) is that which dispels the darkness of night. The time that follows the night, when the darkness begins to fade away — that early morning period is called Uṣā (dawn).N

Nirukta 2/18

उषाः कस्मादुच्छतीति सत्या रात्रेरपरः कालः ।
कस्मात् किस कारण से उषाः उषा कहा जाता है? क्योंकि उच्छतीति सत्या (अन्धकार को) निवारित करती हुई रहती है- दूर करती हुई रहती है। रात्रः रात्रि का अपरः कालः उत्तरवती (पिछला) काल होता है।
विमर्श-

"Why is the dawn (Uṣā) called Uṣā? Because she 'ucchatīti satyā' — she removes, dispels (the darkness). The period following the night is known as Uṣā, the later (subsequent) part of the night, i.e., the early morning."

Discussion (Vimarśa):
The term Uṣā is derived from the root "ucch" (to rise, to remove), indicating that Uṣā is the one who removes darkness — hence, she is called Uṣā. She signifies the later phase of the night, when the darkness begins to withdraw, and light begins to appear. Thus, Uṣā represents the transition from night to day, symbolizing hope, awakening, and illumination.

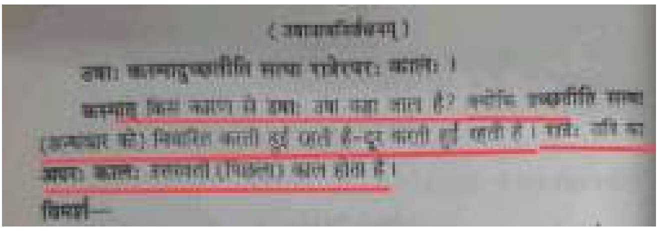
Usha means Dawn



उषाः कस्मादुच्छतीति सत्याः रात्रेरपरः कालः ।
कस्मात् किस कारण से उषाः उषा कहा जाता है? क्योंकि उच्छतीति सत्याः (अन्धकार को) निवारित करती हुई रहती है—दूर करती हुई रहती है। रात्रेः रात्रि का अपरः कालः उत्तरवर्ती (पिछला) काल होता है।

In the Nirukta, Uṣā is described as a deity associated with the heavenly realm (dyuloka).

In Chapter 12 of the Nirukta, a list of deities associated with the dyuloka (celestial region) is given, where Uṣā is mentioned second, right after the Aśvins, as a deity of the heavenly sphere.

That is why in the Brāhmaṇa texts, Uṣā is referred to as a deity of the dyuloka. Whether one says "Uṣā" or "deity of the dyuloka", both refer to the same entity — there is no disagreement in this regard.

Furthermore, regarding Uṣā — the deity of the dyuloka — it is written in the Nirukta that she spreads light across half the region of the ky before the sun rises. This is what we commonly know as dawn or uṣā-kāla (the time of Uṣā in the early morning).

Now then, from here onwards, the dyusthānāḥ — the deities of the celestial realm (dyuloka) — are being explained.

(2. Uṣas / Ushas)
Uṣā, of the root vaṣṭiḥ meaning "to shine, radiate beauty," is derived from the verb root uśch (उच्छी) in the sense of radiating or rising. One Uṣā is mādhyamikā, the intermediate — the other kind of Uṣā associated with the mid-region (antarikṣa) and related to lightning.
But here, this Uṣā is dyusthānīya — the heavenly Uṣā.

Vedic Mantra (Ṛgveda 1.92.13):

uṣas tac citram ābharāsmabhyam vājinīvati yena tokaṁ ca tanayaṁ ca dhāmahe Translation: O Uṣā! Bring us that brilliant (wealth), rich in horses, by which we may sustain our offspring and their children.

---

xplanation:

The word Uṣā refers to the early morning light before sunrise — she is a dyuloka-sthānīya (heavenly) goddess.
The word "Uṣā" is derived from two different roots:

- From the root vaś (वश्) meaning "to shine or radiate beauty" → implying her role in spreading brilliance and charm.
- From the root uśch (उच्छी) meaning "to rise or emit" → again suggesting the dawning or emitting of light.

There is another intermediate Uṣā (antarikṣa-sthānīya), signifying lightning or brilliance in the mid-region — but the current context is about the celestial Uṣā, associated with the dawn.

Mantra meaning:

This Uṣā, belonging to the region of space (rajas), in the eastern half of the sky — before the Sun rises — anoints everything with light (bhānuṁ añjate), illuminating all.
She awakens all beings (ketum akrat) and makes them aware.

Like warriors who cleanse and polish their weapons (dhṛṣṇavaḥ āyudhāni iva), preparing them for battle, similarly, this Uṣā brightens the world, energizing it for the day ahead.

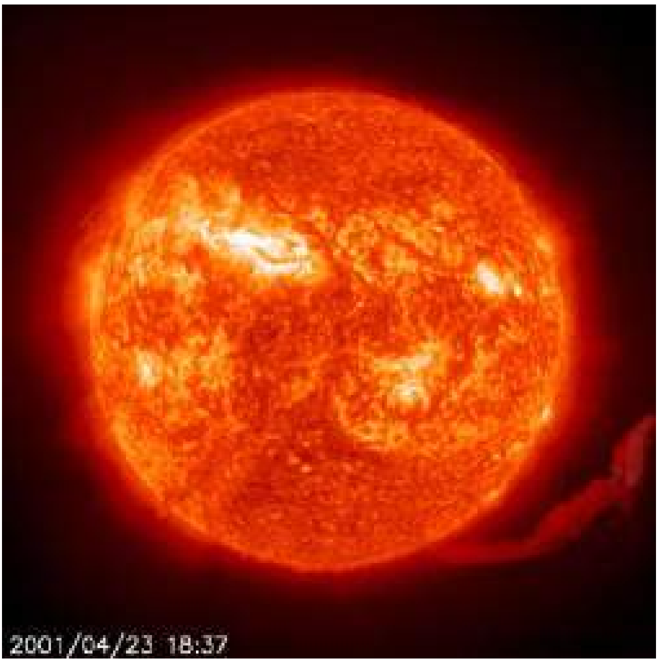
Who is Prajapati here ?

Sun is Prajapati



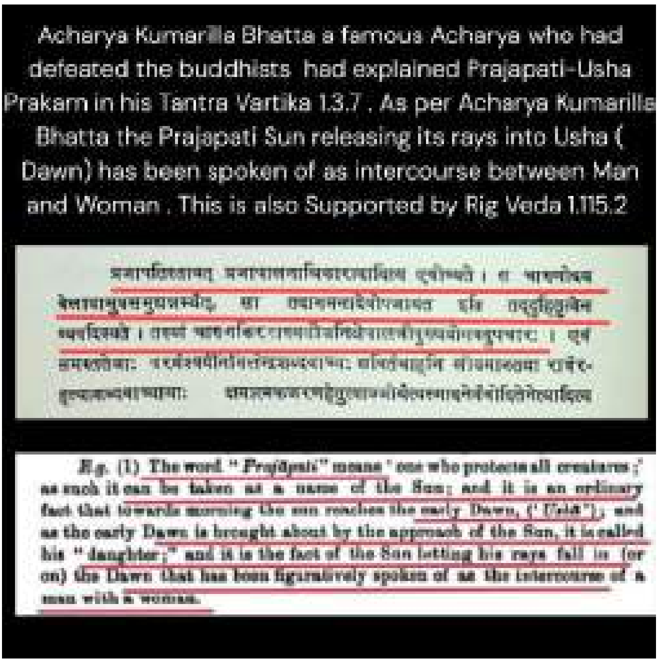
Who is Usha here ?

Usha is Dawn

Acharya Kumarilla Bhatta a famous Acharya who had defeated the buddhists had explained Prajapati-Usha Prakarn in his Tantra Vartika 1.3.7. As per Acharya Kumarilla Bhatta the Prajapati Sun releasing its rays into Usha (Dawn) has been spoken of as intercourse between Man and Woman. This is also Supported by Rig Veda 1.115.2

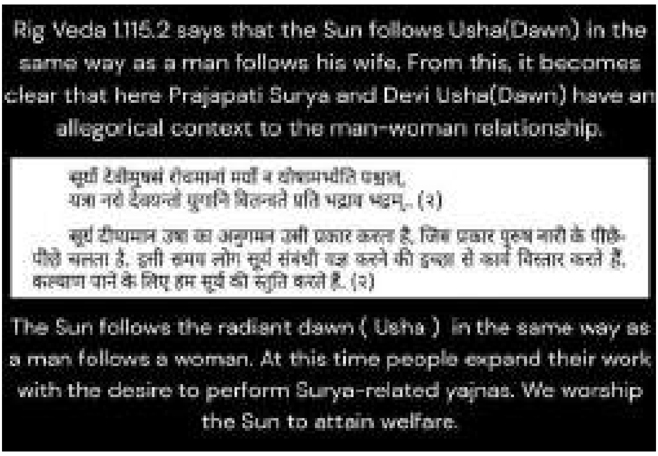
प्रजापतिस्तावत् प्रजापालनाधिकारादादित्य एवोच्यते । स चारुणोदय वेलायामुषसमुद्यन्नभ्यैत्, सा तदागमनादेवोपजायत इति तदुहितृत्वेन व्यपदिश्यते । तस्यां चारुणकिरगाख्यबीजनिक्षेपात्स्त्रीपुरुपयोगवदुपचारः । एवं समस्ततेजाः परमैश्वर्यनिमित्तेन्द्रशब्दवाच्यः सवितैवानि लीयमानतया रात्रेर-हल्याशब्दवाच्यायाः क्षयात्मकज रणहेतुत्वाज्जीर्यत्यस्मादनेनैवोदितेनेत्यादित्य

E.g. (1) The word “Prajapati” means ‘one who protects all creatures;’ as such it can be taken as a name of the Sun; and it is an ordinary fact that towards morning the sun reaches the early Dawn, (‘Usha’); and as the early Dawn is brought about by the approach of the Sun, it is called his “daughter;” and it is the fact of the Sun letting his rays fall in (or on) the Dawn that has been figuratively spoken of as the intercourse of a man with a woman.



Rig Veda 1.115.2 says that the Sun follows Usha(Dawn) in the same way as a man follows his wife. From this, it becomes clear that here Prajapati Surya and Devi Usha(Dawn) have an allegorical context to the man-woman relationship.

सूर्य दीप्यमान उषा का अनुगमन उसी प्रकार करता है, जिस प्रकार पुरुष नारी के पीछे-पीछे चलता है. इसी समय लोग सूर्य संबंधी यज्ञ करने की इच्छा से कार्य विस्तार करते हैं. कल्याण पाने के लिए हम सूर्य की स्तुति करते हैं. (२)
The Sun follows the radiant dawn (Usha) in the same way as a man follows a woman. At this time people expand their work with the desire to perform Surya-related yajnas. We worship the Sun to attain welfare.



Sayancharya bhasya on Rig Veda 1.115.2 explains it further-

“सूर्यः “देवीं दानादिगुणयुक्तां “रोचमानां दीप्यमानाम् “उषसं “पश्चात् “अभ्येति उषसः प्रादुर्भावानन्तरं तामभिलक्ष्य गच्छति । त्र दृष्टान्तः । “मर्यो “न “योषाम् । यथा कश्चिन्मनुष्यः

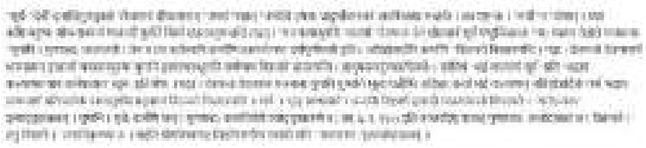
The Sun follows the radiant goddess Uṣas, who is endowed with divine qualities such as generosity and shines brilliantly. After Uṣas manifests, the Sun, drawn by her beauty, proceeds after her—just as a young man constantly follows a graceful young woman. When Uṣas rises, the worshippers (devayantaḥ), desiring to behold the shining deity (the Sun), prepare to offer their worship. The word yugāni refers to time cycles or ritual periods, such as the new and full moon sacrifices, during which obligatory rites like Agnihotra are performed and expanded. Alternatively, yugāni may refer to the components of a plough, indicating that these sacrificers—desiring divine rewards and wealth—engage in agricultural labor by spreading their yokes for plowing. Thus, it is said that they follow Uṣas into activity. This benevolent and auspicious Sun is praised for auspicious purposes—the fruitful results of sacred actions. Or again, devayantaḥ, the sacrificers, paired with their wives (yugāni as conjugal pairs), perform auspicious acts like Agnihotra during the rise of Uṣas, each extending their rituals in pursuit of divine blessings.



Then what is the semen of Prajapati Sun here ? Rig Veda 1.164.33 Sayana Bhasya tells that Father form Sun impregnates his daughter Usha/Heaven with Sun rays form Virya/Semen which gives rise to all living beings . Thus the Semen here is Sun rays only

Sayancharya bhasya on Rig Veda 1.164.33

“स स्वरश्मिभिः । अथवा इन्द्रः पर्जन्यो वा । दुहितुः दूरे निहिताया भूम्याः गर्भं सर्वोत्पादनसमर्थं वृष्ट्युदकलक्षणम् आधात् सर्वतः करोति ।।”

“He, with his own rays places the seed (garbha), capable of producing all beings and characterized by rain or water, into the daughter , who is situated afar. He causes this (fertilization) from all directions.”

📚Shrimad Bhagavatam 8.12.26-32📚
The beautiful woman was already naked, and when She saw Lord Siva coming toward Her, She became extremely bashful. Thus She kept smiling, but She hid Herself among the trees and did not stand in place. – His senses being agitated, Lord Siva, victimized by lusty desires, began to follow Her, just as a lusty elephant follows a she-elephant. After following Her with great speed, Lord Siva caught Her by the braid of Her hair and dragged Her near him. Although She was unwilling, he embraced Her with his arms. -Being embraced by Lord Siva like a female elephant embraced by a male, the woman, whose hair was scattered, swirled like a snake. O King, this woman, who had large, high hips, was a woman of yoga-mäya presented by the Supreme Personality of Godhead. She released Herself somehow or other from the fond embrace of Lord Siva's arms and ran away. – As if harassed by an enemy in the form of lusty desires, Lord Siva followed the path of Lord Visnu, who acts very wonderfully and who had taken the form of Mohini. – Just as a maddened bull elephant follows a female elephant who is able to conceive pregnancy, Lord Siva followed the beautiful woman and discharged semen, even though his discharge of semen never goes in vain."

📚Agni Purana 3.17-20📚
Viṣṇu in the company of all the immortals said, "Be it so" and cast off his female form. He was then requested by Hara to show that form (again). (Lord) Hari (Viṣṇu) showed the feminine form to Rudra (Siva). Sambhu (Siva) being captivated by the illusory power, renouncing Gauri (Pārvatī) sought that feminine form. Becoming nude and behaving like a mad man, he held the damsel by her hair. She got herself freed and ran away. He too followed her. Wherever the seminal fluid of Hara dropped, there came into being sacred places of liṅgas and gold."

Traditional Sri Vaishnava Acharya Pandit Madhavacharya Shastri in his book Purana Digdarshan page 599 explained the meaning of the Shiva Mohini story in Bhagvatam

(क) यद् रुद्रश्चन्द्रमास्तेन । – (कोषीतकी ६ । ७) – (a) Due to which Rudra [is called] the Moon.

(ख) (प्रजापतिः) तं (रुद्रं) अब्रवीन्महादेवोऽसीति । तद्यदस्य तन्नामाकरोच्चन्द्रमास्तरूपमभवत् ।। (शतपथ ६ । १।३।१६) -Prajapati said to this Rudra that you are Mahadev because he was named Mahadev = Mahan-radiant, so he (beautiful) became the Moon. . (ग) आग्नेयी पृथिवी । (ताण्ड्य १५।४।८) -This earth was igneous – fiery vapor

(घ) इयं (पृथिवी) वै देव्यदितिविश्वरूपी । (तैत्तिरीय १ । ७ । ˉ ।७) – This earth itself is the beautiful goddess in the form of Mohini

So the meaning is that on insistence of Lord Shiva in the form of Moon, the आग्नेय वाष्प in the form of Vishnu, on attaining density, assumed the form of Mohini in the form of the Earth. So, when the Earth became stable and the Earth also got an independent orbit due to the attraction and repulsion of other planets, the Moon started revolving around the Earth, as if Lord Shiva became infatuated with the beauty of the Earth in the form of Mohini. This is what Mahadev means by running after Mohini; the Moon ran around to its full capacity, spread its rays or hands, but could not get anything, that is, the Moon could not assimilate the Earth, this is the meaning of Mohini not coming in its hands.

This is what Mahadev means by running after Mohini; the Moon ran around to its full capacity, spread its rays or hands, but could not get anything, that is, the Moon could not assimilate the Earth, this is the meaning of Mohini not coming in its hands.

Then whats the meaning of Maheshwar Shiva releasing his tejas behind Mohini . Pandit Madhavacharya Shastri explained

वर्तमान विज्ञानवेत्ता भी इस बात को स्वीकार करते हैं कि आरम्भमें यह पृथ्वी तपे हुवे सोने के बराबर जाज्वल्यमान एवं दमकते हुवे पिण्ड के समान थी सो ज्यों ही चांद पृथ्वीपिण्ड की अपरिमित ऊष्मा से संश्लिष्ट हुवा तो उसका बहुत सा भास्वर हिम पिघल २ कर बहने लगा। गर्मी के संयोग से बर्फ का बह जाना विज्ञान सिद्ध बात है। सो यही शिव के वीर्यपात का आशय है।

The present day Science also accept that in the beginning, the earth was like a glowing and shining body like heated gold, (As provided in Vedic Shruti as well) so as soon as the moon was composed of the infinite heat of the earth, a lot of its shining snow melted and started flowing. It is a scientifically proven fact that snow starts flowing due to heat. So this is the meaning of Shiva's semen discharge in Srimad Bhagvatam 8.12. 32

Geeta Press Gorakhpur – Maheshwar Shiva follows Brahmacharya

महादेवजीके आधे शरीरको अग्नि और आधेको सोम कहते हैं। उनकी शिवमूर्ति ब्रह्मचर्यका पालन करती है और जो अत्यन्त घोर मूर्ति है, वह जगत्का संहार करती है। उनमें महत्त्व और ईश्वरत्व होनेके कारण वे 'महेश्वर' कहलाते हैं ।। ५-६ ।।
"Half of Mahādeva's body is called Agni and the other half is called Soma. His auspicious form abides in celibacy (Brahmacharya), while his extremely fierce form brings about the destruction of the world. Because of the greatness and lordship inherent in him, he is known as 'Maheśvara' (the Great Lord)." (verses 5-6)

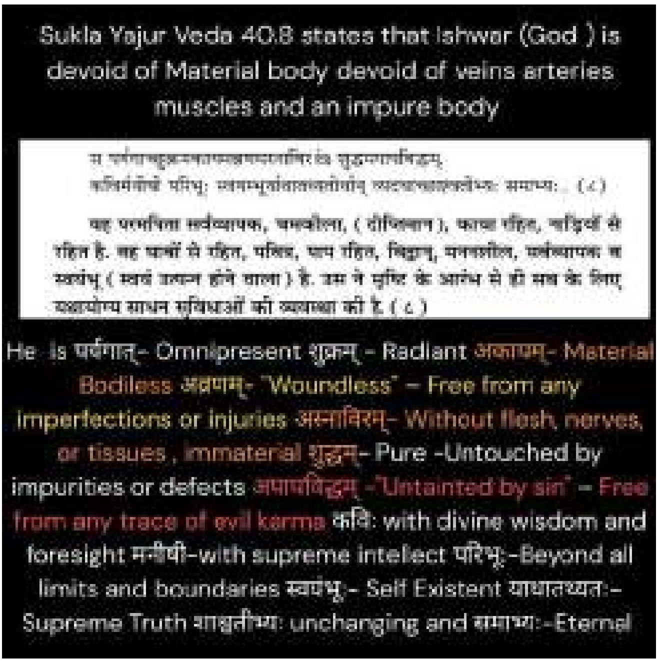
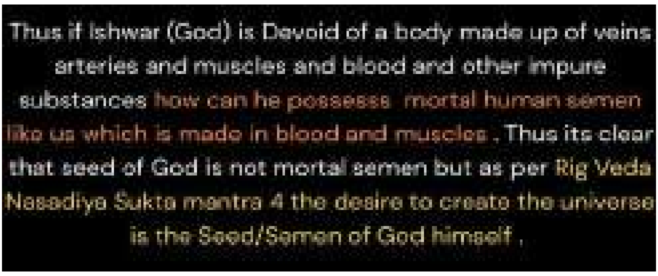
Sukla Yajur Veda 40.8 states that Ishwar (God) is devoid of Material body devoid of veins arteries muscles and an impure body

वह परमपिता सर्वव्यापक, चमकीला, (दीप्तिमान), काया रहित, नाड़ियों से रहित है. वह घावों से रहित, पवित्र, पाप रहित, विद्वान्, मननशील, सर्वव्यापक व स्वयंभू (स्वयं उत्पन्न होने वाला) है. उस ने सृष्टि के आरंभ से ही सब के लिए यथायोग्य साधन सुविधाओं की व्यवस्था की है

He is पर्यगात्- Omnipresent शुक्रम् – Radiant अकायम्- Material Bodiless अव्रणम्- "Woundless" – Free from any imperfections or injuries अस्नाविरम्- Without flesh, nerves, or tissues, immaterial शुद्धम् – Pure – Untouched by impurities or defects अपापविद्धम् -"Untainted by sin" – Free from any trace of evil karma कविः with divine wisdom and foresight मनीषी-with supreme intellect परिभूः-Beyond all limits and boundaries स्वयंभूः- Self Existent याथातथ्यतः- Supreme Truth शाश्वतीभ्यः unchanging and समाभ्यः-Eternal



Thus if Ishwar (God) is Devoid of a body made up of veins arteries and muscles and blood and other impure substances how can he possesss mortal human semen like us which is made in blood and muscles . Thus its clear that seed of God is not mortal semen but as per Rig Veda Nasadiya Sukta mantra 4 the desire to create the universe is the Seed/Semen of God himself .



Mahabharta Vana Parva Adhaya 97 – सापश्यद् विबुधान् सर्वानस्वेंदीन् स्तब्धलोचनान् । हषितस्त्रग्रजोहीनान् स्थितानस्पृशतः क्षितिम् ।। 24 ।।

Now Damayanti saw – all the Devtas are sweatless – no trace of sweat is visible in any of their parts, their eyelids do not fall. The garlands they wearing are full of new growth – they do not wither. Dust particles are not falling on them. They are sitting on thrones, but their feet do not touch the earth and their shadow does not fall.

Mahabharat gives us an idea that the Devas do not possess a material human body like us made up of blood muscles arteries and veins and they produce no Shadow . So the Tejas of Devas should not be compared to Mortal Human semen as they do not have material body like us

Allegations–

7. Sage Vyasa

📚Devi Bhagavatam 1.14.1-70📚
Confounded by terror, she assumed the form of a Śūka bird and fled away; Vyāsa, too, became greatly surprised to see her in the form of a bird. The moment Vyāsa saw the extraordinary beautiful form of Ghritācī, the Cupid entered then, into his body, and his mind was filled with the thought of sweet feminine form and was gladdened and all his body was thrilled with pleasure so that the hairs of the body stood on their ends. The Muni Vyāsa Deva tried his best and exerted his power of patience to its utmost, but failed to control his restless mind to enjoy the woman. Though he was very energetic, and he tried repeatedly to control his heart, enchanted with the beautiful form of Ghritācī, yet he could not, as due to a state of things pre-ordained by God, control his mind. At this state, when he was rubbing the fire sticks to get the sacred fire, the two pieces of wood used in kindling the fire, his seed (semen) fell upon the Araṇī (the two pieces of wood used in kindling the sacred fire). But he did not take any notice of that, and he went on rubbing the firesticks when arose from that Araṇī the wonderfully beautiful form of Śūka deva, looking like a second Vyāsa."

📚Mahabharata 12.325📚
Beholding the Apsara in those woods, the illustrious Rishi Vyasa, O Yudhishthira, became suddenly smitten with desire. The Apsara (Ghritaci), seeing the Rishi's heart troubled by desire, transformed herself into a she-parrot and came to that spot. Although he beheld the Apsara disguised in another form, the desire that had arisen in the Rishi's heart (without disappearing) spread itself over every part of his body. Summoning all his patience, the ascetic endeavoured to suppress that desire; with all his effort, however, Vyasa did not succeed in controlling his agitated mind. In consequence of the inevitability of what was to happen, the Rishi's heart was attracted by Ghritaci's fair form. He set himself more earnestly to the task of making a fire for suppressing his emotion, but in spite of all his efforts his vital seed came out. That best of regenerate ones, however, O king, continued to rub his stick without feeling any scruples for what had happened. From the seed that fell, was born a son unto him, called Suka."

📚Narada Purana 2.58.19-27📚
At that time, the illustrious sage happened to see a heavenly damsel called Ghrtaci who, in consequence of her brilliant splendour, possessed excellent beauty. Seeing that celestial damsel, in that forest, the great sage Vyasa became instantly passionately enamoured of her. After making Vyasa deeply agitated with passion, the most beautiful Ghrtaci, transforming herself into a she-parrot, approached him. Even after seeing the celestial lady disguised in another form, he was overcome with cupid (passionate love) who spread in every part of his body. With great (moral) courage, the sage tried to restrain his passion. But his mind being extremely agitated, Vyasa was unable to control it. Due to the inevitability of Destiny (lit. what was to happen) the heart of the sage was fascinated by the (beautiful) form (of Ghrtaci). With the desire to do this (vi-e. the kindling of Are) while he was suppressing his passion with special efforts, all of a sudden his semen fell on the churning sticks. It was thus that the great ascetic Suka was born while Vyasa continued the churning of sacrificial sticks."

Refutation-

If one reads Narada Purana Purva, Book II, Chapter 58 in full, the context becomes clear and the allegation collapses. The chapter narrates that Vyāsa Deva undertook an intense and prolonged penance on Mount Meru to please Mahādeva, with the desire to be blessed with a son of extraordinary power and fame. Despite extreme hardships, Vyāsa steadfastly maintained his austerities and yoga practice until Mahādeva, moved by his devotion, granted him the boon: a son whose brilliance would be celebrated across the three worlds. Later, as destiny ordained under that very boon, Vyāsa was churning sacrificial sticks (araṇi) when the apsarā Ghṛtācī appeared before him in her celestial beauty. Overcome by the divine māyā that was part of the boon's fulfilment—not through any voluntary lapse—Vyāsa's seed fell onto the sacrificial sticks, from which his son Śuka (also called Sūta in some accounts) was miraculously born. There was no physical union, no act with an animal, and no moral breach—only the unfolding of a divine birth exactly as foreordained by Mahādeva's blessing.

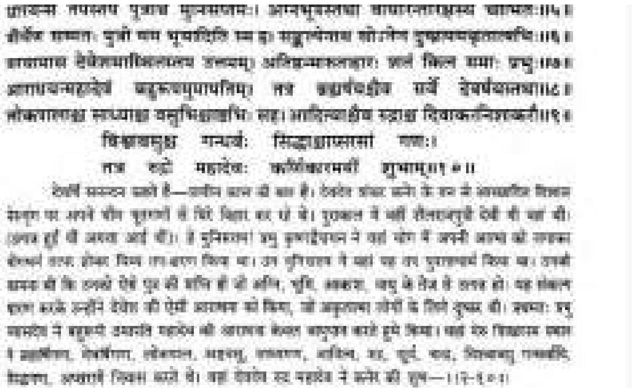
देवर्षि सनन्दन कहते हैं- प्राचीन काल की बात है। देवदेव शंकर कनेर के वन से आच्छादित विशाल मेरुशृंग पर अपने भौम भूतगणों से घिरे विहार कर रहे थे। पुराकाल में वहीं शैलराजपुत्री देवी भी वहां थीं। (उत्पन्न हुई थीं अथवा आई थीं)। हे मुनिसत्तम! प्रभु कृष्णद्वैपायन ने वहां योग में अपनी आत्मा को लगाकर योगधर्म तत्पर होकर दिव्य तपःश्चरण किया था। उन मुनिसत्तम ने वहां यह तप पुत्रलाभार्थ किया था। उनकी कामना थी कि उनको ऐसे पुत्र की प्राप्ति हो जो अग्नि, भूमि, आकाश, वायु के तेज से उत्पन्न हो। यह संकल्प धारण करके उन्होंने देवेश की ऐसी आराधना को किया, जो अकृतात्मा लोगों के लिये दुष्कर थी। प्रथमतः प्रभु व्यासदेव ने बहुरूपी उमापति महादेव की आराधना केवल वायुपान करते हुये किया। वहां मेरु शिखरस्थ स्थान में ब्रह्मर्षिगण, देवर्षिगण, लोकपाल, अष्टवसु, साध्यगण, आदित्य, रुद्र, सूर्य, चन्द्र, विश्वावसु गन्धर्वादि, सिद्धगण, अप्सरायें निवास करते थे। वहां देवदेव रुद्र महादेव ने कनेर की शुभ- ।।२-१०।।

Devarṣi Sanandana said)
In ancient times, Lord of the Devas, Mahadeva Shankara, was sporting upon the lofty peak of Mount Meru, which was covered with oleander groves, surrounded by His earthly attendants, the Bhūtaganas. In those primeval days, the daughter of the King of Mountains (Pārvatī Devī) was also present there (either born there or having arrived there). O foremost of sages! At that very place, Lord Krishna Dvaipāyana (Veda Vyāsa), absorbed in yoga, engaged himself in deep austerities for the purpose of obtaining a son. His wish was to have a son who would be endowed with the brilliance of fire, earth, sky, and wind. With this resolve, he worshipped the Lord of the Devas in a manner that is most difficult for those of undisciplined mind to perform. At first, Vyāsa worshipped the many-formed Umāpati Mahādeva subsisting only on air. On that peak of Meru resided the Brahmarṣis, Devarṣis, the Lokapālas, the eight Vasus, the Sādhyas, the Ādityas, the Rudras, the Sun, the Moon, the Gandharva Viśvāvasu and others, Siddhas, and Apsarās. There, Lord Rudra Mahādeva, adorned with a garland of auspicious oleander flowers, shone like the autumn full moon. In that divine and delightful forest, filled with the Lord and the Devarṣis,

Vyāsa, endowed with supreme yoga, continued his worship for the sake of obtaining a son. During this period of austerity, his complexion did not become pale, nor did he feel any weariness. This was a wondrous event for the entire three worlds. Instead of fatigue or weakness, his matted locks blazed like tongues of fire, radiating the splendour of his great penance. O Nārada! By such austerity and devotion, Umāpati Maheśvara became exceedingly pleased and prepared to grant him a boon. Then Lord Tryambaka, smiling, spoke to Vyāsa. ।।2–10।।



माला पहना वे भगवान् शंकर शारदीय पूर्णिमा के चन्द्र की तरह विराजित थे। उस देवता एवं देवर्षिगण से परिपूर्ण दिव्य रम्य वन में परमयोग युक्त व्यासदेव पुत्रलाभार्थ आराधना कर रहे थे। उस तपःश्चरण काल में भी उनका वर्ण म्लान नहीं था तथा वे किसी भी प्रकार की ग्लानि से रहित थे। यह समस्त त्रैलोक्य हेतु अद्भुद् घटना थी। क्लान्ति किंवा ग्लानि के स्थान पर उनकी जटा मानो अग्नि शिखा के समान तेजदीप्त लग रही थी। इससे उन महातेजस्वी योगी व्यास की जटा तो प्रज्वलन्त सी प्रतीत हो रही थी। हे नारद ! उन तपस्वी की इस तपस्या तथा भक्ति द्वारा उमापति महेश्वर अत्यन्त प्रसन्न हो गये तथा उनके लिये वरदानोद्यत हो गये। भगवान् त्र्यम्बक ने तब हंसते हुये व्यास से कहा- ।।११-१५।।

Wearing a garland, Lord Shankara shone like the moon of the Sharad Purnima. In that divine and delightful forest, filled with that deity and the Devarṣis, the supremely yogic Vyāsadeva was engaged in worship for the purpose of obtaining a son.

Even during that period of austerity, his complexion did not fade, nor was he afflicted by any weariness. This was a marvellous event for the entire three worlds. Instead of fatigue or weakness, his matted locks appeared to glow like tongues of fire, making the great and radiant yogi Vyāsa's hair seem ablaze.

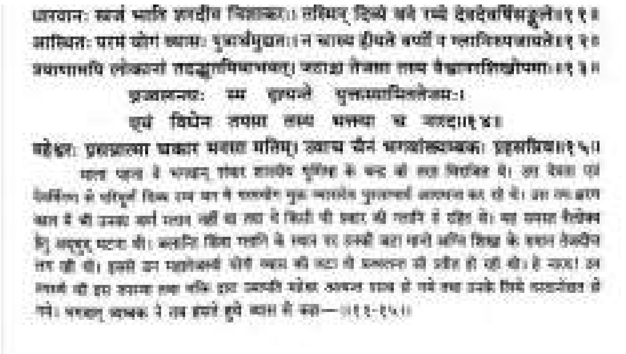
O Nārada! By that austerity and devotion, Umāpati Maheśvara became exceedingly pleased and prepared to grant him a boon. Then Lord Tryambaka, smiling, spoke to Vyāsa. ।।11–15।।

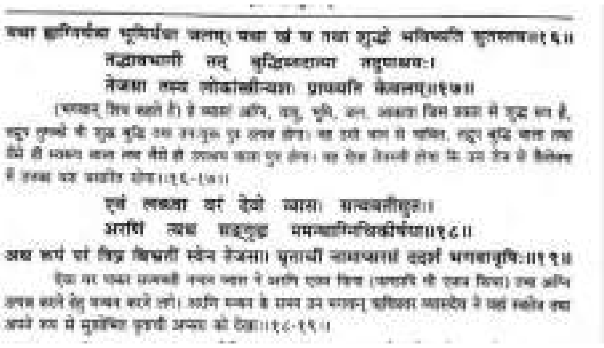


(भगवान् शिव कहते हैं) हे व्यास! अग्नि, वायु, भूमि, जल, आकाश जिस प्रकार से शुद्ध रूप है, तद्रूप तुमको भी शुद्ध बुद्धि तथा तपःयुक्त पुत्र उत्पन्न होगा। वह उसी भाव से भावित, तद्रूप बुद्धि वाला तथा वैसे ही स्वरूप वाला तथा वैसे ही उपाश्रय वाला पुत्र होगा। वह ऐसा तेजस्वी होगा कि उस तेज से त्रैलोक्य में उनका यश प्रसारित रहेगा।।१६-१७।।

ऐसा वर पाकर सत्यवती नन्दन व्यास ने अरणि एकत्र किया (काष्ठादि भी एकत्र किया) तथा अग्नि उत्पन्न करने हेतु मन्थन करने लगे। अरणि मन्थन के समय उन भगवान् ऋषिप्रवर व्यासदेव ने वहां स्वतेज तथा अपने रूप से सुशोभित घृताची अप्सरा को देखा।।१८-१९।।

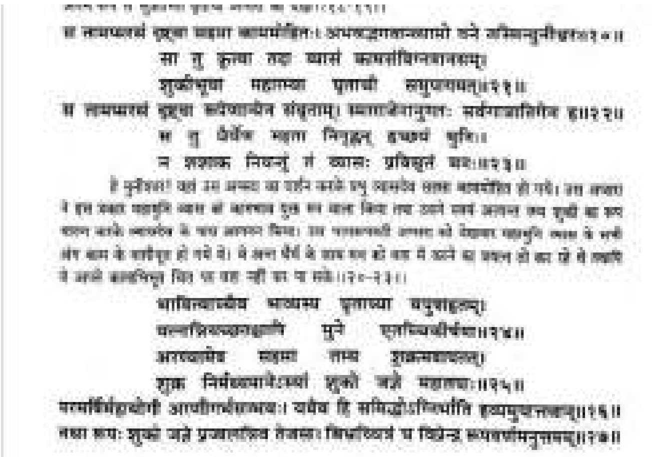
"O Vyāsa! Just as fire, air, earth, water, and space are pure in nature, in the same way you shall have a son who will be endowed with pure intellect and ascetic power. He will be of the same nature, the same intellect, the same form, and the same refuge as yourself. His brilliance will spread your fame throughout the three worlds." ।।16–17।।

Receiving this boon, Satyavatī's son Vyāsa gathered the araṇi sticks (and other materials) and began to churn them to produce fire. During this churning of the araṇi, the illustrious sage Vyāsa beheld the celestial apsarā Ghṛtācī, resplendent with her own beauty and radiance. ।।18–19।।



हे मुनीश्वर! वहां उस अप्सरा का दर्शन करके प्रभु व्यासदेव सहसा काममोहित हो गये। उस अप्सरा ने इस प्रकार महामुनि व्यास को कामभाव युक्त मन वाला किया तथा उसने स्वयं अत्यन्त रम्य शुकी का रूप धारण करके व्यासदेव के पास आगमन किया। उस परमरूपवती अप्सरा को देखकर महामुनि व्यास के सभी अंग काम के वशीभूत हो गये थे। वे अन्त धैर्य के साथ मन को वश में करने का प्रयत्न तो कर रहे थे तथापि वे अपने कामाभिभूत चित्त पर वश नहीं कर पा सके।।२०-२३।।

O foremost of sages! Seeing that apsarā, Lord Vyāsa was suddenly overcome with desire. That apsarā, thus arousing desire in the great sage, assumed the exceedingly beautiful form of a female parrot (śukī) and approached Vyāsa. Beholding her supreme beauty, all the limbs of the great sage Vyāsa became subject to passion. Though he tried with utmost patience to control his mind, he was unable to master his desire-filled heart. ।।20–23।।

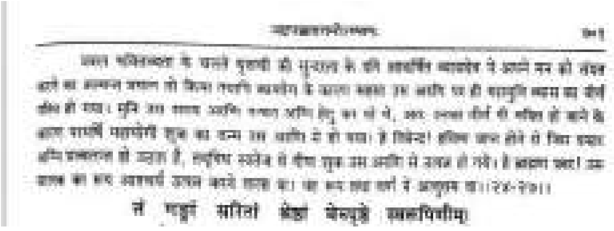


प्रबल भवितव्यता के चलते घृताची की सुन्दरता के प्रति आकर्षित व्यासदेव ने अपने मन को संयत करने का अत्यन्त प्रयत्न तो किया तथापि कामवेग के कारण सहसा उस अरणि पर ही महामुनि व्यास का वीर्य पतित हो गया। मुनि उस समय अरणि मन्थन अग्नि हेतु कर रहे थे, अतः उनका वीर्य भी मथित हो जाने के कारण परमर्षि महायोगी शुक का जन्म उस अरणि से हो गया। हे विप्रेन्द्र ! हविष्य प्राप्त होने से जिस प्रकार अग्नि प्रज्वलन्त हो उठता है, तद्विध स्वतेज से दीप्त शुक उस अरणि से उत्पन्न हो गये। हे ब्राह्मण प्रवर ! उस बालक का रूप

आश्चर्य उत्पन्न करने वाला था। वह रूप तथा वर्ण में अत्युत्तम था।।२४-२७।।

Due to the force of destiny, although Vyāsadeva was deeply attracted to Ghṛtācī's beauty and made the utmost effort to restrain his mind, the surge of passion suddenly caused his seed to be discharged right there upon the araṇi. At that time, the sage was churning the araṇi to produce fire, and because his seed too was churned in the process, the great ṛṣi and supreme yogi Śuka was born from that araṇi.

O foremost of Brāhmaṇas! Just as fire blazes forth upon receiving the offering (haviṣ), in the same way the self-radiant Śuka, glowing with his own brilliance, emerged from that araṇi. O best of Brāhmaṇas! The form of that boy was astonishing—most excellent in both form and complexion. ।।24–27।।



उस समय यह स्थावर-जंगममय संसार शुकदेव के जन्म की घटना के कारण आनन्दाप्लुत हो गया था। महातेजस्वी महात्मा शंभु भी महाद्युति देवी के साथ प्रसन्न होकर वहां आ गये। हे मुनिवर ! उन्होंने स्वयं सद्यः उत्पन्न शुक का उपनयन कराया। देवराज इन्द्र ने उस बालक शुक को परमदिव्य अद्भुत दर्शन कमंडलु

At that moment, the entire world of moving and unmoving beings was filled with joy at the event of Śukadeva's birth. The great and radiant Mahātmā Śaṁbhu, along with the resplendent Goddess, came there in delight.

O great sage! He Himself performed the sacred thread ceremony (upanayana) of the newly-born Śuka. The King of the Devas, Indra, presented that boy Śuka with a supremely divine and wondrous water pot (darśana kamaṇḍalu).

“Although the context of the Nārada Purāṇa (2.58) itself makes the story of Śukadeva’s birth clear, let us also consider the explanation of Paṇḍit Madhvācārya Śāstrī on this episode, as given in Purāṇa Digdarśana (p. 691/788).”

समाधान उक्त कथा में भी व्यास जी के अमोघवीर्य की ही महिमा लक्षित होती है । जब कि तप के प्रभाव से रजोवीर्य के त्रिना भी मानसी सन्तान का उत्पन्न हो जाना नेदादि शास्त्रों में लिखा है, तब स्थूल शरीर की कारण सामग्री से परिपूरित अमोध वीर्य के द्वारा पुत्र का उत्पन्न हो जाना किसी प्रकार भी असम्भव नहीं कहा जा सकता। मानसी किंवा तापसी सृष्टि का वर्णन वेदों में डंके की चोट किया है, यथा– (क) मनसो रेतः प्रथमं यदासीत् । (अथर्व १६ । ५२ । १) (ख) श्रद्धाया दुहिता तपसोऽधिजाता स्वसा ऋषीणां भूतकृतां बभूव । (अथर्व ६ । १३३ ।४) अर्थात् (क) सृष्टि के आरम्भ में 'मनसो रेतः' ही था। (ख) श्रद्धा की पुत्री तप से उत्पन्न हुई थी, सूत्रधार ऋषियों को बहिन लगती थी। मानसिक वीर्य जो कि सृष्टि के इसलिए व्यास जी ने अपने अमोघवीर्यगत एक विशिष्ट कीटाणु को पूर्वप्रशित पद्धति के अनुसार परिपुष्ट करके पुत्ररूप में परिणत कर लिया तो इसमें आश्चर्य की क्या बात हुई ?

Even in the cited narrative, the glory of Vyāsa Ji’s infallible virility (amogha-vīrya) is clearly evident. The scriptures, including the Vedas and allied texts, affirm that through the power of austerity (tapas), even the subtlest reproductive essence (rajo-vīrya) can give rise to mental progeny (mānasa santāna). Therefore, the birth of a son through the fully potent, materially enriched amogha-vīrya cannot be deemed impossible by any means. The concept of mental or ascetic creation (mānasa or tāpasī sṛṣṭi) is boldly proclaimed in the Vedas, as seen in the following verses: (a) “The first seed of creation was born of the mind.” — Atharva Veda 16.52.1 (b) “The daughter of Faith (śraddhā) was born of austerity; she became the sister of the sages, the creators of beings.” — Atharva Veda 6.133.4

Thus, in the beginning, creation emerged from the mental seed (manaso retaḥ). The daughter of Faith, born of tapas, was considered the sister of the founding sages. Therefore, when Vyāsa Ji, through his amogha-vīrya, cultivated a specific germ using the method of pre-infusion (pūrvapraśita paddhati) and transformed it into a son, what is there to be surprised about?

समाधान

उक्त कथा में श्री व्यास जी के अमोघवीर्य की ही महिमा लक्षित होती है। जब कि दक्ष के पैदा होने से पूर्व स्त्रियों के बिना भी मानसी सन्तान का उत्पन्न हो जाना वेदादि शास्त्रों में लिखा है, तब स्थूल शरीर की कारण सामग्री से परिपुष्ट अमोघ वीर्य के द्वारा पुत्र का उत्पन्न हो जाना किसी प्रकार भी असम्भव नहीं कहा जा सकता। मानसी किंवा तपसी सृष्टि का वर्णन वेदों में अनेक जगह किया है, यथा—

(क) मनसो रेतः प्रथमं यदासीत्। (अथर्व १९।५२।१)

(ख) श्रद्धाया दुहिता तपसोऽधिजाता स्वसा ऋषीणां भूतकृतां बभूव। (अथर्व ६।१३३।४)

अर्थात्—(क) सृष्टि के आरम्भ में 'मनसो रेतः'—मानसिक वीर्य ही था। (ख) श्रद्धा की पुत्री तप से उत्पन्न हुई थी, जो कि सृष्टि के सूत्रधार ऋषियों की बहिन मानी थी।

इसलिए व्यास जी ने अपने अमोघवीर्यगत एक विशिष्ट कीटाणु को पूर्वप्रशित पद्धति के अनुसार परिपुष्ट करके पुत्ररूप में परिणत कर लिया तो इसमें आश्चर्य की क्या बात हुई ?

15. Sage Devarata

📚Skanda Purana 6.1.29.36-47📚
In the meanwhile, at the advent of spring season, Menakā, the excellent Apsarā (celestial woman), happened to come to the mortal world. In course of her wandering, she reached the excellent forest named Rāmyaka reverberating with the cooings of inebriate cuckoos. It abounded in charming trees. It was there that the tiger among sages, remembered as Devarāta, stayed. He was richly endowed with the practice of holy vows and regular study of the Vedas. With regular enance, he had dispelled all sins. In that longly forest he lived alone, practising the adoration of deities with excessive ardour and faith. Once he was sitting on the bank of the river. The celestial damsel of excellent complexion was distressed due to the heat of the sun. Even as the sage was watching she disrobed herself revealing her exquisitely divine features and entered the water. On seeing the lady of excellent limbs diving into the watery expanse, instantly the leading sage involuntarily discharged his semen. In the meantime an extremely thirsty doc came there. The water of the river with which the semen of the sage had got mixed was completely drunk up by her. By the power of the sage whose semen could never be futile, the doe conceived a human foetus.

13. Sage Dadhica

Sage Dadhica released his semen into the river Sarasvati upon encountering the Apsara Alambusa,

📚Mahabharata 9.51.5-9📚
In days of yore, O monarch, there was an intelligent sage of great ascetic merit. He was celebrated by the name of Dadhica. Possessing a complete control over his senses, he led the life of a brahmacari...At last the chastiser of Paka, for tempting the sage, despatched unto him the exceedingly beautiful and celestial apsara, by name Alambusa. Thither where on the banks of the Sarasvati the high souled sage was engaged in the act of gratifying the gods, the celestial damsel named above, O monarch, made her appearance. Beholding that damsel of beautiful limbs, the vital seed of that ascetic of cleansed soul came out."

12. Sage Mankana

📚Vamana Purana Satomahatmya 17.2-5📚
Lomaharsana said The sage Mankana was the mind-born son of Kasyapa. He was ready to bathe with his valkala in his hand. There came Rambha taking good, bright and charming ther Apsarases and began to take their bath by his side. At this due to excitement of passion his semen dropped in the water. The great sage collected that semen in a jar. That semen in the jar became differentiated into seven portions. Out of them were born seven Rsis who are known as the Marut hosts."

📚Mahabharata 9.38📚
Listen now to a great feat of Mankanaka, who had from his youth led the life of a brahmacari. While employed in performing his ablutions in the river, he beheld (one day), O Bharata, a woman of faultless limbs and fair brows, bathing in the river at will, her person uncovered. At this sight, O monarch, the vital seed of the Rishi fell unto the Sarasvati. The great ascetic took it up and placed it within his earthen pot. Kept within that vessel, the fluid became divided into seven parts. From those seven portions were born seven Rishis from whom sprang the (nine and forty) Maruts

11. Sage Vibhandaka

📚Mahabharata 3.110.34-35📚
And that son of Kasyapa, Vibhandaka, having proceeded to a big lake, devoted himself to the practice of penances. And that same saint, comparable to a god, laboured for a long period. And once while he was washing his mouth in the waters, he beheld the celestial nymph Urvasi–whereupon came out his seminal fluid."

📚Mahabharata 1.131.1-9📚
Vaisampayana said, 'There dwelt at the source of the Ganga, a great sage named Bharadwaja, ceaselessly observing the most rigid vows. One day, of old, intending to celebrate the Agnihotra sacrifice he went along with many great Rishis to the Ganga to perform his ablutions. Arrived at the bank of the stream, he saw Ghritachi herself, that Apsara endued with youth and beauty, who had gone there a little before. With an expression of pride in her countenance, mixed with a voluptuous languor of attitude, the damsel rose from the water after her blutions were over. And as she was gently treading on the bank, her attire which was loose became disordered. Seeing her attire disordered, the sage was smitten with burning desire. The next moment his vital fluid came out, in consequence of the violence of his emotion. The Rishi immediately held it in a vessel called a Drona. Then, O king, Drona sprang from the fluid thus preserved in that vessel by the wise Bharadwaja. And the child thus born studied all the Vedas and their branches.

8. Sage Satyadharti

📚Vayu Purana 2.37.198📚
On seeing an Apsaras (celestial damsel) in front, the semen virile of Satyadhrti was emitted in the bush of Sara-grasa and twins were born."

📚Matsya Purana 50.10📚
At the sight of a nymph, Satyadhriti cast his seed in a pool of water, out of which, one son and a daughter were born."

Like Father like Son,

📚Shrimad Bhagavatam 9.21.35📚
The son of Satananda was Satyadhṛti, who was expert in archery, and the son of Satyadhṛti was Saradvan. When Saradvan met Urvasi, he discharged semen, which fell on a clump of sara grass. From this semen were born two all-auspicious babies, one male and the other female."

📚Vayu Purana 1.37.196-198📚
Ahalya bore Satananda the excellent sage to Saradvata. His son was Satyadhrti of great fame. He was a master of the science of archery. On seeing an Apsaras (celestial damsel) in front, the semen virile of Satyadhrti was emitted in the bush of Sara grass and twins were born."

Refutation–

Now these Halala Putras — pedophile followers — have begun hurling baseless ccusations against Rishis In truth, the Rishis were normal human beings, just like us, in the early stages of their sādhanā.

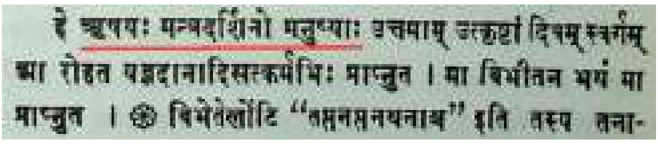
Ācārya Sāyaṇa, in his commentary on Atharvaveda 18.3.64, makes this explicitly clear:

“ऋषयः मंत्रदर्शिनो मनुष्याः”
“The Ṛṣis — seers of the mantras — are humans.”



हे ऋषयः मन्त्रदर्शिनो मनुष्याः उत्तमाम् उत्कृष्टां दिवम् स्वर्गम् आ रोहत यज्ञदानादिसत्कर्मभिः प्राप्नुत । मा बिभीतन भयं मा प्राप्नुत । ⊛ बिभेतेर्लोटि “तप्तनप्तनथनाश्च” इति तस्य तना-

Before they had fully mastered their senses and completed their austerities, some were at times overcome by Kāma (desire) and felt attraction toward the Apsarās.

As the Atharvaveda states:

अथर्ववेदः / काण्डं ४/ सूक्तम् ३७ –
यद्धस्ताभ्यां चकृम किल्बिषाण्यक्षाणां गत्नुमुपलिप्समानाः ।
उग्रंपश्ये उग्रजितौ तदद्याप्सरसावनु दत्तामृणं नः ॥
उग्रंपश्ये राष्ट्रभृत्किल्बिषाणि यदक्षवृत्तमनु दत्तं न एतत्।
ऋणान् नो न ऋणमेर्त्समानो यमस्य लोके अधिरज्जुरायत्॥

Here, Kāma — love or desire — is described as being under the influence of Apsarās such as Urvaśī:

अप्सरसाम् उर्वशीप्रभृतीनां संबंधी अयं स्मरः कामः । तदधीने वर्तत इत्यर्थः ।

This is why even advanced sages, in the earlier stages of their tapas, could be swayed by the beauty and māyā of celestial Apsaras.

But the truly great Rishis — such as Rishi Mārkaṇḍeya, Nara-Nārāyaṇa Rishi, and millions of other Rishis — had attained complete mastery over their senses through intense austerities and unwavering meditation upon the Supreme Lord. They rose entirely above such temptations. Having conquered lust and anger, they remained immovable even before the most alluring and seductively beautiful Apsarās, untouched by their most potent illusions.

THE STORY OF NARA–NĀRĀYAṆA RISHI: THEIR TRIUMPH OVER LUST AND COMPLETE MASTERY OF THE SENSES THROUGH INTENSE AND UNYIELDING PENANCE

Nara and Nārāyaṇa Rishi, who are considered incarnations of Lord Vishnu and whose later manifestations were Arjuna (as Nara) and Shri Krishna (as Nārāyaṇa), performed an intense and unparalleled penance in the holy region of Badarikāśrama, near present-day Badrinath Dham. The brilliance and power of their tapasya spread across the three worlds and caused even Indra, the king of the Devas, to become fearful of losing his position. To test the strength of their austerity and to divert their concentration, Indra sent many celestial nymphs (Apsarās) to allure and disturb them. However, such was the firmness of their vow and the purity of their meditation that the charms of the Apsarās could not shake them at all. Then, in order to teach Indra a lesson and demonstrate the futility of such temptations, Nārāyaṇa Rishi gently struck his own thigh and from it manifested the supremely beautiful Urvaśī, an Apsarā of unparalleled grace and charm, far surpassing all those sent by Indra. Awestruck and humbled, Indra realized the greatness of Nara-Nārāyaṇa and, bowing before them, returned to his abode with deep respect. This episode eternally glorifies the sages as symbols of supreme self-control, divine power, and unshakable devotion.

Srimad Bhagvatam Skanda 11 Adhaya 4 slokas 6- 16

6. As Nārāyaṇa and Nara, the foremost of the sages and of perfectly serene mind, he was born of Dharma and his spouse Mūrti, the daughter of Daksa. He expounded to sages (like Narada) the path of action leading to the realization of the Soul (who is characterised by actionlessness). He practised (an ideal type of) penance and his feet are still served (and worshipped) by prominent sages.
7. Suspecting with the apprehension that this sage (Nārāyaṇa-Nara) covets to take possession of his position (as the king of heaven), Indra deputed Kämadeva, the god of love, along with his troupe. Being ignorant of his (Nārāyana's) spiritual greatness, Kamadeva went with his paraphernalia-a bevy of celestial damsels, the vernal season and the gentle wind (from the sandal-forests of Malaya) to his hermitage at Badarī, and hit him with shafts in the forms of side-glances of heavenly damsels.
8. Knowing perfectly well that the indiscretion has been committed by Indra, he laughed loudly without even slightly feeling the touch of pride (at his own moral strength). He assured the trembling visitors, “O (mighty) god of Love, O (South) wind, O heavenly damsels, do not be afraid. Please accept our hospitality (If no hospitality is offered, the hermitage would be as good as void). May our hermitage be non-void (i. e. worthy of its existence).”

9. When the sage Narayana who removed their fear addressed them thus, the gods who bent their head low with shame, submitted to him, “O all-pervading Lord who are trans-cendental to the Mâyà, this unpurturbedness in you is not surprising. You are the Supreme Self subject to no modifications, and your lotus-feet are respected with obeisance by hosts of sages who revel in the bliss of self-realization.

10. (It is not surprising that we should behave according to our nature and create obstacles in your penance). A number of obstacles are created by gods in the path of your servants (devotees) who want to transcend the abode of gods (the heaven), and attain directly to your highest region. No impedi-ments obstruct the path of others who offer in sacrifices the respective shares of gods as oblations. But as you are the pro-tector of your devotees, your votary sets his foot on the heads of obstacles (and trampling them down ascends to Vaikuntha).

Kama, the spring season, heavenly ladies) saw women beautiful like goddess Śrī, (their pride for their own beauty was humbled down and) their own complexion became faded at the excellence of the superior beauty of those women and they were enraptur-ed with fragrance of their bodies.
14. The god of the Lord of gods (Narayana) laughingly told them who were bowing to him with humility, "Choose any one of these women who is suitable, as an ornament of the celes-tial world."
15. Saying "so be it", the servants of gods complied with his Command. They selected Urvaśī, the most beautiful among heavenly damsels and repaired to the celestial regions following her.
16. They paid their respects to Indra in the assembly of gods and while all gods were eagerly listening, described to him the superior spiritual power of Narayaṇa at which Indra was astonished and became afraid (at his indiscretion in offending Nārāyaṇa).

नारदजीने पूछा- त्रिपुरसूदन ! वे मुनि जन्म धारण करनेके पश्चात् वसिष्ठके भ्राता कैसे हो गये? वे दोनों मित्रावरुण इनके पिता कैसे कहलाये ? तथा अगस्त्य मुनिका घड़ेसे जन्म कैसे हुआ? (यह सब हम जानना चाहते हैं।) ॥ २० ॥
ईश्वरने कहा- नारद ! पूर्वकालमें पुराणपुरुष भगवान् विष्णु किसी समय धर्मके पुत्ररूपमें उत्पन्न होकर गन्धमादन पर्वतपर महान् तपस्यामें संलग्न उनकी तपस्यासे भयभीत हुए इन्द्रने उसमें विघ्न डालनेके लिये अप्सराओंके साथ वसन्त ऋतु और कामदेव-दोनोंको भेजा। उस समय श्रीहरि न तो उनके गाने, बजाने अथवा अङ्गराग आदिसे ही प्रभावित हुए, न वसन्त और कामदेवद्वारा उपस्थित किये गये विषय-भोगोंके प्रति ही उनका मन क्षुब्ध हुआ। यह देखकर कामदेव, वसन्त और अप्सराओंका समूह विषादमें डूच गया। तत्पश्चात् नरके अग्रज नारायणने उन्हें विशेषरूपसे क्षुब्ध करनेके हेतु अपने ऊरुप्रदेशसे एक ऐसी नारीको उत्त्पन्न किया, जो त्रिलोकोके मनुष्योंको मोहित करनेवालो थी। उस स्त्रीने समस्त देवताओं तथा उन दोनों देवश्रेष्ठोंको भलीभाँति क्षुब्ध कर दिया। उस मय श्रीहरिने अप्सराओंके सामने ही देवताओंसे कहा-

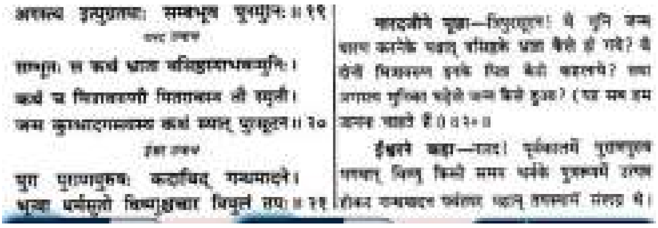
Nārada said:
“O Tripurasūdana (destroyer of the three cities)! After taking birth as human beings, how did those sages become the brothers of Sage Vasiṣṭha? How did Mitrā and Varuṇa become known as their fathers? And how was Sage Agastya born from a pot? We wish to know all this.” (Verse 20)

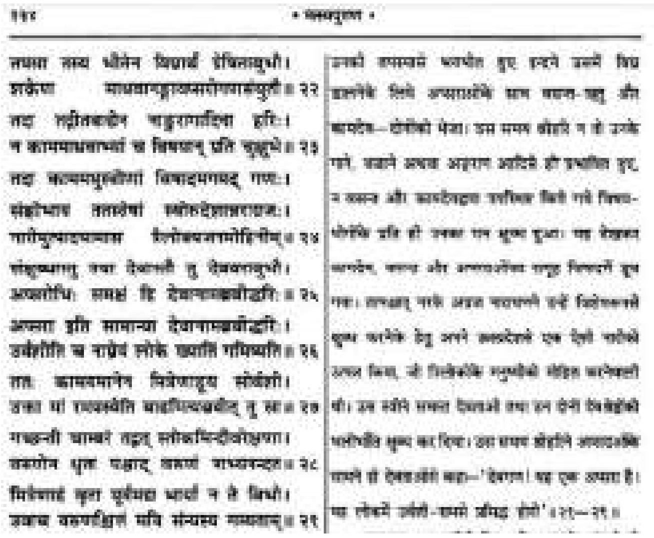
Īśvara (Śiva) said:
“Nārada! In ancient times, the eternal Lord Viṣṇu once took birth as the son of Dharma and engaged in great penance on Mount Gandhamādana. Seeing his severe austerities, Indra became fearful and, in order to create obstacles, sent along with the Apsarās the spring season (Vasanta) and Kāma (god of love).

At that time, Śrī Hari was neither affected by their singing, music, perfumes, and ornaments nor was his mind disturbed by the sensual enjoyments presented by Vasanta and Kāma. Seeing this, Kāma, Vasanta, and the group of Apsarās fell into deep dejection.

Then, Nārāyaṇa, the elder of the two brothers (Nara and Nārāyaṇa), to especially agitate them, produced from his own thigh a woman so enchanting that she could captivate all beings in the three worlds. That woman thoroughly disturbed all the gods and even those two foremost deities (Kāma and Vasanta).

At that moment, Śrī Hari said in front of the Apsarās to the gods:
'O Devas! This is an Apsarā. In the world, she will be renowned by the name Urvashī.'”





THE LEGEND OF RISHI MĀRKAṆḌEYA: HIS VICTORY OVER LUST AND ABSOLUTE MASTERY OF THE SENSES THROUGH STEADFAST AND AUSTERE PENANCE

“Another similar episode is described about Rishi Markandeya, considered a partial incarnation of Narayana. While he was engaged in intense penance, Indra sent numerous Apsaras to distract and tempt him. However, Rishi Markandeya remained completely unmoved by their beauty and steadfast in his tapasya. As a result of his unwavering devotion, he was ultimately blessed with the divine darshan of Nara and Narayana Rishi.”

Srimad Bhagvatam Skanda 12 Adhaya 8 Slokas 8-32

He observed the great vow of celibacy for life, was quiescent (as he brought passions under his control). He wore matted hair (on his head), bark garments, the sacred thread and the girdle of Kuśa grass. He carried a water jar of gourd and a staff in his hands.

He wore a deer skin and had a rosary of Rudrākşa beads and Kusa grass. For the enhancement of his disciplined life and merits, he worshipped Hari present in the (sacrificial) fire, the sun, his preceptor, Brāhmaṇas and within himself both in the morning and in the evening.

He brought food received as alms, both morning and in the evening, and offered it to his preceptor silently. If per-mitted by his preceptor, he partook of the food once (in a day) and observed fast if no permission was given (due to the arrival of an unexpected guest, etc.)

In this way, while absorbed in the performance of penance and Vedic studies, he engaged himself in worshipping Lord Hari for millions of years and conquered death which is extremely difficult to overcome.

By this (conquest over death) god Brahmā, Bhrgu, god Śiva, Dakşa and other sons of god Brahma (such as Narada and men, gods, manes and all other beings (in the world) marvelled greatly (at his wonderful achievement).

Possessed of austere penance, deep Vedic studies and self-control, he observed the great vow of life-long celibacy. All the distracting passions in his heart were destroyed. With his mind drawn within, that Yogin meditated upon the Supra-sensuous Lord Hari.

Even as the Yogin was engaged in concentrating his mind through the great Yoga on the Supreme person, a long period of time extending over six Manvantaras had passed away.

It is said that when Indra came to know of this (performance of penance) in the present seventh Manvantara, he became alarmed at it and began to create interruptions in it, O Brahmaṇa (Saunaka).

(with a view to interrupting his penance and pre- cipitating his own fall) he deputed to the sage, divine musicians, celestial dancing girls, Cupid (god of Love), the presiding deities of the spring season and the gentle breeze from the Malaya mountain wafting (love-exciting) fragrance as well as greed and pride, the sons (or the products) of rajas.

While the spring season (i.e. its presiding deity) and

All of them went to the northern slopes of the Himalayas where the river Puspabhadrā flows and to the slab of stone called Citra, O Lord (Saunaka).

The premises of that holy hermitage were adorned with sacred trees (like Aśvattha) and creepers, densely occupied with families of holy Brahmaṇa sages and were full of pools of holy crystal-clear water.

It was resonant with the melodious humming of in-toxicated bees and loud with the cooing of joyous cuckoos. It was full of the vivacious movements of ecstatic dancing of the peacocks and of the flights of various birds in joy (displaying their delight).

Bearing with it the cool spray of mountain cascades and embraced by fragrant flowers (and hence wafting their sweet scent), the (southern Malaya) wind entered and blew gently exciting the passion of love (in the hearts of men).

The spring season manifested itself with the rising moon as the face of the night (i. e evenings beautiful with the rising moon), with rows of tender leaves and branches of flowers and clusters of trees entwined with creepers (as if in close embrace).

Followed by the celestial singers (Gandharvas) with companies of artistes experts in vocal and instrumental music, and accompanied with a troupe of divine damsels, the god of love appeared with a bow and arrows.

Those servants of Indra saw the sage sitting steadfast with his eyes closed after offering oblations to the sacrificial fire, looking formidable (and hence unassailable) like fire in the human form.

The celestial damsels danced before him and the singers began to sing and the players of instrumental music played upon the Mrdanga, lute, Paṇavakas and horns.

While the spring season (i.e. its presiding deity) and son of rajas (Greed were trying to agitate his mind, Kama (the god of love) set his missile of five-pointed shaft[1] to his bow. 26-27. While Puñjika-sthali (a celestial damsel in her role of a temptress was plying with balls (in the presence of the sage), her slim waist was as if afflicted (and hence unstable) under the weight of her full breasts, wreaths of flowers were dropping from her hair. Her eyes were (as if) wandering (i.e. she was constantly looking) this way or that way. While she was running after the balls the wind blew away her fine garment (sāri) as the zone (which was fastened round it) got snapped (and slipped).

In this way, while the sage was concentrating his mind on the Lord by means of penance, study of the Vedas and self-control, Lord Visṇu, in order to shower his grace on him, manifested himself in the form of sages Nara and Nārāyaṇa

Feeling confident that the sage is now (as good as) subdued, Smara (the god of love) discharged that shaft, but like all the endeavours put forth by an unfortunate person, his attempt (against the sage) proved futile.

Thus while committing that offence against ʇhe sage, they were being scorched by his spiritual lustre (and being afraid of what would be the consequence of their offence) they ran away as children do after rousing a snake, O sage.

There is certainly nothing wonderful in the case of the great-souled ones, O Saunaka, that the great sage, despite his being thus attacked by the minions of Indra, was not affect-ed by anger, infatuation and such other perturbing feelings resulting from ahaṁkāra.

Perceiving the paleness of expression (on the coun-tenance) of Kama and his troop of followers and hearing from them the spiritual splendour and power of the Brahmaṇa sage, (even) the glorious lord of the celestial region (Indra) was extremely astonished.

In this way, while the sage was concentrating his mind on the Lord by means of penance, study of the Vedas and self-control, Lord Visṇu, in order to shower his grace on him, manifested himself in the form of sages Nara and Nārāyaṇa

In the Mahābhārata, Vana Parva, Adhyāya 233, ślokas 43–45 (Gita Press Gorakhpur edition, p. 1607/2580), it is mentioned that Maharaja Yudhiṣṭhira personally maintained and served food to ten thousand ūrdhvareta (lifelong celibate) Brahmacārī Rishis , in addition to thousands of other Veda-learned Brāhmaṇas, honouring them with golden-plate meals, garments, and due hospitality.

महाराज युधिष्ठिरके यहाँ अगासी हजार ऐसे स्नातक गृहस्थ थे, जिनका वे भरण-पोषण करते थे। उनमेंसे प्रत्येककी सेवामें तीस-तीस दासियाँ रहती थीं ।। ४३ ।। इनके सिवा दूसरे दस हजार और ऊर्ध्वरता यति उनके यहाँ रहते थे, जिनके लिये सुन्दर ढंगसे तैयार किया हुआ अन्न सोनेकी थालियोंमें परोसकर पहुँचाया जाता था ।। ४४ ।। मैं उन सब वेदवादी ब्राह्मणोंको अग्रहार (बलिवैश्वदेवके अन्तमें अतिथिको दिये जानेवाले प्रथम अन्न)-का अर्पण करके भोजन, वस्त्र और जलके द्वारा उनकी यथायोग्य पूजा करती थी ।। ४५ ।।

At King Yudhiṣṭhira's place there were eight thousand such snātaka

Besides these, there were another ten thousand ūrdhvareta yatis (ascetics of lifelong celibacy) living there, for whom well-prepared food was served on golden plates. (44)

I used to offer to all those Veda-knowing Brāhmaṇas the agrahāra (the first portion of food offered to a guest at the end of the Bali-Vaiśvadeva rite), and honour them appropriately with food, garments, and water. (45)

1.1 Shiva and Parvati

📚Skanda Purana 2.4.10.20📚
Śaṅkara and Bhavānī played the game of dice by way of fun formerly. Śaṃbhu was defeated by Gaurī in the game and let off naked. For that reason Śaṅkara became miserable while Gaurī was ever happy."

📚Skanda Purana 1.1.34.76📚
On hearing those words, Satī (chaste lady) Girijā laughingly spoke to him: "You know everything, O Baṭu. See, I shall play the game of dice today with Maheśa in front of you." After saying thus, the daughter of the Lord of Mountains, the most beautiful lady in the world, took up the dice cubes.

Even as the great sage stood witness, she stayed there and played the game with Bhava. The couple earnestly engaged in the game were observed by the sage Nārada. With his mind (pleasantly) influenced by surprise, the learned sage went on observing (the game) and he was extremely gratified. The chaste goddess engrossed in the game of dice was surrounded by her friends and attendants. She clashed with Śiva and played the game of dice fraudulently."

📚Padma Purana 6.122.21-32📚
Siva and Bhavani took to playing with dice as a sport. Laksmi, propitiated by Bhavani remained in the form of a cow. Formerly Parvati vanquished Siva in the game of dice, and sent him away naked. So this Siva is unhappy. Gauri always remains happy. He who gets victory first (passes) the year happily...On the first day, when the sun has risen, Govardhana should be worshipped in the morning and one should play the game of dice at night. Then cows should be decorated..."

1.2 Krishna

📚Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.69.20-22📚
There he saw the Lord playing at dice with His beloved consort and His friend Uddhava. Lord Kṛṣṇa worshiped Nārada by standing up, offering him a seat, and so on, and then, as if He did not know, asked him, "When did you arrive? What can needy persons like Us do for those who are full in themselves? In any case, My dear brāhmaṇa, please make My life auspicious." Thus addressed, Nārada was astonished. He simply stood up silently and went to another palace."

📚Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.56.5📚
As the people looked at Satrājit from a distance, his brilliance blinded them. They presumed he was the sun-god, Sūrya, and went to tell Lord Kṛṣṇa, who was at that time playing at dice."

📚Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.66.36📚
Distraught with fear, the people cried out to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, who was then playing at dice in the royal court: “Save us! Save us, O Lord of the three worlds, from this fire burning up the city!”

📚Varaha Purana 160.52-53📚
At Uttarakoti (the northern end), there is again Ganesa. Here Lord Krsna was playing dice with the Gopis. Merrily playing with them, the Lord won all of them and their wealth in the game. He gave them all to the Gopas who commemorated the event there.”

1.3 Aniruddha, the son of Krishna

📚Shrimad Bhagavatam 10.62.28-31📚
Very agitated to hear of his daughter’s corruption, Bāṇāsura rushed at once to the maidens’ quarters. There he saw the pride of the Yadus, Aniruddha. Bāṇāsura saw before him Cupid’s own son, possessed of unrivaled beauty, with dark-blue complexion… As He sat opposite His most auspicious lover, playing with her at dice, there hung between His arms a garland of spring jasmines that had been smeared with kuṅkuma powder from her breasts when He had embraced her. Bāṇāsura was astonished to see all this. Seeing Bāṇāsura enter with many armed guards, Aniruddha raised His iron club and stood resolute, ready to strike anyone who attacked Him.”

📚Vishnu Purana 5.28.10-28📚
After the wedding had been solemnized, several of the kings, headed by him of Kalinga, said to Rukmin, “This wielder of the ploughshare is ignorant of the dice, which may be converted into his misfortune: why may we not contend with him, and beat him, in play?” The potent Rukmin replied to them, and said, “So let it be:” and he engaged Balaráma at a game of dice in the palace. Balaráma soon lost to Rukmin a thousand Nishkas: he then staked and lost another thousand; and then pledged ten thousand, which Rukmin, who was well skilled in gambling, also won. At this the king of Kalinga laughed aloud, and the weak and exulting Rukmin grinned, and said, "Baladeva is losing, for he knows nothing of the game; although, blinded by a vain passion for play, he thinks he understands the dice." Halayudha, galled by the broad laughter of the Kalinga prince, and the contemptuous speech of Rukmin, was exceedingly angry, and, overcome with passion, increased his stake to ten millions of Nishkas. Rukmin accepted the challenge, and therefore threw the dice. Baladeva won, and cried aloud, "The stake is mine." But Rukmin called out as loudly, that he was the winner. "Tell no lies, Bala," said he: "the stake is yours; that is true; but I did not agree to it: although this be won by you, yet still I am the winner." A deep voice was then heard in the sky, inflaming still more the anger of the high-spirited Baladeva, saying, "Bala has rightly won the whole sum, and Rukmin speaks falsely: although he did not accept the pledge in words, he did so by his acts (having cast the dice)." Balaráma thus excited, his eyes red with rage, started up, and struck Rukmin with the board on which the game was played, and killed him… When Krishńa heard that Rukmin had been killed by his brother, he made no remark, being afraid of Rukminí on the one hand, and of Bala on the other…"

Refutation-

He gave refrence of Srimad Bhagavatam Skanda Purana and Padma Purana and other Puranas to Show that Lord Krishna , Balaram Ji and Maheshwar Shiva were gamblers . You can read the translation he gave for these scriptures. Everywhere the word game of dice is used there. Even today children and adults play dice game like ludo which is a direct inspiration of chausar but it can't be referred as gambling. I don't know how this Halala Putra concluded it as gambling.

Allegations-

2. Hindu Scriptures on Gambling

📚Yajnavalkya Smriti 2.199-203📚
The keeper of a gambling-house shall take from a gambler five per cent. When the wager is a hundred [panas or upwards], and ten per cent, in other cases. Being well protected [by the king], he shall give the promised share [of his gains] to the king; he shall recover the wager, and pay it to the winner, [and] being over patient, [shall speak] the truth. [Payment of] that which has been won publicly in an assembly of gamesters in the presence of the master of a gaming house, and when the king's share has been paid, shall be enforced, but not otherwise. The superintendents and witnesses in [gaming] transactions [should be] gamblers themselves. A man who plays with false dice, or by deceit, shall be branded and banished by the king. Gaming should be allowed under one supervision, as being a means of detecting thieves. This very law should be understood to apply in the case of Samahvaya [prize-fighting]."

📚Apastamba Dharmsutra 2.10.25.12-13📚
In the midst of the assembly-house, (the superintendent of the house) shall raise a play-table and sprinkle it with water, turning his hand downwards, and place on it dice in even numbers, made of Vibhîtaka (wood), as many as are wanted. Men of the first three castes, who are pure and truthful, may be allowed to play there."

📚Narada Smriti 17.2-8📚
The master of the gaming-house shall arrange the game and pay the stakes which have been won; the profit of such a conductor of games shall amount to ten percent. When the dice on being thrown fall twice in a game at dice, those acquainted with (playing at) dice allot the victory to the adversary and the defeat to the gambler. When a dispute has arisen among gamblers, let (other) gamblers be appealed to; they shall act both as judges and as witnesses in a dispute of this sort. No gambler shall ever enter into another gaming-house before having paid his debt; he must not disobey the master of the gaming-house, and must pay of his own accord what he owes to him. Wicked men who play with false dice shall be driven out of the gaming-house, after a wreath of the punishment ordained for them. If a man gambles with dice, without authorization from the king, he shall not get his stake, and shall have to pay a fine. Or let the gamblers pay to the king the share due to him and play in public, thus no wrong will be committed."

📚Brihaspati Smriti 26.1-8📚

Gambling has been prohibited by Manu, because it destroys truth, honesty, and wealth. It has been permitted by other (legislators) when conducted so as to allow the king a share (of every stake). It shall take place under the superintendence of keepers of gaming-houses, as it serves the purpose of discovering thieves. The same rule has to be observed in bets on prize-fights with animals…A wager (or game) shall be made in public; false gamblers shall be banished. When there is a point at issue between the two parties (in a game or wager, other) gamblers shall examine (and decide) the matter; if they are enemies (of either party), the king shall decide the dispute…The keeper of the gaming-house shall receive the stakes and pay the victorious gambler and the king; he shall also act as witness in a dispute, assisted by three other gamblers."

📚Katyayana Smriti Verse 935-943📚

If it (gambling) has to remain (has to be allowed) he (the king) should allow it to be done openly with an (ornamental) arcch erected near the door (of the gambling hall) in order that respectable people may not mistaken (about its real nature) and he should make it yield revenue (tax). The keeper of the gaming house should make the gambling go on and should himself pay to the king (the latter's) dues. He (the keeper) should take from the defeated party ten percent as his profit. The keeper should give to the winner his money (out of his own pocket) and he should recover from the defeated gambler within three fortnights or at once; there is no doubt (about this rule). Where (the throw) of a man playing with dice in gambling is the same or double (of the previous throw) there the (former) gambler is the winner and his protection (from the other gamblers) is to be arranged for. Or the gambler (himself), after giving to the king his share (of revenue) as declared, should carry on gambling openly. In this way he will be guilty of no fault. The keeper of the gaming house should make the defeated gambler forcibly pay what (the defeated) has to pay in the same place (i.e. in the gaming hall) and not elsewhere; since the procedure (in gambling matters) entirely rests with the keeper of the gaming house. A person ignorant (of gambling) if defeated (in gambling) should be released (from his liability), but one who knows gambling should not be released if he is defeated in secret (gambling); when one knowing gambling has lost his all (in a wager), he should not be made to pay his all. In disputes (among gamblers), in (deciding on) victory, in the matter of the gain (to the winner), and as regards the means (i.e. dice) of those who are (alleged to be) playing with false dice, the keeper of the gaming house, if he is honest, is the final authority."

📚Kautilya Arthashastra 3.20📚
With a view to find out spies or thieves, the Superintendent of gambling shall, under the penalty of a fine of 12 panas if played elsewhere, centralise gambling...The Superintendents of gambling shall, therefore, be honest and supply dice at the rate of a kakani of hire per pair. Substitution by tricks of hand of dice other than thus supplied shall be punished with a fine of 12 panas. A false player shall not only be punished with the first amercement and fines leviable for theft and deceit, but also be made to forfeit the stakes he has won. The Superintendent shall take not only 5 per cent of the stakes won by every winner, and the hire payable for supplying dice and other accessories of dice play, but also the fee chargeable for supplying water and accommodation, besides the charge for license..."

📚Matsya Purana 216.8📚
In course of gambling and at the game of dice one should show his skill to the king but make the latter win."

📚Agni Purana 253.13-30📚

(The term) debt (denotes that admitted) by a person as payable or that denied by him as not payable or that which is given as gift (to another). One's own property placed out of trust (with another) without any doubt is said by wise men to be a trust that is a matter of dispute. The place where the merchants and others collectively transact business (called) the active occupation is known to be a matter of dispute. If one wants to take back that he has paid (to another), that is called the withdrawer of a gift and is known to be the matter of dispute. Having agreed to do service (to another), if one refuses to do so, it (is known as) refusal to do service and is said to be a matter for dispute. The wage of a servant is said to be coming under the head of debts and the non-payment (of the same) is deemed to be a matter of dispute. If one sells the entrusted property of another or the lost (property of another) after having got it or having stolen it without the knowledge (of the owner), it is known to be selling of another's property. After having sold the goods for money if (the goods) are not made over to the buyer, it is non-delivery of sold (articles) and is a matter for dispute. If a purchaser opines that the articles bought are not good after having bought (it is also a disputable thing). That condition of a wicked (assuring) good conduct is said to be conventional practice. The transgression of the conventional practice is said to be a matter for dispute. The dispute that arises in respect of the right over the land that has been determined by a bridge or a field or drawn boundaries is said to be that (dispute) arising from the land. Where the marriage rite of men and women is declared that is named as the union of women and men and is a matter for dispute. That which is termed the division of the ancestral (property) by the sons is said to be the partition of the property and a matter of dispute by the wise men. A rash act done by those haughty of their strength is said to be a crime and is declared as a matter for dispute. It is said to be an abusive lańguage that (is spoken) out of hostility with reference to the country, caste and family and the like with gestures. It is said to be an assault if injury (is inflicted) on other's bodies with hands, feet, weapons and destructive materials such as the fire. It is said to be divine gambling (when it is played) with dice, vajra (diamond) and rod etc. It is termed as animal gambling (if it is played) with animals, and birds kept for pleasure. That dispute is again known to be a miscellaneous one if it does not rest on anything. The violation of the command of the king as well as not carrying out that command (also constitute an offence)."

📚Agni Purana 257.49-53📚

If the stake at gambling is in the multiples of hundreds, then the king's share would be five hundred (paṇas). If they are cheats and swindlers, then the king should take one thousand paṇas. The manager at the gambling house should run it properly and pay the king's share as laid down. The defeated person should be made to deposit the amount that is payable to the victor. One should hear the true words (of the gamblers) patiently. When the king has obtained his share in the reputed society of the gamblers, he should put the defeated in the midst of the gamblers to pay the fine. If not, he should not. They are who see and the witnesses in such transactions. Those who indulge in false die and fraudulent ways should be banished by the king along with the marks (on their person). There should be only one leader of the gambling house in order to know the cheats (in gambling). The same is the procedure in gambling with fighting animals and betting after setting animals to fight."

📚Shatapatha Brahmana 5.4.4.6-23📚

He then throws the five dice into his hand, with (Vâg. S. X, 28), 'Dominant thou art: may these five regions of thine prosper!'–now that one, the Kali, is indeed dominant over the (other) dice, for that one dominates over all the dice: therefore he says, 'Dominant thou art: may these five regions of thine prosper!' for there are indeed five regions, and all the regions he thereby causes to prosper for him…Thereupon the tribesman and the Pratiprasthâtri, with that sacrificial sword, prepare the gaming-ground, (close) by the original fire, with the puroruk verse of the Sukra. The Sukra is the eater: he thereby makes (him) the eater…The Adhvaryu then takes clarified butter in four ladlings, places a piece of gold on the gaming-ground, and offers with (Vâg. S. X, 29), 'May ample Agni, the lord of rites, delighted,–may ample Agni, the lord of rites, accept of the butter, hail!' He (the Adhvaryu) throws down the dice, with, 'Hallowed by Svâhâ, strive ye with Sûrya's rays for the middlemost place among brethren!' For that gaming-ground is the same as 'ample Agni,' and those dice are his coals, thus it is him (Agni) he thereby pleases; and assuredly in the house of him who offers the Râgasûya, or who so knows this, the striking 1 of that cow is approved of. On those dice he says, 'Play for the cow!' The two draught oxen of the original (hall-door) fire are the sacrificial fee."

📚Shatapatha Brahmana 5.3.1.10📚
And on the following day, having brought together gavedhukâ (seeds) from the houses of the Keeper of the dice (akshâvâpa) and the Huntsman (govikartana), he prepares a gavedhukâ pap for Rudra at the house of him who is consecrated. These two, while being two jewels (of the king), he makes one for the purpose of completeness. And as to why he performs this offering,–Rudra is hankering after that (cow) which is killed here in this hall; now Rudra is Agni (fire), and the gaming-board being fire, and the dice being its coals, it is him (Rudra) he thereby pleases. And verily whosoever, that knows this thus, performs the Râgasûya, in his house that approved (cow) is killed. And he, the keeper of dice, and the huntsman, are (each of them) assuredly one of his (the king's) jewels: it is for these two that he is thereby consecrated, and these two he makes his own faithful followers. The sacrificial fee for this (jewel) is a bicoloured bullock–either one with white fore-feet, or a white-tailed one,–a claw-shaped knife, and a dice-board with a horsehair band; for that is what belongs to those two."

Refutation–

First of all, let me tell you that gambling is a rajas sin in Hinduism. – Manusmriti 12.45.

Stick-fencers, wrestlers, actors, men subsisting by the use of weapons, those addicted to gambling and drinking,-represent the lowest state among those partaking of the quality of 'Rajas.'-(45)

What is a rajas sin? It is a sin which harms the sinner and not affect much to others. Sins like alcohol consumption, gambling etc. harms the sinner and not others. These things are criticized in Hinduism but not prohibited. For example; Indian constitution promise to oppose alcohol consumption but it is not prohibited completely because these things are one's personal choice. Simply hindu scriptures criticize gambling but not prohibit it completely. In Hinduism, one is free to do anything with his money and if he will gamble, he will do his own destruction. There are many places where gambling is criticized,

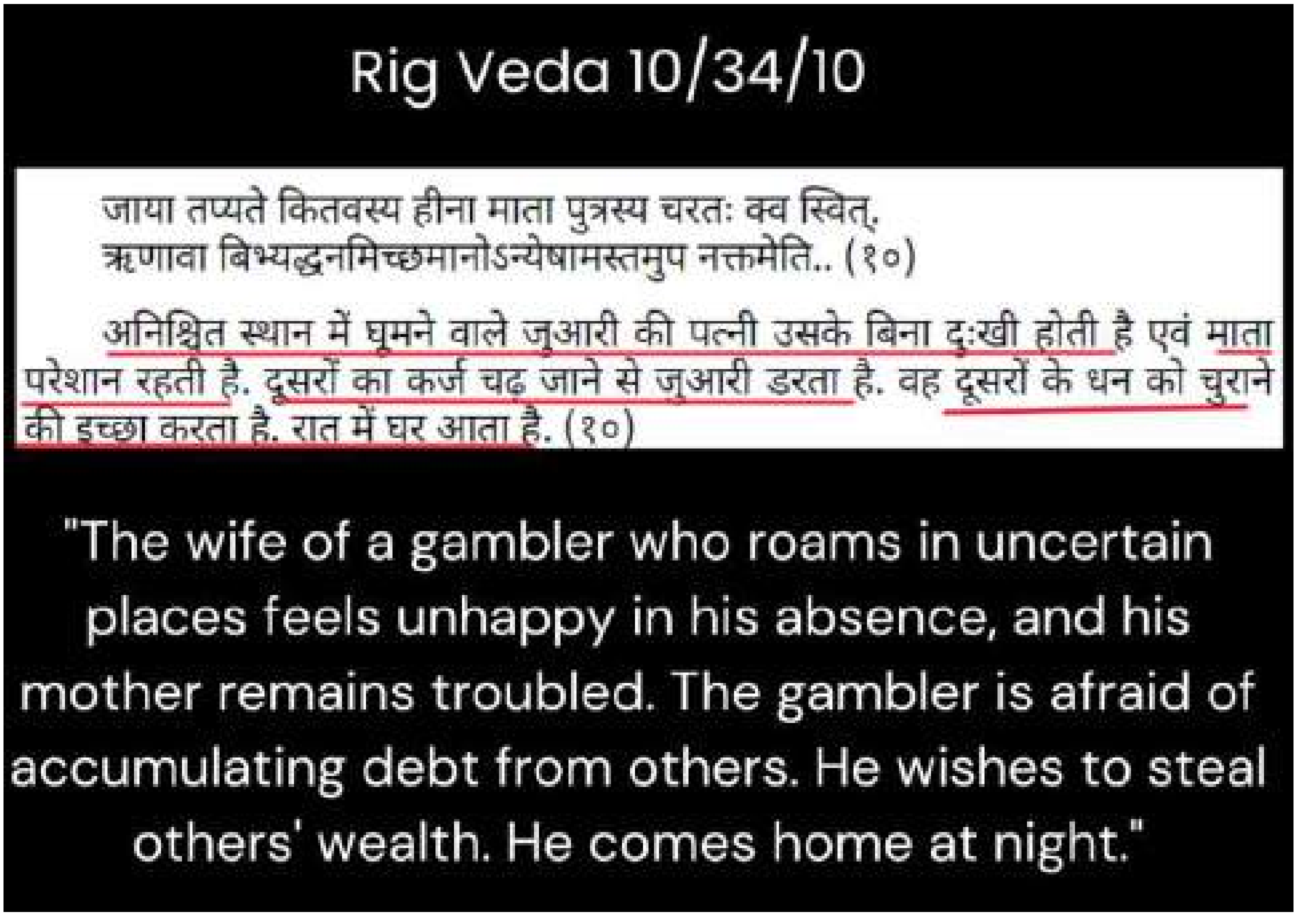
Rig Veda 10th Mandala Sukta 34th contains a criticism of Gambling

Rig Veda 10/34/10 अनिश्चित स्थान में घूमने वाले जुआरी की पत्नी उसके बिना दुःखी होती है एवं माता परेशान रहती है. दूसरों का कर्ज चढ़ जाने से जुआरी डरता है. वह दूसरों के धन को चुराने की इच्छा करता है. रात में घर आता है.

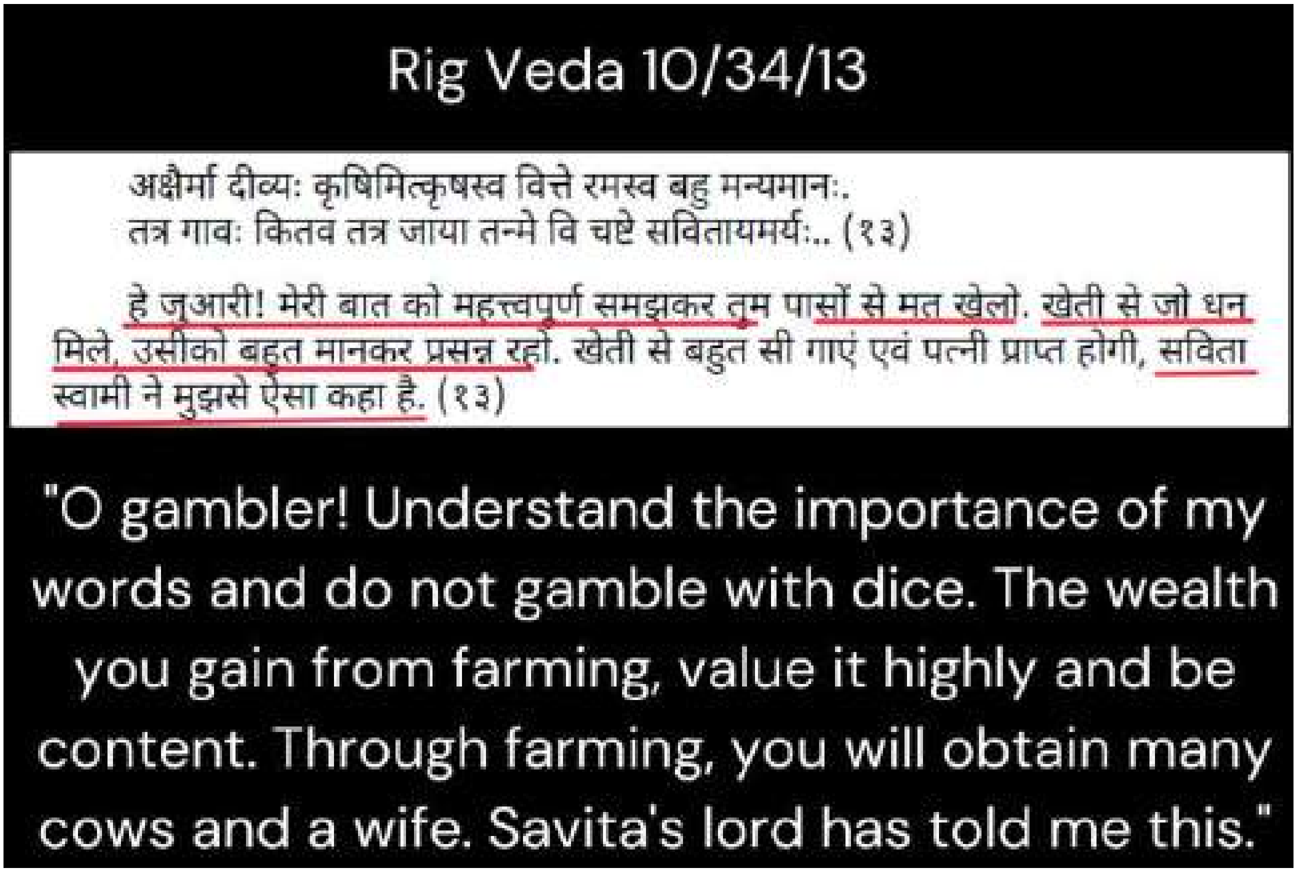
"The wife of a gambler who roams in uncertain places feels unhappy in his absence, and his mother remains troubled. The gambler is afraid of accumulating debt from others. He wishes to steal others' wealth. He comes home at night



Rig Veda 10/34/13

हे जुआरी ! मेरी बात को महत्त्वपूर्ण समझकर तुम पासों से मत खेलो. खेती से जो धन मिले, उसीको बहुत मानकर प्रसन्न रहो. खेती से बहुत सी गाएं एवं पत्नी प्राप्त होगी, सवितास्वामी ने मुझसे ऐसा कहा है

O gambler! Understand the importance of my words and do not gamble with dice. The wealth you gain from farming, value it highly and be content. Through farming, you will obtain many cows and a wife. Savita's lord has told me this



Rig Veda 10.34.3

सास जुआ खेलने वाले की निंदा करती है एवं पत्नी उसे छोड़ जाती है. यदि वह धन मांगे तो उसे कोई देने वाला नहीं मिलता. जिस प्रकार बूढ़े घोड़े का कुछ भी मूल्य नहीं लगता, उसी प्रकार मुझ जुआरी का कहीं आदर नहीं होता.

The mother-in-law condemns the gambler and the wife leaves him. If he asks for money, he finds no one to give it. Just as an old horse is of no value, I, a gambler, am not respected anywhere.

स्त्रियोंके प्रति आसक्ति, जूआ खेलना, शिकार खेलनेका शौक और मद्यपान—ये चार प्रकारके भोग कामनाजनित दुःख बताये गये हैं, जिनके कारण मनुष्य अपने धन-ऐश्वर्यसे भ्रष्ट हो जाता है। शास्त्रोंके निपुण विद्वान् सभी परिस्थितियोंमें इन चारोंको निन्दनीय मानते हैं; परंतु द्यूतक्रीडाको तो जूएके दोष जाननेवाले लोग विशेषरूपसे निन्दनीय समझते हैं ।। ७-८ ।।

जूएसे एक ही दिनमें सारे धनका नाश हो जाता है। साथ ही जुआ खेलनेसे उसके प्रति आसक्ति होनी निश्चित है। समस्त भोग-पदार्थोंका बिना भोगे ही नाश हो जाता है और बदलेमें केवल कटुवचन सुननेको मिलते हैं। कुरुनन्दन ! ये तथा और भी बहुत-से दोष हैं, जो जूएके प्रसंगसे कटु परिणाम उत्पन्न करनेवाले हैं। महाबाहो ! मैं धृतराष्ट्रसे मिलकर जूएके ये सभी दोष बतलाता ।। ९-१० ।।

“Through gambling, all of one’s wealth can be destroyed in a single day. Moreover, playing dice certainly leads to attachment toward it. All objects of enjoyment are lost without even being enjoyed, and in return, one only receives harsh words. O descendant of the Kurus! These and many more such faults arise from gambling and lead to bitter consequences. O mighty-armed one! I shall go to Dhritarashtra and explain to him all these evils of gambling.” (Verses 9–10)

The author gave some refrences which say that gambling was allowed in some conditions. As I already said hinduism doesn't prohibit gambling but heavily criticize it. Today, business investments are also like gambling but they are not considered wrong. Similarly, gambling was allowed in gambling house as said in Apastamba Dhamrasutra etc. but elsewhere, it is highly criticised .

Response to Vedkabhed and Hinduscript . Refutation of Human sacrifice in Hinduism and Purushmedha Yagya

Written by Rohan Saini in Uncategorized

This entire article is a response and rebuttal to the blogs called VedKaBhed and Hinduscript regarding their claims of Human Sacrifice in Hinduism".

Allegations-

Purushamedha (or Naramedha) is a Śrauta ritual of human sacrifice. The Vajasaneyi Samhita-Sataphana Brahmana-Katyayana Srauta Sutra sequence of Shukla Yajur Veda texts contains the most details." –

"Purusha" and "Nara" = 'man/human'

"Medha" and "Bali" = 'Sacrifice'

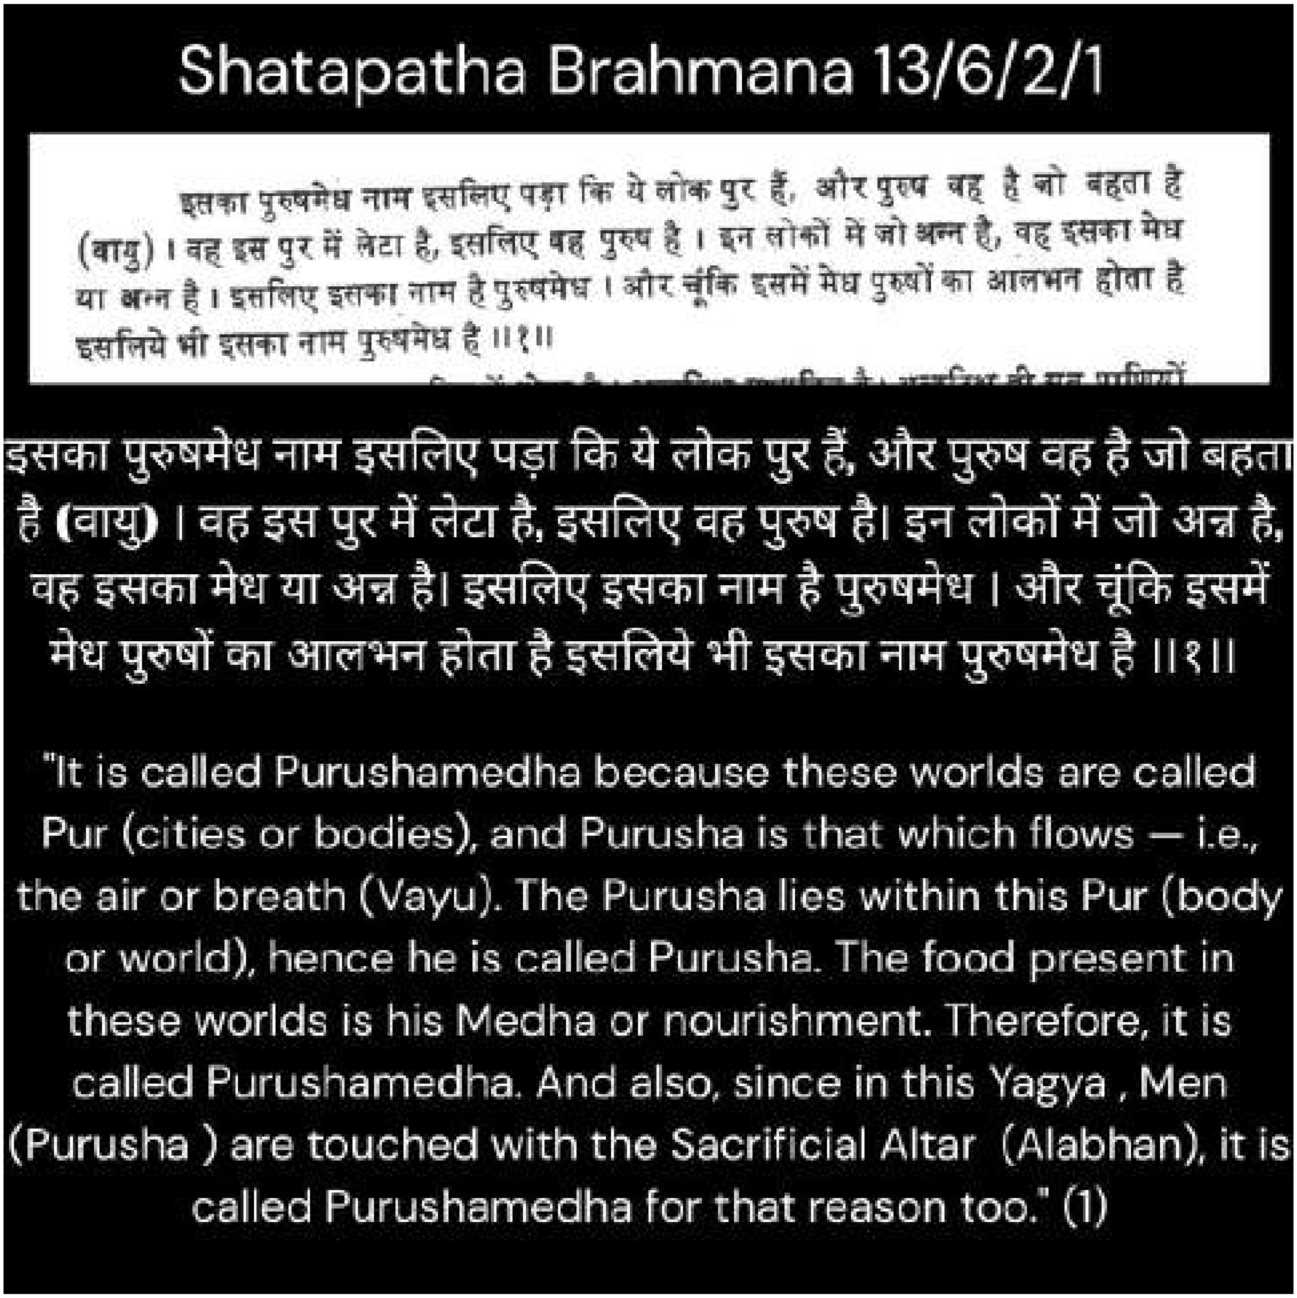
Refutation-

This is a totally wrong self made meaning of Purushmedha yagya . Shatapatha Brahmana 13/6/1 and Taittriya Brahmana 3/4 and Yajur Veda chapter 30 contains the full context and meaning of Purushmedha Yagya

Shatapatha Brahmana 13/6/2/1

इसका पुरुषमेध नाम इसलिए पड़ा कि ये लोक पुर हैं, और पुरुष वह है जो बहता है (वायु) । वह इस पुर में लेटा है, इसलिए वह पुरुष है। इन लोकों में जो अन्न है, वह इसका मेध या अन्न है। इसलिए इसका नाम है पुरुषमेध । और चूंकि इसमें मेध पुरुषों का आलभन होता है इसलिये भी इसका नाम पुरुषमेध है ।।१।।

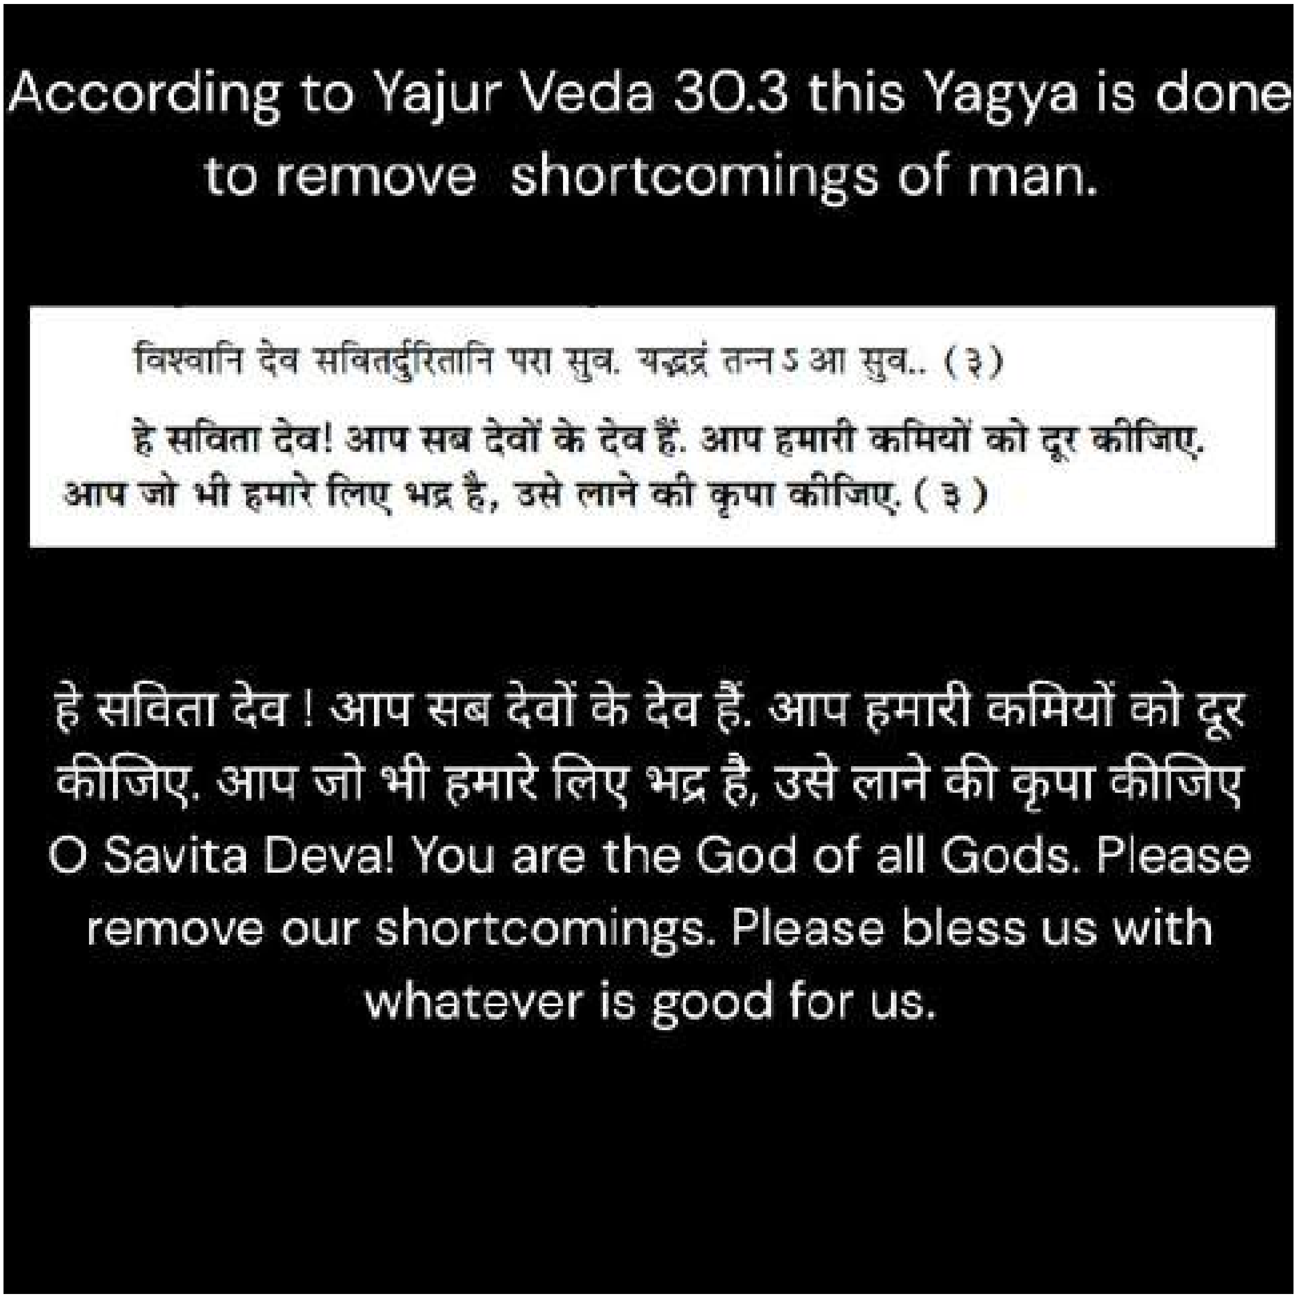
"It is called Purushamedha because these worlds are called Pur (cities or bodies), and Purusha is that which flows — i.e., the air or breath (Vayu). The Purusha lies within this Pur (body or world), hence he is called Purusha. The food present in these worlds is his Medha or nourishment. Therefore, it is called Purushamedha. And also, since in this Yagya , Men (Purusha) are touched with the Sacrificial Altar (Alabhan), it is called Purushamedha for that reason too." (1)



According to Yajur Veda 30.3 this Yagya is done to remove shortcomings of man.

हे सविता देव ! आप सब देवों के देव हैं. आप हमारी कमियों को दूर कीजिए. आप जो भी हमारे लिए भद्र है, उसे लाने की कृपा कीजिए

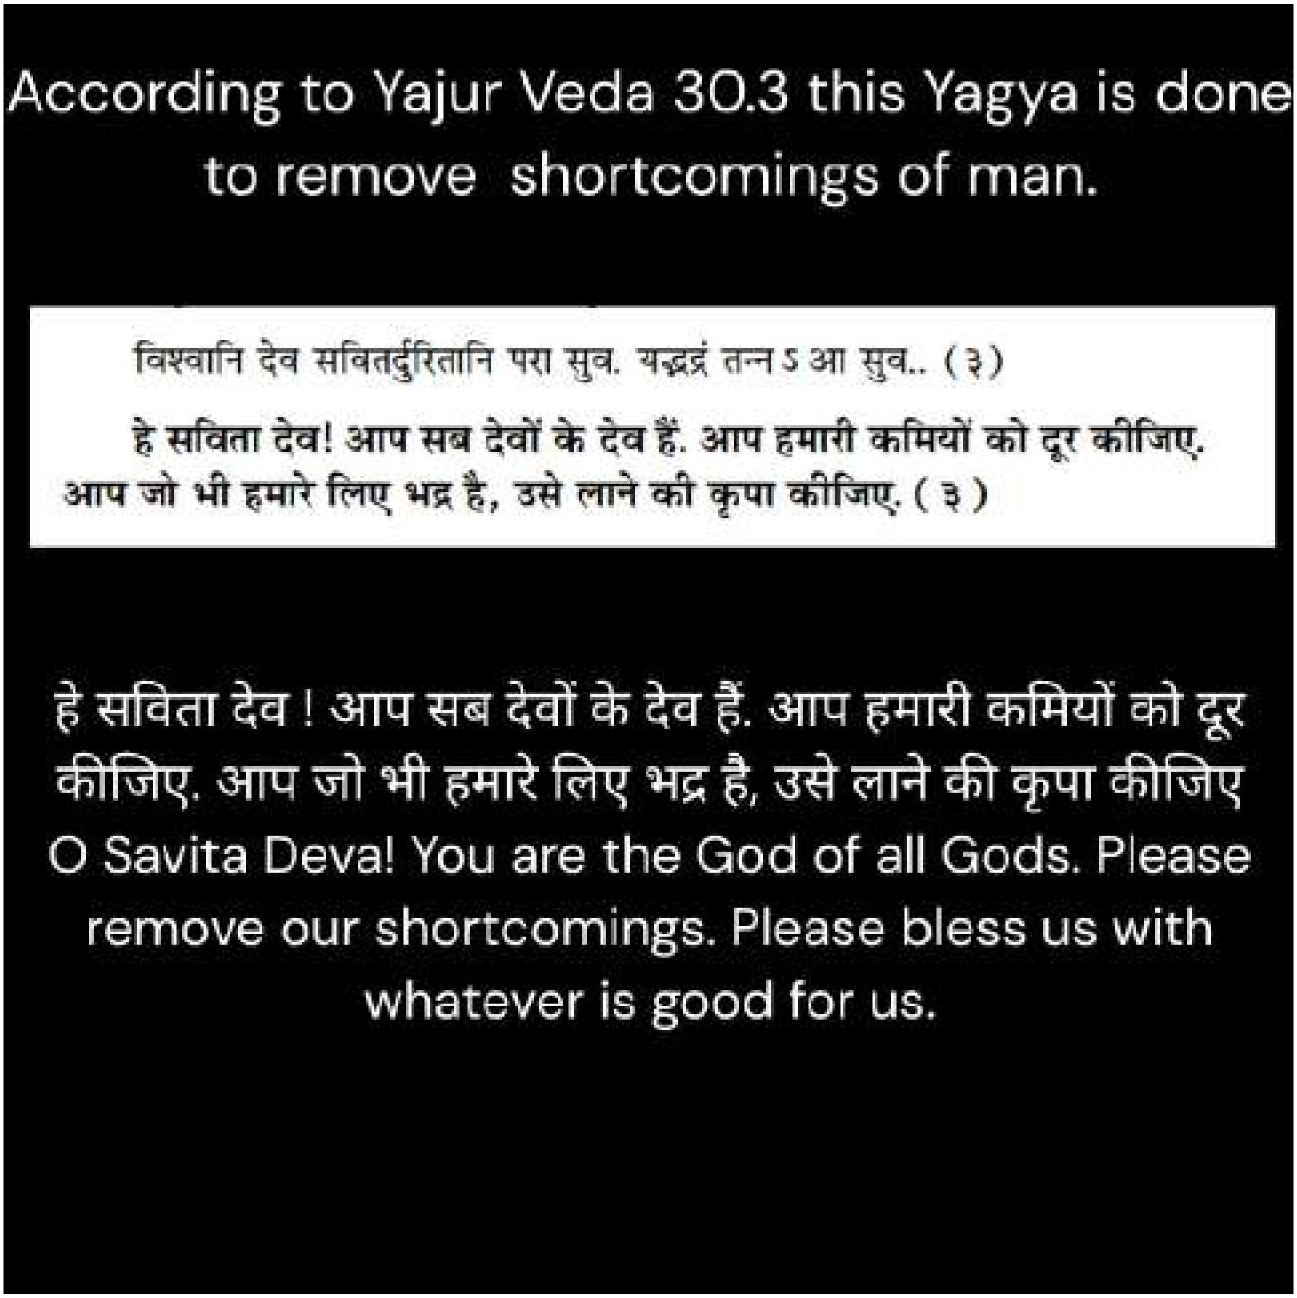
O Savita Deva! You are the God of all Gods. Please remove our shortcomings. Please bless us with whatever is good for us.



Yajur Veda 30.5

ब्राह्मण के लिए ब्रह्मज्ञान, क्षत्रिय के लिए रक्षण, वैश्य के लिए पालनपोषण, शूद्र के लिए सेवा कर्तव्य व उपयुक्त हैं. चोर के लिए अंधकार, नरक के लिए वीरघातक, नपुंसक के लिए पाप, खरीद के लिए पुरुषार्थी, काम के लिए व्यभिचारी अच्छी बोलने की शक्ति के लिए प्रमाण देने वाला उपयुक्त होता है

Brahma Gyan (knowledge of God) is suitable for Brahmin, protection for Kshatriya, upbringing for Vaishya, service and duty are suitable for Shudra. Darkness is suitable for thief, Veer Ghatak for hell, sin for Napunsak , hard working for purchase, adulterer for sex,



This mantra of Yajurveda(30/5) has been explained in Shatapatha Brahmana (13/6/2/10).

ब्रह्म के लिए ब्राह्मण का आलभन करता है, क्योंकि ब्राह्मण ब्रह्म है। इस प्रकार ब्रह्म को ब्रह्म से मिलाता है, क्षत्र के लिए राजन्य को। राजन्य क्षत्र है। इस प्रकार क्षत्र से क्षत्र को मिलाता है। मरुतों के लिए वैश्य को, क्योंकि मरुत् वैश्य हैं। इस प्रकार वैश्य को वैश्य से मिलाता है। तप के लिए शूद्र को, क्योंकि शूद्र तप है। इस प्रकार तप को तप से मिलाता है। इन-के रूपों के अनुसार वह इन देवताओं को पशुओं से सम्पन्न करता है। इस प्रकार सम्पन्न होकर वे यजमान को सब कामनाओं से सम्पन्न कर देते हैं

He offers the Brahmin for Brahman, because the Brahmin is Brahman. Thus, he unites Brahman with Brahman. For Kshatra (sovereign power), he offers the Rajanya (noble/warrior), because the Rajanya is Kshatra. Thus, he unites Kshatra with Kshatra. For the Maruts (storm deities), he offers the Vaishya, because the Maruts are Vaishyas. Thus, he unites Vaishya with Vaishya. For austerity (tapas), he offers the Shudra, because the Shudra is tapas. Thus, he unites tapas with tapas. According to these forms, he offers the deities with these symbolic 'animals' . Thus fulfilled, the deities in turn fulfill all the desires of the Yajamana

So In the next context of Purush Medh, it is also mentioned that for Brahma we should attain Brahmin. Since we get Brahma knowledge from Brahmin, therefore, one should attain Brahmin for learning about the Brahm . Similarly, we should be acquired the knowledge of war from Khetriya.For business we should be acquired Vaishya and for penance one must acquired Shudra, this is Purush Medh. Same thing is mentioned in Taittiriya Brahmana (3/4/1) also – "ब्रह्मणे ब्राह्मणमालभते । क्षत्राय राजन्यम् । मरुद्भ्यो वैश्यम् । तपसे शूद्रम् । "

According to Shatapath Brahmana 13/6/1/6 Purusha Medha is performed for the achievement and attainment of all and not to kill anyone.

ग्यारह क्यों होते हैं ? यह सब संसार ग्यारहवाला है, प्रजापति ग्यारहवाला है। प्रजापति सब-कुछ है। पुरुषमेध सब-कुछ है। सबकी उपलब्धि तथा प्राप्ति के लिए ।।६।।

“Why are there eleven? Because this entire world is made up of eleven. Prajapati (the Lord of Creation) is of eleven forms. Prajapati is everything. Purushamedha is everything. It is for the attainment and fulfillment of all (that these eleven are invoked).” (6)

2. Human Sacrifices

Following two verses (below) from Shatapatha Brahmana illustrates how the essence of sacrifices went from humans to animals,

📚Shatapatha Brahmana 1.2.3.6-7📚
At first, namely, the gods offered up a man as the victim. When he was offered up, the sacrificial essence went out of him. It entered into the horse. They offered up the horse. When it was offered up, the sacrificial essence went out of it. It entered into the ox. They offered up the ox. When it was offered up, the sacrificial essence went out of it. It entered into the sheep. They offered up the sheep. When it was offered up, the sacrificial essence went out of it. It entered into the goat. They offered up the goat. When it was offered up, the sacrificial essence went out of it. It entered into this earth. They searched for it, by digging. They found it (in the shape of) those two (substances), the rice and barley: therefore even now they obtain those two by digging; and as much efficacy as all those sacrificed animal victims would have for him, so much efficacy has this oblation (of rice &c.) for him who knows this. And thus there is in this oblation also that completeness which they call 'the fivefold animal sacrifice."

📚Shatapatha Brahmana 6.2.1.18📚
A man (purusha) he slaughters first, for man is the first of animals; then a horse, for the horse comes after man; then a bull, for the bull (or cow) comes after the horse; then a ram, for the sheep comes after the cow; then a he-goat, for the goat comes after the sheep: thus he slaughters them according to their form, according to their excellence."

📚Shatapatha Brahmana 7.5.2.13-23📚
He then lifts up the human head–he thereby exalts it–with, 'Giver of a thousand thou art: for a thousand thee!' a thousand means everything: thus, 'the giver of everything, for everything (I bestow) thee!'. He then puts them (the heads) in (the fire-pan), first (that of) the man–having taken possession of the man by strength he sets him up;–the man in the middle; on both sides the other victims: he thus sets the man, as the eater, in the midst of cattle; whence man is the eater in the midst of cattle. These are the victims; separately he puts them down, separately he 'settles' them, and separately he pronounces the Sudadohas on them; for separate from one another are those animals. He then offers on the human head, sacrifice is offering: he thus makes man the one among animals fit to sacrifice; whence man alone among animals perform sacrifice."

📚Shatapatha Brahmana 13.6.2.12-13📚
By means of the Purusha Nârâya*n*a (litany), the Brahman priest (seated) to the right (south) of them, praises the men bound (to the stakes) with this sixteen-versed (hymn, *Ri*g-v. X, 90, Vâ*g*. S. XXXI, 1-16), 'The thousand-headed Purusha, thousand-eyed, thousand-footed...–thus (he does) for the obtainment and the securing of everything, for everything here consists of sixteen parts, and the Purushamedha is everything: in thus saying, 'So and so thou art, so and so thou art,' he praises and thereby indeed magnifies him (Purusha); but he also thereby speaks of him, such as he is. Now, the victims had had the fire carried round them, but they were not yet slaughtered,– Then a voice said to him, 'Purusha, do not consummate (these human victims): if thou wert to consummate them, man (purusha) would eat man.' Accordingly, as soon as fire had been carried round them, he set them free, and offered oblations to the same divinities, and thereby gratified those divinities, and, thus gratified, they, gratified him with all objects of desire."

Refutation-

He has alleged Human Sacrifice on Satapatha Brahmana so before proceeding further and debunking his allegations on Satapatha

Brahmana I will clarify the meaning of the word आलभन which is often mistranslated by Western Translators as sacrificing/killing – “आलभन” means to receive or touch and not kill or sacrifice

आलभन्त = प्राप्त किया (Chaukhamba Publications)

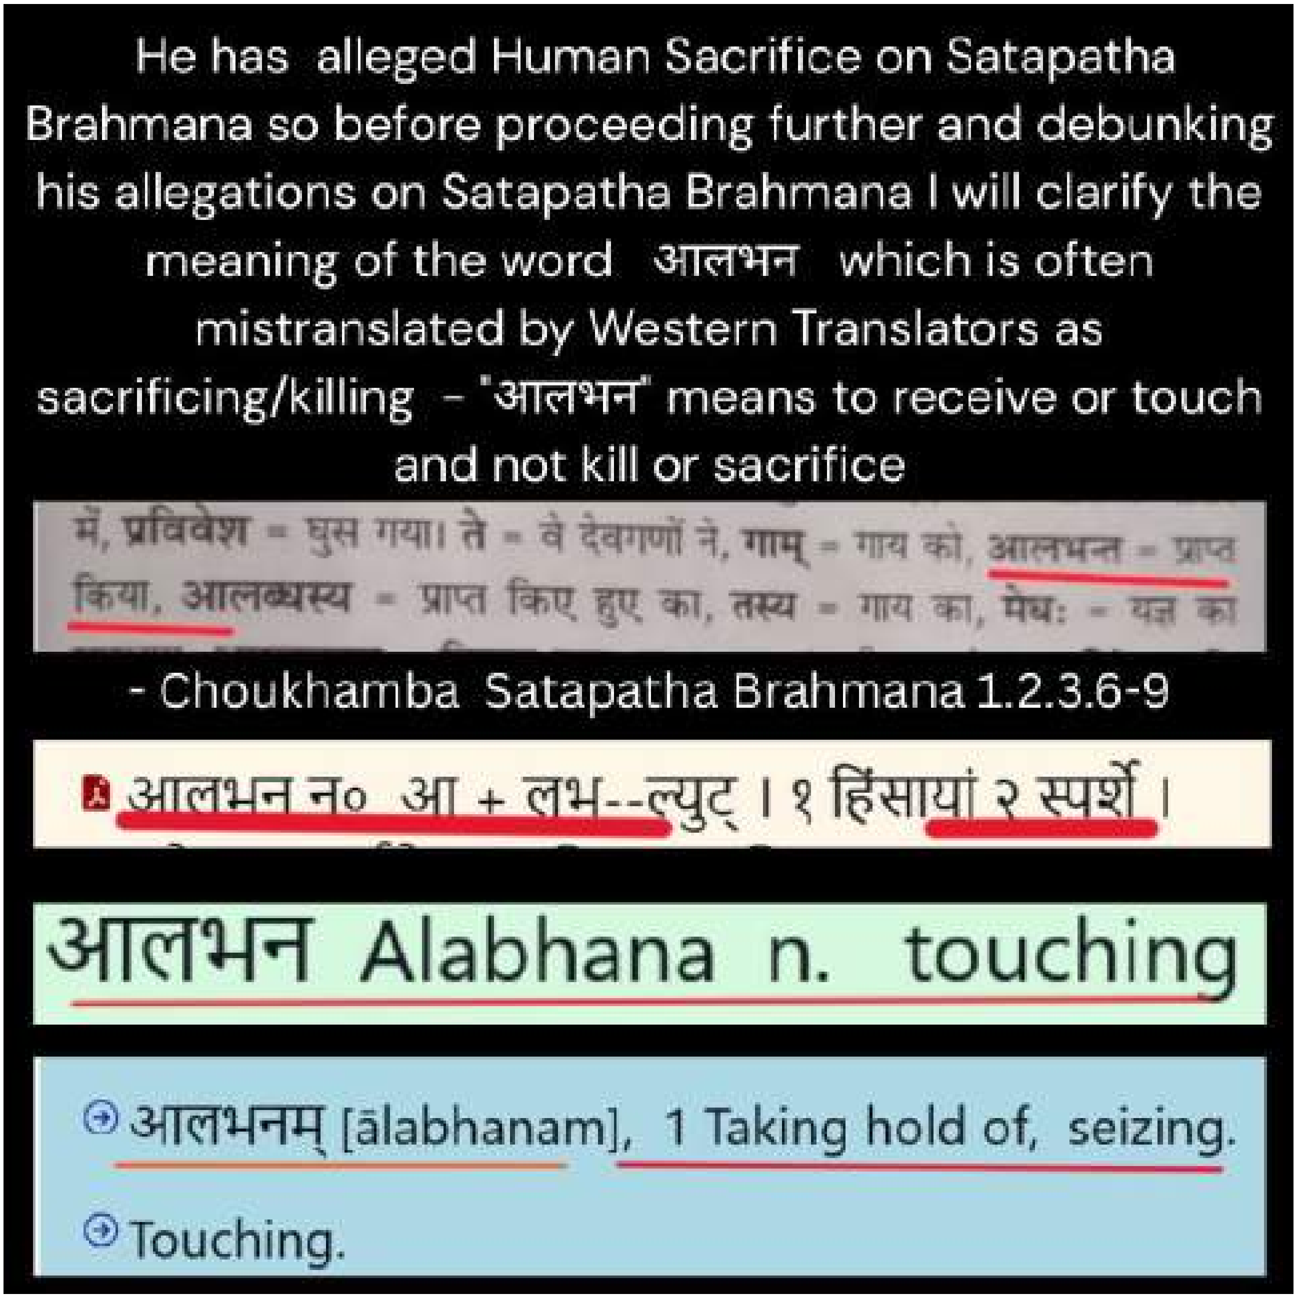
आलभन न० आ + लभ–ल्युट् २ स्पर्शे ।

आलभन Alabhana n. touching

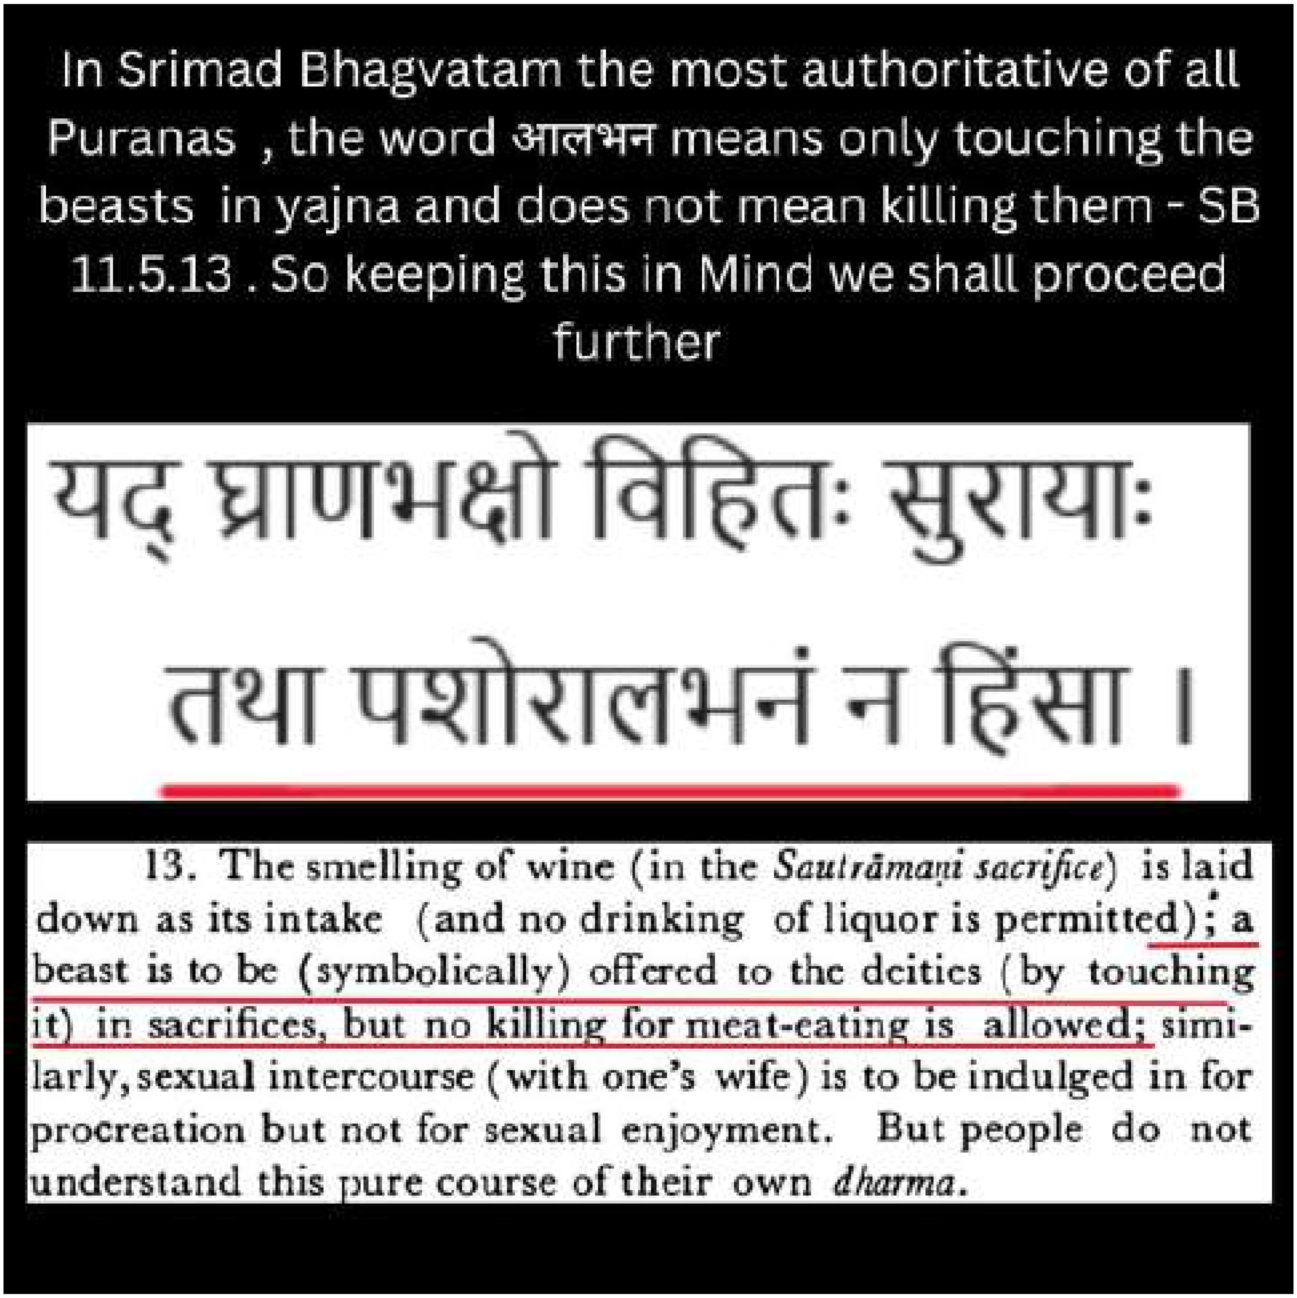
आलभनम् [ālabhanam], 1 Taking hold of, seizing. Touching.



In Srimad Bhagvatam the most authoritative of all Puranas , the word आलभन means only touching the beasts in yajna and does not mean killing them – SB 11.5.13 . So keeping this in Mind we shall proceed further

यद् घ्राणभक्षो विहितः सुरायाः तथा पशोरालभनं न हिंसा

The smelling of wine (in the Sautrāmani sacrifice) is laid down as its intake (and no drinking of liquor is permitted) ; a beast is to be (symbolically) offered to the deities (by touching it) in sacrifices, but no killing for meat-eating is allowed; simi-larly, sexual intercourse (with one's wife) is to be indulged in for procreation but not for sexual enjoyment. But people do not understand this pure course of their own dharma.



Srimad Bhagvatam 11/5/13 Geeta Press Gorakhpur

गृहेषु युञ्जन्ति कलेवरस्य

यद् घ्राणभक्षो विहितः सुराया-
स्तथा पशोरालभनं न हिंसा ।
एवं व्यवायः प्रजया न रत्या
इमं विशुद्धं न विदुः स्वधर्मम् ॥ १३

देखते कि हमारा यह शरीर मृत्युका शिकार है और वह मृत्यु किसी प्रकार भी टाली नहीं जा सकती ॥ १२ ॥ सौत्रामणि यज्ञमें भी सुराको सूँघनेका ही विधान है, पीनेका नहीं। यज्ञमें पशुका आलभन (स्पर्शमात्र) ही विहित है, हिंसा नहीं। इसी प्रकार अपनी धर्मपत्नीके साथ मैथुनकी आज्ञा भी विषयभोगके लिये नहीं, धार्मिक परम्पराकी रक्षाके निमित्त सन्तान उत्पन्न करनेके लिये ही दी गयी है। परन्तु जो लोग अर्थवादके वचनोंमें फँसे हैं, विषयी हैं, वे अपने इस विशुद्ध धर्मको जानते ही नहीं ॥ १३ ॥

Primary Meaning of the word Alabhan as touching as Explained by Geeta Press Gorakhpur

In the Smrtris, Grhyasūtras, and allied texts alambhana and alabhate mean ‘touching’; for example:
(i) In the Subodhini commentary on ‘Mīmāṁsā-darśana’ 2.3.17 it is stated: आलम्भः स्पर्शो भवति, that is ālambha is sparśa ‘touching’.
(ii) In the duties of a Brahmacāri-
वर्जयेत् स्त्रीणां च प्रेक्षणालम्भम्
“the brahmacārī should avoid looking at a woman or touching her.” (Manu 2.179).
(iii) In the Upanayana ceremony-
अथास्य (ब्रह्मचारिणः) दक्षिणासं अधिहृदयं आलभते
“the teacher touches the heart of the brāhmacārī (Pāraskara-grhyasūtra 2.2.16).
(iv) In the marriage ceremony-
घरो वध्या दक्षिणांसम् अधिहृदयं आलभते

“the bridegroom touches the heart of the bride with his hand over her right shoulder”. (Pāraskar-grhyasūtra 1.8.8) etc. etc.

(v) The Bhagavata-Mahāpurāṇā 11.5.13 also clearly testifies that in yajña, paśu-ālambhana does not convey the meaning of 'killing' :-
यदु घ्राणभक्षो विहितः सुरायास्तथा पशोरालभनं न हिंसा। (श्रीमद्भागवत ११.५.१३)
"In yajña, the smelling of wine is prescribed, not its drinking. In yajña, the touching of an animal is enjoined not its killing."
(vi) The word स्पर्श that is 'touching' is used for दान gift as well. The great poet Kālidāsa has गाः कोटिश स्पर्शयता घटोध्नीः in Raghuvamsa 2.49 where sparśayatā (स्पर्शयता) means dānam (दानं)-gift'.

In the Smṛtris, Gṛhyasūtras, and allied texts ālambhana and ālabhate mean 'touching' ; for example :

(i) In the Subodhinī commentary on 'Mīmāṁsā-darśana' 2.3.17 it is stated : आलम्भः स्पर्शो भवति, that is ālambha is sparśa 'touching'.

(ii) In the duties of a Brahmacārī—

वर्जयेत् स्त्रीणां च प्रेक्षणालम्भम्

"the brahmacārī should avoid looking at a woman or touching her." (Manu 2.179).

(iii) In the Upanayana ceremony—

अथास्य (ब्रह्मचारिणः) दक्षिणासं अधिहृदयं आलभते

"the teacher touches the heart of the brāhmacārī' (Pāraskara-gṛhyasūtra 2.2.16).

(iv) In the marriage ceremony—

वरो वध्वा दक्षिणांसम् अधिहृदयं आलभते

"the bridegroom touches the heart of the bride with his hand over her right shoulder". (Pāraskar-gṛhyasūtra 1.8.8) etc. etc.

(v) The Bhāgavata-Mahāpurāṇā 11.5.13 also clearly testifies that in yajña, paśu-ālambhana does not convey the meaning of 'killing' :—

यद् घ्राणभक्षो विहितः सुरायास्तथा पशोरालभनं न हिंसा।

(श्रीमद्भागवत ११.५.१३)

"In yajña, the smelling of wine is prescribed, not its drinking. In yajña, the touching of an animal is enjoined not its killing."

(vi) The word स्पर्श that is 'touching' is used for दान gift as well. The great poet Kālidāsa has गाः कोटिश स्पर्शयता घटोघ्नीः in Raghuvaṁśa 2.49 where sparśayatā (स्पर्शयता) means dānam (दानं)—gift'.

Primary Meaning of the word Alabhan as touching as Explained by Acharya Gangadhar Pathal Maithil

(क) In the Mahābhārata, Udyoga Parva: "ṛṣabhaṁ pṛṣṭha ālabhya brāhmaṇān abhivādya ca" (83.10) Here, Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa touches the back of the bull—ālambhana clearly means "touch," not "strike."

(ख) In Manu Smṛti (5.87): "gām ālabhya viśuddhyati" Even a person rendered impure by contact with a corpse becomes purified by touching a cow—again, ālambh means "touch."

(ग) Similarly, in Manu Smṛti (2.173): "strīṇāṁ ca prekṣaṇālambhe" Here too, ālambhana refers to touching women—not harming them.

(घ) In Yajurveda (20.4), the Uvaṭa Bhāṣya says: "yajamānam ālabhate—ko'si" And in Mahīdhara Bhāṣya: "yajamānam ālabhata, adhvaryur yajamānaṁ spṛśati" Also, in Kātyāyana Śrauta Sūtra (19.4.19), the ālambhana of the yajamāna is interpreted as "touch," not "strike."

(ङ) In Gautama Dharma Sūtra (1.2.22), Śrī Haradatta writes: "ālambhanaṁ—sparśanam" Confirming that ālambhana means "touch."

(च) From "brahmaṇe brāhmaṇaṁ" (Yajur. 30.5) through 21 mantras, the term "ālabhate" is repeated. In "brahmaṇe brāhmaṇam ālabhate" (Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa 3.4.1–19), ālabhate clearly means bringing or touching the Brāhmaṇa—not harming him. They are brought to the yūpa (sacrificial post), tied, and then released.

(छ) In marriage rites, the bride's heart is touched: "athāsyai hṛdayam ālabhate" (Pāraskara 1.8.5) And in upanayana, the boy's heart is touched: "athāsya hṛdayam ālabhate" (2.2.16) Here, ālambhana means reaching or touching the heart—not striking.

(ज) "ālabetāsakṛd dīnaḥ kareṇa ca śiroruhān" This too implies gentle touching of the hair with the hand.

(सुश्रुत.कल्पस्थान१) यहाँ भी बालोंका स्पर्श अर्थ है ।

(झ) मीमांसादर्शन (२।३।१७)में सुबोधिनीकारने लिखा है- 'वत्सस्य समीपे आनयनार्थम् आलम्भः स्पर्शो भवति' ।

(ञ) 'अक्षान् यद् बभ्रून् आलभे' (अथर्व० ७।११४।७)
में भी अक्षोंका आलम्भ-स्पर्श ही है, श्रीसायणने भी यही अर्थ किया है ।

(ट) 'कुमारं जातं पुरा अन्यैरालम्भात् सर्पिर्मधुनि हिरण्येन प्राशयेत्' (आश्वलायनगृ० १।१५।१) जातकर्मसंस्कारके इस वाक्यमें शिशुका स्पर्श ही आलम्भका अर्थ है, मारना नहीं ।

(ठ) 'अत ऊर्ध्वम् असमालम्भनमादशरात्रात्' (गोभिलगृ० २।७।२३) में प्रसूता स्त्रीका दस दिन तक असमालम्भ-अर्थात् छूनेका निषेध किया है ।

(ड) 'केशान् अंगं वासश्च आलभ्य अप उपस्पृशेत्' (आपस्तम्बधर्म. २।२।३) में भी बालोंके छूनेपर आचमनका विधान किया है । श्रीहरदत्तने लिखा है 'आलभ्य स्पृष्ट्वा' ।

(ढ) मीमांसादर्शनके शाबरभाष्य (१।२।१०) में- 'अज इति अन्नं, बीजं वीरुद् वा, तम् आलभ्य-उपयुज्य, प्रजाः-पशून् प्राप्नोतीति गौणाः शब्दाः'
यहाँ आलम्भनका उपयोग अर्थ किया गया है ।

(ण) मञ्जूषामें श्रीनागेशभट्टने भी लिखा है- 'अग्नीषोमीयं पशुमालभेत्' इत्यत्र आलम्भनं न हिंसनं, किन्तु स्पर्शः । अग्निहोत्रप्रकरणपठिते 'वत्समालभेत्' इति वाक्ये स्पर्शार्थकत्वनिर्णयात्' ।

फलतः रन्तिदेवके 'आलभ्यन्त शतं गावः' का भी दानार्थ या सत्कारार्थ स्पर्श ही अर्थ है । तब गौओंको अतिथियोंके पास प्राप्त कराना और यास्कके (निरुक्त २।५।४) अनुसार 'गो'का अर्थ 'गायका दूध' भी होनेसे उनके दूधके मावेसे जिसे मांसल होनेके कारण मांस भी कहना सम्भव हो सकता है, ऐसा गौओंका अतिथियोंकेलिये उपयोग रन्तिदेव जैसा राजा सौ साल तक भी कर सकता

In Satapatha Brahmana 1.2.3.6-7 आलभन has been used which means to touch or the receive and not to sacrifice

To demonstrate the symbolic animal-form (paśu-rūpatā) of the puroḍāśa, an Itihāsa (traditional story) is cited beginning with "puruṣa." It says: "Medha departed," meaning the medha (sacrificial essence) withdrew from the person.

Then, it is stated: from the animals—such as man, horse, and others—originally possessed of medha, the essence gradually exited and ultimately entered the Earth. The Devas desiring that medha, began touching and searching (anviṣuḥ) the Earth by digging it—much like breaking through it. From this Earth, the gods obtained the medha. Thus, rice and barley are identified as forms of medha.

Hence, because rice and barley are unearthed through ploughing, they are understood to be transformations of medha. Farmers still obtain them through symbolic digging, reinforcing their connection with medha's transformation. This knowledge bears fruit as follows: the sacrificial offering made from these grains embodies the essence of all animals, giving the sacrificial food (havir) the same vīrya (potency or sacred strength) as that of the actual animals.

Thus, puroḍāśa, shaped from these grains, becomes the symbolic substitute for an animal in sacrifice, being imbued with all animal qualities and potency.

§7: Further, this identity is demonstrated even in its physicality: just as animals have body-parts like hair and skin, so too does puroḍāśa—when arranged in the pañkti (ritual five-fold layout)—display these features. Hence, wise people say: "The pañkti is the animal," and this structural form (sampatti) is found in the puroḍāśa as well.

In the powdered state, the puroḍāśa exhibits fine hair-like features (due to its softness and grain). During kneading, it resembles skin or flesh in texture. When cooked, it becomes firm—mirroring bone. Finally, at the time of concluding oblation (udvāsana), the marrow (majjā) is symbolically held within it—through the central moist core (āmadhāraṇa).

§8: Thus, through successive states—flour, dough, baked form—puroḍāśa embodies hair, flesh, bone, and marrow, making it a complete symbolic paśu (animal). The Vedic teaching concludes that in sacrificing puroḍāśa, one symbolically sacrifices the animal in full.

§9: Finally, the text explains that the flesh of beings (such as humans or mystical beings like kimpuruṣas) whose medha has departed and who are not ritually possessed by the Devas , must not be eaten. The reason: since their sacrificial potency (medha) has left, they are unsuitable for sacrifice (ayajña) and thus unfit for consumption.

18 “He prescribes the sequence for touching (ālambhana) of the sacrificial animals: ‘The man is touched first.’ For the horse indeed follows the man—this implies ‘after the man.’ The horse follows the man; so it is explained for what follows. ‘According to the earlier (order)’ means: without transgressing those to be touched earlier—i.e., according to the prescribed order. ‘According to seniority’ means: not overstepping those who are superior.”

19 “For binding them, he prescribes straps, since their girths would be unequal. The fire-forms become unequal due to differences in fatness and leanness. That inequality is shown: ‘The man’s is the thickest; the horse’s is less,’ etc. The man-animal’s strap should be the most expansive. Here, ‘thickest’ is in relation to corpulence. The grammatical rule ‘priyasthira’ (Pāṇini 6.4.117) allows the word ‘vṛddha’ (grown/large) to be substituted with ‘varṣa.’ ‘Atha isīyasī’—thus, by graduated expression (vīpsā), a decreasing proportion of girths from one to the next is implied.”

“‘In that manner’ means—without transgressing the form, strength, etc., of man and the rest of the animals. ‘However, all (straps) should be equal’—here ‘tu’ signifies an alternate view. All the straps may be equal in similar length and girth. Explaining ‘sarvāstyeva samāḥ’—i.e., all are similar. Or, to show equality in terms of size and girth, a separate statement is made. This is called the uniformity (sāmatā) of the straps.”

“They are also called food (annam). Due to the mutual equality of animals, it is said: ‘All of these are equal.’ Equality is directly shown. They are called fires (agnayaḥ), meaning: these animals are referred to as fires. And they are called food (annam), as previously stated in: ‘He thought—these indeed are the fires…’ and ‘When he touches them, he makes them an abode for fire—none delights without an abode, and food is the abode…’”

“Therefore, due to their fire-nature (agnitva), all animals are equal; hence, their straps too should be made equal.”

He is raising objection on Shatapatha Brahmana (7/5/2/13 to 14)that the human head is being lifted up and then being sacrificed in a yajna.Whereas the reality is that this is not about any common man, this is about the Golden Man.It is clearly written here that raising the head of the Golden Man means increasing his importance and that too through Yajna. The Golden Man himself is Sahasra, that is, he is for all and it is for everyone that we offer oblations to the Golden Man in the yajna .So on this it is clearly stated in Shatapath Brahmana that this golden man is called Sun and all the Devtas and humans etc are like animals for him who remain situated around him when he rises. And here the importance of that Sun has been told through Yagya etc. and there is no mention of killing any person here.

[Vajasaneyi Samhita XIII, 46; Rik S. I, 115, 1] "The brilliant front of the gods hath risen," for that man is yonder sun, and he indeed rises as the brilliant front (face) of the gods; "the eye of Mitra, Varuna, and Agni," for that (sun) is the eye of both gods and men; "he hath filled

The mantra beginning with "Sa vā ardharcam anudrutya" refers to the verse:
"Citraṁ devānām udagād anīkam" — "The brilliant front of the gods has risen."

The word "eṣaḥ puruṣaḥ" refers to the Sun (Āditya), who is visible and being invoked, because the Sun is considered the soul of all.

In the Sun's disk, the "citraṁ anīkam devānām" — the brilliant form or assembly of the gods, i.e., the rays, appears.

Therefore, by invoking this divine person (the Sun), that brilliant form of the gods is said to rise — hence the mantra:
"Citraṁ devānām udagād anīkam".

The line "cakṣubhir yasya varuṇasya agneḥ" mentions the eyes of gods like Varuṇa and Agni, which symbolically represents other gods too, since they all share the common quality of illumination.

Then it says:
"Udyan vā eṣa ādityaḥ imān lokān āpūrayati" — "As this Sun rises, he fills all these worlds (earth, etc.) with life, energizes and makes them function."

This is also said in the Taittirīya Āraṇyaka (1.14):
"Asau ya āpūryate sa sarveṣāṁ bhūtānāṁ prāṇaiḥ āpūryate" —
"This one who fills all, is filled with the life-forces of all beings."

Therefore, the word "Āprā" means 'to fill' — from the root "prā" which means 'to fill'.

Also, the mantra "Sūrya ātmā jagataḥ tasthuṣaś ca" means:
"The Sun is the soul of all that moves and that stays still."

So, "jagat" refers to all that moves (mobile beings), and "tasthuṣaḥ" to all that is stationary (immobile beings). Hence, this shows that the Sun is the inner soul and the active principle of the entire world — both moving and non-moving.

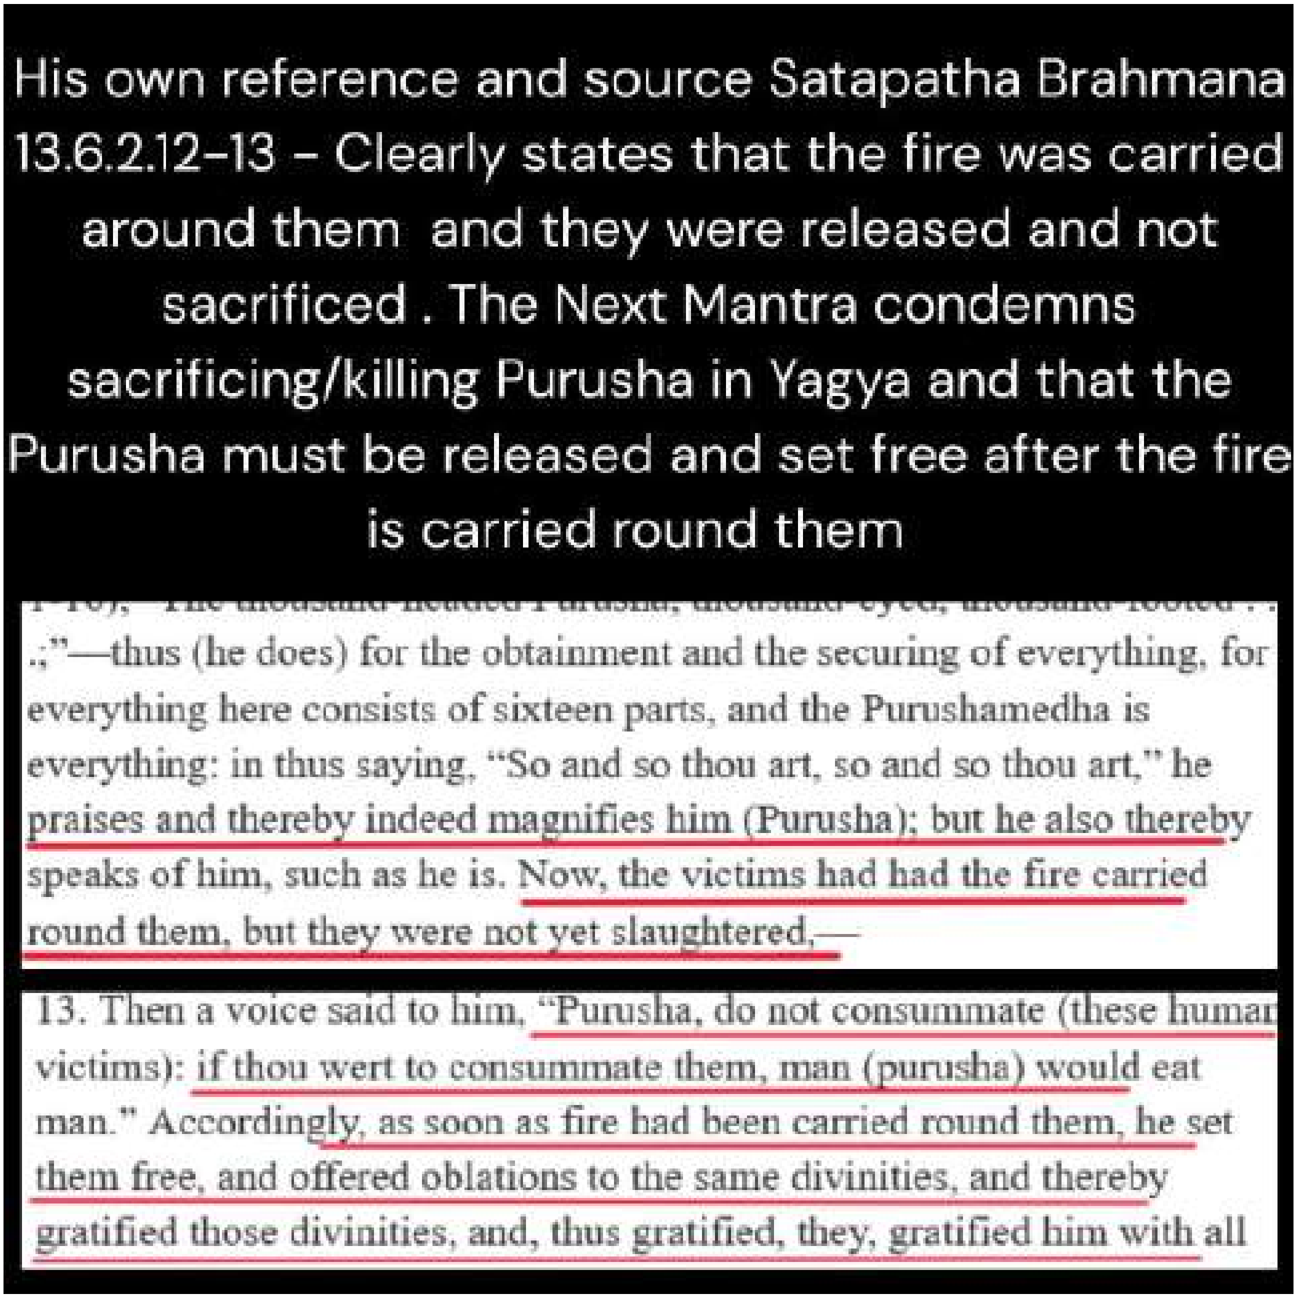
Coming to his allegations on Shatapatha Brahmana 13.6.2.12-13

His own reference and source Satapatha Brahmana 13.6.2.12-13 – Clearly states that the fire was carried around them and they were released and not sacrificed . The Next Mantra condemns sacrificing/killing Purusha in Yagya and that the Purusha must be released and set free after the fire is carried round them

Satapatha Brahmana 13.6.2.12-13 – he praises and thereby indeed magnifies him (Purusha); but he also thereby speaks of him, such as he is.

Now, the victims had had the fire carried round them,

Then a voice said to him, “Purusha, do not consummate (these human victims): if thou wert to consummate them, man (purusha) would eat man.” Accordingly, as soon as fire had been carried round them, he set them free, and offered oblations to the same divinities, and thereby gratified those divinities, and, thus gratified, they, gratified him with all



.;”—thus (he does) for the obtainment and the securing of everything, for everything here consists of sixteen parts, and the Purushamedha is everything: in thus saying, “So and so thou art, so and so thou art,” he praises and thereby indeed magnifies him (Purusha); but he also thereby speaks of him, such as he is. Now, the victims had had the fire carried round them, but they were not yet slaughtered,—

13. Then a voice said to him, “Purusha, do not consummate (these human victims): if thou wert to consummate them, man (purusha) would eat man.” Accordingly, as soon as fire had been carried round them, he set them free, and offered oblations to the same divinities, and thereby gratified those divinities, and, thus gratified, they, gratified him with all

Accurate hindi translation of Satapatha Brahmana 13.6.2.12-13

नियुक्त पुरुषों की स्तुति दक्षिण की ओर बैठकर ब्राह्मा 'पुरुष नारायण सूक्त' द्वारा करता है : ''सहस्रशीर्षा पुरुषः सहस्राक्षः सहस्रपात् ......'' (ऋग्वेद १०/९०/१; यजुर्वेद ३१/१–१६) ये सोलह मन्त्र हैं, सोलह कलावाली दुनिया है। पुरुषमेध सब-कुछ है। सबकी प्राप्ति के लिए सबकी उपलब्धि के लिए ! तू ऐसा है, तू ऐसा है। यह कहकर उसकी स्तुति करता है, उसका यश गाता है।

जैसा वह है वैसा उसको बताता है। पशु पर्यग्निकृत तो हो चुके (अर्थात् अग्नि उनके चारों ओर फिराई जा चुकी) परन्तु अभी उनका वध नहीं हुआ है ॥१२॥
तब एक वाक् ने उससे कहा, 'हे पुरुष, पुरुष को मत मार। ऐसा करेगा तो पुरुष पुरुष को खायेगा।' इसलिए अग्नि उनके चारों ओर घुमाने के पीछे उनको छोड़ दिया और उन्हीं देवताओं के लिए आहुतियाँ दे दीं। इस प्रकार उन देवताओं को प्रसन्न कर दिया। इस प्रकार प्रसन्न होकर उन्होंने अपनी कामनाओं को तृप्त किया है

Seated facing the south, the officiating priest offers praise to the appointed men through the 'Purusha Narayana Sukta': 'Sahasrashirsha Purushaḥ, Sahasrakṣaḥ, Sahasrapāt…' (Rigveda 10.90.1; Yajurveda 31.1–16). These are sixteen mantras — the world consists of sixteen kalās (aspects). The Purushamedha (sacrifice of the cosmic person) encompasses everything. It is for the attainment of all, the accomplishment of all! 'You are like this, you are such' — saying this, he praises him and sings of his glory."

"He describes him just as he is. The animals had already been circumambulated by fire (i.e., fire had been ritually taken around them), but they had not yet been slaughtered. (Verse 12)

Then a Voice (Vāk) said to him, 'O man, do not kill the man. If you do so, man will begin to eat man.' Therefore, after circling the fire around them, they were released, and offerings were instead made to those very gods. In this way, the gods were pleased. Being pleased, they fulfilled their desires." (Verse 13)

“Thus, by means of this ‘Nārāyaṇa Sūkta’, the puruṣapaśu can be ritually praised. It is said that Nārāyaṇa himself is directly praised through this hymn, in all his aspects and limbs. In this context, the identity (tādātmya) of the sacrificial humans (puruṣapaśu) with Nārāyaṇa is implied — through statements like ‘Puruṣa alone is all this’ (puruṣa eva idam sarvam), ‘they are the animals’ (paśūn tān śvake), and ‘the Brāhmaṇa was his mouth’ (brāhmaṇo asya mukham āsīt).

Therefore, through this hymn, just as Nārāyaṇa is worshipped, so too are those persons who are identified with him, i.e., the human victims, also praised. Thus, it is appropriate to say that these persons, who are in essence Nārāyaṇa or born from him, are worshipped through this hymn. He, being the Puruṣa, sacrifices other puruṣas born of himself — i.e., Nārāyaṇa sacrifices the human beings.

Some others, however, believe that this entire hymn is solely meant for Nārāyaṇa. Hence, they interpret the meaning as: ‘By means of this hymn starting with “sahasraśīrṣā puruṣaḥ…” Nārāyaṇa, who is the Puruṣa, is praised.’ Even here, it is to be understood that the persons being touched are symbolic representatives of the primal essence (prakṛti-bhūmi) of man. Saying, ‘You are such, you are such,’ he praises him (Nārāyaṇa) in this way. This praise is what makes him great.

Thus he is exalted: ‘You are the one with a thousand heads, a thousand eyes… you pervade the Earth and stand beyond it by ten fingers.’ Through such verses, Nārāyaṇa is praised with this hymn — worshipped with greatness. According to some interpretations, words like ‘thousand-headed’ etc., are used figuratively, just like the phrase ‘The lion is Devadatta’ (i.e., a metaphor). This then is a rational interpretation of the hymn in brief.

Now, from the perspective of etymology and literal meaning: indeed, in the ultimate sense, Bhagavān Nārāyaṇa is the very puruṣa described as ‘sahasraśīrṣā’ etc., and this very hymn is referring to him. Just as Yāska (in the Nirukta) says: ‘There can even be direct realization of the deity due to their great magnificence.’ Hence, when the hymn says, ‘You are such,’ it is as if Nārāyaṇa is being directly revealed.

Verses like ‘atyatiṣṭhat’ (he transcended) are spoken as though referring to something hidden, yet through such expressions, the hymn clearly reveals Nārāyaṇa as the subject. The shift in grammatical subject (puruṣa-vyatyaya) must be understood here: it is Nārāyaṇa who is being addressed as ‘You are such’.

Now, concerning the ritual of circumambulation by fire (paryagni-kṛta): when Nārāyaṇa performed the puruṣamedha , these the humans were already circumambulated by fire. (Verse 12)

Then, the bodiless Voice (Vāk), addressed : ‘O Puruṣa! Do not establish (sacrifice) these human victims — do not perform on them the acts of laying down, dismembering, etc.’ For if you do, then in the world too, man will begin to imitate by consuming man — as in cannibalism.” (Verse 13, implied continuation)

Allegations-

The following verse says that Manu's wife was sacrificed,

📚Shatapatha Brahmana 1.1.4.15-16📚
These two said, 'God-fearing, they say, is Manu: let us two then ascertain!' They then went to him and said: 'Manu! we will sacrifice for thee!' He said: 'Wherewith?' They said: 'With this bull!' He said: 'So be it!' On his (the bull's) being killed the voice went from him. It entered into Manâvî, the wife of Manu; and when they heard her speak, the Asuras and Rakshas were continually being crushed. Thereupon the Asuras said to one another: ‘Hereby even greater evil is inflicted on us, for the human voice speaks more!’ Kilâta and Âkuli then said: ‘God-fearing, they say, is Manu: let us then ascertain!’ They went to him and said: ‘Manu! we will sacrifice for thee!’ He said: ‘Wherewith?’ They said: ‘With this thy wife!’ He said: ‘So be it!’ And on her being killed that voice went from her.”

He alleges on Satapatha 1.1.4.15-16 that Manu Wife was sacrificed Here is an allegorical story that there was a speech which used to cause a lot of harm to the demons. Now let us look at the chapter from Shatapatha Brahmana (1/1/4 verse 15 to 17) . According to Kandika-15, that speech first entered Manu's bull. Now when the demons came to know about this, they wanted to kill that bull. So they took that bull from Manu for the yajna, but as soon as they got that bull, that speech came out of that bull and entered Manu's wife. According to Kandika-16 Now the demons again wanted to take Manu's wife for the yajna, but according to Kandika-17 as soon as they got Manu's wife, that speech came out of Manu's wife too and it entered in the pots of the yajna. So the yajna became free from demonic tendencies. Therefore, here it is simply told through a metaphorical explanation that since the yajna is devoid of demonic tendencies, no other creature should be killed in it, therefore the yajna is Adhvara (violence-less)

"He (the Asura) thought: 'Defeat brings ruin; how then can I harm him?' Thinking like this, two Asura priests named Kilāta and Ākuliśa were appointed."

"Their plan is described: They said — 'He is called a god because of faith (śraddhā); a person with faith is called śraddhālu. Let us understand his mind.'
They said — 'Let us (the two of us) know what is in his mind.'
Then they said to the mind — 'O mind, let us perform a sacrifice with Ṛṣabha.'

Meaning: By deceiving the faithful Manu through the sage Ṛṣabha, they caused his downfall."

"That mind entered the wife of Manu, whose name was Manāvī.
Wherever people heard her speak, from that place the Asura kings, being afflicted, fled.
They said: 'More sinful is this speech!'
At first, when it was just an animal-like sound (from Ṛṣabha), it caused only slight harm. But now, coming from a human form (Manāvī), it causes great sin and defeat.
Because human speech conveys clear meaning using words and sentences.
Hearing this, the two Asura priests — Kilāta and Ākuliśa — responded again."

The speech (vāk) that had become demonic (asurī), having passed through the stages of mind, Ṛṣabha, and finally Manu's wife, became devoid of any support when attacked by the two Asura priests. Left without refuge, it took shelter in the sacrificial vessels (yajña-pātras). From within these vessels, the Asura speech could not be expelled by the Asura priests, showing the power of the sacrifice. This speech, now residing in the yajña vessels, begins to emerge when the ritual striking (symbolic purification) is performed, indicating that the sound of sacrificial instruments helps drive away Asuras and Rakṣasas. The text then summarizes this by saying: the one who recites the mantra while performing the ritual striking (like "the rooster strikes") should do so remembering the sage Ṛṣabha, who was called madhujihva—sweet-tongued for the gods (as his speech led to victory) and viṣajihva—poison-tongued for the Asuras (as his speech led to their defeat). Thus, the name madhujihva expresses the desire that the speech used in the ritual may be as beneficial to the gods now as Ṛṣabha's was before. The remaining part of the mantra ("Iṣam ūrjam…") is said to be self-explanatory and needs no separate commentary.

📚Mahabharata 9.50📚
The intelligent Devala then saw him proceed from those regions of persons performing sacrifices by killing animals to that pure region which is worshipped by the very gods. Devala next saw the mendicant proceed to the place of those ascetics that perform the sacrifice called Caturmasya and diverse others of the same kind. Thence he proceeded to the region belonging to the performers of the Agnishtoma sacrifice. Devala then saw his guest repair to the place of those ascetics that perform the sacrifice called Agnishutta. Indeed, Devala next saw him in the regions of those highly wise men that perform the foremost of sacrifices, Vajapeya, and that other sacrifice in which a profusion of gold is necessary. Then he saw Jaigishavya in the region of those that perform the Rajasuya and the Pundarika. He then saw him in the regions of those foremost of men that perform the horse-sacrifice and the sacrifice in which human beings are slaughtered."

182 L. Rocher · The Purāṇas

Among the subjects treated in the last few chapters reference should be made to a discourse on the qualifications and duties of the king, on rites such as puṣyasnāna and śakradhvajotsava, and on the different types of sons and the necessity to have them.

The Kālikā° is so much a Śākta text that it also goes under the name of Kālikā Tantra.[216] Sporadic claims that it, rather than the Vaiṣṇava Bhāgavata°, is the true and original Bhāgavata°,[217] have been dismissed by most nibandhakāras.[218]

There is general agreement that the Kālikā° originated in Kāmarūpa, or in the part of Bengal which is closest to it.[219] There is less agreement, however, on the date of the text. After having been assigned to the fourteenth century,[220] the year A.D. 1000 was proposed as a terminus ante quem for it.[221] Others noticed, in the text (55.17/57.17), an allusion to king Dharmapāla of Kāmarūpa, and consequently placed the Kālikā° at the end of the eleventh or the beginning of the twelfth century.[222] In the meantime a terminus post quem had been set at A.D. 700, in view of the fact that the purāṇa is influenced by Māgha's Śiśupālavadha.[223] Finally, Hazra proposed the tenth or the first half of the eleventh century,[224] with the proviso that the present purāṇa is different from an earlier one, one which had only few Tantric elements, and was composed in Bengal in the course of the seventh century.[225]

By chanting a mantra one hundred thousand times, a person destroys all their sins. Chanting it ten times purifies the body, and chanting it a hundred times yields the merit of bathing in a holy pilgrimage site. It is prescribed to perform japa (chanting) in the presence of a platform, cloth, or idol, chanting the mantra one hundred, one thousand, or ten thousand times, followed by offering oblations (havan).

In this way, after completing the prescribed chanting, one should perform a havan of one hundred thousand offerings. One should gather sesame seeds, barley, popped rice, paddy (unhusked rice), wheat, lotus flowers (or, according to another version, mango fruits), and bael fruit (wood apple), mix them with ghee, and offer this mixture into the sacred fire as part of the vow.

At night, after adorning oneself with armor like a kavacha (protective charm), and carrying a sword, bow, and arrows, the practitioner should wear a single garment and worship the Goddess with the above-mentioned offerings. The color of the garment should be variegated, red, yellow, black, or blue. A learned and mantra-wise individual should go towards the southern direction and offer a bali (sacrificial offering) at the entrance of the pavilion using the Duti-mantra. This offering can also be made at the gateway or in a cremation ground where there is a tree.

By performing this, the practitioner becomes like a king and enjoys all desired objects and the sovereignty of the entire earth.”

Refutation-

Rc Hazra in his book Puranic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs page no 120 said that the chapters after chapter 43 in Shristi khanda (including chapter 59) are later interpolations into Padma Purana and was composed likely after the Satanic Islamic Muhammadans established their rule in India . So this chapter is a later interpolation and not part of Padma Purana originally

(5) SṚṢṬI-KHAṆḌA.[58] This Khaṇḍa, which is assigned the fifth place in our edition, is really the first of the set. This position of the Khaṇḍa is betrayed by the mode of its beginning as well as by the sequence and contents of the five Parvans given in chap. 1.

This Khaṇḍa, as we have it now, can be rightly divided into two parts:

(1) chaps. 1-43 (verses 1-97)

and (2) chaps. 43 (verses 98 ff.) to the end.

It will be seen hereinafter that the chapters of the second part were added to the Sṛṣṭi-kh. after the Muhammadans had established kingdoms in India. Hence the chapters of the first part, which are of earlier date, are examined first.

[58] The Sṛṣṭi-khaṇḍa in Bengal Mss consists only of 46 (or according to Aufrecht, 45) chapters. The corresponding chapters in a Bengal Ms. (No. 1621, D. U. Mss Lib.) of this Khaṇḍa and the AnSS ed. are given below:

upon them, it is difficult to say anything about the lower limit.

Chapters 43 (verses 98 ff.) to the end, which, according to our division, form the second part of the work, are not found in the Bengal Mss. So their comparatively late date can be well understood. These chapters were written and added to the Srṣṭi-kh. after the Muhammadans had established kingdoms in India. These foreigners have been called kings[93] and scornfully described more than once under the names 'Turuṣka', 'Mleccha' and 'Yavana'[94]. The descriptions are undoubtedly aimed at the Muhammadans who 'polluted' the society and the land of the Hindus by their contact and slaughter of cows. Hence the date of composition of this part of the Srṣṭi-kh. can by no means be placed earlier than 1000 A.D. Such a late date is supported by the contents also, which are replete with Tantric elements. The Āgamas have many times been mentioned as authorities along with the Vedas and the Purāṇas; the Tulasī plant has been glorified in highly extravagant language; and so on. As Hemādri quotes

[93] In connection with the quotations the following stories of the Padma-p. have been mentioned in the Adbhutasāgara:

Even Geeta Press Gorakhpur padma Purana has only 49 Chapters and no 59th chapter exists

Refutation-

Ashoke Chatterjee in his book Padma Purana – A Study page number 71/281 mentioned that from chapter 26 to the end in Bhumi Khanda of Padma Purana (Including chapter 37) are later interpolations and were inserted later on in Padma Purana . Thus this chapter 37 which he alleged is a later interpolation > twentysixth chap and runs to the end has no link with the previous chaps One can, therefore, easily understand these two broad divisions of the Bhūmi khanda viz , (i) the first twentyfive chaps and, (ii) that from chap 26 to the end

> A penetrating search will show that the second portion has been added later as all evidences of a late period are discernible in this section The thirtysixth chap bears traces of the later phase of development of the Jaina Philosophy The distinct mention of the name Turuska (which undoubtedly points to the Mohammedans who invaded India about the 9th century A D) which is found in the seventy-eighth chap [10] also points to that conclusion A later idea of the origin of Sūta, which does not coincide with that as given in the Vayu-p , has been discussed in the twentyseventh chap [11] Moreover, undue importance has been given in that portion to the Tulasi plant, which is unmistakably a mark of its later origin

Then he accused on Padma Purana Brahma Khanda Chapter 12 verses 6-22 .The Brahma Khanda is a very later composition and later writing and orginally not part of Padma Purana – Puranic records by RC Hazra

(3) BRAHMA-KHANDA. This Khanda, in which the interlocutors are Sūta and Śaunaka, occupies the third place in our edition of the Padma-p. But its real position seems to have been immediately after the Ādi-kh., for Śaunaka, who appears in this Khaṇḍa without even a single word of introduction, is introduced first at the beginning of the Ādi-kh. but is not found in the Bhūmi-kh. which intervenes between the Ādi and the Brahma.

The Brahma-khaṇḍa is a short one consisting of 26 chapters only. It is concerned with the description of Vaiṣṇava feasts and festivals. Thus, it treats of the merits of besmearing a Viṣṇu-temple with cowdung and of burning a lamp there at night, the observances during the month of Kārttika, the Jayantī-vrata, the Guruvāra-vrata, the birthday festivals of Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa, the Ekādaśī-vrata, the worship of Viṣṇu on the fullmoon day, and the offer of various things to Viṣṇu. The merits of observing these festivals have been illustrated with various stories. In connection with the birthday festival of Rādhā, the story of the churning of the ocean has been narrated.

This Khanda comes undoubtedly from a very late date. It speaks highly of the gifts of lamps to the shrines of Viṣṇu. The birthday festival of Rādhā has been treated of in chap. 7 and plant, and the undue glorification of Brāhmans also point to a late date which is further supported by the fact that none of the Nibandha-writers are found to name or draw upon this Khaṇḍa. Its contents are, however, included in those of the so-called 'Svarga-khaṇḍa' given in the Nāradīya-p. Hence its date cannot be placed later than 1400 A.D.

Even if we take Brahma Khanda as authentic part here too in original Slokas Naramedha Yagya has been mentioned and i have already shown that in these type of Yagyas the Purusha is simply touched with the Altar and the fire is carried round them and they are released no human sacrifice

📚Yajur Veda 30.1-22📚
OUR sacrifice, God Savitar! speed onward: speed to his share the sacrifice's patron…For Brahman (Priesthood) he binds a Brahman to the stake; for Kshatra (Royalty) a Râjanya; for the Maruts a Vaisya; for Penance a Sûdra; for Darkness a robber; for Hell a homicide or a man who has lost his onsecrated fire; for Misfortune a eunuch; for Venality an Ayogû; for Kâma a harlot; for Excessive Noise a Mâgadha…Now he ties up the eight following variform men: one too tall, one too short, one too stout, one too thin, one too white, one too black, one too bald, one too airy. These must be neither Sûdras nor Brâhmans, and must be dedicated to Prajâpati."

Human Sacrifice is strictly Forbidden in Sanatan Dharma

Srimad Bhagvatam the most authoritative of all Puranas say that those who sacrifice Human beings they would be taken to hell and tortured and punished the same way they killed their innocent victims . So the practice of Human Sacrifice does not have a support of texts – Srimad Bhagvatam 5.26.31

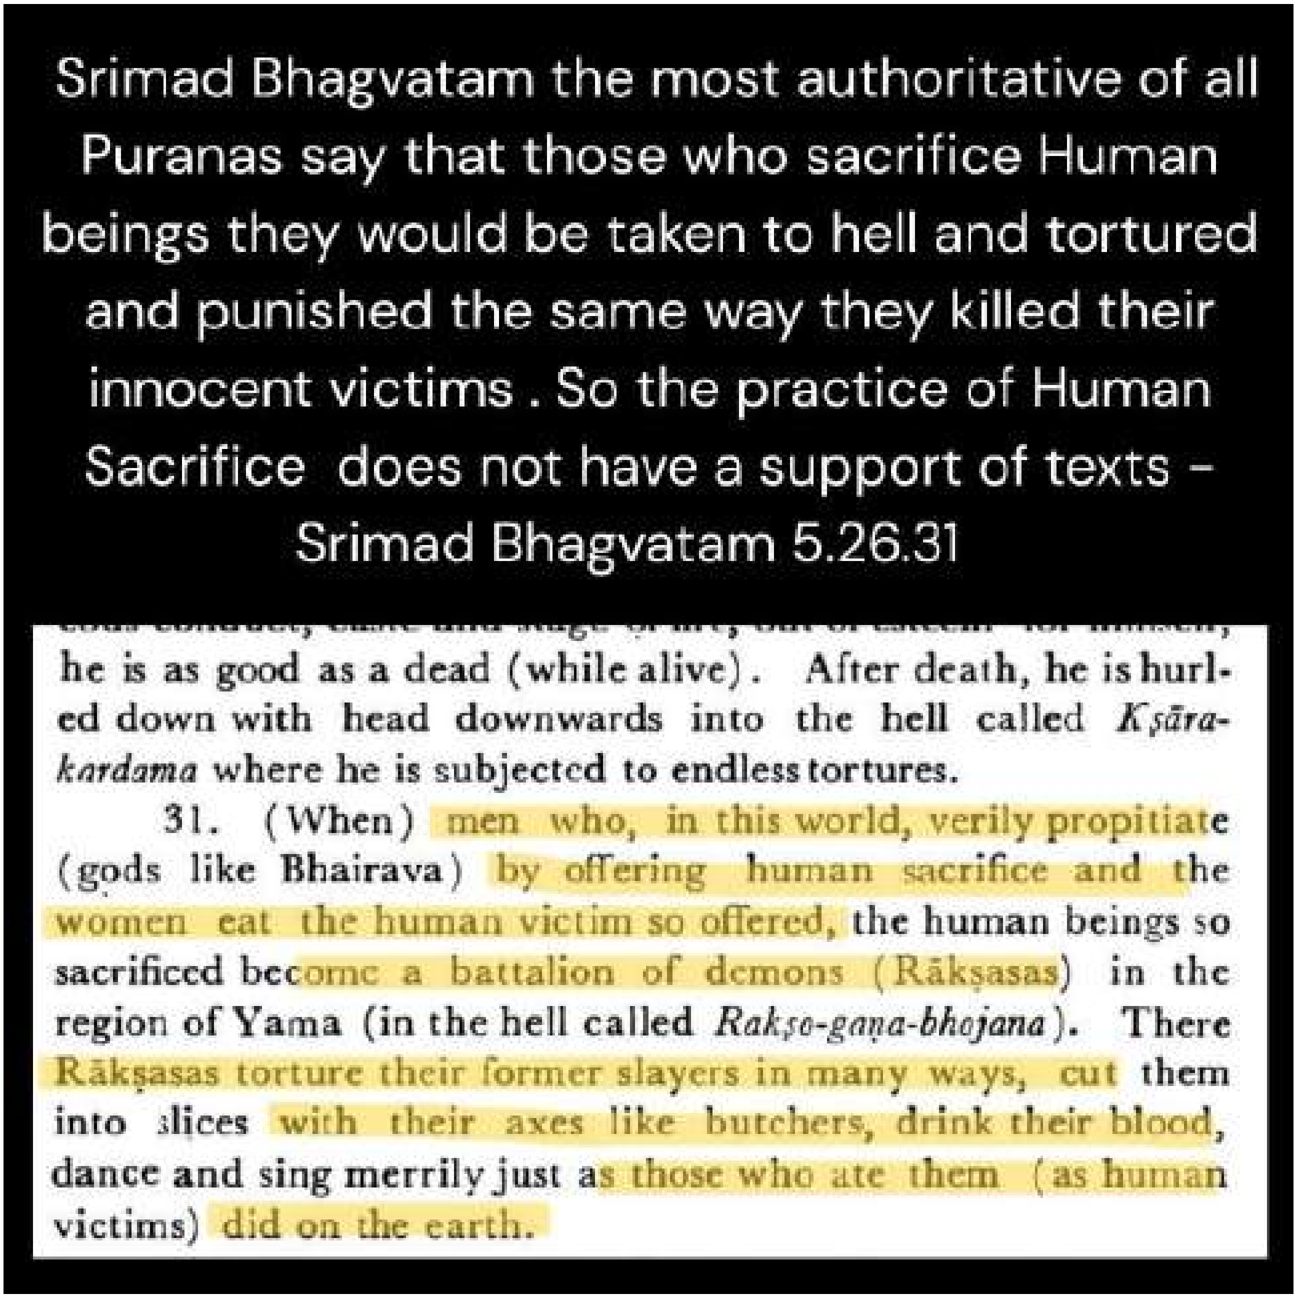
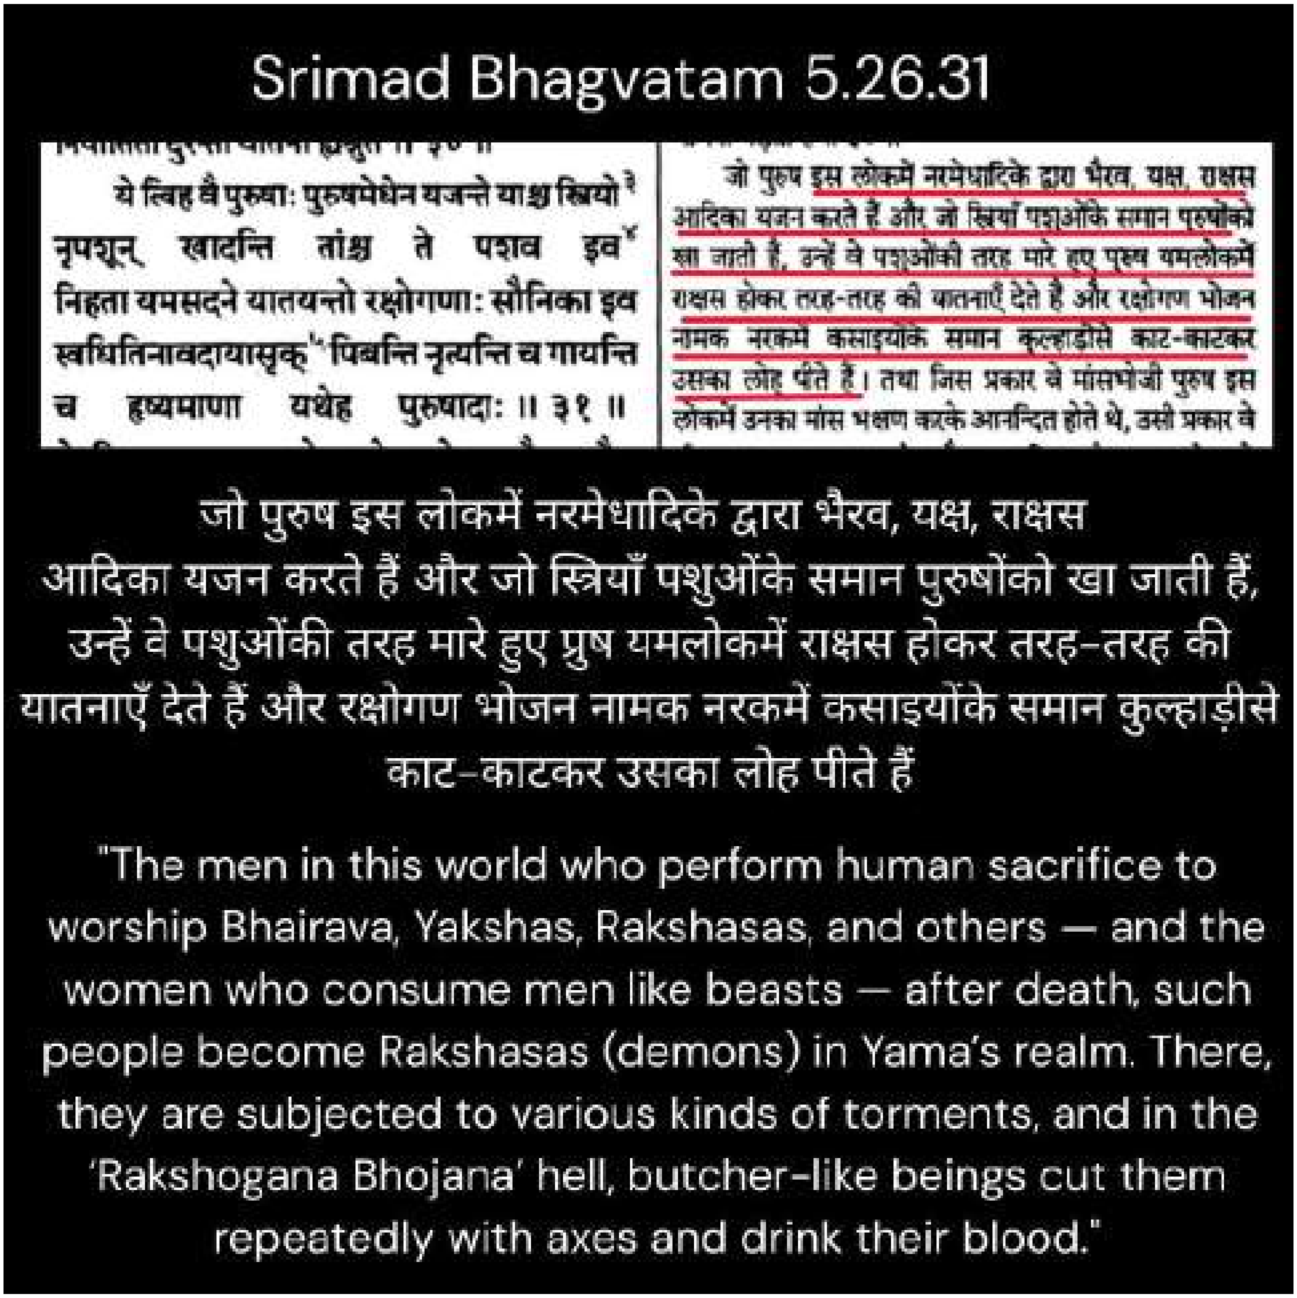
(When) men who, in this world, verily propitiate (gods like Bhairava) by offering human sacrifice and the women eat the human victim so offered, the human beings so sacrificed become a battalion of demons (Raksasas) in the region of Yama (in the hell called Rakso-gana-bhojana). There Rākṣasas torture their former slayers in many ways, cut them into slices with their axes like butchers, drink their blood, dance and sing merrily just as those who ate them (as human victims) did on the earth.



Srimad Bhagavatam 5.26.31 Geeta Press Gorakhpur

जो पुरुष इस लोकमें नरमेधादिके द्वारा भैरव, यक्ष, राक्षस आदिका यजन करते हैं और जो स्त्रियाँ पशुओंके समान प्रषोंको खा जाती हैं, उन्हें वे पशुओंकी तरह मारे हुए पुरुष यमलोकमें राक्षस होकर तरह-तरह की यातनाएँ देते हैं और रक्षोगण भोजन नामक नरकमें कसाइयोंके समान कुल्हाड़ीसे काट-काटकर उसका लोह पीते हैं।

“The men in this world who perform human sacrifice to worship Bhairava, Yakshas, Rakshasas, and others — and the women who consume men like beasts — after death, such people become Rakshasas (demons) in Yama’s realm. There, they are subjected to various kinds of torments, and in the ‘Rakshogana Bhojana’ hell, butcher-like beings cut them repeatedly with axes and drink their blood.”



When Jarasandha wished to offer kshatriya kings as sacrifice unto the Bhagavan Rudra तद्राज्ञः सन्निगृह्य त्वं रुद्रायोपजिहीर्षसि । Bhagavan Shri Krishna मनुष्याणां समालम्भो न च दृष्टः कदाचन। स कथं मानुषैर्देवं यष्टुमिच्छसि शङ्करम्। – The slaughter of human being as offering unto the deities is never seen. Why do you, therefore, seek to worship Bhagavan Shankara by slaughtering human beings? (Mahabharat Sabha Parva Adyay 22)

The purusha whom they had touched up became a mock-man (kim-purusha). Those two, the horse and the ox, which they had touched became a bos gaurus and a gayal (bos gavaeus) respectively. The sheep which they had touched became a camel. The goat which they had touched, became a sharabha. For this reason one should not eat (the flesh) of these animals, for these animals are deprived of the sacrificial essence (are impure).

"By saying 'sa yam' ('he who…'), it indicates—just as before—though the singular form 'sa' is used, it actually refers to a plural subject, i.e., 'the Devas (te devāḥ). 'Of these' refers to the animals (horse and the ox and sheep , camel , goat , Sharabha and Man) (beginning with the Kimpuruṣa (kimpuruṣādi-paśūnām). The phrase 'na aśitavyam' means 'should not be eaten', i.e., their meat should not be consumed.

The reason is given: 'apakrānta'—meaning, since their sacrificial qualification (medhā) has departed, i.e., they are no longer fit for sacrifice (ayajñīyatva), therefore they are unfit to be eaten (abhakṣyatva)."

रेणु-व्याख्या–यह तो प्रतिपादन किया गया पूर्व मन्त्र में कि उक्त पुरुष, अश्व, गो, भेंड, एवं बकरा में से यज्ञीय तत्त्व निकलकर व्रीहि एवं जौ में प्रविष्ट हो गया जिसे देवताओं ने कृषिकर्म द्वारा प्राप्त किया। अब उन पशुओं के अयज्ञीय होने की बात को स्पष्ट करते हुए भगवान् याज्ञवल्क्य कहते हैं कि–देवताओं ने जिस पुरुष का आलभन किया था, उसमें से जब मेध निकला तो वह पुरुष किम्पुरुष अर्थात् "किं क्षपे" (अष्टा. 2.1.64) सूत्र से निन्दित पुरुष हो गया। जिस अश्व का आलभन किया, उस अश्व में से जब मेध निकल गया तो वह गौरमृग हो गया। जिस गाय का आलभन किया, उस गाय में से जब मेध निकल गया तो वह 'गवय' अर्थात गाय जैसा जंगली पशु (नीलगाय) हो गया। जिस भेंड का आलभन किया था, उस भेंड़ में से जब मेध निकल गया तब वह भेंड ऊँट हो गया। इसी तरह जिस बकरा का आलभन किया था उसमें से जब मेध निकल गया तब वह बकड़ा 'शरभ' हो

रेणु-व्याख्या–

यह तो प्रतिपादन किया गया पूर्व मन्त्र में कि उक्त पुरुष, अश्व, गो, भेंड, एवं बकरा में से यज्ञीय तत्त्व निकलकर व्रीहि एवं जौ में प्रविष्ट हो गया जिसे देवताओं ने कृषिकर्म द्वारा प्राप्त किया। अब उन पशुओं के अयज्ञीय होने की बात को स्पष्ट करते हुए भगवान् याज्ञवल्क्य कहते हैं कि-देवताओं ने जिस पुरुष का आलभन किया था, उसमें से जब मेध निकला तो वह पुरुष किम्पुरुष अर्थात् "किं क्षपे" (अष्टा. 2.1.64) सूत्र से निन्दित पुरुष हो गया। जिस अश्व का आलभन किया, उस अश्व में से जब मेध निकल गया तो वह गौरमृग हो गया। जिस गाय का आलभन किया, उस गाय में से जब मेध निकल गया तो वह 'गवय' अर्थात गाय जैसा जंगली पशु (नीलगाय) हो गया। जिस भेंड का आलभन

किया था, उस भेंड़ में से जब मेध निकल गया तब वह भेंड ऊँट हो गया। इसी तरह जिस बकरा का आलभन किया था उसमें से जब मेध निकल गया तब वह बकडा 'शरभ' हो आलभन किया था उसमें से जब मेध निकल गया तब वह बकड़ा 'शरभ' हो गया। शरभ शब्द का अर्थ आचार्य महीधर ने अपने शुक्लयजुर्वेदीयमाध्यन्दिन संहिता के भाष्य में "शरभोऽष्टापदो मृगविशेषः सिंहघाती" (शु.य.सं.-13-51 मन्त्रभाष्य) किया है। अर्थात् आठ पैरों वाला ऐसा मृग जो सिंह को भी मार देता है। तात्पर्य यह हुआ कि सिंह सबसे उग्र हिंसक जानवर है। परन्तु शरभ जो अष्टपाद जानवर है वह उस सिंह की भी हत्या कर देता है। अतः सिंह से भी अधिक उग्र एवं क्रूर हिंसक पशु यह शरभ है।
चयनयाग के प्रसङ्ग में इन पाँचों पशुओं की हिंसा का निषेध करते हुए शुक्लययजुर्वेदीय माध्यन्दिन संहिता के 13वें अध्याय के 47 मन्त्र से 51 मन्त्र तक इस प्रसङ्ग का उल्लेख किया गया है। इस प्रकार ये पाँचों पशु जिनका आलभन किया गया वे सब मेध के निकल जाने पर विकृत (निन्दित) हो गये। उनमें से यज्ञीय तत्त्व खो चुका है। इसलिए इन पाँचों पुरुष, अश्व, गो, अवि एवं अज के मांस नहीं खाने चाहिए।
आजकल मांसभक्षण कहीं-कहीं परम्परा का रूप धारण कर चुका है। उसके अन्तर्गत शुभ एवं अशुभ कार्यों में कहीं-कहीं बलिप्रदान की प्रथा जोरों पर है। ऐसे समाज को सचेत होकर यह जान लेना चाहिए कि यज्ञ के नाम पर जो हिंसा (समाज में) प्रचलित है, वह वेदनिन्दित है। अतः उसका सर्वथा परित्याग करना चाहिए।।9।।

In the previous mantra, it was stated that from the said Purusha (cosmic man), the sacrificial essence (yajña-tattva) emerged from the horse, cow, sheep, and goat, and entered into rice (vrīhi) and barley (yava), which the Devas acquired through agriculture. Now, to clarify the non-sacrificial nature of those animals, the sage Yājñavalkya explains:

When the Devas performed ālambana upon the Purusha, and the medha (sacrificial essence) emerged from him, that Purusha became a Kimpurusha—a "degraded or criticized man," derived from the grammatical rule "kiṁ kṣape" (Aṣṭādhyāyī 2.1.64), indicating a contemptible form of man.

When the horse was subjected to ālambana and the medha departed from it, it became a gaura-mṛga, a type of wild forest animal (wild horse). When the same happened with the cow, it turned into a gavaya, a wild cow-like animal (such as the nīlagāy, or blue bull).

When the sheep underwent ālambana and lost its medha, it transformed into a camel. Similarly, when the goat lost its sacrificial essence, it became a Sharabha. According to Āchārya Mahīdhara in his commentary on the Śukla Yajurveda Mādhyaṃdina Saṁhitā (Mantra 13.51), the word Sharabha refers to a "special eight-legged beast that even kills lions."

This implies that although the lion is considered the most ferocious and violent animal, Sharabha—an eight-legged creature—surpasses it in violence and power, even capable of slaying lions. Therefore, Sharabha is even more fierce and destructive than a lion.

In the context of chayana-yāga (a particular Vedic sacrificial rite), from mantras 47 to 51 of Chapter 13 of the Śukla Yajurveda Mādhyaṃdina Saṁhitā, the prohibition of violence against these five animals is mentioned. Hence, after the sacrificial essence (medha) had exited these five beings—man, horse, cow, sheep, and goat—they became corrupted (vikṛta) or condemned (nindita). Their yajña-tattva was lost. Hence these five beings –man, horse, cow, sheep, and goat should not be used in Yagya . Therefore, their flesh is considered unfit for consumption and should not be eaten.

In modern times, meat consumption has, in some places, become a cultural tradition. In certain auspicious and inauspicious rituals, animal sacrifice is still vigorously practiced. Such societies must become aware that violence in the name of sacrifice is condemned by the Vedas. Therefore, such practices should be completely abandoned.

आलभन किया था उसमें से जब मेध निकल गया तब वह बकड़ा 'शरभ' हो गया।

शरभ शब्द का अर्थ आचार्य महीधर ने अपने शुक्लयजुर्वेदीयमाध्यन्दिन संहिता के भाष्य में "शरभोऽष्टापदो मृगविशेषः सिंहघाती" (शु.य.सं.-13-51 मन्त्रभाष्य) किया है। अर्थात् आठ पैरों वाला ऐसा मृग जो सिंह को भी मार देता है। तात्पर्य यह हुआ कि सिंह सबसे उग्र हिंसक जानवर है। परन्तु शरभ जो अष्टपाद जानवर है वह उस सिंह की भी हत्या कर देता है। अतः सिंह से भी अधिक उग्र एवं क्रूर हिंसक पशु यह शरभ है।

चयनयाग के प्रसङ्ग में इन पाँचों पशुओं की हिंसा का निषेध करते हुए शुक्लयजुर्वेदीय माध्यन्दिन संहिता के 13वें अध्याय के 47 मन्त्र से 51 मन्त्र तक इस प्रसङ्ग का उल्लेख किया गया है।

के द्वितीयाध्याय के तृतीयब्राह्मण की रेणु हिन्दी व्याख्या पूर्ण हुई।।

A Story in Mahabharata Vana Parva Adhaya 127-128 talks about the dire consequences of performing Human sacrifice

Mahabharat Vana Parva Adhyay 127 sloka 19-20

पुरोहितने कहा- राजन्! मैं एक यज्ञ आरम्भ करवाऊँगा, उसमें तुम अपने पुत्र जन्तुकी आहुति देकर यजन करो। इससे शीघ्र ही तुम्हें सौ परम सुन्दर पुत्र प्राप्त होंगे ।। १९ ।।

जिस समय उसकी चर्बीकी आहति दी जायगी उस समय उसके धुएँको सूँघ लेनेपर सब माताएँ (गर्भवती हो) आपके लिये अत्यन्त पराक्रमी पुत्रोंको जन्म देंगी ।। २० ।।

“The royal priest said — O King! I shall commence a yajña (sacrificial ritual); in that, you must offer your son Jantu as the sacrificial oblation. By doing so, you will soon obtain a hundred extremely handsome sons. (19)

At the moment when his fat is offered into the fire, upon inhaling the smoke from that offering, all the mothers (your wives) will become pregnant and give birth to exceptionally powerful sons for you. (20)”

Mahabharata Vana Parva Adhaya 128 sloka 2-5

लोमशजी कहते हैं – यधिष्ठिर ! तब परोहितने राजा सोमकसे जन्तुकी बलि देकर किये जानेवाले यज्ञको प्रारम्भ करवाया। उस समय करुणामयी माताएँ अत्यन्त शोकसे व्याकल हो 'हाय! हम मारी गयीं' ऐसा कहकर रोती हई अपने पुत्र जन्तुको बलपूर्वक अपनी ओर खींच रही थीं।

Lomaśa said — O Yudhishthira! Then the royal priest had King Somaka commence the yajña, in which the sacrifice of Jantu was to be offered. At that time, the compassionate mothers, overwhelmed with intense grief, cried out in sorrow, “Alas! We are being destroyed!” and, weeping, tried to pull their son Jantu towards themselves with all their strength.

Mahabharata Vana Parva Adhaya 128 sloka 20-23 mentioning the dire consequences of Human Sacrifice

तदनन्तर कुछ कालके पश्चात् सोमकके पुरोहित परलोकवासी हो गये। थोडे दिनोंके बाद राजा सोमक भी परलोकवासी हो गये। यमलोकमें जानेपर सोमकने देखा, प्रोहितजी घोर नरककी आगमें पकाये जा रहे हैं। उन्हें उस अवस्थामें देखकर सोमकने पूछा – 'ब्रह्मन् ! आप नरककी आगमें कैसे पकाये जा रहे हैं?' ।।

तब नरकाग्निसे अधिक संतप्त होते हए पुरोहितने कहा- 'राजन् ! मैंने तुम्हें जो (तम्हारे पत्रकी आहति देकर) यज्ञ करवाया था, उसी कर्मका यह फल है' यह सुनकर राजर्षि सोमकने धर्मराजसे कहा- 'भगवन्! मैं इस नरकमें प्रवेश करूँगा। आप मेरे पुरोहितको छोड़ दीजिये। वे महाभाग मेरे ही कारण नरकाग्निमें पक रहे हैं। अतः मैं अपने-आपको नरकमें रखूँगा, परंतु मेरे गुरुजीको उससे छुटकारा मिल जाना चाहिये'

After some time, the royal priest of Somaka passed away. A few days later, King Somaka also departed from this world. Upon reaching Yamaloka (the abode of the god of death), Somaka saw that his priest was being scorched in the blazing fire of hell. Seeing him in such a state, Somaka asked, “O Brāhmaṇa! Why are you being tormented in the fire of hell?”

Then, overwhelmed by the intense suffering from the fire of hell, the priest replied, “O King! The yajña I performed for you—by offering your son as a sacrifice—this is the result of that act.”

Hearing this, King Somaka, now a royal sage (rājṛṣi), said to Dharmarāja (Yama, the god of death), “O Lord! I will enter this hell. Please release my priest. That noble soul is suffering in the fires of hell because of me. Therefore, let me remain in hell myself, but my revered teacher must be freed from it.”

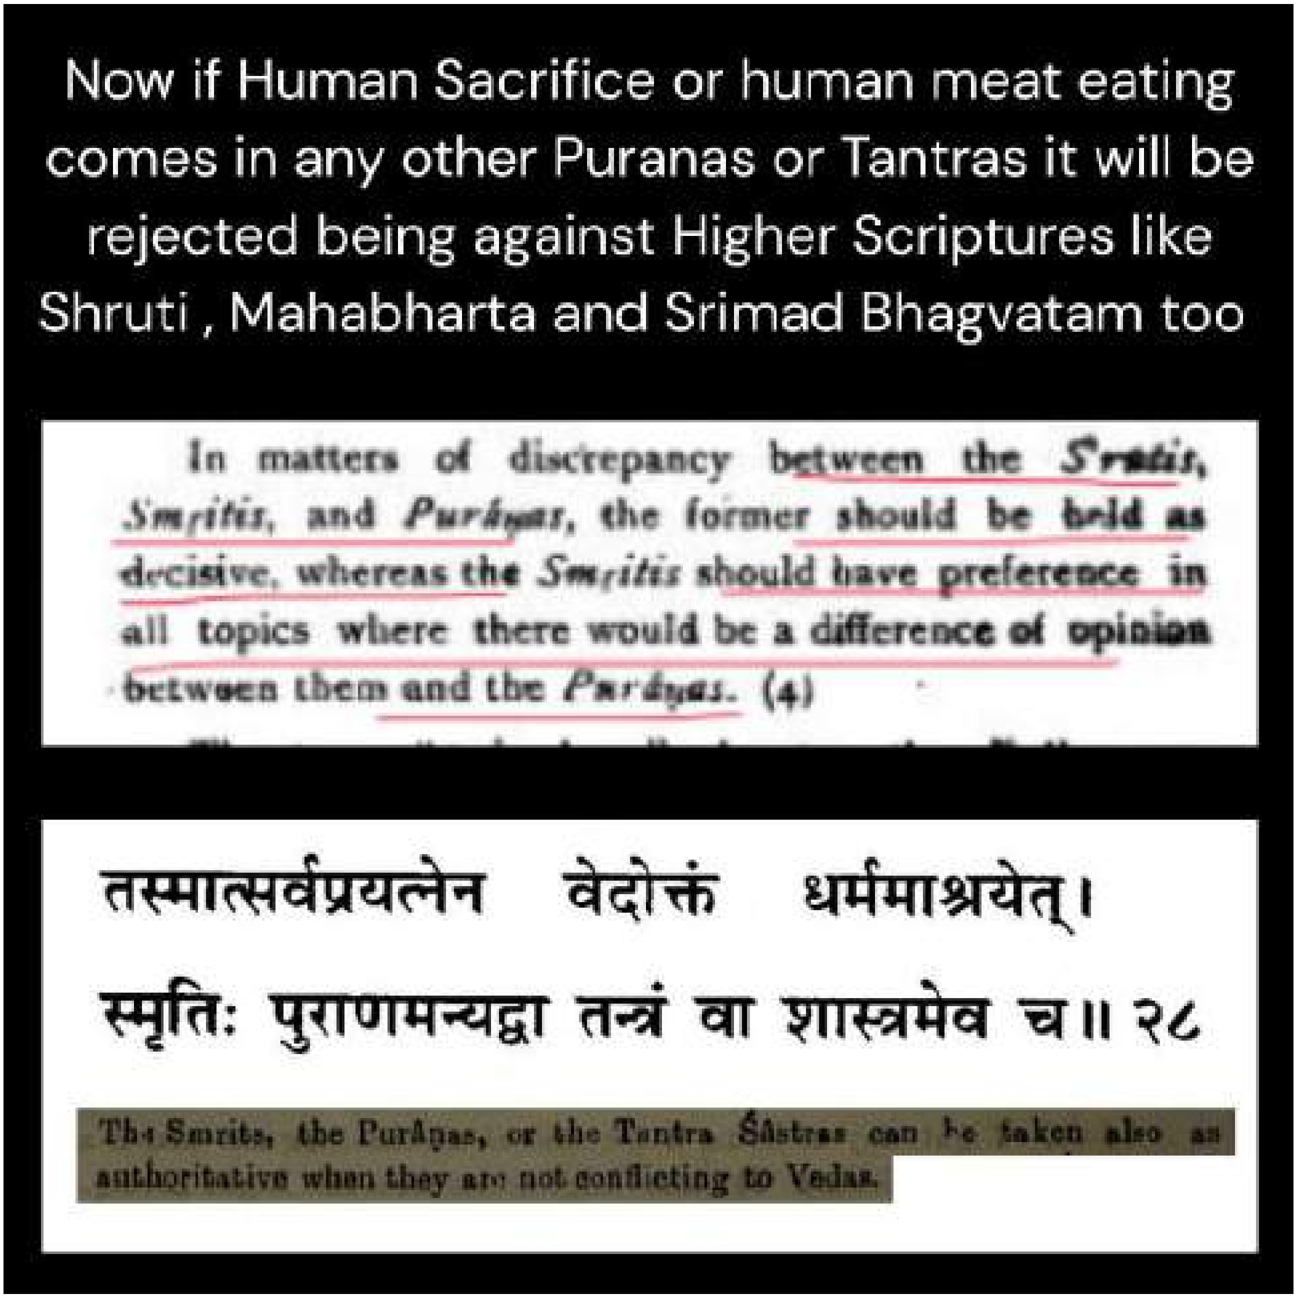
If any doctrine of Narabali comes in any other Puranas or Tantras or any other Lower text it will be rejected being against Higher Scriptures like Mahabharat , Srimad Bhagavatam and Shruti – Vyasa Smriti 1.4 and Devi Bhagavatam on Authority of Scriptures



Allegations-

Manusmriti 10.105 – Ajīgarta, buffering from hunger, went forward to kill his son; and as he sought a remedy for hunger, he did not become tainted with sin.

Refutation-

Here is Manu Smriti 10.105

क्योंकि प्राचीनकाल में भूख से पीड़ित हुए अजीगर्त नामक ऋषि अपने पुत्र को ही मारने को उद्यत हो गए थे, किन्तु वे भूख के प्रतीकार हेतु ऐसे उपाय का आचरण करते हुए पाप से लिप्त नहीं हुए।।

१०५।

Because in ancient times a sage named Ajigarta, suffering from hunger, was ready to kill his own son, but by adopting such a measure to counter his hunger, he did not commit any sin.

Here the context is about Extreme Situations where Rishi Ajigarta suffering from hunger and unable to find any food for survival tried to kill his son in order to counter his hunger

But does that mean selling one son and killing him is allowed in extreme situations . NO ! . To understand this we will see this original story from Aitareya Brahmana of Rig Veda

This story primarily Occurs in Aitareya Brahmana of Rig Veda . So we will see this Story from Aitareya Brahmana 7th Panchika Third Adhaya as well

Ajigarta, having been rejected by Vishvamitra, spoke to Shunahshepa as follows: "O son! Now that you have separated from Vishvamitra, come back to our home. Your mother and I, both of us, will lovingly and earnestly call you back." Saying this, he stood silently for a moment. Then once again, addressing the silent Shunahshepa, he spoke through a certain verse:

"O Shunahshepa! By birth, you are an Āṅgirasah—born in the lineage of the sage Angiras, the son of Ajigarta, a wise man, and one well-known everywhere. Therefore, O great sage! Do not turn away from the lineage of Angiras, which was established by your paternal grandfather—Prajapati himself. Hence, once again, return to my home," —so said Ajigarta.

But Rishi Shunahshepa too responded with a verse:

"The 'śāsa' is the instrument of punishment—a sword.
O Ajigarta! All people have seen you holding the sword in your hand to kill me. That cruel act, which even the most degraded people (Shudras) do not accept or commit, such cruelty has been committed by you. O Angirasa! In exchange for me, you chose three hundred cows. This indeed is a most painful and sorrowful act."

Sage Ajigarta said – You are worthy of care and protection (O Shunahshepa)! A sinful act has been committed by me; that sinful deed now torments me. I now seek to atone for that sin. Out of the three hundred cows I had taken, let a hundred cows be returned to you."Then Rishi Shunahshepa said (to his father): "He who commits a sin once, commits another after that as well. You cannot free yourself from the cruel deeds of a lower nature, done unjustly; because you have committed an act that should not have been done, driven by greed."

Sayanacharya commented it upon it as – शुनः शेपेनोपालब्धोऽजीगर्तः स्वकीयमनुतापं दर्शयितुं काञ्चिद्-गाथामेवमुवाच – हे तात पितृवदुपलालनीय शुनःशेप 'मया यत्पापं कृतं' 'तद्वै मा तपति' तदेव मां मनसि संतप्तं करोति । 'अहं' तत्पापं 'निहनुवे' परिहरामि । गवां शतानि पूर्वं मया गृहीतानि त्रीणि यानि तानि तुभ्यं त्वदर्थं 'प्रतियन्तु' प्रत्येकमेव प्राप्नुवन्तु' । इतरयोः पुत्रयोर्गावो मा भूवंस्तवैव सर्वाः सन्त्विति । ततः स शुनःशेपो गाथया प्रत्युत्तरं ददौ । 'यः' पुमान् धर्मशास्त्रभीतिरहितः 'सकृत्पापकं कुर्यात्' स पुमांस्ततः पापादन्यद् 'एनत्' पापं तदभ्यासवशात् कुर्यादेव । त्वं तु 'शौद्रान्यायात्' नीचजातिसम्बन्धिनः क्रूरादाचरणात् 'नापागाः' अपगतो न भवसि । 'असंधेयं' प्रतिसंधानरहितं पापं त्वया कृतमित्येषा शुनः-शेपस्य प्रत्युक्तिः

Shunahshepa was approached by his father Ajigarta, who, in order to express his repentance, spoke a certain verse as follows:"O child, Shunahshepa, who is to be cared for like a father would— 'The sin that I have committed, that indeed torments me; it causes anguish in my mind. I now atone for that sin. Of the three hundred cows that I had earlier taken,let one hundred of them be returned to you—for your sake, let each one indeed be given to you. Let not the remaining cows go to the other two sons; may all of them be yours alone." Then Shunahshepa gave a reply in verse:"He who, being unafraid of the moral laws (Dharma), commits a sin once, will certainly, by force of habit, commit more sins thereafter.You, indeed, are not free from the cruel conduct associated with a lower nature, you have not renounced it. Because you have committed a sin that is 'asandheyam'—one that is irreconcilable, that cannot be justified."—This is how Shunahshepa responded.

Allegations–

1. Krishna and Arjuna

📚Padma Purana 5.74.61-74a📚
Then having heard the words, when Arjuna plunged into the water of the lake, which was tinged with the pollen dropped from white lotuses, lotuses opening on moonrise, (other) lotuses and red and blue lotuses, and which was agreeably perfumed with honey-drops, which was shaken by the notes of corpulent swans, whose four banks were decked with jewels, which had ripples due to gentle breezes, she vanished just there. The charmingly smiling one got up and on seeing around, was confused. He instantly saw himself (to be turned into) a wonderful, excellent lady, who had a slim, fair, charming body like the rays of pure gold…"

The story continues…

📚Padma Purana 5.74.177b-196a📚
Arjuniya, having seen in confusion on the left side of the pleasing goddess Radhika, propitiating and offering a tambula to him of a bright smile, was overcome with the passion of love. Then, Sri krsna, who knew everything, knowing her to be like that, seized her hand, and he the lord, the great master of magical art secretly sported with her in the entire pleasure-forest. Then putting his sport-like arm on her should and coming to Sarada, said to her: 'Bathe quickly this slim-bodied lady of a gentle smile, fatigued due to sport, in this western lake.' Then that goddess Sarada (took her) to the western lake, (and) said to her, 'Take bath'. The fatigued one did like that. She who got to the interior of the water, again turned into Arjuna and got up at the place where the lord of gods and the chief of the beautiful Vaikuntha stood. Seeing Arjuna dejected and broken-minded, Krsna kindly touched him with his hand and put him (back) to his nature."

Refutation-

Ashoke Chatterjee in his book Padma Purana A Study page number 92/281 mentioned that chapter 69-99 in Patala Khanda of Padma Purana (Including chapter 74) are later interpolations and were inserted later on in Padma Purana between 11-12th Century AD . Thus this chapter 74 which he alleged is an interpolation

This part consists of chaps 69 99 of the Patāla-khanda This portion is neither the work of the Ramaites nor that of the Linga worshippers

This group seems to have come from a very late date We have seen how it depicts a picture of a developed Radha

Some 200 years' time should be given to the group 2 to attain recognition Then obviously this part dates between 1150-1200 AD

Group 3

This part consists of chaps 69 99 of the Patāla-khanda This portion is neither the work of the Rāmaites nor that of the Linga worshippers, but definitely a contribution of the Bhāgavata Vaisnavas who put a stamp of their own sect on it by supplementing it with some new chaps of their own interest In the discussion of group 2 we have shown how the Linga worshippers of the Pāśupata sect describe Śiva being praised by Rama The present group, it appears, is a recast by the Bhāgavata-Vaisnavas who have paid back the Linga worshippers in their own coin In this group it is seen that Pārvati and Īśvara were glorifying the Māhātmyas and celebrity of Krsna and Rādhā—His eternal consort, and Vrndāvana—their eternal blissful abode Rādhā has been highly eulogised She is conceived as the eternal Prakṛti She pervades the whole universe, phenomenal and real and is the prime cause of creation, existence and destruction She is self-luminous and illumines the external objects The eternal unity of Krsna and Rādhā is the Supreme Truth and this unity must be realised in order to reach the highest goal—the summum bonum of human life Rādhā is the abode of the highest bliss, and beauty She is the essence of all fair instincts She is the concept of love but this love or Prema is high

This group seems to have come from a very late date We have seen how it depicts a picture of a developed Rādhā cult Moreover, it abounds in references to Tulasī[39] Traces of Tāntricism are also vividly observable[40] Āgama has been admitted as an authority[41] Tāntric mudrās, nyāsas have

[38] It should, however, be noted in this connection that the Bengal ms. of the Pātāla-khanda do not contain all these references as they end in chap. 80 of the Ānan. ed. of the Pātāla-khanda

[39] Pātāla khanda 72 [illegible] 73 [illegible] 79 32,36 [illegible] 67,9 16 etc

[40] Ibid 74 [illegible] 21 etc

[41] Ibid 84 [illegible] 109 15b, 110 22 [illegible]

been referred to more than once[42] Mandala and Yantra have been regarded as the medium of worship[43] All these tend to assign a much later date to this part We have also shown that it has been contributed later than the group 2, the date of which is c 950-1000 A D Some 200 years' time should be given to the group 2 to attain recognition Then obviously this part dates between 1150-1200 A D And this may be accepted if we keep the fact in view that Gopālabhatta (of 1400 A D) in his Hari-bhakti-vilāsa has quoted numerous verses from this part[44], and the contents of these chaps are given in the Nāradīya-p I 93 which is also of a very later origin

2. Shiva and Vishnu

📚Skanda Purana 1.3b.20.32-33📚
Be victorious, O Lord, whose head is adorned with Ganga and the crescent moon, O Lord, who have fascinated the minds of the wives of all sages by means of your handsome features. Be victorious, O Lord, who are possessed of the glory of the god of Love due to the close contact of the daughter of the Mountain. Be victorious, O Lord, who are an expert in the repetition of the (sexual) play over the body of Naranaya adopted by means of Maya (?)."

📚Agni Purana 3.17-20📚
Viṣṇu in the company of all the immortals said, "Be it so" and cast off his female form. He was then requested by Hara to show that form (again). (Lord) Hari (Viṣṇu) showed the feminine form to Rudra (Siva). Sambhu (Siva) being captivated by the illusory power, renouncing Gauri (Pārvatī) sought that feminine form. Becoming nude and behaving like a mad man, he held the damsel by her hair. She got herself freed and ran away. He too followed her. Wherever the seminal fluid of Hara dropped, there came into being sacred places of liṅgas and gold."

📚Shrimad Bhagavatam 8.12.15-32📚
The Supreme Personality of Godhead said: When the demons took away the jug of nectar, I assumed the form of a beautiful woman to bewilder them by directly cheating them and thus to act in the interest of the demigods. O best of the demigods, I shall now show you My form that is very much appreciated by those who are lusty. Since you want to see that form, I shall reveal it in your presence. Because the ball was falling down and bouncing up, as She played with it Her breasts trembled, and because of the weight of those breasts and Her heavy flower garlands, Her waist appeared to be all but breaking at every step, as Her two soft feet, which were reddish like coral, moved here and there. As She played with the ball, the sari covering Her body became loose, and Her hair scattered. She tried to bind Her hair with Her beautiful left hand, and at the same time She played with the ball by striking it with Her right hand. This was so attractive that the Supreme Lord [Vishnu], by His internal potency, in this way captivated everyone. Thus Lord Śiva saw the woman, every part of whose body was beautifully formed, and the beautiful woman also looked at him. Therefore, thinking that She was attracted to him, Lord Śiva became very much attracted to Her. Lord Śiva, his good sense taken away by the woman because of lusty desires to enjoy with Her, became so mad for Her that even in the presence of Bhavānī [Shiva's wife] he did not hesitate to approach Her. The beautiful woman was already naked, and when She saw Lord Śiva coming toward Her, She became extremely bashful. Thus She kept smiling, but She hid Herself among the trees and did not stand in one place. After following Her with great speed, Lord Śiva caught Her by the braid of Her hair and dragged Her near him. Although She was unwilling, he embraced Her with his arms. Being embraced by Lord Śiva like a female elephant embraced by a male, the woman, whose hair was scattered, swirled like a snake. O King, this woman, who had large, high hips, was a woman of yoga-māyā presented by the Supreme Personality of Godhead. She released Herself somehow or other from the fond embrace of Lord Śiva's arms and ran away. As if harassed by an enemy in the form of lusty desires, Lord Śiva followed the path of Lord Viṣṇu, who acts very wonderfully and who had taken the form of Mohinī. Just as a maddened bull elephant follows a female elephant who is able to conceive pregnancy, Lord Śiva followed the beautiful woman and discharged semen, even though his discharge of semen never goes in vain."

Here is Skanda Purana Maheshwar Khanda Arunācala-khaṇḍa (Uttarārdha) chapter 29 slokas 32-33 hindi translation by Choukhamba Publications

देवी कहती हैं- हे मेरुचाय, कैलासाचलवासी, नीहार (हिम) शैल के जामाता, शोणाचल रूपी, वरुणादि देवगण द्वारा अर्चनीय, तरुणादित्य के समान किरणों वाले, अरुणाचलेश्वर, करुणामूर्ति आपको प्रणाम ! हे जन्हुपुत्री (गंगा) तथा चन्द्रलेखा द्वारा अलंकृत मस्तक वाले, आप अपने सौन्दर्य से समस्त मुनियों के अन्तःकरण को मुग्ध करते हैं। आपको प्रणाम! आपकी जय हो। आप शैलपुत्री के साथ अनंग वैभव का पोषण करते हैं। आप मायानारायण के आभोगार्थ क्रीड़ा में पण्डित हैं। आपकी जय हो। हे सन्ध्यासमोपंत सम्भूतानन्द ताण्डव ! आप देव-गन्धर्व-सिद्ध-विद्याधर द्वारा पूजित हैं। आपकी जय हो। हे हेरम्बजनक! सम्मुखवत्सल (पार्वती) हैमवती द्वारा प्रार्थित, पार्थिवदुर्लभ ! आपकी जय हो।" उन ज्योतिपदार्थ के अवलोकन में तत्पर देवी को यह स्तव करते देखकर वृषध्वज देवदेव शिव वहीं विलीन हो गये तथा सुन्दर रूप धारण करके वृषभारूढ़ होकर पार्वती को दर्शन देने वहीं प्रकट हो गये। उन्होंने यह दर्शन भगवती शिवा को प्रदान किया, जो अतिशय मान के कारण सभी ऐश्वर्य का त्याग करके तप कर रही थीं। वे शंकर के प्रति मुग्ध शिवा को सान्त्वना देने का प्रयास करने लगे।।३०-३८।।
।। विंश अध्याय समाप्त।।

The goddess said:

"O Meruchaya (resplendent like Mount Meru), O resident of Mount Kailasa, son-in-law of the snowy mountain (Himavat), O embodiment of Shonachala (Arunachala), worshipped by gods like Varuna, one whose rays are like that of the rising sun, O Arunachaleshwara, embodiment of compassion—salutations to you!

O one adorned with the crescent moon and the holy river Ganga (Jahnavi) on your head, you enchant the hearts of all sages with your divine beauty—salutations to you! Victory to you!

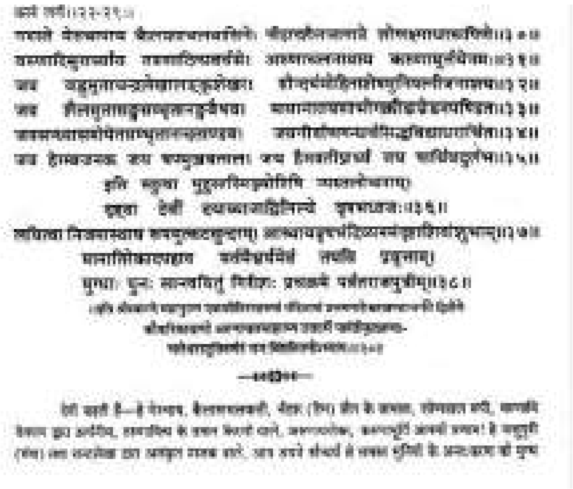
You, along with Shailaputri (Parvati), nourish the bliss of divine love (Ananga Vaibhava). You are an expert in the divine play (Krida) intended for the delight of Maya-Narayana—victory to you!

O embodiment of the joyous Tandava dance performed at twilight, you are worshipped by devas, gandharvas, siddhas, and vidyadharas—victory to you!

O father of Heramba (Ganesha), prayed to by the affectionate daughter of Himavat, Parvati, you are rarely attainable even through severe penance—victory to you!"

Seeing the goddess engaged in such devotional praise while perceiving that effulgent form (jyoti), Lord Shiva—the Lord of all gods, Vrishadhvaja—merged into that very light and then manifested before Parvati in a beautiful form, mounted on his bull (Vrishabha).

He granted this divine vision to the supreme goddess Shiva (Parvati), who, out of great pride and resolve, had renounced all prosperity and was engaged in intense penance. Now, seeing her enamored with him, Lord Shankara began to console her.



Here in Skanda Purana Maheshwar Khanda Arunācala-khaṇḍa (Uttarārdha) chapter 29 slokas 32-33 its written that आप मायानारायण के आभोगार्थ क्रीड़ा में पण्डित हैं।"that is "You are an expert in the divine play meant for the enjoyment of Māyā-Nārāyaṇa."

Who is Maya- Narayana as per Shastras ?

Harivamsa Purana Vishnu Parva Adhaya 120 slokas 8-10 praises Durga Devi as Maya Swaroopa

जो प्राज्ञा (बुद्धिमती एवं विदुषी), दक्षा, कल्याणस्वरूपा, सौम्या, दानवमर्दिनी, सबके शरीरों में विद्यमान तथा सम्पूर्ण भूतों द्वारा वन्दित हैं — उन आद्यदेवी को मेरा प्रणाम है।॥८॥

Coming to Allegations on Shiva-Mohini-

Traditional Sri Vaishnava Acharya Pandit Madhavacharya Shastri in his book Purana Digdarshan page 599 explained the meaning of the Shiva Mohini story in Bhagvatam

(क) यद् रुद्रश्चन्द्रमास्तेन । – (कोषीतकी ६ । ७) – (a) Due to which Rudra [is called] the Moon.

(ख) (प्रजापतिः) तं (रुद्रं) अब्रवीन्महादेवोऽसीति । तद्यदस्य तन्नामाकरोच्चन्द्रमास्तरूपमभवत् ।। (शतपथ ६ । १।३।१६) -Prajapati said to this Rudra that you are Mahadev because he was named Mahadev = Mahan- radiant, so he (beautiful) became the Moon. . (ग) आग्नेयी पृथिवी । (ताण्ड्य १५।४।८) -This earth was igneous – fiery vapor

(घ) इयं (पृथिवी) वै देव्यदितिविश्वरूपी । (तैत्तिरीय १ । ७ । ६।७) – This earth itself is the beautiful goddess in the form of Mohini

So the meaning is that on insistence of Lord Shiva in the form of Moon, the आग्नेय वाष्प in the form of Vishnu, on attaining density, assumed the form of Mohini in the form of the Earth. So, when the Earth became stable and the Earth also got an independent orbit due to the attraction and repulsion of other planets, the Moon started revolving around the Earth, as if Lord Shiva became infatuated with the beauty of the Earth in the form of Mohini. This is what Mahadev means by running after Mohini; the Moon ran around to its full capacity, spread its rays or hands, but could not get anything, that is, the Moon could not assimilate the Earth, this is the meaning of Mohini not coming in its hands.

(क) यद् रुद्रश्चन्द्रमास्तेन । – (कौषीतकी ६ । ७) – (a) Due to which Rudra [is called] the Moon.
(ख) (प्रजापतिः) तं (रुद्रं) अब्रवीन्महादेवोऽसीति । तद्यदस्य तन्नामाकरोच्चन्द्रमास्तद्रूपमभवत् ॥ (शतपथ ६ । १।३।१६) –Prajapati said to this Rudra that you are Mahadev because he was named Mahadev = Mahan-radiant, so he (beautiful) became the Moon.
(ग) आग्नेयी पृथिवी । (ताण्ड्य १५।४।८) –This earth was igneous – fiery vapor
(घ) इयं (पृथिवी) वै देव्यदितिविश्वरूपी । (तैत्तिरीय १ । ७ । ६।७) – This earth itself is the beautiful goddess in the form of Mohini

So the meaning is that on insistence of Lord Shiva in the form of Moon, the आग्नेय वाष्प in the form of Vishnu, on attaining density, assumed the form of Mohini in the form of the Earth. So, when the Earth became stable and the Earth also got an independent orbit due to the attraction and repulsion of other planets, the Moon started revolving around the Earth, as if Lord Shiva became infatuated with the beauty of the Earth in the form of Mohini. This is what Mahadev means by running after Mohini; the Moon ran around to its full capacity, spread its rays or hands, but could not get anything, that is, the Moon could not assimilate the Earth, this is the meaning of Mohini not coming in its hands.

Then whats the meaning of Maheshwar Shiva releasing his tejas behind Mohini . Pandit Madhavacharya Shastri explained

वर्तमान विज्ञानवेत्ता भी इस बात को स्वीकार करते हैं कि आरम्भमें यह पृथ्वी तपे हुवे सोने के बराबर जाज्वल्यमान एवं दमकते हुवे पिण्ड के समान थी सो ज्यों ही चांद पृथ्वीपिण्ड की अपरिमित ऊष्मा से संश्लिष्ट हुवा तो उसका बहुत सा भास्वर हिम पिघल २ कर बहने लगा। गर्मी के संयोग से बर्फ का बह जाना विज्ञान सिद्ध बात है। सो यही शिव के वीर्यपात का आशय है।

The present day Science also accept that in the beginning, the earth was like a glowing and shining body like heated gold, (As provided in Vedic Shruti as well) so as soon as the moon was composed of the infinite heat of the earth, a lot of its shining snow melted and started flowing. It is a scientifically proven fact that snow starts flowing due to heat. So this is the meaning of Shiva's semen discharge in Srimad Bhagvatam 8.12. 32

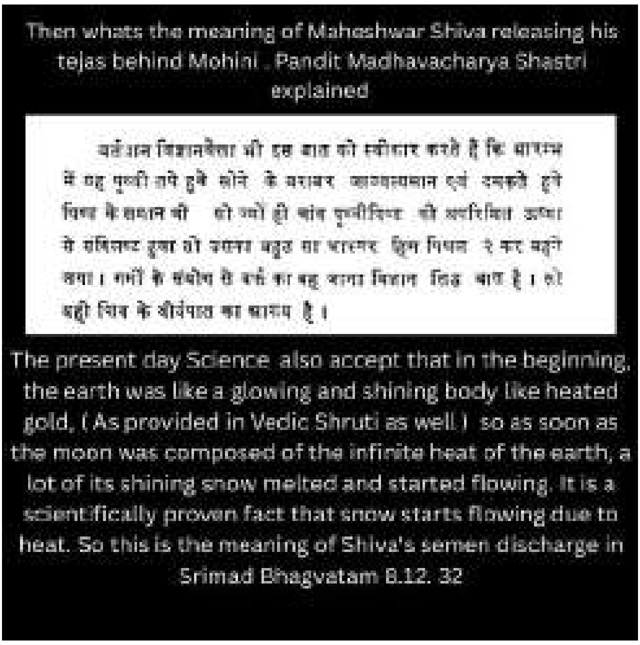

In Mahabharat Anushashan Parva Adhyay 17 Maheshwar Shiva is called Greatest of All Yogis and The most conquered of all senses

जो वेदोंके भी वेद, उत्तम वस्तुओंमें भी परम उत्तम, तेजके भी तेज, तपके भी तप, शान्त पुरुषोंमें भी परम शान्त, कान्तिकी भी कान्ति, जितेन्द्रियोंमें भी परम जितेन्द्रिय, बुद्धिमानोंकी भी बुद्धि, देवताओंके भी देवता, ऋषियोंके भी ऋषि, यज्ञोंके भी यज्ञ, कल्याणोंके भी कल्याण, रुद्रोंके भी रुद्र, प्रभावशाली ईश्वरोंकी भी प्रभा (ऐश्वर्य), योगियोंके भी योगी तथा कारणोंके भी कारण हैं। जिनसे सम्पूर्ण लोक उत्पन्न होते और फिर उन्हींमें विलीन हो जाते हैं, जो सम्पूर्ण भूतोंके आत्मा हैं, उन्हीं अमित तेजस्वी भगवान् शिवके एक हजार आठ नामोंका वर्णन मुझसे सुनिये। पुरुषसिंह! इसका श्रवणमात्र करके आप अपनी सम्पूर्ण कामनाओंको प्राप्त कर लेंगे ।। २५-३० ।।

The one who is the Vedas among the Vedas, the supreme among the entities, the brightest among the luminous, the most ascetic among the ascetics, the most peaceful among the serene beings, the most radiant among the radiant, the most self-controlled among the self-controlled, the most intelligent among the wise, the Deva among Devas, the sage among sages, the sacrifice among sacrifices, the auspicious among the auspicious, the Rudra among Rudras, the powerful among the powerful , the supreme yogi among yogis, the cause of all causes—He is the Supreme Lord Shiva, who pervades all worlds and into whom everything ultimately dissolves.

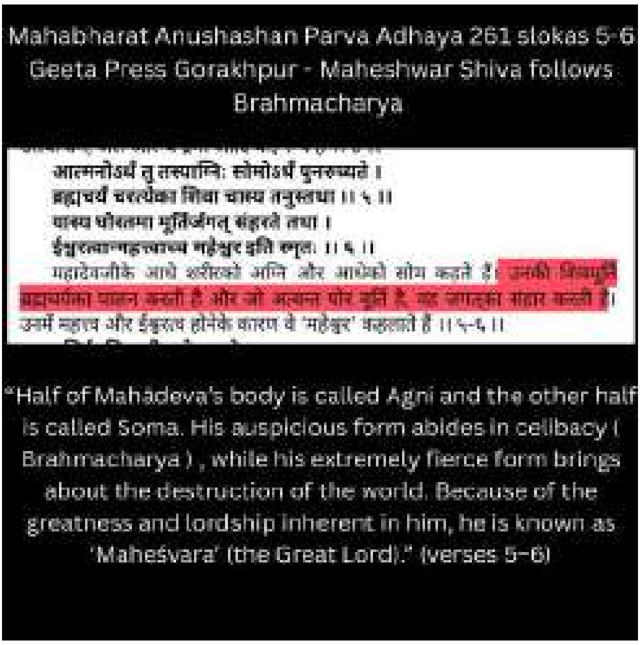
महादेवजीके आधे शरीरको अग्नि और आधेको सोम कहते हैं। उनकी शिवमूर्ति ब्रह्मचर्यका पालन करती है और जो अत्यन्त घोर मूर्ति है, वह जगत्‌का संहार करती है। उनमें महत्त्व और ईश्वरत्व होनेके कारण वे 'महेश्वर' कहलाते हैं ।। ५-६ ।।
"Half of Mahādeva's body is called Agni and the other half is called Soma. His auspicious form abides in celibacy (Brahmacharya), while his extremely fierce form brings about the destruction of the world. Because of the greatness and lordship inherent in him, he is known as 'Maheśvara' (the Great Lord)." (verses 5-6)



In Srimad Bhagavatam Book 8 Chapter 7 sloka 32 Maheshwar Shiva is called the destroyer of Kama (Lust)

That you destroyed Kama (the god of Love), the sacrifice (of Daksa), Tripuras the three cities (constructed by Maya) subdued the god of death, consumed the (Hala-hala) poison (which is as good as consumed as you are certain to drink it up just now) and killed innumerable trouble-

Allegations-

Brahmanda Purana Lalita Mahatmya 6.7-9 "The second form appeared when the churning for the sake of Nectar was being carried out. That form fascinated Sarva (Siva). It cannot be comprehended by the mind or expressed through words. On seeing it, even isa (god Siva) became charmed and enchanted although he is omniscient. When prohibited by her, he left off Parvati all of a sudden and he indulged in sexual intercourse with her (i.e. Mohini). He begot of her (the son) Sasta, the supressor of Asuras." Tr. G.V. Tagare Shasta is popularly known as Ayyappa in south India. He is also known by the name Hari-Hara. As he was born from Hari (Vishnu) and Hara (Shiva).

Refutation-

The claim that Ayyappa (Shasta) was born from a homosexual union between Shiva and Vishnu is based on a superficial reading of the Brahmanda Purana Lalita Mahatmya 6.7–9 and ignores the clear theological framework given in the same Purana and other texts. Mohini is not "male Vishnu dressed as a woman" but the direct māyā form of the Supreme Goddess Lalita Tripurasundari (Uma), who is Vishnu's own Shakti. The Lalita Sahasranama (name 562) and Soundarya Lahari 5 state that Vishnu assumed the form of Mohini only after meditating upon and uniting with Uma's essence, thereby manifesting the Goddess Herself. The Brahmanda Purana explicitly narrates that Mohini was an incarnation of Lalita Devi, who disappeared after the birth of Shasta, revealing her true divine nature. According to the Rudra-hridayopanishad (1.5), Uma Herself is Vishnu, showing the non-duality of Hari and Shakti. Thus, the union of Shiva with Mohini was a union of Shiva and Shakti, the eternal male–female cosmic principle, not two males. "Hari-Hara-putra" refers to the child born of this union of Hara (Shiva) with the Shakti manifested through Hari (Vishnu), not a homosexual relationship. The episode is symbolic of Śiva–Śakti unity and Advaita, in which Shasta's birth served the dharmic purpose of subduing asuras, not as an expression of human sexual categories.

WHO WAS MOHINI?
Mohini was an illusion created by Devi Lalita Tripurasundari (uma) because she herself is Vishnu maya

BRAHMANDA PURAN, UTTARABHAGA CHAPTER 6

Thus, the Divine Mother who manifested and enchanted the demons was called MOHINI (the divine entrantress). Shiva, staying in Kailasha came to know of these events and wanted to note the speciality of the new form of Vishnu. Along with his consort Parvati, Shiva went to Vaikuntha, the abode of Vishnu and pressed Him to show the form of Mohini. Vishnu suddenly disappeared without saying yes or no.

While Shiva was searching for Vishnu, he happened to reach a new place where he continued to search.

There he heard the music of Veena. He saw a beautiful young lady.who was Mohini an incaration of Lalitha Devi Unable to resist his infatuation, Shiva embraced her. At once a divine baby was born. He was named SHASTA (one who rules). He became a commander in Shiva's army.

At once the lady disappeared. Shiva realised that she was none else than Mohini, a form of Vishnu. He applauded her beauty and returned to Kailasha along with Parvati.
Thus the Divine Mother incarnated as Mohini and granted success of the activities of the celestials.9

BRAHMANDA PURAN, CHAPTER 10
MANIFESTATION OF MOHINI

4. In the meantime, Vishnu, the sole protector of all the worlds, earnestly propitiated Lalita2 whose form was in union with his own.
5. The lord (Vishnu), the leader of Yogins, propitiated Maheshvari. By meditating solely on her, he became identical in form with her.
6. She fascinated and enchanted everyone. She was the very heroine incarnate of the sentiment of love. She was richly-clad in a seductively charming dress and she was bedecked with all ornaments.
   Brahmand puran gives the same narration where Sri Hari got mohini roop from Devi Lalita after uniting with her and Mohini was maya (illusion) here we can see the Non duality(advaita) between Vishnu and Adi Shakti

BRAHMANDA PURAN, CHAPTER 10
MANIFESTATION OF MOHINI
45-46. Mahadeva requested him
“O lord Purushottama, O glorious Lord and master of great Yogic practice, show me that beautiful form of excellent magnificence, charming in every respect, which had been assumed by you-the form that bewitched and fascinated everyone, and which surpassed the power of the mind (imagination) and of speech (being beyond description).

47. I wish to see that form of yours which is the presiding deity of the sentiment of love. It should, by all means, be seen by me. Indeed, you are like the divine cow that yields everything that is sought.”
48-49. On being repeatedly requested thus by Mahadeva, Hari the lord and master of great yogic practice, meditated with single-minded devotion on that (supreme deity), by meditating on whom that matchlessly miraculous form had been obtained by him (before). Smiling a little, he said, -“Be it so” and then vanished.
After Samudra Manthan Mahadev requested Vishnu to show his Mohini swaroop then Shri Hari again meditates on Devi Lalita and acquires that form

Who was Mohini?

Mohini was an illusion created by Devi Lalita Tripurasundari(uma) because she herself is Vishnu maya

Brahmanda puran,Uttarabhaga Chapter 6

Thus, the Divine Mother who manifested and enchanted the demons was called MOHINI (the divine entrantress). Shiva, staying in Kailasha came to know of these events and wanted to note the speciality of the new form of Vishnu. Along with his consort Parvati, Shiva went to Vaikuntha, the abode of Vishnu and pressed Him to show the form of Mohini. Vishnu suddenly disappeared without saying yes or no.

While Shiva was searching for Vishnu, he happened to reach a new place where he continued to search.

There he heard the music of Veena. He saw a beautiful young lady who was Mohini an incaration of Lalitha Devi Unable to resist his infatuation, Shiva embraced her. At once a divine baby was born. He was named SHASTA (one who rules). He became a commander in Shiva's army.

At once the lady disappeared. Shiva realised that she was none else than Mohini, a form of Vishnu. He applauded her beauty and returned to Kailasha along with Parvati.

Thus the Divine Mother incarnated as Mohini and granted success of the activities of the celestials.9

Morever as I had explained earlier-

The union of Shiva and Shakti(Mohini)—who in this context is none other than Vishnu's own Māyā—cannot be equated with mortal relationships, for it represents the meeting of cosmic principles beyond the confines of human limitation. The Śāstras themselves declare that the very body of Maheshvara Shiva is the entire cosmic universe, not a human-like form (Śrīmad Bhāgavatam 8.7.27–30). Thus, such divine interactions are symbolic of universal creation and the interplay of transcendental energies, far removed from material or carnal interpretations.

Formerly, for quelling Taraka, Fire god drank the semen of Siva. On seeing him with the Semen within, O sage, the wives of sages desired for the same. Of the seven sages Vasistha's wife Arundhati had her menstrual bath. Excepting her, the other six women became pregnant through the Fire god."

📚Brahma Purana Gautami-Mahatmya 12.2-3📚
At the instance of Devas the fire-god assumed the form of a parrot and went to the place where the lord of the worlds was sporting with Uma…The lord of Devas called the fire-god moving about in front of him, in the form of a bird and said, "O Agni, you have been recognised through various ways. Do not speak anything. Open your mouth. Take this in and carry it with you." After saying this lord Sambhu discharged a great deal of semen into the mouth of fire-god. With this semen within him Agni could not at all go. Utterly tired, Agni sat down on the bank of Ganga. He then discharged a greater portion of that semen into Krttikas wherefrom Karttika was born. The remaining portion of the semen of Sambhu that had been within his body, Agni split into two and deposited into his beloved wife Svaha who was particularly eager to have a child.

The Gautamī-māhātmya (chaps. 70-175), which was certainly composed by somebody living about the river Godāvarī, is a distinct 'work' (pustakam) by itself. It is called a 'highly meritorious Purāṇa' declared by Brahmā (cf. Br 175, 78 and 87). The place which it occupies in the Brahma-p. was not meant for it, because it divides the chapters on Puruṣottamakṣetra-māhātmya. The way in which chap. 176 opens, shows that it immediately followed chap. 69. Moreover, in chap. 176 there is no hint from which we may conclude that the Māhātmya was there. In Br 179, 2 the sages refer to Bhāratavarṣa (chap. 27) and Puruṣottama-kṣetra, of which, they say, Vyāsa told them elaborately, but they do not mention the Gautamī-māhātmya which also precedes chap. 179 in our edition. So, it is clear that the Māhātmya was not originally there. In the Veṅk. ed. it is placed at the end. This Māhātmya was attached to the Brahma-p. later than the chapters on Orissa, for the Nāradīya-p. (I, 92), which gives the contents of the present

The Gautamīmāhātmya, also called Godāvarīmāhātmya, of which there exist several separate manuscripts[112] and which has also been separately edited,[113] calls itself a purāṇa,[114] and must originally have been a distinct book. It interrupts the section on Puruṣottamakṣetra, and has been inserted exactly in the middle of the Brahma°.[115] It describes the sacred places along the Godāvarī river.

Kataka Commentary on Valmiki Ramayana Bala Kanda Sarga 36 sloka 12 too says that Tejas of Shiva is the Energy of Shiva and Uma which is held within the Aditya Mandala (Constellation of the Sun)which if released unnecessarily could destroy the universe . Whereas mortal human semen is made and stored in blood muscles and veins . This also proves that Maheshwar Shiva Tejas is his Divine Energy and not mortal human semen

Then what should be done? The gods advise Siva to perform the Brahma tapas along with Uma. What is the use of the Brahma tapas and why should Siva perform it? Because he might be able to secure his seed. In the beginning of conception we have an embryo. The semen remains over all parts of the body and soul. “Hold your mercurial semen within the sahaja eight-fold yoga” said the gods. But then the question arises about the effect of holding the semen through sahaja yoga in the body? The answer is it will save the world. It is said that the semen, of the Brahman is held within the Aditya mandala (in the constellation of the Sun) and it saves the worlds. If it is released, like Siva’s semen the worlds will be destroyed.Hence ‘Na alokam kartumarhasi’. So Siva accepted their plea. All the gods are his limbs and if the limbs are destroyed and he will become a branchless trunk (Sthanu). So, he said "All right! I shall hold my seed and so shall Uma. The gods and earth can be happy now. Uma will hold her seed in the fire". It is said in the Vedas that the menstrual flow in the women is a form of Agni. Siva will hold his seed in water. If their seed falls on the earth, it will burn the entire world and even the gods. "Therefore, to protect them, we shall hold our seed." But stirred by long love the semen will drop from its place .It is in the form of moisture and infallible and the best one capable of giving birth to a son who will be able to fulfil gods' requirement. Who will be able to hold it? Saying this Siva released his seed with which the entire earth along with all its mountains and forests became filled.

should Siva perform it? Because he might be able to secure his seed. In the beginning of conception we have an embryo. The semen remains over all parts of the body and soul. Tilaka Commentary on Valmiki Ramayana Sarga 36 too states that Maheshwar Shiva Tejas is his and Uma Devi's Energy only which Agni Deva received and not any mortal human semen

If lord Siva bears his energy in his own self, of what use is it to the world? The scriptures say 'what is in man in the form of semen is the form of energy in the Sun. That form of energy is light which is the disc of the Sun itself. In that circle the whole world is being protected, if the reverse happens, there will be a calamity (Viparyaye Viparyaya).' If the sun perishes the whole world will collapse.

Siva says, 'I along with Uma, will bear the fire of my energy in my own self'. So he bears the semen. It will turn into fire (blood) in women. Since this world cannot withstand the extraordinary energy, if released, there would be devastation. This is the sense.
The gods said, 'This earth will bear it because it has unlimited power of forbearance'. This is the implied sense. The gods engaged Agni to receive the energy released on the earth as he is the lord and well-wisher of the earth. The wind which accompanied him helped him move. That energy acquired the form of the white mountain and having entered the earth by means of Agni, was moving (as he carried it). Then that energy got the form of a thicket of needles like the fire of the Sun at the place of its entry as a result of its greatness. Since Agni carried the energy for some time, it should be noted, Karttikeya originated from Agni. There was joy among the gods that Siva's energy was borne for the benefit of the world and that the energy that fell transformed into Kartikeya for the sake of the gods. But there was anger in Uma, for Siva did not accept Uma engaged in his worship. She cursed the Earth, saying 'Be not in one form. May you give fruits for a variety of seeds in the same field. Be wife to many husbands (Lords of the earth or kings).

The implication is, 'If only she (earth) had not conceded to bear the energy of Siva, Uma would have received it. She would have had that son'.

Ashoke Chatterjee in his book Padma Purana – A Study page number 92/281 mentioned that chapter 69-99 in Patala Khanda of Padma Purana (Including chapter 75) are later interpolations and were inserted later on in Padma Purana between 12-13th Century AD . Thus this chapter 75 which he alleged is a later interpolation

This part consists of chaps 69 99 of the Patāla-khanda This portion is neither the work of the Ramaites nor that of the Linga worshippers

This group seems to have come from a very late date We have seen how it depicts a picture of a developed Radha

Some 200 years' time should be given to the group 2 to attain recognition Then obviously this part dates between 1150-1200 AD

Group 3

This part consists of chaps. 69 99 of the Pātāla-khaṇḍa. This portion is neither the work of the Rāmaites nor that of the Linga worshippers, but definitely a contribution of the Bhāgavata Vaiṣṇavas who put a stamp of their own sect on it by supplementing it with some new chaps of their own interest In the discussion of group 2 we have shown how the Linga worshippers of the Pāśupata sect describe Śiva being praised by Rāma The present group, it appears, is a recast by the Bhāgavata-Vaiṣṇavas who have paid back the Linga worshippers in their own coin In this group it is seen that Pārvatī and Īśvara were glorifying the Māhātmya and celebrity of Kṛṣṇa and Rādhā—His eternal consort, and Vṛndāvana—their eternal blissful abode Rādhā has been highly eulogised She is conceived as the eternal Prakṛti She pervades the whole universe, phenomenal and real and is the prime cause of creation, existence and destruction She is self-luminous and illumines the external objects The eternal unity of Kṛṣṇa and Rādhā is the Supreme Truth and this unity must be realised in order to reach the highest goal—the summum bonum of human life Rādhā is the abode of the highest bliss, and beauty She is the essence of all fair instincts She is the concept of love but this love or Prema is high

This group seems to have come from a very late date We have seen how it depicts a picture of a developed Rādhā cult Moreover, it abounds in references to Tulasī[39] Traces of Tāntricism are also vividly observable[40] Āgama has been admitted as an authority[41] Tāntric mudrās, nyāsas have

[39] It should, however, be noted in this connection that the Bengal mss of the Pātāla-khaṇḍa do not contain all these references as they end in chap 80 of the Ānan. ed. of the Pātāla-khaṇḍa

[40] Pātāla-khaṇḍa 72 [illegible] 73 [illegible] 79 [illegible] etc

[41] Ibid 74 [illegible] etc

[42] Ibid [illegible] etc

been referred to more than once[42] Maṇḍala and Yantra have been regarded as the medium of worship[43] All these tend to assign a much later date to this part We have also shown that it has been contributed later than the group 2, the date of which is c 950-1000 A D Some 200 years' time should be given to the group 2 to attain recognition Then obviously this part dates between 1150-1200 A D And this may be accepted if we keep the fact in view that Gopālabhaṭṭa (of 1400 A D) in his Hari-bhakti-vilāsa has quoted numerous vss from this part[44], and the contents of these chaps are given in the Nāradīya-p I 93 which is also of a very later origin

18. And on the morrow there is Agni's cake and Mitra and Varuna's curds. Now Agni's cake is (offered) for the sole purpose that it may not forsake the sacrifice. Mitra and Varuna, on the other hand, are the two half-moons: the waxing one is Varuna, and the waning one is Mitra. 16 “With that Sānāyya liquid (mixture of curd and milk), the offering (havyam) meant for the gods is made palatable (svādayati—makes tasteful). That offering of this yajamāna (sacrificer) becomes pleasing (svadate—pleasing or delightful) to the gods. ‘Pleasing to those who are to be delighted’—this is according to Pāṇini 1.4.33. Because it is for the gods, the dative case (caturthī) is used—devebhyaḥ.”

17 “In the Darśa sacrifice, on the day before, the Maitrāvaruṇa offering should be performed. He praises, beginning with ‘atha yad iti’. ‘Indrāgni indeed are the deities of the Darśa-Paurṇamāsa rites’—in that, the first puroḍāśa of that rite is dedicated to Agni, and Sānāyya is related to the moon. Therefore, ‘they themselves’—as already established.”

18 “Even the subsequent obligatory sacrifices of the Darśa performance are introduced and praised with ‘atha prātaḥ’. Then he states: the deities of the milk offering (payasya) are Mitra and Varuṇa; these two correspond to the two fortnights (ardhamāsau). This he elaborates: ‘ya eva’—that very half-month which is fully filled by the growing moon is Varuṇa, associated with nectar (amṛtarasa), for Varuṇa is the deity of essence. The half-month in which the moon wanes is Mitra. These two—Mitra and Varuṇa—associated respectively with moon and sun, come together on this darśa night. Therefore, by this Maitrāvaruṇa sacrifice, he pleases (prīṇāti) both together simultaneously.”

"Indeed all of this belongs to him—this is the fruit for the one who knows."

19 (starting line) "He praises the Mitrāvaruṇa deities in another way: 'tadvā etām iti'—'this very night.' In the case of extreme conjunction, the accusative is used."

6. Narada and King Taladhvaja

📚Devi Bhagavatam Purana 6.28.37-54
O Nârada! Look! Look! How clear crystal-like is the water of this pool like the heart of a saint; see how it smells also fragrantly in contact with the lotuses on it." When the Bhagavân spoke thus to me; I kept my lute and deer skin aside and gladly went to the edge of the tank. Washing then my hands and feet I tied my hair lock and, taking Kus'a grass, I performed my Âchaman and, purifying myself, began to bathe myself in that tank. While I was bathing, Hari was looking at me; by the time I took a dip, I saw that I quitted my male form and got a beautiful female form. Hari took away, then, my deer skin and lute and mounting on Garuda went away in a moment to His own residence. Getting the female form and decorated with excellent ornaments, my memory of my previous male form vanished at once; I forgot all about my famous lute and forgot also Jagannâtha, the Deva of the Devas. I then came out of the tank in that enchanting woman form, saw the pool of water filled with clear limpid water and adorned with lotuses. Seeing that, I began to think :– "What is this?" and I became very much astonished. While I was thus meditating in my woman form, a king, named Tâladhvaja, came there, all on a sudden, on a chariot, accompanied by numerous elephants and horses. The King looked like a second Cupid…"

The story continues…

📚Devi Bhagavatam Purana 6.29.13-20 📚

The King then began to sport with me amorously according to the rules of the Kâma S'âstra in various ways and with great enjoyments and pleasures. He then left all his kingly duties and state affairs and he began to remain day and night with me deeply immersed in amorous sports; so much his mind was merged in me in these plays that he could not notice the long time that passed away in the interval. He used to drink the Vârunî wine and, forsaking all the state affairs, began to enjoy me in nice gardens, beautiful lakes, lovely palaces, beautified houses, excellent mountains and enviable forests and became completely subservient to me. O Dvaipâyana! Being incessantly engaged with the King in amorous sports and remaining obedient to him, my previous body, male ideas, or the birth of Muni, nothing whatsoever came in my memory. I remained always attached to him…"

📚Devi Bhagavatam Purana 6.30.1-14 📚
Nârada said :– O Best of Munis! The King was greatly astonished to see me dip in the tank in a female figure and get up from the tank in a male figure and thought, "Where is my dearest wife? And how is this Nârada Muni suddenly come here!" The King, not seeing his wife, lamented very much and cried frequently, "O my dear Wife! Where have you gone, leaving me here thus. Without you, O One of spacious hips! My life, palace and kingdom, all, are quite useless…"

Ludo Rucher in his book the Puranas page 172 dated Devi bhagvatm to be written between 1100-1350 AD and not later than that . He also proposed that the writer of this text must have been a Bengali Shakta Smarta Brahmin

The question, both in the tradition and in modern scholarship, whether the Devībhāgavata° or the Vaiṣṇava Bhāgavata° is the true and original Śrīmadbhāgavata° has been discussed under the Bhāgavata°. It should be noted in this connection that the term Devībhāgavata° appears only in the chapter colophons, and in the text of the last two skandhas; elsewhere in the text the purāṇa refers to itself either as Bhāgavata° or Śrīmadbhāgavata°, once as Satī° (1.3.41). The text also repeatedly refers to itself as "the best of purāṇas" (purāṇottama), and declares that "there are many other purāṇas devoted to Hari and Rudra, but they are not worth one-sixteenth part of this Devībhāgavata" (12.13.25–26).

Hazra[174] sees arguments both for the Devībhāgavata° having been composed in Bengal and outside Bengal. He therefore concludes that "the author of the Devībhāgavata was a Smārta Śākta Brahmin of Bengal and . . . he migrated to Benares (probably because it was the best place of residence for a Devī-worshipper), lived there for a long time, and then wrote the Devī-bhāgavata."

Ramachandran[175] dated the Devībhāgavata° "not later than the 6th century A.D.," based on his belief that the story of the penance of Nara and Nārāyaṇa, as related in the fourth skandha, inspired the relief in the Gupta temple at Deogarh. His arguments did not find acceptance with other scholars,[176] and, in general, the text has been dated much later. Farquhar[177] assigned it to his A. D. 900–1350 period. Hazra[178] narrowed the period down to "the eleventh or twelfth century A.D." Lalye[179] proposes a gradual growth of the text, through five different stages which cannot be dated separately; in any case the final stage must have been reached in the eleventh century.

Arjuna the biggest devotee of Krishna is said to have transformed himself into a eunuch, Mahabharata 4.45.13-14 "… Indeed, thou seemest to me to be Mahadeva, or Indra, or the chief of the Gandharvas, dwelling in the guise only of one of the third sex.' "Arjuna said, 'I tell thee truly that I am only observing this vow for a whole year agreeable to the behest of my elder brother. O thou of mighty arms, I am not truly one of the neuter sex, but I have adopted this vow of eunuchism from subservience to another's will and from desire of religious merit. O prince, know me now to have completed my vow…"

Refutation-

In the Mahabharata, during the 13th year of exile (the year of incognito or ajñātavāsa), Arjuna disguised himself as Bṛhannalā, a dance and music teacher in the court of King Virata. This was done to conceal his identity, not because he had literally become a eunuch or had any physical transformation.

- Mahabharata 4.45.13-14 clearly shows Arjuna confessing his true identity to Prince Uttara and stating: "I am not truly one of the neuter sex… I have adopted this vow of eunuchism from subservience to another's will and from desire of religious merit."

👉 This confirms it was a vow or guise, not a biological or metaphysical transformation.

🧠 Why Did Arjuna Do This?

1. Curse of Urvashi: After rejecting Urvashi's advances, the celestial nymph cursed Arjuna to become a klība (effeminate). But Indra softened it to be a temporary fate—useful during his incognito year.
2. Strategic Disguise: Arjuna used this curse as a blessing—adopting the identity of a dance teacher, acting effeminate to avoid detection by the Kauravas.
3. Not a Transformation: Nowhere in the epic does Arjuna undergo any physical or gender transition. His masculinity and warrior identity remain intact, evident when he picks up his weapons and defeats Kaurava forces while still in disguise.

🙏 Spiritual & Devotional Angle

Arjuna's act was one of obedience, self-discipline, and devotion to dharma:

- He honored the conditions of exile.
- He used his curse creatively in service of his brothers.
- He never abandoned his warrior identity or devotion to Krishna.

Thus, far from degrading him, this episode enhances Arjuna's greatness.

7. Budha (Son of Soma) and King

📚Vayu Purana 2.23.15-18📚
He who is revered in the three worlds is famous as Sudyumna. He has attained the form of a lady. That noble lady returned to her father after securing the boon. After getting an opportunate moment, she was invited for love making (sexual intercourse) by Budha (the planet mercury). From Budha, the son of Soma, Puruavas, the son of Ila was born. After giving birth to the son born of Budha, she became Suyumna again. Sudyumna had three sons, all extremely virtuous."

📚Shrimad Bhagavatam 9.1.30-35📚
When the goddess Ambikā saw the great saintly persons, she was very much ashamed because at that time she was naked. She immediately got up from the lap of her husband and tried to cover her breast. Seeing Lord Śiva and Pārvatī engaged in sexual affairs, all the great saintly persons immediately desisted from going further and departed for the āśrama of Nara-Nārāyaṇa. Thereupon, just to please his wife, Lord Śiva said, "Any male entering this place shall immediately become a female!" Since that time, no male had entered that forest. But now King Sudyumna, having been transformed into a female, began to walk with his associates from one forest to another. Sudyumna had been transformed into the best of beautiful women who excite sexual desire and was surrounded by other women. Upon seeing this beautiful woman loitering near his āśrama, Budha, the son of the moon, immediately desired to enjoy her. The beautiful woman also desired to accept Budha, the son of the king of the moon, as her husband. Thus Budha begot in her womb a son named Purūravā."

Hinduism supports the LGBT community—Shuddhyumna became Ila, a transgender figure.

Read actual scriptures, not your WhatsApp PhD. Hindu texts clearly say Shuddhyumna was cursed into becoming a woman—he didn't choose it, he didn't identify as female, and it wasn't some inner gender journey. It was a curse, plain and simple. The story doesn't celebrate transitioning—it shows male-to-female transformation as a mark of misfortune, not pride. So if anything, Hinduism calls it a curse, not a cause

Atri Smriti Chapter 1 Verse 268

By discharging semen into inhuman females except a cow, into a woman in [her] menses, into others that have no female organs (i.e., a man or a eunuch), or into water one should perform the penance of Santapanam.

Baudhayana Dharamsutra 3.7.2

One who does not have sex with his wife during her season, and one who has sex with her outside her season, as also one who deposits his semen in a place other than the vagina --they all incur the same guilt.

Apastamba Dharmasutra 1.19.15

A man who ejaculates his semen in any place other than the vagina becomes equal to a thief, equal to a murderer of a Brahmin.

Allegations-

1. Brahma's Incest With his Daughter

📚Matsya Purana 3.30-44📚
With this view, He began to invoke Gayatri. After some time the goddess Gayatri, known under different names, viz. – Satarupa, Savitri, Sarasvati, Brahmani, etc., appeared in the form of a girl from the half portion of Brahma's body who at the first sight mistakenly took Her for His daughter. Afterwards, the Creator, seeing that form of exquisite beauty, was fired with love and repeatedly uttered, "What an enchanting form!" At this, the Manasa putras of Brahma, i.e., Vasistha, etc., taking Savitri for their sister, began to express their feelings….. Brahma, fired with passion in her company, married Satarupa and began to pass his days in njoyment inside a lotus. He enjoyed the company of Savitri for hundred years, and after a long time Manu was born to them."

In Chapter 4 of the Matsya Purana, there is a conversation between Manu and the Vishnu avatar Matsya that justifies Brahma's actions by explaining that Devas beget progeny in diverse ways,

📚Matsya Purana 4.1-11📚
The king said, "O Merciful! I feel awfully grieved to hear that Lord Brahma married Angaja. Pray, tell me why he was not regarded as having committed a fearful sin by having done so. Remove my doubts, O, Master of the Universe! by graciously explain to me why the offspring of Brahma were allowed to intermarry in their paternal circle without any regard for close-knit kinship." The Lord Fish replied: "O king! such doubts only arise in the case of mankind, for men have atomic bodies and beget children in a different way, while the primeval creation is celestial in which Rajoguna predominates. The Devas not have supersensious bodies and they beget progeny in quite different ways. The celestial forms come into being in other ways, and it is very difficult for men having sensuous bodies to understand this great secret. Only supernatural intellect causes celestial creation; therefore those alone can understand its great sect who themselves possessed with such an intellect... O, King! the question of any prescribed order on prohibition oes not arise in the deeds of the

Devas. Only Their desire is taken into considered in whatever they do. Other beings reap the fruits of their karma (doings) which the Devas do not. No doubts should therefore be raised regarding the doings of the Devas, nor should beings having sensuous bodies think of doing the same deed. Besides this, as Lord, Brahma is the governor of the Vedas, so is the goddess Gayatri of the Brahmans (the sacred text, i.e., the Vedas). She is the better-half of the Lord, and this is why she appeared from his body...He committed no sin by marrying Her. In spite of all this, Lord Brahma felt ashamed for not being able to suppress His passion in presence of His manasa sons

📚Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.12.28-31📚
O Vidura, we have heard that Brahmã had a daughter named väk who was born from his body and who attracted his mind toward sex, although she was not sexually inclined towards him. Thus, finding their father so deluded in an act of immorality, the sages headed by Marici, all sons of Brahma, spoke as follows with great respect. O father, this performance in which you are endeavoring to complicate yourself was never attempted by any other Brahmã, nor by anyone else, nor by you in previous kalpas, nor will anyone dare to attempt it in the future. You are the supreme being in the universe, so how is it that you want to have sex with your daughter and cannot control your desire? Even though you are the most powerful being, this act does not suit you because your character is followed for spiritual improvement by people in general.” (source)

📚Skanda Purana 3.1.40.6-12📚
Prajpati (i.e. Brahma) was formerly deluded, O Brahmanas. He desired like a lover of his own daughter named Vac (Speech) joyously. This daughter of Prajapati became ashamed on noticing his lecherous love for her. Hence she assumed the form of a Rohita deer. Inclined to have sexual dalliance with her, Brahma too took the form of a deer. As she went ahead in the guise of a female deer, he too followed her. On seeing him intent on having sexual intercourse with his daughter, all the deities condemned him: ‘This Brahma is committing a deed that should not be done, i.e. attempt to have sexual union with one’s own daughter. Thus they censured the creator and the Lord of the worlds. On seeing Paramesthin (Brahma) engaged in the forbidden act, Lord Hara took up the Pinaka bow and assumed the form of a hunter. He fitted one arrow to his bow. He drew the bow string as far as his ear and hit Brahma with his sharp arrow. Struck down by the arrow of the Annihilator of the three Puras, Brahma fell down on the ground.” (source)

📚Skanda Purana 2.3.2.3-5📚
Formerly, in the beginning of Kṛtayuga, Brahmā attempted to have sexual intercourse with his own daughter who was richly endowed with beauty and outh. On seeing him like that I cut off his head with a sword into five parts in a great fury. Taking the skull (sticking to) the hand that attempted the murder of Brahmā, I immediately left the place in order to resort to various Tīrthas in heaven, earth and nether worlds and performed penances as well.

Refutation – Perspective 1

We know the term Prajapati is used for Brahma in Puranas . The Same term Prajapati is used for Sun in Vedas at several places because Sun is responsible for life on Earth . So Sun is Prajapati [Brahma] .

1- यो हं वे सविता स प्रजापतिः। (Satapatha 12.3.5.2)

2- प्रजापतिर्यं सविता। (Tandya Brahmana 8.2.10)

Then who is the daughter of Prajapati Sun [Brahma] . Usha [Dawn] is the daughter of Prajapati Surya [Brahma] as Usha[Dawn] is brought about by approach of Prajapati Sun [Brahma] . Acharya Kumarilla Bhatta explained in his Tantra Vartika 1.3.7

. (1) The word “Prajapati” means ‘one who protects all creatures;’ as such it can be taken as a name of the Sun; and it is an ordinary fact that towards morning the sun reaches the early Dawn, (‘Usha’) ; and as the early Dawn is brought about by the approach of the Sun, it is called his “daughter;” and it is the fact of the Sun letting his rays fall in (or on) the Dawn that has been figuratively spoken of as the intercourse of a man with a woman.

That is being the protector of the world Prajapati Brahma is Sun and Usha Dawn is the daughter of Prajapati Brahma Sun . It is an ordinary fact that towards morning Sun (Brahma) reaches the early Dawn, ('Usha'); and as the early Dawn is brought about by the approach of the Sun (Brahma) it is called daughter of Sun(Brahma) and it is the fact of the Sun(Brahma) letting his rays fall in (or on)Usha (Dawn)that has been figuratively spoken of as the intercourse of a man with a woman as if Brahma (Sun) got attracted towards his daughter Usha (Dawn)

In Srimad Bhagvatam and Skanda Purana its written that Prajapati Brahma [Sun] went after his daughter Usha [Dawn] . Rays of Sun can be taken as sons of Prajapati Brahma . The Sons of Prajapati Brahma [Sun] Stopped him and then Brahma [Sun] left his body causing Fog which spread in all directions.It's not that rays of sun try to stop him. We shall not forget it's a Puranic story with characters.The process of condensation is explained here because of which we get tiny droplets of water in the morning during winter.

Gopatha Brahmana 1/2/10-11 says that Brahma is mind

ऊर्ध्वं यच् च किं च मनसैव करोति तद् ब्रह्म ते ब्रूमो मन एव ब्रह्मा मनो ब्रह्म मनो देव इति

Taittriya Samhita 6/1/2/2 says that Saraswati is speech

The mind comes before speech, so whatever is first thought through the mind is then said through speech. That mind in the form of Prajapati Brahma controlled Saraswati in the form of speech . It means that speech originates from the power of the mind. That is why both of them have been described here as father and daughter. When the father, in the form of mind inseminates his daughter in the form of speech with प्रेरणारूप वीर्या then only a son in the form of words is born from her

Pandit Madhavacharya Shastri explained it as-

सो ब्रह्मवैवर्त पुराण में उक्त आध्यात्मिक अर्थ को स्पष्ट करने के लिए श्रीराधा जी के पूछने पर श्रीकृष्ण भगवान् कहते हैं-
मनःस्वरूपो ब्रह्मा मे ज्ञानरूपो महेश्वरः ।।५८।।
वागधिष्ठात्री देवी या सा स्वयं च सरस्वती ।।५६।।
अर्थात्- मनः ही ब्रह्मा है, ज्ञान को महेश्वर समझो तथा वाणी की अधिष्ठात्री देवी ही सरस्वती है ।
यहां इतना और भी समझ लेना आवश्यक है कि इस कथा के अध्यात्म-प्रधान रूपक में – मरीचि आदि पुत्रों का समझाना घटित नहीं होता था, अतएव ब्रह्मवैवर्त में श्री वेदव्यास जी ने उक्त घटना के बजाय यह प्रकट किया है कि 'पुत्री के पीछे भागते हुये ब्रह्मा को उसके पुत्र महादेव ने सावधान किया ।' इस अंश का तात्पर्य यह है कि वाणी का अनुगमन करते हुए मन को विवेक बार २ सावधान करता है। यही इस कथा का 'आध्यात्मिक-अर्थ' है, जिससे मनोविज्ञान का एक अद्भुत रहस्य प्रकट होता है ।

To make this spiritual meaning clear, Lord Śrī Krishna, who, in response to Śrī Rādhā's question, says:

manassvarūpo brahmā me jñānarūpo maheśvaraḥ (verse 58)

vāgadhiṣṭhātrī devī yā sā svayaṃ ca sarasvatī (verse 56)

Meaning:

The mind is my form as Brahmā; knowledge is my form as Maheśvara (Śiva); and the presiding goddess of peech is Sarasvatī herself.

It is important to further understand that, in the spiritually symbolic version of this tale, the narrative involving Mārīci and other sons (i.e., their attempt to dissuade Brahmā) is not relevant. Hence, Sage Vedavyāsa presents the story as:

"As Brahmā chased after his daughter, it was his son Mahādeva (Śiva) who warned him."

The meaning behind this is: as the mind chases after speech, it is discrimination (viveka), represented by Śiva, which again and again warns the mind. This is the true spiritual meaning of the tale — revealing a profound mystery of psychology (manovijñāna).

Similar explanation has been given by कृष्णनारायण प्रसाद 'मागध' – वाणी प्रकाशन। -१९९९

वैदिक साहित्य में प्रजापति को बहुधा मन '98 एवं वाक् को सरस्वती' 99 कहा गया है। मन की सत्ता वाक् से पूर्ववर्त्तिनी होती है। पहले मन संकल्प करता है। तदुपरांत वह वाक् (वाणी) द्वारा प्रकट होता है। अव्यक्त ब्रह्मा ने सृष्टि (अपने को अनेक रूपों में व्यक्त) करने का मन में संकल्प किया। मन के संकल्प से वाक् की उत्पत्ति हुई। इस पारस्परिक संबंध के कारण 'मन' को पिता (प्रजापति ब्रह्मा) और 'वाक्' को दुहिता (सरस्वती) कहा गया। मन रूपी पिता के वाक् रूपी दुहिता में प्रेरणारूप वीर्याधान किए जाने पर शब्द रूप पुत्र की उत्पत्ति होती है। मन की अपेक्षा वाक् सूक्ष्म होती है। अतः उसके लिए भागवतकार द्वारा प्रयुक्त 'तन्वीं' सार्थक विशेषण है। कामना करना मन का धर्म है। इसीलिए आख्यान में मनरूपी प्रजापति को 'सकाम' और वाक् को 'अकामा' कहा गया है। प्रथम उत्पन्न होने के कारण मन को 'स्वयम्भू' भी कहा जाना सार्थक है। इस प्रकार सृष्टि-विद्या के गूढ़ आध्यात्मिक रहस्य को इस आख्यान के मिस मनोवैज्ञानिक रूप में प्रस्तुत करना पुराणकार का लक्ष्य रहा है।

Vāk as "Sarasvatī".
The existence of the mind precedes speech (vāk).

First, the mind conceives a thought, and afterward, it manifests through vāk (speech).

The unmanifest Brahmā resolved in his mind to manifest creation (himself in multiple forms).
From the mental resolution, vāk emerged.

Due to this mutual relationship, the mind is called the father (Prajāpati Brahmā), and vāk is called the daughter (Sarasvatī).

When the mind, in the form of a father, deposits inspiration (vīrya) into vāk, in the form of the daughter, the child in the form of words (śabda) is born.
Compared to the mind, vāk is more subtle.
Therefore, the adjective "tanvīm" (delicate) used by the Bhāgavata author for her is appropriate.

Desire is a natural trait of the mind.
Hence, in the narrative, the mind-like Prajāpati is called "sakāma" (with desire) and vāk is called "akāmā" (without desire).
Being the first to emerge, it is appropriate to refer to the mind as "Svayambhū" (self-born).

In this way, the deep spiritual mystery of the science of creation has been presented in psychological terms through this narrative by the Purāṇa authors.

आध्यात्मिक रहस्य

वैदिक साहित्य में प्रजापति को बहुधा मन एवं वाक् को सरस्वती कहा गया है। मन की सत्ता वाक् से पूर्ववर्तिनी होती है। पहले मन संकल्प करता है, तदुपरांत वह वाक् (वाणी) द्वारा प्रकट होता है। अतः ब्रह्मा ने सृष्टि (अपने को अनेक रूपों में व्यक्त) करने का मन में संकल्प किया। मन के संकल्प से वाक् की उत्पत्ति हुई। इस पारस्परिक संबंध के कारण 'मन' को पिता (प्रजापति ब्रह्मा) और 'वाक्' को दुहिता (सरस्वती) कहा गया। मन रूपी पिता के वाक् रूपी दुहिता में प्रेरणारूप वीर्याधान किए जाने पर शब्द रूप पुत्र की उत्पत्ति होती है। मन की अपेक्षा वाक् सूक्ष्म होती है। अतः उसके लिए भाष्यकार द्वारा प्रयुक्त 'तन्वी' सार्थक विशेषण है। कामना करना मन का धर्म है। इसीलिए आख्यान में मनरूपी प्रजापति को 'सकाम' और वाक् को 'अकामा' कहा गया है। प्रथम उत्पन्न होने के कारण मन को 'स्वयम्भू' भी कहा जाना सार्थक है। इस प्रकार सृष्टि-क्रिया के गूढ़ आध्यात्मिक रहस्य को इस आख्यान के मिस मनोवैज्ञानिक रूप में प्रस्तुत करना पुराणकार का लक्ष्य रहा है।

Chapter - 35

The episode of Brahmā

श्रीकृष्ण उवाच

[illegible] ॥१॥

Śrī Kṛṣṇa said- Nārāyaṇa compassionately again started speaking to Brahmā and all those present there looking at the Gaṅgā took to be for my illusion.

नारायण उवाच

[illegible] ॥२॥

Nārāyaṇa said. O four-faced Brahmā get up and go to your abode You will surely meet with welfare. Taking a bath in the river Gaṅgā you will be relieved of the curse with my command.

[illegible] ॥३॥

[illegible] ॥४॥

Sage in case you feel truthful and are peace at heart, All these sacred places including yourself are desirous of the touch of Viṣṇu but since you have defiled the nature you have earned a sin. You will therefore be relieved of a sin. The arrogance is the seed of all the sins and misfortunes.

You immediately move on to my infallible place of Goloka. Reaching there you will achieve Sarasvatī who is the form of Prakṛti and always bestows welfare.

[illegible] ॥५॥

O virtuous one, you own Prakṛti, who happens to be the seed of the universe. You have performed tapas, for a kalpa.

[illegible] ॥७॥

Because of the curse of the wicked women no body would recite your mantra but you will be adored together with the other gods.

[illegible] ॥८॥

Since you are the creator of the universe and always remain engrossed in your own soul, you are the form of all and are adorable by all.

[illegible] ॥९॥

Thereafter Brahmā the teacher of the universe took bath in the Gaṅgā at my command and left for Goloka.

[illegible] ॥१०॥

Thereafter all the gods, the sages reciting my spotless glory again and again left for their respective abodes.

[illegible] ॥११॥

On reaching Goloka Brahmā achieved Sarasvatī who happens to be the goddess of all the matter and had, emerged out of my lotus-like face.

[illegible] ॥१२॥

Achieving Sarasvatī Brahmā felt delighted,

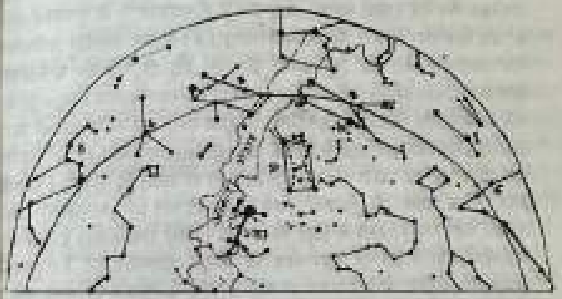
पूर्व उल्लिखित ऐतरेय ब्रा. की गाथा का उत्तरार्द्ध प्रजापति-नक्षत्र समूह (ORION) अथवा रोहिणीशकट का रूपकात्मक विवरण प्रस्तुत करता है। ब्रह्म पु. के पंचतीर्थ-माहात्म्य वर्णन में इसी को कथा का रूप दिया गया है। उसमें कथावाचक स्वयं ब्रह्मा हैं। उन्होंने कहा है कि सावित्री, गायत्री, श्रद्धा, मेधा और सरस्वती मेरी ज्येष्ठ कन्याएँ हैं। इनमें एक को मैंने अलौकिक रूपवती बनाया। उसके अद्वितीय सौंदर्य को देख स्वयं मेरी बुद्धि विकृत हो गयी। कामवश मैंने जब उसे पकड़ना चाहा, तब वह भाग खड़ी हुई। जब वह मृगी बन कर भागने लगी, तब मैंने मृग बन कर उसका पीछा किया। यह देख लोकधर्म के रक्षार्थ शंभु मृग-व्याध का रूप धारण कर, धनुष ताने मेरे पीछे-पीछे दौड़े।

उन्होंने मुझसे कहा—'मैं तुम्हारा वध करूँगा।' फलतः उनसे भिन्न ब्रह्मा का मैंने अपनी वह कन्या विवस्वान् को सौंप दी[207]। इसे आकलित आकाशीय चित्र से समझा जा सकता है–

रो. = रोहिणी (मृगी)
प्र. = प्रजापति (मृग)



रो-रोहिणी, प्र-प्रजापति, 1. मेष, 2. वृष, 3. कन्या, 4. कर्क, 5. सिंह, 6. मीन

उपरि चित्र का नक्षत्र-समूह उत्तरी गोलार्द्ध (भारत सहित एशिया, यूरोप उत्तरी अमेरिका) में शिशिर ऋतु (पौष-माघ, स्थूलतः मध्य दिसंबर से मध्य फरवरी) की रात्रियों के प्रथम प्रहर में दक्षिण की ओर देखने पर सिर के ऊपर दिखायी पड़ता है। द्वितीय प्रहर में यह पश्चिम की ओर ढलने लगता है, तब गाथा में वर्णित दृश्य प्रत्यक्ष हो उठता है। चित्र में, आकाश-गंगा के पश्चिम, दिखायी पड़ने वाला वृहत् और चमकीला नक्षत्र-समूह प्रजापति (Constellation of ORION) है। प्राचीन भारतीय ज्योतिर्विदों के अनुसार प्रजापति नक्षत्र-समूह में पाँच प्रमुख नक्षत्र हैं–रोहिणी (Alldebaran), मृगशिरा, आर्द्रा, मृगव्याध (Sirius) और पुनर्वसु (Pollux)। अपेक्षया पृथ्वी और चंद्रमा के भ्रमण-पथ के निकट रोहिणी दिखायी पड़ती है। रोहिणी का अर्थ मृगी (रोहित) है। यह वृष राशि (Taurus) का सर्वाधिक चमकीला और रक्तवर्णी नक्षत्र है। रोहिणी के नीचे उत्तर-पूर्व में (बायीं ओर) उसका अनुगमन करने वाला मृगरूप धारी प्रजापति (ORION) बीच में है। चतुष्कोण बनाने वाले प्रजापति-समूह के चार तारे ही मृग की चार टाँगें हैं एवं चतुष्कोण के ऊपर दिखायी पड़ने वाला तीन तारों से निर्मित त्रिकोण ही मृग का सिर अर्थात् मृगशिरा नक्षत्र है–'एतद् वै प्रजापतेः

विद्धो धन्वनुमृगशीर्षम् (शतपथ ब्रा. 2/1/2/8)। उसके नीचे उत्तर-पूर्व में (बाईं ओर) दिखाई पड़ने वाले 'मृग-व्याध' रूपी रुद्र (Canis Major या Great Dog) की आकृति अगल-बगल के तारों को मिला कर बनती है—लगता है कि कोई व्यक्ति (व्याध) कमर में शस्त्र लटकाए, एक हाथ में धनुष लिए मृगरूपधारी प्रजापति का पीछा कर रहा है। वह बाण छोड़ चुका है। मृग के शरीर के अंदर एक रेखा में अवस्थित तीन तारे (आर्द्रा नक्षत्र ; लोकभाषा में तीनडंडिया[]) ही मृगव्याध रुद्र के द्वारा छोड़े गए त्रिकांड बाण (इषुस्त्रिकाण्ड) हैं। प्राचीन भारतीय खगोलविदों ने जिस तारा-समूह को रुद्र (मृग-व्याध) कहा है, उसे ही पश्चिमी खगोलविदों ने बृहल्लुब्धक (Canis Major या Great Dog) कहा है। रुद्र-मृगव्याध तारा-समूह का ही नहीं, अपितु संपूर्ण गोलार्द्ध का सर्वाधिक चमकीला तारा 'मृग-व्याध' (Sirius या Dog Star) है। मृग-व्याध (Sirius) से रोहिणी (Aldebaran) तक एक सीध में काल्पनिक रेखा खींचने पर यह आर्द्रा (ORION'S BELT) से होकर ही गुजरेगी। रोहिणी के ऊपर दायीं ओर वाले (छह, पाश्चात्य विचार के अनुसार सात जिन्हें 'सप्तस्वसा'—Seven Sisters कहा गया है) तारों के समूह की आख्या कृत्तिका (Pleiades) है। शास्त्रों एवं ज्योतिषीय ग्रंथों में इस पूरे नक्षत्र-मंडल की आख्या 'रोहिणी-शकट' है। बृहत्संहिता (47/4) के अनुसार रोहिणी-शकट के बीच से शनि के गुजरने पर बारह वर्षों तक वर्षा नहीं होती है। तैत्तिरीय सं. (4/4/10) में विभिन्न नक्षत्रों और उनके स्वामियों के उल्लेख हुए हैं। तदनुसार रोहिणी के स्वामी प्रजापति (रोहिणी नक्षत्रं प्रजापतिर्देवता) एवं आर्द्रा के स्वामी रुद्र (आर्द्रा नक्षत्रं रुद्रो देवता) कहे गए हैं। इससे भी आख्यान के खगोलीय आधार का संकेत होता है।

महाभारतीय आख्यान (सौप्तिक पर्व, अ. 18) की याज्ञिक व्याख्या भी इसी खगोलीय तथ्य का पोषक है। उसके अनुसार देवयज्ञ में रुद्र को भाग नहीं मिला। अतः वे कुपित हो धनुष-बाण लिए यज्ञ-स्थान पर गए। उन्हें कुपित देख देवता भयभीत हो उठे। कुपित रुद्र ने यज्ञ (यज्ञ प्रजापति) के हृदय में बाण से आघात किया। तब अग्नि सहित यज्ञ (यज्ञ प्रजापति) मृग का रूप धारण कर वहाँ से भाग चला और आकाश में पहुँच कर (प्रजापति नक्षत्र-समूह के रूप में) प्रकाशित होने लगा। आकाश में भी रुद्र (मृगव्याध रूप में, आर्द्रा नक्षत्र जिनका त्रिकाण्ड बाण है) उसके पीछे लगे रहते हैं[]। दक्षयज्ञ-विध्वंस-आख्यान (महाभा. 12/283/36 एवं आगे) में भी इसका अधूरा रूप मिलता है। ऐतरेय ब्रा. (3/3/9) की गाथा के खगोलीय तथ्य से पुष्पदंत पूर्णतः परिचित थे—उनके शिवमहिम्न-स्तोत्र का बाइसवाँ श्लोक उसी से प्रेरित प्रतीत होता है—

> प्रजानाथं नाथ प्रसभमभिकं स्वां दुहितरं/गतं रोहिद्भूतां रिरमयिषुमृष्यस्य वपुषा।
> धनुष्पाणेर्यातं दिवमपि सपत्राकृतममुं/त्रसन्तं तेऽद्यापि त्यजति न मृगव्याधरभसः॥

ब. आधिभौतिक तथ्य

इस आख्यान में सृष्टिविकास को आधिदैविक तथ्य के रूप में उपस्थित किया गया है। वैदिक गाथाओं की त्रिविध व्याख्या का मार्ग यास्क ने प्रशस्त किया था। उक्त आधार पर इसकी भी व्याख्या की जाती है। कृष्ण यजुर्वेद की काठक सं (12/5 एवं 27/1) के अनुसार वाक् प्रजापति की पुत्री एवं पत्नी (शक्ति) दोनों है। उनके परस्पर संयोग से प्रजा वर्गों की उत्पत्ति होती है। तदुपरांत वाक् (प्रजापति की शक्ति) प्रजापति में ही प्रविष्ट हो जाती है–

प्रजापतिर्वै इदमासीत्। तस्य वाक् दुहिता आसीत्। काम मिथुनं समभवत् सा तस्माद् अपाक्रामत्। सा इमाः प्रजाः असृजत्। सा प्रजापतिमेव पुनः प्राविशत्।

शतपथ ब्रा. में प्रजापति और वाक् के मानसिक संयोग से वसुओं, रुद्रों, आदित्यों एवं विश्वेदेवों की उत्पत्ति का वर्णन मिलता है[10]। पंचविंश ब्रा. के अनुसार आरंभ में प्रजापति और वाक् दो ही तत्त्व थे–'प्रजापतिर्वै इदं एक आसीत् तस्य वाक् एव स्वमासीद् वाग् द्वितीया।' अस्तु, वाक् (स्त्री लिंग) की कल्पना ब्रह्म (नपुंसक लिंग एवं पुल्लिंग ब्रह्मा)–पत्नी के रूप में किया जाना अस्वाभाविक नहीं है। बृहद्देवता (5/97-103) में त्रिसांवत्सरिक यज्ञ करते समय प्रजापति का शरीरिणी वाक् को देख कर विचार प्रलय होने के उल्लेख में भी कदाचित् इसी ओर संकेत हुआ है।

सर्ग की सविलोत्पत्ति (देखिए 1/9) के वर्णन में उल्लेख किया जा चुका है कि सृष्टि-रचना की कामना करने पर स्वयम्भू प्रजापति (पुराणों के ब्रह्मा) अपनी सत्ता से अपने भीतर ही मूल रचनात्मक उपादान (मातृतत्त्व) की सृष्टि करता है। स्वयम्भू पिता मातृ-तत्त्व की सृष्टि करता है, वह उसका अविभाज्य अंग होता है। मनुस्मृति (1/32) में भी दोनों अविभाज्य तत्त्व ही स्वीकृत हुए हैं। हरिवंश पु. के अनुसार जब ब्रह्मा अकेले रम नहीं सके तो उन्होंने एक शुभलक्षणा भार्या उत्पन्न की जो उनके शरीर का आधा भाग थी। वह लोकों की सृष्टि करने में समर्थ थी। उससे संसर्ग कर उन्होंने सभी प्रजापतियों, सागरों, सरिताओं की सृष्टि की[11]। ब्रह्मा का अपनी देह के दो भाग (प्रथमार्द्ध को पुरुष रूप और द्वितीयार्द्ध को स्त्रीरूप) करने के उल्लेख किंचित् शब्दांतर से कई पुराणों में हुए हैं[12]। भविष्य पु. में इतना और कहा है कि ब्रह्मा ने उस स्त्रीरूप से विराट् की सृष्टि की[13]। मत्स्य पु. (3/30-43) वर्णित आख्यान में भी कहा गया है कि सृष्टि करने की इच्छा से तप करने पर ब्रह्मा का कल्मष रहित शरीर दो भागों में विभक्त हो गया–आधा भाग स्त्रीरूप और आधा भाग पुरुष रूप हो गया। स्त्री रूप आधे भाग की अभिधा 'शतरूपा' (शतेन्द्रिया माया) हुई। वही सावित्री, गायत्री, सरस्वती और ब्रह्माणी भी कही गयी है। 'स्वदेहसम्भूता', आत्मजा गायत्री के मनोहर रूप पर ब्रह्मा मुग्ध हो गए[14]। आगे उसी में कहा गया है ब्रह्मा ने अनिंदिता शतरूपा का पाणिग्रहण किया जिससे स्वायम्भुव मनु, जिसे विराट् भी कहा जाता है, की उत्पत्ति

ख. खगोलीय/ज्योतिषीय आधार

पूर्व उल्लिखित ऐतरेय ब्रा. की गाथा का उत्तरार्द्ध प्रजापति-नक्षत्र सूमूह (ORION) अथवा रोहिणीशकट का रूपकात्मक विवरण प्रस्तुत करता है। ब्रह्म पु. के पंचतीर्थ-माहात्म्य वर्णन में इसी को कथा का रूप दिया गया है। उसमें कथावाचक स्वयं ब्रह्मा हैं। उन्होंने कहा है कि सावित्री, गायत्री, श्रद्धा, मेधा और सरस्वती मेरी ज्येष्ठ कन्याएँ हैं। इनमें एक को मैंने अलौकिक रूपवती बनाया। उसके अद्वितीय सौंदर्य को देख स्वयं मेरी बुद्धि विकृत हो गयी। कामवश मैंने जब उसे पकड़ना चाहा, तब वह भाग खड़ी हुई। जब वह मृगी बन कर भागने लगी, तब मैंने मृग बन कर उसका पीछा किया। यह देख लोकधर्म के रक्षार्थ शंभु मृग-व्याध का रूप धारण कर, धनुष ताने मेरे पीछे-पीछे दौड़े।

उन्होंने मुझसे कहा- 'मैं तुम्हारा वध करूँगा।' फलतः उनसे पिण्ड छुड़ा कर मैंने अपनी वह कन्या विवस्वान

को सौंप दी 207। इसे अग्रांकित आकाशीय चित्र से समझा जा

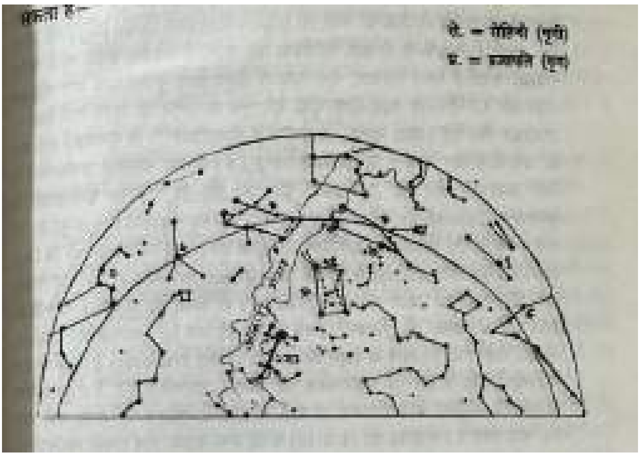
. Astronomical/Astrological Basis

The latter part of the previously mentioned Aitareya Brahmana legend presents an allegorical depiction of the Prajapati–Nakshatra constellation group (ORION) or the Rohini-Shakat (the chariot of Rohini). In the Brahma Purana's description of the sanctity of the Panchatirtha (the five sacred spots), this has been presented as a narrative. In this tale, the narrator is Brahma himself. He says:

"Savitri, Gayatri, Shraddha, Medha, and Saraswati are my eldest daughters. I made one of them extraordinarily beautiful. On seeing her unparalleled beauty, my intellect became deluded. Driven by desire, when I tried to seize her, she fled. When she transformed into a deer and ran away, I too became a deer and chased her. Witnessing this, for the protection of cosmic order (lokadharma), Shambhu (Shiva) assumed the form of a deer-hunter, drew his bow, and began chasing after me."

He said to me, "I shall slay you." As a result, freeing myself from him, I handed over that daughter of mine to Vivasvan (the Sun God).



This can be understood through the sky chart marked above. The constellation depicted in the chart appears overhead when looking southward during the early part of the night in the winter season (Paush–Magh months, roughly mid-December to mid-February) in the Northern Hemisphere (including India, Asia, Europe, and North America). During the second watch of the night, it begins to descend westward, and at that time, the scene described in the legend visually manifests.

In the chart, the large and luminous star group seen to the west of the Milky Way is Prajapati (the constellation of ORION). According to ancient Indian astronomers, there are five major stars or nakshatras (lunar mansions) in the Prajapati constellation group: Rohini (Aldebaran), Mrigashira, Ardra, Mrigavyadha (Sirius), and Punarvasu (Pollux).

Rohini is visible relatively to the right, near the Moon's orbital path. The term Rohini literally means "the doe" (female eer, Rohit). It is the brightest and reddish star in the Taurus constellation. Below Rohini, toward the northeast (to the left), Prajapati (ORION), in the form of a deer pursuing her, is seen in the middle.

The four stars that form a quadrilateral in the Prajapati group represent the four legs of the deer, and the triangle formed by three stars appearing above this quadrilateral is the head of the deer, i.e., the Mrigashira nakshatra — "Etad vai Prajapateh…" (This indeed is of Prajapati).

The head is what is called Mrigashirsha (the Head of the Deer)" (Shatapatha Brahmana 2.1.2.8). Below it, toward the northeast (to the left), appears the figure of Rudra as the Deer-Hunter (Mrigavyadha), formed by connecting the stars of Canis Major or the Great Dog. It looks like a man (a hunter), with a weapon tied at his waist, holding a bow in one hand and chasing the deer-shaped Prajapati. He has already released an arrow.

Inside the body of the deer, there are three stars aligned in a row (these correspond to the Ardra Nakshatra, popularly known as "Teen Dandiyan" or "Three Sticks" in folk language). These three stars are the three-parted arrow (Trikanda Vaan) shot by Rudra in the form of the Mrigavyadha.

The star cluster that ancient Indian astronomers referred to as Rudra (the Deer-Hunter) is the same one Western stronomers named Canis Major or the Great Dog. The brightest star not only in this group but in the entire visible hemisphere is the Mrigavyadha (Sirius or the Dog Star).

If one draws an imaginary straight line from Mrigavyadha (Sirius) to Rohini (Aldebaran), it will pass directly through Ardra (Orion's Belt). Above Rohini and toward the right, there is a cluster of six stars (called seven in Western mythology, known as the Seven Sisters or Pleiades) — this group is called Krittika in Indian astronomy.

In scriptures and astrological texts, this entire star region is referred to as Rohini-Shakat (the Chariot of Rohini). According to the Brihat Samhita (47.4), if Saturn passes through the center of Rohini-Shakat, it causes a drought lasting twelve years.

The Taittiriya Samhita (4.4.10) mentions various nakshatras and their presiding deities. Accordingly, Rohini's deity is Prajapati (Rohini Nakshatram Prajapatir Devata), and Ardra's deity is Rudra (Ardra Nakshatram Rudro Devata). This also points to the astronomical basis of the myth.

The Mahabharata narrative (Sauptika Parva, Chapter 18) also supports this celestial interpretation. According to it, during the sacrificial ritual (Devayajna), Rudra did not receive his share, and thus, angered, he went to the sacrificial site with bow and arrow. Seeing him enraged, the gods were terrified. Rudra, in his fury, struck the heart of the yajna (i.e., Prajapati) with an arrow. Then the yajna, along with Agni (fire), took the form of a deer and fled, eventually rising into the sky and becoming the constellation of Prajapati. Even in the sky, Rudra, in the form of Mrigavyadha, continues to pursue him — his arrow being the three stars of Ardra (Orion's Belt).

A partial version of this story is also found in the tale of Daksha Yajna's destruction (Mahabharata 12.288.36 onward).

Pushpadanta was fully aware of the astronomical facts related to the Aitareya Brahmana (3.3.9) tale. The twenty-second verse of his Shivamahimna Stotra seems to be directly inspired by this:

प्रजानायं नाथ प्रसभमभिकं स्वां दुहितरं गतं रोहिद्भूतां रिरमयिषुमृष्यस्य व्युषा । धनुष्याणेर्यातं दिवमपि सपत्राकृतममुं त्रसन्तं तेऽद्यापि त्यजति न मृगव्याधरभसः ।।

This interpretation is given by Acharya Sayana in his Commentary on Aitareya Brahmana 3/33 and as well

सा० भा०- स रुद्रोऽभ्यायत् य बाणयुक्तं धनुरभित आकृष्य तं प्रजापतिमविध्यत्। ऋश्यमृगरूपः स प्रजापतिर्विद्धः सन्नूर्ध्वमुख उदप्रपतत् प्रकर्षेणोत्पतनमकरोत्। तमेत-मुत्पतितमृश्यमृगरूपं प्रजापतिमाकाशे दृष्ट्वा सर्व एव ते जना मृग इत्याचक्षते, रोहिण्या-र्द्रयोर्नक्षत्रयोर्मध्येऽवस्थितं मृगशीर्षनक्षत्रं कथयन्ति, नक्षत्ररूपेण निष्पन्न इत्यर्थः। 'य उ एव' यस्तु रुद्रो 'मृगव्याधो' मृगघाती स रुद्र आकाशे दृश्यमानः स उ एव लोकप्रसिद्धो मृगव्याध आसीत्। या दुहिता रोहिता रोहिद् रक्तवर्णा मृगी यमाकाशे रोहिणीनक्षत्र-मभूत्। यो एव या तु रुद्रेण

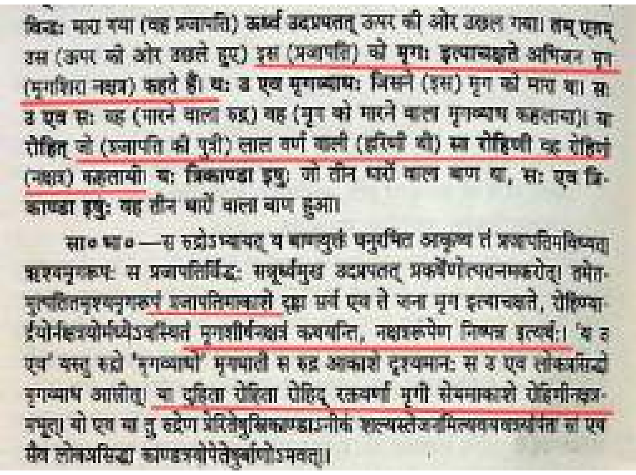
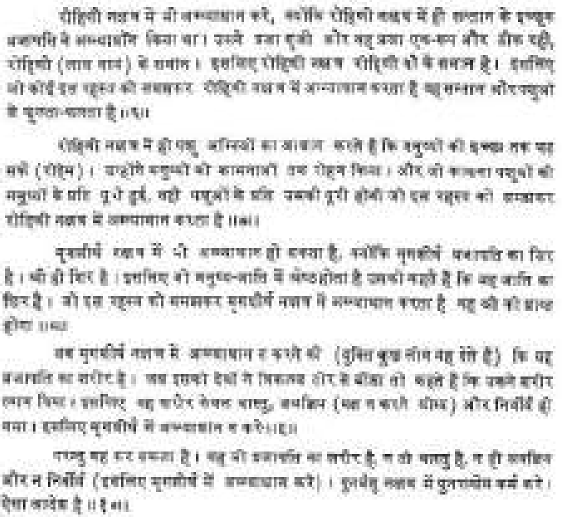
That Rudra approached, who had a bow with an arrow set upon it, and having fully drawn it, he struck Prajāpati.
Prajāpati, who had taken the form of a Ṛśya-mṛga (a kind of antelope or deer), was hit, and looking upwards, he leapt up — he made a great upward flight.
Seeing this Prajāpati in the form of an Ṛśya-mṛga who had thus leapt into the sky, all the people (sages, observers) began to call it 'Mṛga' (deer).
They refer to the Mṛgaśīrṣa Nakṣatra (a lunar constellation) as being located between the stars Rohiṇī and Ārdrā — meaning it has become established in the form of a star (nakṣatra).
The one who (shot the arrow), that Rudra, who is the 'Mṛgavyādha' (hunter of the deer), is seen in the sky — he himself became the popularly known figure of the celestial Mṛgavyādha (hunter of the deer).
And the daughter, the reddish-colored deer-like one (mṛgī), who is Rohiṇī (literally meaning 'reddish' or 'blood-colored'), she became the celestial star Rohiṇī in the sky.
And that very object (the arrow) which Rudra sent forth — composed of three parts: Trikāṇḍa (threefold shaft), Śalya (the point), and Tejana (the fiery power) — that itself became the celestial arrow seen in the sky, renowned for its triple structure



विद्धः मारा गया (वह प्रजापति) ऊर्ध्व उदप्रपतत् ऊपर की ओर उछल गया। तम् एतद् उस (ऊपर की ओर उछले हुए) इस (प्रजापति) को मृगः इत्याचक्षते अभिजन मृग (मृगशिरा नक्षत्र) कहते हैं। यः उ एव मृगव्याधः जिसने (इस) मृग को मारा था। सः उ एव सः वह (मारने वाला रुद्र) वह (मृग को मारने वाला मृगव्याध कहलाया)। या रोहित् जो (प्रजापति की पुत्री) लाल वर्ण वाली (हरिणी थी) सा रोहिणी वह रोहिणी (नक्षत्र) कहलायी। यः त्रिकाण्डा इषुः जो तीन धारों वाला बाण था, सः एव त्रिकाण्डा इषुः वह तीन धारों वाला बाण हुआ।

सा० भा०—स रुद्रोऽभ्यायत्य बाणमुक्तं धनुरभित आकृष्य तं प्रजापतिमविध्यत्। शरव्यनुरूपः स प्रजापतिर्विद्धः सन्नूर्ध्वमुख उदप्रपतत् प्रकर्षेणोत्पतनमकरोत्। तमेतं मृगपतितमृगरूपधरं प्रजापतिमाकाशे दृष्ट्वा सर्व एव ते जना मृग इत्याचक्षते, रोहिण्या ईयोर्नक्षत्रयोर्मध्येऽवस्थितं मृगशीर्षनक्षत्रं कथयन्ति, नक्षत्ररूपेण निष्पन्न इत्यर्थः। 'य उ एव' यस्तु रुद्रो 'मृगव्याधो' मृगघाती स रुद्र आकाशे दृश्यमानः स उ एव लोकप्रसिद्धो मृगव्याध आसीत्। या दुहिता रोहिता रोहित् रक्तवर्णा मृगी सेयमाकाशे रोहिणीनक्षत्रमभूत्। यो एव सा तु रुद्रेण प्रेरितेषुस्त्रिकाण्डाऽनीकं शल्यस्तेजमित्यवयवत्रयोपेता सा एव सैव लोकप्रसिद्धा काण्डत्रयोपेतेषुर्बाणोऽभवत्।।

Shatapatha Brahmana (2/1/2/8-9) too states that the Mrigashira Nakshatra is referred to as Prajapati (Brahma) and Rohini Nakshatra as the daughter of Prajapati (Brahma) (Mrigashira Nakshatra)



रोहिणी नक्षत्र में भी अग्न्याधान करे, क्योंकि रोहिणी नक्षत्र में ही सन्तान के इच्छुक प्रजापति ने अग्न्याधान किया था। उसने प्रजा सूजी और वह प्रजा एक-रूप और ठीक रही, रोहिणी (लाल गाय) के समान । इसलिए रोहिणी नक्षत्र रोहिणी गौ के समान है। इसलिए जो कोई इस रहस्थ को समझकर रोहिणी नक्षत्र में अग्न्याधान करता हैं वह सन्तान और पशुओं से फूलता-फलता है ।।६।।

रोहिणी नक्षत्र में ही पशु अग्नियों का आधान करते हैं कि मनुष्यों की इच्छा तक चढ़ सकें (रोहेम)। उन्होंने मनुष्यों की कामनाओं तक रोहण किया। और जो कामना पशुओं की मनुष्यों के प्रति पूरी हुई, वही शुओं के प्रति उसकी पूरी होगी जो इस रहस्य को

समझकर रोहिणी नक्षत्र में अग्न्याधान करता है ।।७।।
मृगशीर्ष नक्षत्र में भी अग्न्याधान हो सकता है, क्योंकि मृगशीर्ष प्रजापति का सिर है। श्री ही शिर है। इसलिए जो मनुष्य जाति में श्रेष्ठ होता है उसको कहते हैं कि यह जाति का शिर है। जो इस रहस्य को समझकर मृगशीर्ष नक्षत्र में अग्न्याधान करता है वह श्री को प्राप्त होगा ।।८।।
अब मृगशीर्ष नक्षत्र में अग्न्याधान न करने की (युक्ति कुछ लोग यह देते हैं) कि यह प्रजापति का शरीर है। जब इसको देवों ने त्रिकाण्ड तीर से बींधा तो कहते हैं कि उसने शरीर त्याग दिया। इसलिए यह शरीर केवल वास्तु, अयज्ञिय (यज्ञ न करने योग्य) और निर्वीर्य हो गया। इसलिए मृगशीर्ष में अग्न्याधान न करेः।।६।।
परन्तु वह कर सकता है। यह जो प्रजापति का शरीर है, न तो वास्तु है, न ही अयज्ञिय और न निर्वीर्य (इसलिए मृगशीर्ष में अग्न्याधान करे) । पुनर्वसु नक्षत्र में पुनराधेय कर्म करे। ऐसा आदेश है ।।१०।।

"One should also perform the ignition of the sacred fire (Agnyaadhan) during the Rohini Nakshatra, because it was during Rohini Nakshatra that Prajapati, desiring progeny, performed Agnyaadhan. As a result, progeny was born, uniform and flawless, resembling Rohini (the red cow). Therefore, Rohini Nakshatra is considered similar to the Rohini cow.
Hence, whoever understands this secret and performs Agnyaadhan during Rohini Nakshatra flourishes with offspring and cattle. (Verse 6)

It is also during Rohini Nakshatra that the sacrificial fires related to animals are established, so that they may ascend to the level of human desires (Rohem – rise).
The fires rose to fulfill human desires. nd just as the animals' desires toward humans were fulfilled, so too will the humans' desires toward the animals be fulfilled — for the one who, understanding this secret, performs Agnyaadhan during Rohini Nakshatra. (Verse 7)

Agnyaadhan can also be performed during the Mrigashirsha Nakshatra, because Mrigashirsha is considered the head of Prajapati.
'Shri' (wealth, prosperity) is connected with the 'head.'
Therefore, the one who is foremost among a community is called 'the head of the community.'
Thus, whoever understands this secret and performs Agnyaadhan during Mrigashirsha Nakshatra will attain prosperity (Shri). (Verse 8)

Now, some people argue against performing Agnyaadhan during Mrigashirsha Nakshatra, saying that it represents the body of Prajapati.
When the gods pierced it with a threefold arrow (Trikanda Teer), it is said that he (Prajapati) abandoned his body.
Hence, they claim, this body became merely a physical mass, unfit for sacrifice (Ayajniya), and devoid of potency (Nirvirya).
Therefore, according to them, Agnyaadhan should not be performed during Mrigashirsha. (Verse 9)

However, it can indeed be performed.
'his body of Prajapati is neither a mere mass (Vastu), nor unfit for sacrifice (Ayajniya), nor devoid of potency (Nirvirya).

Thus, Agnyaadhan may be performed during Mrigashirsha.
During the Punarvasu Nakshatra, the rite of re-establishment (Punaradheya) should be performed. Such is the instruction. (Verse 10)

Allegations-

Another way the story goes is that Brahma had an incestuous relationship with his daughter, with the purpose of creating living beings,

📚Brihadaranyaka Upanishad 1.4.3📚
He was not at all happy. Therefore people (still) are not happy when alone. He desired a mate. He became as big as man and wife embracing each other. He parted this very body into two. From that came husband and wife. Therefore, said Yajnavalkya, this (body) is one-half of oneself, like one of the two halves of a split pea. Therefore this space is indeed filled by the wife. He was united with her. From that men were born."

📚Brihadaranyaka Upanishad 1.4.4📚
She thought, 'How can he be united with me after producing me from himself? Well, let me hide myself.' She became a cow, the other became a bull and was united with her; from that cows were born. The one became a mare, the other a stallion; the one became a she-ass, the other became a e-ass and was united with her; from that one-hoofed animals were born. The one became a she-goat, the other a he-goat; the one became a ewe, the other became a ram and was united with her; from that goats and sheep were born. Thus did he project everything that exists in pairs, down to the ants."

Refutation-

Brihadaranyak upnishad (1/4/3)clearly tells that they are eternally Husband and wife . In this context of Brihadaranyaka Upanishad, only husband and wife are clearly described and nowhere Father and Daughter is described

He was not at all happy. Therefore people (still) are not happy when alone. He desired a mate. He became as big as man and wife embracing each other. He parted this very body into two. From that came husband and wife. Therefore, said Yājñavalkya, this (body) is one-half of oneself, like one of the two hálves of a split pea. Therefore this space is indeed filled by the wife. He was united with her. From that men were born.

"He did not find delight (in being alone). Therefore, a solitary person does not find delight. He desired another. He became of the same measure (form) as a man and woman embracing one another. He then divided this very body into two parts; from that arose husband and wife. That is why this body is like a split pea or grain – so said Yājñavalkya.

Hence, this [half-man] is completed by the woman, like space is completed (filled) by the woman. He united with her; and from that union, human beings were born.” (Verse 3)

Brahmanas speaks of this illicit relationship as well,

📚Aitareya Brahmana 6.5.27📚
For the semen is like something unspeakable secretly poured forth into the womb. The sperm becomes blended. For when Prajapati had carnal intercourse with his daughter, his sperm was poured forth upon the earth (and was mixed up with it. This was done for making the sperm produce fruit."

Prajapati went on top of his own daughter Usas. His semen flew away. It was poured on this (the earth). He made it perfect, [thinking]: "Let this [Semen] of mine not be spoiled."
He made it [something] real, namely, cattle."

📚Shatapatha Brahmana 1.7.4.1-3📚
rajapati set his mind on his own daughter, either Sky or Dawn. 'May pair with her; he wished. He made love to her. That indeed was a sin for the gods: a 'He who acts thus towards his own daughter, our sister, [commits a sin].' Those gods then said to this god who is lord of cattle. 'An act of transgression he commits who acts thus towards his own daughter, our sister. Pierce him.' Rudra, having aimed [him], pierced him. In the middle [of the act, his semen spurted forth. Thus indeed it was."

Prajapati is Sun in Vedas

(क) यो ह्यव सविता स प्रजापतिः ।
(शतपथ 12/3/5/1

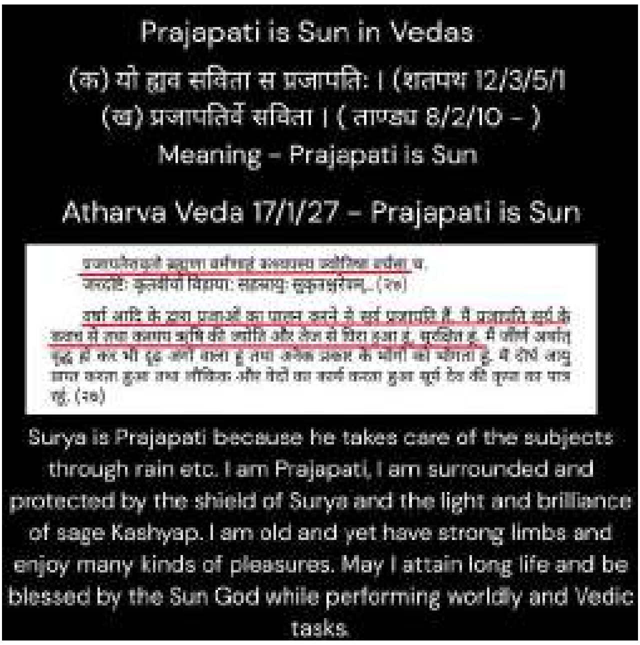
Meaning – Prajapati is Sun

Atharva Veda 17/1/27 – Prajapati is Sun

Atharva Veda 17/1/27 – Surya is Prajapati because he takes care of the subjects through rain etc. I am Prajapati, I am surrounded and protected by the shield of Surya and the light and brilliance of sage Kashyap. I am old and yet have strong limbs and enjoy many kinds of pleasures. May I attain long life and be blessed by the Sun God while performing worldly and Vedic tasks.



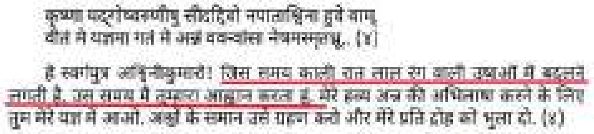
Rig Veda 4.52.1 tells that Usha is daughter of Sun

Rig Veda 4.52.1-Usha, the daughter of the Sun, who is well praised, the able leader of all living beings and gives birth to the best fruits, appears and destroys the darkness after the night has passed.

Atharva Veda 19.12.1 tells that Usha is the sister of Night and destroys night . Thus Usha is Dawn

Atharva Veda 19.12.1 – As soon as Usha arrives, she dispels the darkness of her sister night. After this Usha opens the worldly and Vedic path completely.

Rig Veda 10.61.14 states जिस समय काली रात लाल रंग वाली उषाओं में बदलने लगती है, उस समय मैं तुम्हारा आह्वान करता हूं – "At the time when the dark night begins to turn into the red-hued dawn (Usha) I invoke you."



कृष्णा यद्गोष्वरुणीषु सीदद्दिवो नपाताश्विना हुवे वाम्.

It is written in Nirukta (2.18) as well as in the Uṇādi Sūtra (4.235) that Uṣā (the dawn) is that which dispels the darkness of night. The time that follows the night, when the darkness begins to fade away — that early morning period is called Uṣā (dawn).N

Nirukta 2/18

उषाः कस्मादुच्छतीति सत्या रात्रेरपरः कालः । कस्मात् किस कारण से उषाः उषा कहा जाता है? क्योंकि उच्छतीति सत्या (अन्धकार को) निवारित करती हुई रहती है-दूर करती हुई रहती है। रात्रः रात्रि का अपरः कालः उत्तरवती (पिछला) काल होता है। विमर्श-

"Why is the dawn (Uṣā) called Uṣā? Because she 'ucchatīti satyā' — she removes, dispels (the darkness). The period following the night is known as Uṣā, the later (subsequent) part of the night, i.e., the early morning."

Discussion (Vimarśa):
The term Uṣā is derived from the root "ucch" (to rise, to remove), indicating that Uṣā is the one who removes darkness — hence, she is called Uṣā. She signifies the later phase of the night, when the darkness begins to withdraw, and light begins to appear. Thus, Uṣā represents the transition from night to day, symbolizing hope, awakening, and illumination.

Unadi Sutra 4.235-

उदा०- (1) उषः (= प्रातःवेला, कर्णविल) – ओषति दहति । उष दाहे । उष् असि-अनुबन्धलोप-उष् अस्- 'पुगन्तलघूपधस्य च' (पा० 7.3.86) से लघूपध गुण प्राप्त, निषेध, सु ।

Usha means Dawn

In the Nirukta, Uṣā is described as a deity associated with the heavenly realm (dyuloka).

In Chapter 12 of the Nirukta, a list of deities associated with the dyuloka (celestial region) is given, where Uṣā is mentioned second, right after the Aśvins, as a deity of the heavenly sphere.

That is why in the Brāhmaṇa texts, Uṣā is referred to as a deity of the dyuloka. Whether one says "Uṣā" or "deity of the dyuloka", both refer to the same entity — there is no disagreement in this regard.

Furthermore, regarding Uṣā — the deity of the dyuloka — it is written in the Nirukta that she spreads light across half the region of the sky before the sun rises. This is what we commonly know as dawn or uṣā-kāla (the time of Uṣā in the early morning).

Now then, from here onwards, the dyusthānāḥ — the deities of the celestial realm (dyuloka) — are being explained.

(2. Uṣas / Ushas)
Uṣā, of the root vaṣṭiḥ meaning "to shine, radiate beauty," is derived from the verb root uśch (उच्छी) in the sense of radiating or rising.
One Uṣā is mādhyamikā, the intermediate — the other kind of Uṣā associated with the mid-region (antarikṣa) and related to lightning.
But here, this Uṣā is dyusthānīya — the heavenly Uṣā.

Vedic Mantra (Ṛgveda 1.92.13):

uṣas tac citram ābharāsmabhyam vājinīvati yena tokaṁ ca tanayaṁ ca dhāmahe
Translation: O Uṣā! Bring us that brilliant (wealth), rich in horses, by which we may sustain our offspring and their children.

Explanation:

The word Uṣā refers to the early morning light before sunrise — she is a dyuloka-sthānīya (heavenly) goddess.

The word "Uṣā" is derived from two different roots:

- From the root vaś (वश्) meaning "to shine or radiate beauty" → implying her role in spreading brilliance and charm.
- From the root uśch (उच्छी) meaning "to rise or emit" → again suggesting the dawning or emitting of light.

There is another intermediate Uṣā (antarikṣa-sthānīya), signifying lightning or brilliance in the mid-region — but the current context is about the celestial Uṣā, associated with the dawn.

Mantra meaning:

This Uṣā, belonging to the region of space (rajas), in the eastern half of the sky — before the Sun rises — anoints everything with light (bhānuṁ añjate), illuminating all.
She awakens all beings (ketum akrat) and makes them aware.

Like warriors who cleanse and polish their weapons (dhṛṣṇavaḥ āyudhāni iva), preparing them for battle, similarly, this Uṣā brightens the world, energizing it for the day ahead.

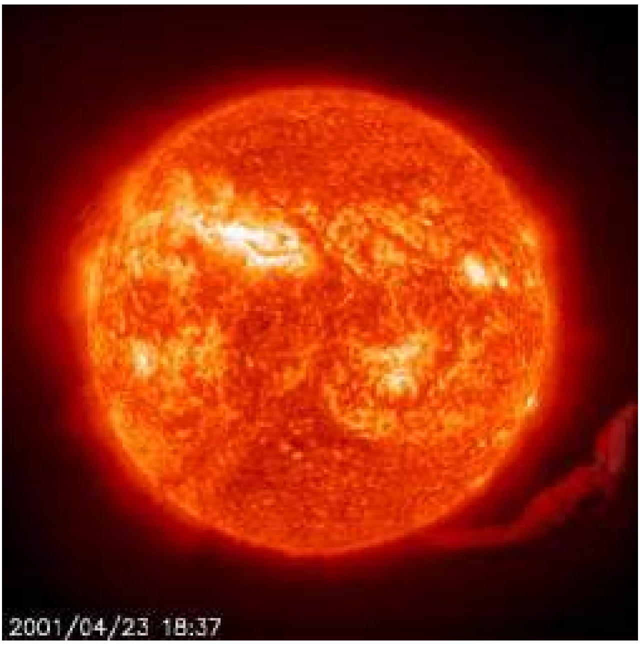
Who is Prajapati here ?

Sun is Prajapati



Who is Usha here ?

Usha is Dawn

Acharya Kumarilla Bhatta a famous Acharya who had defeated the buddhists had explained Prajapati-Usha Prakarn in his Tantra Vartika 1.3.7. As per Acharya Kumarilla Bhatta the Prajapati Sun releasing its rays into Usha (Dawn) has been spoken of as intercourse between Man and Woman. This is also Supported by Rig Veda 1.115.2

प्रजापतिस्तावत् प्रजापालनाधिकारादादित्य एवोच्यते । स चारुणोदय वेलायामुषसमुद्यन्नभ्यैत्, सा तदागमनादेवोपजायत इति तदुहितृत्वेन व्यपदिश्यते । तस्यां ¯ारुणकिरगाख्यबीजनिक्षेपात्स्त्रीपुरुपयोगवदुपचारः । एवं समस्ततेजाः परमैश्वर्यनिमित्तेन्द्रशब्दवाच्यः

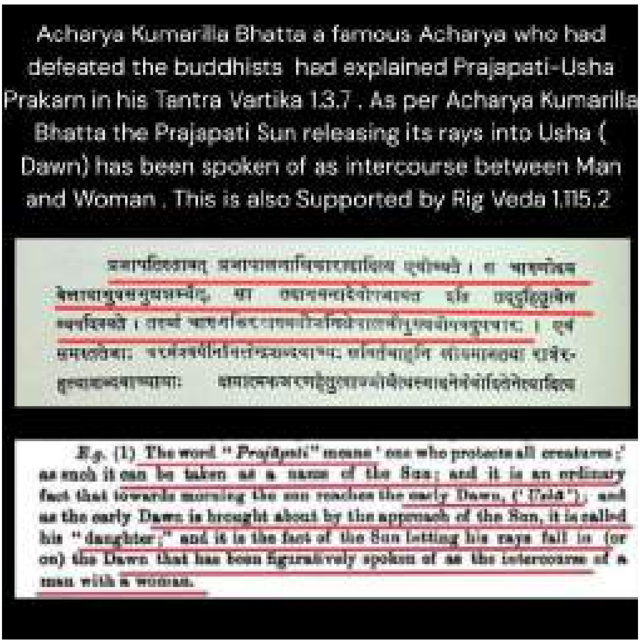
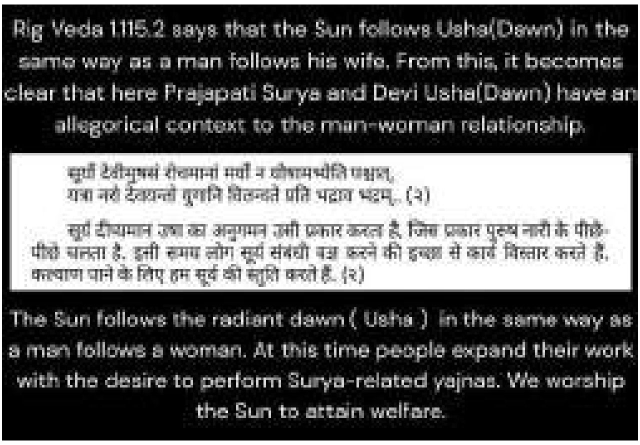
E.g. (1) The word “Prajapati” means ‘one who protects all creatures;’ as such it can be taken as a name of the Sun; and it is an ordinary fact that towards morning the sun reaches the early Dawn, (‘Usha’); and as the early Dawn is brought about by the approach of the Sun, it is called his “daughter;” and it is the fact of the Sun letting his rays fall in (or on) the Dawn that has been figuratively spoken of as the intercourse of a man with a woman.



Rig Veda 1.115.2 says that the Sun follows Usha(Dawn) in the same way as a man follows his wife. From this, it becomes clear that here Prajapati Surya and Devi Usha(Dawn) have an allegorical context to the man-woman relationship.

सूर्य दीप्यमान उषा का अनुगमन उसी प्रकार करता है, जिस प्रकार पुरुष नारी के पीछे-पीछे चलता है. इसी समय लोग सूर्य संबंधी यज्ञ करने की इच्छा से कार्य विस्तार करते हैं. कल्याण पाने के लिए हम सूर्य की स्तुति करते हैं. (२)

The Sun follows the radiant dawn (Usha) in the same way as a man follows a woman. At this time people expand their work with the desire to perform Surya-related yajnas. We worship the Sun to attain welfare.



Sayancharya bhasya on Rig Veda 1.115.2 explains it further-

“सूर्यः “देवीं दानादिगुणयुक्तां “रोचमानां दीप्यमानाम् “उषसं “पश्चात् “अभ्येति उषसः प्रादुर्भावानन्तरं तामभिलक्ष्य गच्छति । तत्र दृष्टान्तः । “मर्यो “न “योषाम् । यथा कश्चिन्मनुष्यः शोभनावयवां गच्छन्तीं युवतिं स्त्रियं सततमनुगच्छति तद्वत् । “यत्र यस्यामुषसि जातायां “देवयन्तः देवं द्योतमानं सूर्यं यष्टुमिच्छन्तः “नरः यज्ञस्य नेतारो यजमानाः “युगानि । युगशब्दः कालवाची । तेन च तत्र कर्तव्यानि कर्माणि लक्ष्यन्ते यथा दर्शपूर्णमासौ इति । अग्निहोत्रादीनि कर्माणि “वितन्वते विस्तारयन्ति । यद्वा । देवयन्तो देवयागार्थं धनमात्मन इच्छन्तो यजमानपुरुषा युगानि हलावयवभूतानि कर्षणाय वितन्वते प्रसारयन्ति । तामुषसमनुगच्छतीत्यर्थः । एवंविधं “भद्रं कल्याणं सूर्यं “प्रति “भद्राय कल्याणरूपाय कर्मफलाय’ स्तुमः इति शेषः । यद्वा । देवयन्तः देवकामा यजमाना युगानि युग्मानि भूत्वा पत्नीभिः सहिताः सन्तो भद्रं कल्याणम् अग्निहोत्रादिकं कर्म भद्राय तत्फलार्थं प्रति प्रत्येकं यस्यामुषसि प्रवृत्तायां वितन्वते विस्तारयन्ति ॥ मर्यः । 'मृङ् प्राणत्यागे'। छन्दसि निष्टर्क्य इत्यादौ यत्प्रत्ययान्तो निपात्यते । ' यतोऽनावः' इत्याद्युदात्तत्वम् । युगानि । युजेः कर्मणि घञ् । युगशब्दः कालविशेषे रथाद्युपकरणे च (का. ६. १. ^६०) इति उञ्छादिषु पाठात् गुणाभावः अन्तोदात्तत्वं ं । वितन्वते । ' तनु विस्तारे । ' तनादिकृञ्भ्य उः ।

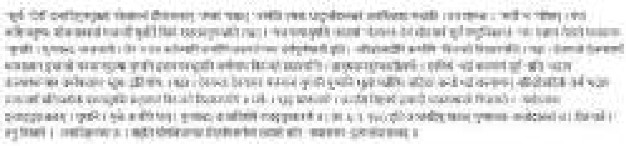
The Sun follows the radiant goddess Uṣas, who is endowed with divine qualities such as generosity and shines brilliantly. After Uṣas manifests, the Sun, drawn by her beauty, proceeds after her—just as a young man constantly follows a graceful young woman. When Uṣas rises, the worshippers (devayantaḥ), desiring to behold the shining deity (the Sun), prepare to offer their worship. The word yugāni refers to time cycles or ritual periods, such as the new and full moon sacrifices, during which obligatory rites like Agnihotra are performed and expanded. Alternatively, yugāni may refer to the components of a plough, indicating that these sacrificers—desiring divine rewards and wealth—engage in agricultural labor by spreading their yokes for plowing. Thus, it is said that they follow Uṣas into activity. This benevolent and auspicious Sun is praised for auspicious purposes—the fruitful results of sacred actions. Or again, devayantaḥ, the sacrificers, paired with their wives (yugāni as conjugal pairs), perform auspicious acts like Agnihotra during the rise of Uṣas, each extending their rituals in pursuit of divine blessings.



. Then what is the semen of Prajapati Sun here ? Rig Veda 1.164.33 Sayana hasya tells that Father form Sun impregnates his daughter Usha/Heaven with Sun rays form Virya/Semen which gives rise to all living beings . Thus the Semen here is Sun rays only

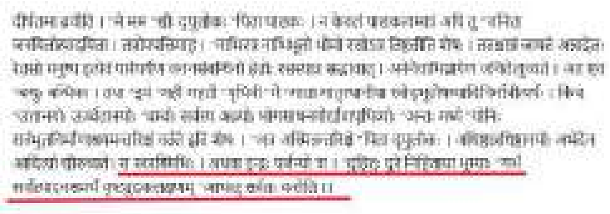
Sayancharya bhasya on Rig Veda 1.164.33

“स स्वरश्मिभिः । अथवा इन्द्रः पर्जन्यो वा । दुहितुः दूरे निहिताया भूम्याः गर्भं सर्वोत्पादनसमर्थं वृष्ट्युदकलक्षणम् आधात् सर्वतः करोति ।।”

“He, with his own rays places the seed (garbha), capable of producing all beings and characterized by rain or water, into the daughter , who is situated afar. He causes this (fertilization) from all directions.”



Meaning of Rudra Punishing Prajapati here in this Prakaran

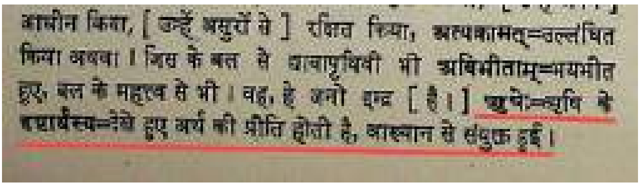
In this Prakaran in Aitreya Brahmana 3/33 and Satapatha Brahmana 1.7.4. its written that Rudra punished Prajapati with his Bow ? So whats the meaning of this prakaran

To understand this i will quote Nirukta 10/10

he very first thing to understand is that the style in which the sages (ṛṣis) present the meanings of mantras is ākhyāyikā in Nature .In Nirukta (10.10), the great sage Yāska states:

"ṛṣer dṛṣṭārthasya prītir bhavati ākhyāna-saṁyuktā" —

That is: A sage finds joy in conveying the meaning of what he has perceived (through intuition or vision) by combining it with a narrative (ākhyāna), i.e., symbolic or imaginative stories. These stories are not mere fiction; they serve to convey both natural (cosmic or physical) and didactic (educational/moral) meanings behind the mantra.



आधीन किया, [उन्हें असुरों से] रक्षित किया, अस्यकामत्=उल्लंघित किया अथवा। जिस के बल से द्यावापृथिवी भी अबिभीताम्=भयभीत हुए, बल के महत्व से भी। वह, हे जनो इन्द्र [है।] ऋषेः=ऋषि के दृष्टार्थस्य=देखे हुए अर्थ की प्रीति होती है, आख्यान से संयुक्त हुई।

In the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa 1.7.4 which contains the Same Prajapati-Usha Prakaran as in Rig Veda 10.61.5-7 , Aitreya Brahmana 3/33 the episode of Prajāpati and Uṣā is referred to as a "Prāśitraharaṇa Ākhyāna", meaning it is presented purely as a narrative or story. Therefore, the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa itself classifies it as an ākhyāna (allegorical or symbolic tale).

In the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, the episode of Prajāpati and Uṣā is referred to as the "Prāśitra-haraṇa Ākhyāna", which means it is presented merely as a story or allegorical narrative, not as a historical or factual account. That is why the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa itself classifies this as an “ākhyāna” (tale or parable), indicating its symbolic or illustrative nature.

Rig Veda 10/61/5-7
Sayanacharya commentary

> “यज्ञकर्म के स्वामी एवं रक्षक के रूप में कर्म के समय ध्यान अथवा कर्म करने वाले देवताओं ने रुद्र (रू) का उत्पन्न किया। अर्थात् उन्होंने ब्रह्म (रू) को यज्ञकर्म तथा स्वामी भाव अर्थात कर्म की रक्षा करने वाले के रूप में निर्मित किया।”

> “As the master and protector of the sacrificial act (yajña-karma), during the performance of the ritual, the deities conceived Rudra (Rū). That is, they created Brahman (Rū) in the form of the guardian and lord of the sacrificial act.”

Ācārya Sāyaṇa has written in his commentary on the Ṛgveda (10.61.7) that when Prajāpati, the father, committed an improper act with his daughter Uṣā, the noble gods at that time manifested Rudra, who is also referred to here as Vāstoṣpati Brahman, the protector of righteous actions (karma). That is, when there was harm or corruption of actions due to sin, the gods called upon Rudra to safeguard the sanctity of karma.

Whenever there is damage to karmic order due to sin, Rudra — the Supreme Being — arises to protect dharma by punishing the wrongdoers. We will understand this further through narratives (ākhyānas) found in the Brāhmaṇa texts as revealed by the sages.

Shatpath Brahman (1/7/4/3)

It is stated in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa (1.7.4.3) that for this sinful act of Prajāpati, the gods told Rudra: "Prajāpati has committed the sin of incest with his own daughter; therefore, punish him."(Atmospheric phenomenon between Dawn and Sun as per Kumarilla Bhatta and Rig Veda which I had already explained before) And Rudra killed Prajāpati with a sharp arrow.

That is, the sages (ṛṣis), through the personification of two natural elements — the Sun (Sūrya) and Dawn (Uṣā) — conveyed through a symbolic story that in Vedic Dharma, anyone who commits a sin such as incest with one's own daughter shall receive the punishment of death in the same manner.

इन देवों ने प्रसिद्ध जो यह स्विष्टकृत् रूपात्मक 'रुद्र' पशुओं का स्वामी अर्थात् शासक है उससे यह जो प्रजापति मर्यादा का अतिक्रमण कर रहा है कि अपनी पुत्री तथा हमारी बहन (उषा) के साथ इस प्रकार का सहवास जन्य अपराध अर्थात् अत्याचारात्मक व्यवहार करता है उसको अपने तीव्र बाणों से बींध दो ऐसा कहा (निवेदन किया)। देवों का आर्त्तनाद तुनकर क्रुद्ध हुआ वह 'रुद्र' अपने रौद्र रूप से विशेष प्रयत्न पूर्वक अर्थात् निशाना साधकर उस प्रजापति को अपने तीक्ष्ण बाण से बींध दिया। उस समय प्रजापति का वीर्य स्खलित होने वाला ही था, कि रुद्र का बाण उसे आहत कर दिया। फलतः प्रजापति का आधा वीर्य बाहर स्खलित हो गया। क्योंकि यह बात इस प्रकार ही हुई।

The gods then invoked the well-known Sviṣṭakṛt form of Rudra, who is the lord and ruler of all beings (paśus), and said to him:

“This Prajāpati, who is crossing the bounds of righteousness by engaging in a sinful act of union with his own daughter — our sister Uṣā — is committing an offense born of lust and aggression. Pierce him with your sharp arrows.”

Hearing the anguished plea of the gods, Rudra became enraged. Taking on his fierce (raudra) form, he deliberately aimed and struck Prajāpati with his piercing arrow.

At that very moment, Prajāpati was on the verge of discharging his seed, but before he could, Rudra’s arrow struck him. As a result, half of Prajāpati’s seed was expelled externally.

हिन्दीव्याख्या – इन देवों ने प्रसिद्ध जो यह स्थिरकृत् रूपात्मक 'रुद्र' पशुओं का स्वामी अर्थात् शासक है उससे कहा जो प्रजापति मर्यादा का अतिक्रमण कर रहा है कि अपनी पुत्री तथा हमारी बहन (उषा) के साथ इस प्रकार का सहवास जन्य अपराध अर्थात् अत्याचारात्मक व्यवहार करता है उसको अपने तीक्ष्ण बाणों से बींध दो ऐसा कहा (निवेदन किया)। देवों का आवेदन सुनकर क्रुद्ध हुआ वह 'रुद्र' अपने रौद्र रूप से विशेष प्रयत्न पूर्वक अर्थात् निशाना साधकर उस प्रजापति को अपने तीक्ष्ण बाण से बींध दिया। उस समय प्रजापति का वीर्य स्खलित होने वाला ही था, कि रुद्र का बाण उसे आहत कर दिया। फलतः प्रजापति का आधा वीर्य बाहर स्खलित हो गया। क्योंकि यह बात इस प्रकार ही हुई।

According to R.C. Hazra, the Uma Saṁhitā of the Shiva Purāṇa is a very late addition. He notes that it draws heavily from the Jñāna Saṁhitā, which itself is dated to around 950 CE. Based on this, it can be reasonably inferred that the Uma Saṁhitā was incorporated into the Shiva Purāṇa sometime after the 10th century CE.

IV. The Bhaumasaṃhitā,[391] also called Auma/Umāsaṃhitā, is represented in the class B editions only. The text introduces Kṛṣṇa on a visit to Kailāsa and performing penance there to Śiva, in order to obtain a son. He meets Upamanyu, and requests him to tell him about the greatness of Śiva. Upamanyu complies, and praises Śiva and his trident; he extols Śiva's power to save his devotees from hell. This discussion leads into several chapters on different types of sins, and on the description of hell and the suffering in it. Ways to avoid this suffering include gifts of food, performing penance, listening to the purāṇas, etc. The saṃhitā subsequently describes the seven dvīpas of the earth, and other component parts of the universe. It ends with discourses on a variety of topics, such as the development of man, from the foetus, through childhood, youth, marriage, old age, etc.; creation and manvantaras; etc. In Hazra's opinion the text borrows most of its chapters from the Jñānasaṃhitā.

saṃhitās which are absent from these Śiva° passages.

XIII. The Jñānasaṃhitā[400] has already been referred to on several occasions in this description of the Śiva°, because, in Hazra's opinion, other saṃhitās borrowed verses and even chapters from it. The text recognizes the Vedas as the highest authority, but it was Śiva, as ṛgyajuḥsāmarūpin, who communicated them to Viṣṇu. Śiva shall be worshiped with Vedic mantras, even though the saṃhitā does not, therefore, reject the authority of the Tantras and eventual Śiva worship with Āgamic rather than Vedic mantras. The nirguṇa Śiva is identical with the parabrahma; in his saguṇa form he manifests himself as Rudra. Prakṛti was born from Śiva's wish, and, from her, were born the other gods including Brahmā and Viṣṇu. This saṃhitā, like some of those discussed earlier, strongly encourages liṅga worship as the ideal way to worship Śiva himself. It urges worship under the guidance of a competent teacher; worship will lead to bhakti, then to jñāna, and, ultimately, to vijñāna, i.e. the realization that the only real thing is Śiva. Hazra points out that the text was influenced by the Kumārasambhava, Raghuvaṃśa, and Kirātārjunīya. He surmises that it may have been composed in Banaras, by someone who was also familiar with the banks of the Narmadā, not before A.D. 950.

The Śiva Purāṇa, as a whole, is one of the most composite and unwieldy Purāṇas, having been composed and expanded by different authors over various periods. There exist two primary versions: the Bombay 1884, Venkat 1895–96, and Venga Manuscript (Class A); and the Venkat 1906, 1965 Pandita Pustakalaya Manuscript (Class B). According to R.C. Hazra, the sections found in the Class A Manuscript are older and more authentic, whereas those in the Class B Manuscript (Including Uma Samhita) are very recent compositions . Most significantly, the older and more authentic Class A Manuscript does not contain the Uma Saṁhitā.

saṃhitās, with different titles and different arrangements; two of their saṃhitās are not even listed in the Śiva° passages.[387] The following is a comparative survey of the saṃhitās, in the two passages of the Śiva° itself, and in the two sets of editions – which from now on I will refer to as class A and class B editions.

Śiva°	Class A Bombay 1884 Veṅkaṭ. 1895–96 Vaṅga.		Class B Veṅkaṭ. 1906, 1965 Paṇḍitapustakālaya Tr. AITM
I. Vidyeśvara	XIII. Jñāna	ch. 78	Vidyeśvara/	ch. 25
II. Raudra	Vidyeśvara	25	Vighneśa
III. Vaināyaka		(Vaṅga 16)	Rudra	197
IV. Bhauma/Auma	Kailāsa	12	Śatarudra	42
V. Mātṛ(purāṇa)	XIV. Sanatkumāra	59	Koṭirudra	43
VI. Rudraikādaśa	Vāyu/Vāyavīya		Umā/Auma	51
VII. Kailāsa	pūrvabhāga	30	Kailāsa	23
VIII. Śatarudra	uttarabhāga	30	Vāyavīya
IX. Koṭirudra	Dharma	65	pūrvabhāga	35
X. Sahasrakoṭirudra			uttarabhāga	41
XI. Vāyavīya
XII. Dharma(purāṇa)

It is clear from all this that the Śiva° is one of the more composite and unwieldy purāṇas, sections of which "were written by different hands in different climes and ages;" it is also evident that "there were different traditions regarding the text of the Śiva-purāṇa."[388] Hazra, who did not include the Śiva° in his volume on the mahāpurāṇas, later published an extensive and comparative study of the various saṃhitās, which is repeatedly referred to in these pages. He came to the conclusion that the saṃhitās contained in the class A editions were generally the older ones, and that all other sections, manuscripts of which are rare, and the contents of which largely depend on the earlier saṃhitās as well as on other purāṇas, are more recent. In view of the great disparity between the two sets of editions, I will follow the order of the saṃhitās as set forth in the purāṇa itself.

Brahma ejaculates on seeing Sati,

📚Shiva Purana 2.2.19.16-29📚
O sage, while going round the fire, the feet of Sati protruded out of the cloth that covered them. I looked at them. My mind being afflicted by love I stared at the limbs of Sati. O excellent brahmin, I was deluded by Siva's Mäyã. The more I stared at the beautiful limbs of Sati eagerly the more I became thrilled like a love-afflicted man. Staring thus at the chaste daughter of Daksa and being afflicted by the cupid, O sage, I craved to see her face. Since she was bashful in the presence of Siva I could not see her face. She did not show out her face on account of shyness. Then I began to consider proper means whereby I could see the face. Afflicted much by the cupid, I pitched upon the production of airful smoke as the means thereof. Then lord Siva, the supreme God, indulged in many sports, covered his eyes (apparently) afflicted by smoke. Then, O sage, afflicted by the cupid and delighted in the heart of hearts, I lifted her veil and stared into the face of Sati. I looked at the face of Sati many a time. I was helpless in curbing the onset of a sensuous organism. Four drops of my semen virile got displaced and fell on the ground like drops of dew as a result of staring into her face. O sage, then I was stunned into silence. I was surprised. I became suspicious. I covered up the semen drops lest anyone should see them."

📚Shiva Purana 2.3.49.3-11📚
Then according to the worldly convention, Pārvatī and Śiva performed the circumambulation round the fire, O dear. The husband of Pārvatī exhibited a wonderful feat. O celestial sage, listen to that. I shall mention it out of love for you. On that occasion, deluded by Śiva's power of illusion I stared at the feet of the goddess as well as the crescentshaped nails. On seeing them, O celestial sage, I became overwhelmed by passion. My mind was greatly disturbed. Deluded by the cupid I stared at her limbs frequently. Then, immediately after staring at them, my semen dropped on the ground. I, the grandfather, was ashamed by the emission of my semen. O sage, I pressed the penis secretly with my feet. O Nārada, on coming to know of it, the great God Śiva became furious. He wanted to kill me immediately because I was overwhelmed by lust. O Nārada, there was great hue and cry everywhere. All the people trembled. Even Viṣṇu, the sustainer of the universe, was terrified. O sage, then Viṣṇu and other gods eulogised Śiva who was blazing furiously and who attempted to kill me.

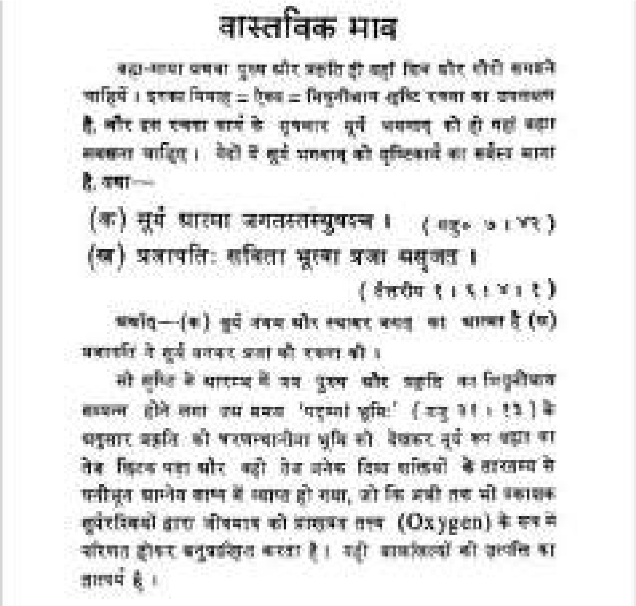
Original Text of Purana Digdarshan and explanation on Brahma- Balakhilya



वास्तविक भाव

ब्रह्म-माया अथवा पुरुष और प्रकृति ही यहाँ शिव और गौरी समझने चाहियें। इनका मिथुन = ऐक्य = मिथुनीभाव सृष्टि रचना का उपलक्षण है, और इस रचना कार्य के सूत्रधार सूर्य भगवान् को ही यहाँ ब्रह्मा समझना चाहिए। वेदों में सूर्य भगवान् को सृष्टिकार्य का कर्ता माना है, यथा—

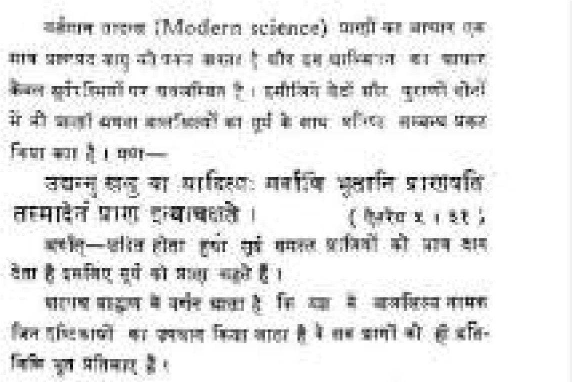
(क) सूर्य आत्मा जगतस्तस्थुषश्च । (यजु० ७।४२)

(ख) प्रजापतिः सविता भूत्वा प्रजा असृजत ।

(तैत्तिरीय १।६।४।१)

अर्थात्—(क) सूर्य जंगम और स्थावर जगत् का आत्मा है (ख) प्रजापति ने सूर्य बनकर प्रजा की रचना की।

सो सृष्टि के प्रारम्भ में जब पुरुष और प्रकृति का मिथुनीभाव सम्पन्न होने लगा उस समय 'पद्भ्यां भूमिः' (यजु ३१।१३) के अनुसार प्रकृति की चरणस्थानीया भूमि को देखकर सूर्य रूप ब्रह्मा का तेज स्खलित हुआ और वही तेज अनेक दिव्य शक्तियों के तारतम्य से फलीभूत आग्नेय वाष्प में व्याप्त हो गया, जो कि अभी तक भी प्रकाशक सूर्यरश्मियों द्वारा जीवमात्र को प्राणप्रद तत्व (Oxygen) के रूप में परिणत होकर अनुप्राणित करता है। यही बालखिल्यों की उत्पत्ति का तात्पर्य है।



वर्तमान विज्ञान (Modern science) प्राणों का आधार एक मात्र प्राणप्रद वायु को प्रकट करता है और इस आविष्कार का आधार केवल सूर्यरश्मियों पर अवलम्बित है। इसीलिये वेदों और पुराणों दोनों में भी प्राणों अथवा बालखिल्यों का सूर्य के साथ घनिष्ठ सम्बन्ध प्रकट किया गया है। यथा—

उद्यन्नु खलु वा आदित्यः सर्वाणि भूतानि प्राणयति तस्मादेनं प्राण इत्याचक्षते । (ऐतरेय ५।३१)

अर्थात्—उदित होता हुआ सूर्य समस्त प्राणियों को प्राण दान देता है इसलिए सूर्य को प्राण कहते हैं।

शतपथ ब्राह्मण में वर्णन आता है कि यज्ञ में बालखिल्य नामक जिन इष्टिकाओं का उपधान किया जाता है वे सब प्राणों की ही प्रतिकृति रूप प्रतिमाएं हैं।

Refutation-

Rc Hazra in his book Puranic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs page no 120 said that the chapters after chapter 43 in Shristi khanda (including chapter 55) are later interpolations into Padma Purana and was composed likely after the Satanic Islamic Muhammadans established their rule in India . So this chapter is a later interpolation and not part of Padma Purana originally

(5) SṚṢṬI-KHAṆḌA.[88] This Khaṇḍa, which is assigned the fifth place in our edition, is really the first of the set. This position of the Khaṇḍa is betrayed by the mode of its beginning as well as by the sequence and contents of the five Parvans given in chap. 1.

This Khaṇḍa, as we have it now, can be rightly divided into two parts:

(1) chaps. 1-43 (verses 1-97)

and (2) chaps. 43 (verses 98 ff.) to the end.

It will be seen hereinafter that the chapters of the second part were added to the Sṛṣṭi-kh. after the Muhammadans had established kingdoms in India. Hence the chapters of the first part, which are of earlier date, are examined first.

[88] The Sṛṣṭi-khaṇḍa in Bengal Mss consists only of 46 (or according to Aufrecht, 45) chapters. The corresponding chapters in a Bengal Ms. (No. 1621, D. U. Mss Lib.) of this Khaṇḍa and the AnSS ed. are given below:

upon them, it is difficult to say anything about the lower limit.

Chapters 43 (verses 98 ff.) to the end, which, according to our division, form the second part of the work, are not found in the Bengal Mss. So their comparatively late date can be well understood. These chapters were written and added to the Sṛṣṭi-kh. after the Muhammadans had established kingdoms in India. These foreigners have been called kings[93] and scornfully described more than once under the names 'Turuṣka', 'Mleccha' and 'Yavana'[94]. The descriptions are undoubtedly aimed at the Muhammadans who 'polluted' the society and the land of the Hindus by their contact and slaughter of cows. Hence the date of composition of this part of the Sṛṣṭi-kh. can by no means be placed earlier than 1000 A.D. Such a late date is supported by the contents also, which are replete with Tantric elements. The Āgamas have many times been mentioned as authorities along with the Vedas and the Purāṇas; the Tulasī plant has been glorified in highly extravagant language; and so on. As Hemādri quotes

[92] In connection with the quotations the following stories of the Padma-p. have been mentioned in the Adbhutasāgara:

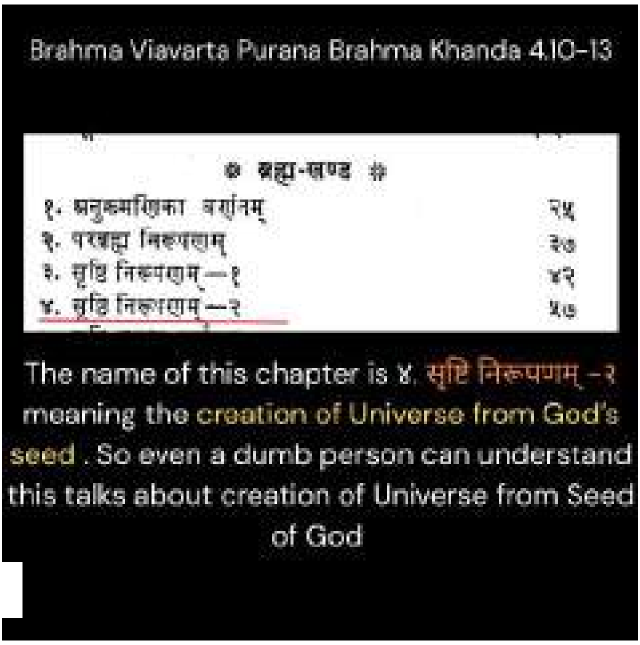
Brahma Viavarta Purana Brahma Khanda 4.10-13 The name of this chapter is ४. सृष्टि निरूपणम् -२ meaning the creation of Universe from God's seed . So even a dumb person can understand this talks about creation of Universe from Seed of God



The verse here in Brahma Vaiavarta Purana Brahma Khanda chapter 4 सृष्टि निरूपणम् -२ talks about the origin of विराज and they are interpreting the aspects as usual elemental water and semen of the mortals. Here, semen must be interpreted as – कामस्तदग्रे समवर्तताधि मनसो रेतः प्रथमं यदासीत् । (ऋग्वेदः सूक्तं १०.१२९) – desire itself is the semen. And what is this desire ? तथा चाम्नायते' सोऽकामयत बहुः स्यां प्रजायेयेति स तपोऽतप्यत स तपस्तप्त्वेदं सर्वमसृजत यदिदं किंच' (तै. आ. ८. ६) इति श्रुतिः (सायणभाष्यम्) – may I become many is the desire, says the shruti. So the premise of this narration from ब्रह्मवैवर्तपुराण is based on the नासदीय सूक्त that describes the origin of creation. And this water is nothing but the primordial ocean referred to as एकार्णव, महार्णव, सलिल, etc. And according to the scriptures and commentators,

Parabrahm (here Shri Krishna and Brahma) himself is that casual ocean (कारणोदक) – सलिलरूपेण भगवता स्वेच्छया ब्रह्मा विराड्पो दैवतैः। (वाल्मीकिरामायण २.११०.३ Tilaka commentary by Nagesh Bhatta)।

Rig Veda Nasadiya Sukta Mantra 4 says that the desire to create universe is only the seed (semen of God)

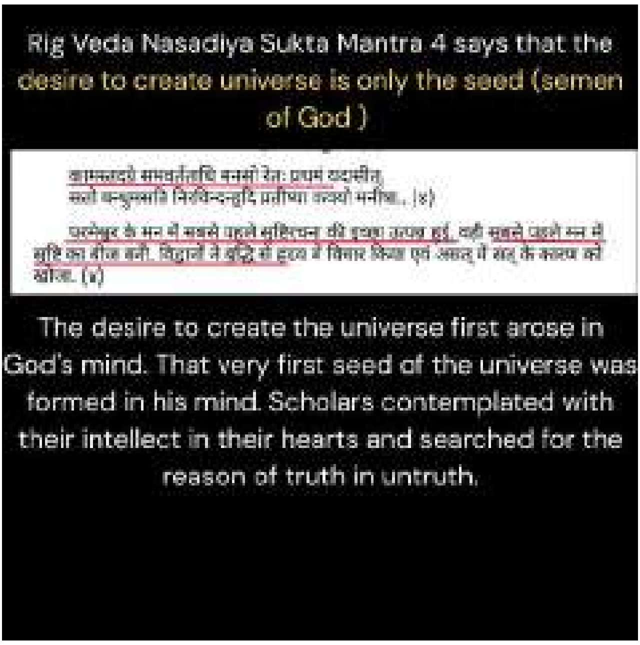
परमेश्वर के मन में सबसे पहले सृष्टिरचना की इच्छा उत्पन्न हुई. वही सबसे पहले मन में सृष्टि का बीज बनी. विद्वानों ने बुद्धि से हृदय में विचार किया एवं असत् में सत् के कारण को खोजा. (४)

The desire to create the universe first arose in God's mind. That very first seed of the universe was formed in his mind. Scholars contemplated with their intellect in their hearts and searched for the reason of truth in untruth.



Acharya Sayana explained in his commentary on RIg Veda 10.129.4 as ननूक्तरीत्या यदीश्वरस्य पर्यालोचनं जगतः पुनरुत्पत्तौ कारणं तदेव किंनिबन्धनमित्यत आह कामस्तदग्र इति । "अग्रे अस्य विकारजातस्य सृष्टेः प्रागवस्थायां परमेश्वरस्य मनसि "कामः "समवर्तत सम्यगजायत । सिसृक्षा जातेत्यर्थः । ईश्वरस्य सिसृक्षा वा किंहेतुकेत्यत आह मनस इति । "मनसः अन्तःकरणस्य संबन्धि वासनाशेषेण मायायां विलीनेऽन्तःकरणे समवेतम् । सामान्यापेक्षमेकवचनम् । सर्वप्राण्यन्तःकरणेषु समवेतमित्यर्थः । एतेनात्मनो गुणाधारत्वं प्रत्याख्यातम् । तादृशं "रेतः भाविनः प्रपञ्चस्य बीजभूतं "प्रथमम् अतीते कल्पे प्राणिभिः कृतं ण्यात्मकं कर्म "यत् यतः कारणात् सृष्टिसमये

Now, if according to the Nānūkta (interpretive method), we consider that the will or contemplation (paryālocanam) of the Lord (Īśvara) is the cause of the creation of the world, then one might ask: “What is the basis or cause of that will?” To answer this, it is said: “Kāmaḥ tad agre” — “Desire existed in the beginning.”

That is, before the manifestation of this entire world of modifications (vikāra-jāta), in the primordial state (prāg-avasthā), desire (kāmaḥ) arose in the mind (manas) of the Supreme Lord (Parameśvara). It means: the urge to create (sṛṣṭi-kāmanā) was born in Him.

Now, one might question: “What was the cause of this creative urge in the Lord?”
To this, it is answered: “From the mind” (manasaḥ).

That is, from the internal faculty (antaḥkaraṇa) — in which the latent impressions (vāsanās) were merged within Māyā — the mind took form. The word is singular (manasaḥ), though it refers to all minds collectively, indicating the general principle. Thus, it means that desire arose in the universal mind, merged in Māyā, before manifestation.

By this, the idea that the Ātman (Self) is the substratum of qualities (guṇas) is refuted.

Such a "desire" (kāmaḥ) becomes the seed (bīja) of the future projection of the universe — it is based upon the puṇya (virtuous) actions performed by beings in a previous cosmic cycle (kalpa). That karma (yat) becomes the cause (kāraṇāt) at the time of creation (sṛṣṭi-samaya).

This karma becomes bhūṣṇu — powerful, and vardhiṣṇu — ever-growing; that is, it becomes ripe and ready to bear fruit.

Therefore, due to this cause — the karmic impressions — the Lord (karma-adhyakṣaḥ, the supervisor of karma, and sarva-sākṣī, the witness of all) develops the desire to create. In His mind, the will to manifest arises.

Having formed this intention (sṛṣṭikāmanā), He contemplates on what to create — and then creates the entire universe.

This is also confirmed in the scripture (āmnāya):

“So’kāmayata – bahu syām prajāyeyeti. Sa tapo’tapyata, sa tapas taptvā idaṁ sarvam asṛjata yad idaṁ kiñca” (Taittirīya Āraṇyaka 8.6)
— “He desired: ‘May I become many, may I be born.’ He performed tapas (austerity), and having done so, He created all this — whatever exists.”

Having thus understood this process, it is further supported by the experience of the wise (vidvat-anubhava), which acts as a further means of valid knowledge (pramāṇa) due to its grace (anugrahakatva).

Now, this entire world (jagat) — experienced now (idānīm anubhūyamānasya) — originates from sat (Being), and the wise seers (kavayaḥ) who are knowers of the three times (past, present, future) and who possess deep yogic insight (krānta-darśanāḥ) — they recognize in their hearts (hṛdi) by concentrated intellect (manīṣayā), that:

The bond or cause (bandhuḥ) of this current world is the collection of karmas performed by beings in previous cycles — karmas that remain even when the subtle cause (avyākṛta) — the unmanifest — exists in a dormant (asat) state distinct from the manifest (sat).

Thus, they discover (niravindan) — that is, extract and realize — the cause by deliberation (pratīṣya), by internal discrimination.

The term “asati sad-vilakṣaṇe avyākṛte kāraṇe niravindan” — means: “In the unmanifest cause (avyākṛta), which is distinct from the manifest (sat), they discern the source.”

Brahma ejaculated upon gazing nymphs with well built and erotic bodies,

📚Brahma Viavarta Purana Krishna Janma Khanda 131.14-19📚
Looking at their well built body, the flesh, smiling faces and the pelvic region, Brahma was infested with passion. O Brahmana, Brahma could not control himself and his semen fell. Brahma feeling ashamed hid it in a cloth and after the music was over, Brahma getting infatuated with passion took out the cloth and threw it out in the ocean. Thereafter, a divine immense lustre, emerged out of the water and sat in the lap of Brahma, who was feeling ashamed seated in the court of Visnu. In the meantime, getting angry Varuna came out of the water and bowing in reverence to the gods he tried to take away the boy with him. The boy on the other hand started crying and caught hold of Brahma. But Brahma could not speak anything getting ashamed.”

Brahma discharged his semen on seeing the toe of Parvati!,

📚Brahma Purana 4.3.17-22📚
During the course of touching the slab, Siva urged by Visnu, touched the toe of the right foot of the goddess with his hand. Performing the sacrifice there near Siva, I saw her. My semen got ejaculated due to my evil mind on seeing the toe. In the entire three worlds, who is not deceived by Cupid? Defiled and ashamed, I scattered the ejaculated semen in small droplets. From the minute particles of my semen the Valakhi- lyas" were born. Then there was a great commotion caused by Devas. Overwhelmed by shame, I stood up from my seat and started. Even as Devas watched silently, O Nárada, I went ahead. On seeing me go, Mahâdeva spoke to Nandin: Siva said:

Call Brahma here. I shall make him free from sin.

The Gautamī-māhātmya (chaps. 70-175), which was certainly composed by somebody living about the river Godāvarī, is a distinct work (pustaka) by itself. It is called a 'highly meritorious Purāṇa' declared by Brahmā (cf. Br 175, 78 and 87). The place which it occupies in the Brahma-p. was not meant for it, because it divides the chapters on Puruṣottamakṣetra-māhātmya. The way in which chap. 176 opens, shows that it immediately followed chap. 69. Moreover, in chap. 176 there is no hint from which we may conclude that the Māhātmya was there. In Br 176, 4 the sages refer to Bhāratavarṣa (chap. 27) and Puruṣottama-kṣetra, of which, they say, Vyāsa told them elaborately, but they do not mention the Gautamī-māhātmya which also precedes chap. 176 in our edition. So, it is clear that the Māhātmya was not originally there. In the Venk. ed. it is placed at the end. This Māhātmya was attached to the Brahma-p. later than the chapters on Orissa, for the Nāradīya-p. (I, 92), which gives the contents of the present with a discussion of Sāṃkhya and Yoga (234–245).

The Gautamīmāhātmya, also called Godāvarīmāhātmya, of which there exist several separate manuscripts and which has also been separately edited, calls itself a purāṇa and must originally have been a distinct book. It interrupts the section on Puruṣottamakṣetra, and has been inserted exactly in the middle of the Brahma. It describes the sacred places along the Godāvarī river.

The brilliantly shining goddess Earth, the quarters, the intermediate quarters, the Lords of quarters, the celestial virgins, the wives of Devas, the mothers and Ayu all these were present there in embodied form in front of the Lord (Brahma) who was performing the Yajna assuming the form of Varuna. On seeing the ladies, the semen virile of Svayambhu fell on the ground.

ऋषियों ने पूछा- 'हे सत्तम! पूर्वकाल में वे सप्तर्षिगण किस प्रकार मानसिक संकल्प से उत्पन्न हुए ? और किस प्रकार ब्रह्मा के पुत्र माने गये इस वृत्तान्त को हमें बतलाइये । ऋषियों की ऐसी बातें सुनकर पुराणों के विशेषज्ञ महातेजस्वी सूत ने उस शुभ कथा को बतलाया ।। १५ ।।

The sages asked, "O best one! In ancient times, how did those Seven Sages (Saptarṣis) come into being through mental resolve, and in what manner were they regarded as the sons of Brahmā? Please tell us this account." Hearing the words of the sages, the highly radiant Sūta, an expert in the Purāṇas, narrated that auspicious story. (15)

किस प्रकार स्वायंभुव मन्वन्तर में वे सप्तर्षिगण सिद्धि को प्राप्त हुए और फिर वैवस्वत मन्वन्तर में महादेव के शाप से अपनी सिद्धिदात्री तपस्या से च्युत हुए और मर्त्यलोक में आकर उत्पन्न हुए – यह मैं कहता हूँ। ये सप्तर्षिगण जनलोक में एक बार जन्म लेते हैं। जनलोक में आकर उन महाभाग्यशाली सप्तर्षियों ने आपस में यह सलाह की और एक-दूसरे से कहा कि वरुण यज्ञ के समाप्त हो जाने पर चाक्षुष न्वन्तर में हम सभी पितामह ब्रह्मा जी के आत्मज

१६-१९ ॥
स्वायंभुव मन्वन्तर में सत्य आचरण के लिए वे महर्षिगण शिव द्वारा अभिशप्त किये गये थे और पुनः जन्म धारणकर जनलोक से स्वर्गलोक को गये थे। देव के महान् यज्ञ में वरुण का शरीर धारण कर सन्तानोत्पत्ति की कामना से अपने वीर्य को अग्नि में हवन करते समय ब्रह्मा से ऋषियों का द्वितीय बार प्रादुर्भाव हुआ यह हम लोगों ने सुना है। भृगु, अङ्गिरा, मरीचि, पुलस्त्य, पुलह, क्रतु, अत्रि और वसिष्ठ – ये आठ ब्रह्मा के पुत्र हैं । २०-२२ ॥

I shall now tell you how, in the Svāyambhuva Manvantara, those Seven Sages attained perfection, and then, in the Vaivasvata Manvantara, by the curse of Mahādeva, were deprived of their perfection-granting austerities, descended to the mortal world, and were born again. These Seven Sages take birth once in the world of Jana-loka.

Coming to Jana-loka, those greatly fortunate Saptarṣis consulted among themselves and said to one another: "After the completion of Varuṇa's sacrifice, in the Cākṣuṣa Manvantara, we shall all be the self-born sons of Grandfather Brahmā. At that time, our welfare will again be secured." (16–19)

In the Svāyambhuva Manvantara, for upholding righteous conduct, those great sages were cursed by Śiva, and after taking birth again, went from Jana-loka to Svarga-loka. During the great sacrifice of the gods, when assuming the form of Varuṇa and desirous of offspring, they offered their seed into the fire as an oblation—at that time, the sages had their second manifestation from Brahmā. This we have heard.

Bhṛgu, Aṅgiras, Marīci, Pulastya, Pulaha, Kratu, Atri, and Vasiṣṭha—these eight are the sons of Brahmā. (20–22)

वरुण के उस विशाल यज्ञ में सभी देवता सम्मिलित हुए थे, यज्ञ के सभी अंग एवं वषट्कार मूर्ति धारण कर उपस्थित थे। सहस्रों साम एवं यजुर्वेद के मूर्त स्वरूप थे, पदक्रम से विभूषित ऋग्वेद भी वहाँ पर मूर्तमान था। ओंकार रूप मुख से उज्ज्वल, यज्ञ कार्य में प्रयुक्त होनेवाले सूक्त, ब्राह्मण एवं मन्त्र भाग से संयुक्त वृत्त से संबलित यजुर्वेद वहाँ अति शोभा पा रहा थे। सभी गेय पदों को पुरःसर कर विश्वावसु आदि गन्धों के साथ वृत्त से संवलित सामवेद अपने सभी उपकरणों से संयुक्त शोभित हो रहा थे ॥ २३-२६ ॥
अतिघोर कृत्या (हत्या) आदि विधियों से तथा प्रत्यङ्गिरस आदि आभिचारिक प्रयोगों से युक्त होकर एक ही सिर में शरीर धारणकर उपस्थित था। इन सबों के अतिरिक्त लक्षण, स्वर, स्तोभ, निरुक्त, स्वरों की भक्ति आश्रयस्वरूप वषट्कार, निग्रह, ग्रह आदि भी उपस्थित थे। दीप्ता, दीप्त, इला, देवी, सभी दिशाएँ, विदिशाएँ, दिक्पालगण, देवकन्याएँ, देवपत्नियाँ, मातायें तथा आयु- ये सब भी स्वरूप धारण कर वरुण का रूप धारण करने वाले देव के अग्नि मुख में हवन करते समय उपस्थित रहे ।। २७-२९ ॥
स्वयंभू ब्रह्म जी का वीर्य पृथ्वी पर स्खलित हो गया। ब्रह्मर्षि के भाव से प्रभावित निश्चित विधान के कारण पितामह ने पृथ्वी पर स्खलित अपने वीर्य को घृत की ााँति खुवा पर रखकर मन्त्रों का विधिवत्

उच्चारणकर हवन कर दिया। प्रजापति ने इस प्रकार अनेक जीव समूहों की सृष्टि की लोक में परम तेजोमय, किन्तु पृथ्वी पर गिर पड़ने के कारण कुछ क्षीण तेजवाले उस वीर्य से सत्त्वगुण, रजोगुण एवं तमोगुणमय सृष्टि उत्पन्न हुई। इन उपर्युक्त तीनों गुणों से सम्पन्न वह तेज आकाशमण्डल में देदीप्यमान हुआ । तमोगुणमय तेजस्विता के कारण सभी जीवसमूह उत्पन्न हुए ।। ३१-३४ ।।

जिस समय ब्रह्मा ने घृत के पात्र में अपने वीर्य को लेकर अग्नि में हवन किया उस समय उनके कर्मज पुत्रों की उत्पत्ति हुई । अग्नि में वीर्य के हवन कर देने पर महर्षियों का प्रादुर्भाव हुआ। सातों ऋषियों के शरीर उज्ज्वल एवं देदीप्यमान थे, तथा बालकों के सभी गुण उनमें पाये जाते थे। पहली बार अग्नि में वीर्य के हवन करने पर लपटों से कवि (भृगु) निकले। इस प्रकार ज्वाला का भेदनकर निकलते हुए कवि को देखकर हिरण्यगर्भब्रह्मा ने कहा, यतः अग्नि ज्वाला से प्रकट होते समय आपने 'भृगु' इस प्रकार का उच्चारण किया है, अतः उनका नाम भी
भृगु हुआ ॥ ३५-३७ ॥

इस प्रकार अग्नि ज्वाला का भेदनकर प्रादुर्भूत होनेवाले उस ब्रह्मर्षि को देखकर महादेव ने कहा- प्रभो ! पुत्र प्राप्ति की कामना से मैं दीक्षा ग्रहण कर इस यज्ञ को कर रहा था, अतः यह ब्रह्मर्षि मेरा पुत्र हो । जब भृगु मेरा ही पुत्र हो-ऐसा शिव जी ने प्रकट किया ।। ३८ ॥

In that great sacrifice of Varuṇa, all the gods were assembled. All the components of the sacrifice and the deity embodying the exclamation vaṣaṭ were present there in embodied form. There were thousands of personified forms of the Sāma and Yajur Vedas, and the Ṛgveda, adorned with the arrangement of padakrama, was also manifest there.

The Yajurveda, with its mouth radiant in the form of the sacred syllable "Oṁ," combined with hymns (sūktas), brāhmaṇas, and mantra sections used in sacrificial rites, and enriched with metrical patterns (vṛtta), shone splendidly. The Sāmaveda, adorned with metrical patterns and accompanied by Viśvāvasu and other Gandharvas, was resplendent, equipped with all its musical instruments and all its chantable verses placed in the forefront. (23–26)

The fierce goddess Kṛtyā (personification of destructive acts such as killing), together with abhichāra rites like Pratyangiras, appeared with a single head and a body, all in embodied form. Along with them were also present the aspects of phonetics (lakṣaṇa), tonal accents (svara), choral fillers (stobha), etymology (nirukta), the vaṣaṭ-call as the refuge of intonation devotion, as well as elements like restraint (nigraha) and grasp (graha). Also present were the shining goddesses Dīptā and Dīptī, the goddess Ilā, the quarters (diśas), the intermediate directions (vidiśas), the guardians of the quarters (dikpālas), divine maidens, wives of the gods, mothers, and the goddess of life-span (Āyus). All of these, in their respective forms, were present when the deity who had assumed the form of Varuṇa was offering oblations into the fire. (27–29)

The seed of the self-born Brahmā fell to the earth. Influenced by the mood of a Brahmarṣi and by the fixed sacrificial procedure, the Grandfather (Pitāmaha) took his seed, which had fallen on the earth, placed it on the sacrificial ladle (khūvā) as if it were ghee, and, reciting the mantras in the proper manner, offered it into the fire.

From that act, Prajāpati created numerous groups of living beings. From that seed, luminous yet somewhat diminished in radiance because it had fallen on the earth, arose a creation consisting of the three qualities—sattva, rajas, and tamas. That brilliance, possessing these three qualities, shone forth in the heavens. Because of its tāmasika radiance, all the various classes of beings were produced. (31–34)

When Brahmā took his seed in a vessel of ghee and offered it into the fire, his sons born of action (karmaja-putras) came forth. Upon the oblation of the seed into the fire, the great sages appeared. The bodies of the seven sages were bright and radiant, possessing all the attributes of childhood.

At the first oblation of the seed into the fire, the sage Kavi (Bhṛgu) emerged from the flames. Seeing Kavi emerge in this way, breaking through the fire's blaze, Hiraṇyagarbha Brahmā said, "Since you uttered the word 'Bhṛgu' at the moment you appeared from the blaze of fire, therefore your name shall be Bhṛgu." (35–37)

Thus, seeing that Brahmarṣi, who had emerged breaking through the fire's flames, Mahādeva said, "O Lord! I undertook this sacrifice, having received the vow, for the sake of obtaining a son. Therefore, let this Brahmarṣi be my son." In this way, Śiva declared that Bhṛgu was his very own son. (38)

तदनन्तर स्वयंभू ने कहा कि-ऐसा ही होगा। तब शिव ने भृगु को अपने पुत्र रूप में स्वीकार किया । इसी कारणवश भृगु गोत्र में उत्पन्न होने वाले वरुण वंशीय कहलाते हैं। वे प्रभु भृगु भगवान् शिव की सन्तान हुए । तदनन्तर भगवान् ब्रह्मा ने पुनः द्वितीय बार वीर्य को यज्ञाग्नि के अंगार के ऊपर आहुति डाला जिससे उन अंगारों पर अङ्गों-प्रत्यङ्गों समेत अङ्गिरा ऋषि प्रादुर्भूत हुए ॥ ३८-४० ॥

ब्रह्मा की इस अभिनव सम्भूति को प्रकट हुआ देख अग्नि ने कहा- ब्रह्मन्! मैंने आपके वीर्य को धारण किया था, अतः यह दूसरा पुत्र मेरा हो। सभा में प्रधान के पद पर समासीन ब्रह्मा ने अग्नि की प्रार्थना का अनुमोदन किया कि ऐसा ही हो। यही कारण है कि अङ्गिरा गोत्र वाले अग्निगोत्रीय भी कहे जाते हैं ऐसा हमने सुना है। तदनन्तर लोकसृष्टिकर्ता ब्रह्मा ने छह बार अग्नि में अपने वीर्य की आहुति दी, जिससे छह ब्राह्मण उत्पन्न हुए ऐसा सुना जाता है। जिससे सर्वप्रथम अग्नि की मरीचियों से मरीचि नामक पुत्र उत्पन्न हुआ । यतः उस क्रतु (यज्ञ) में एक अन्य चौथा पुत्र भी उत्पन्न हुआ अतः उसका नाम क्रतु रखा गया। मैं तृतीय हूँ- ऐसा कहते हुए यतः एक अन्य पाँचवें पुत्र की उत्पत्ति हुई अतः वह अत्रि नाम से प्रसिद्ध हुआ। एक अन्य पुत्र अपने तीक्ष्ण केशों के कारण पुलस्त्य ाम से स्मरण किया गया ।। ४१-४५ ।।

लम्बे कशों के साथ उत्पन्न होने के कारण पुलह नाम प्रसिद्ध हुआ। वसु (अन्नादि सामग्री) के मध्य से उत्पन्न होने के कारण समस्त वसुधा का आश्रयभूत वसुमान् नाम हुआ। तत्त्वों के जाननेवाले ब्रह्मवादी लोग उसे वशिष्ठ नाम से पुकारते है। ये ब्रह्मा के छह मानसिक पुत्र महर्षि कहे गये हैं ।॥ ४६-४७ ।। ये सब-के-सब लोक की सन्तान वृद्धि करने वाले हैं, और इन्हीं लोगों ने प्रजाओं की वृद्धि की है। इसी कारण ये ब्रह्मा के पुत्र कहे गये हैं। दूसरे पितर नामक लोकविख्यात ऋषिगण भी उत्पन्न हुए। वे लोकप्रसिद्ध सात

Then Svayambhū (Brahmā) said, “So it shall be.” Thereupon Śiva accepted Bhṛgu as his own son. For this reason, those born in the Bhṛgu lineage are called of the Varuṇa line. Thus, Lord Bhṛgu became the son of Lord Śiva.

After that, Lord Brahmā again, for the second time, offered his seed into the embers of the sacrificial fire, from which, upon those embers, the sage Aṅgiras appeared, complete with limbs and body. (38–40)

Seeing this fresh manifestation of Brahmā, Agni said, “O Brahman, I had carried your seed; therefore, let this second son be mine.” Brahmā, seated in the assembly as the chief, approved Agni’s request, saying, “So be it.” For this reason, those of the Aṅgiras lineage are also called of the Agni lineage—thus have we heard.

Then, the Creator of the worlds, Brahmā, offered his seed into the fire six more times, from which six Brāhmaṇas are said to have been born. From the rays (marīci) of the fire, the first-born was the son named Marīci. Because in that sacrifice (kratu) yet another, the fourth son, was produced, he was named Kratu. Saying "I am the third," and because yet another, the fifth son, was produced, he became famous by the name Atri. Another son, due to his sharp hair, was remembered as Pulastya. (41–45)

Another, born with long hairs, became famous as Pulaha. One, born in the midst of vasu (materials such as food, etc.), and serving as the support of the entire earth (vasudhā), was named Vasumān. The knowers of truth, the Brahmavādins, call him Vasiṣṭha. These six great sages are said to be the mental sons of Brahmā. (46–47)

All of them were propagators of progeny in the worlds, and it is they who caused the increase of beings. For this reason, they are called sons of Brahmā. Another group of world-renowned sages, known as the Pitṛs ("Forefathers"), was also born

In Vāyu Purāṇa 2.4.29–31, we learn that the narrative concerns the birth of the Prajāpatis and the Seven Ṛṣis. To bring them forth and initiate creation, Brahmā Deva released his powerful tejas—the creative energy inherent in him—which produced the fourfold categories of living beings. This tejas was then offered as a homa in the yajña, resulting in the manifestation of the Seven Sages and the Prajāpatis.

As confirmed in Śrīmad Bhāgavatam, 10th Skandha, Chapter 71, Verse 8, Brahmā Deva is but an instrument in the creation of living beings, all of whom are ultimately born of Brahman (Śrī Hari).

You are the formless Time-spirit who, as the Supreme Lord, are the real cause of the creation and destruction of the universe, while gods Brahmā and Rudra are mere instruments. So Bhima will be the mere instrumental cause of killing Jarā-sandha while (as a matter of fact) you are the real slayer

8. You are the formless Time-spirit who, as the Supreme Lord, are the real cause of the creation and destruction of the universe, while gods Brahmā and Rudra are mere instruments. So Bhīma will be the mere instrumental cause of killing Jarā-sandha while (as a matter of fact) you are the real slayer.

Mahābhārata, Anuśāsana Parva, Adhyāya 85, Verses 102–104, makes it clear that the tejas of Brahmā Deva is not mortal human semen, but the triguṇātmaka creative energy of Brahmā. This divine power, composed of sattva, rajas, and tamas, generates various forms of living beings according to the predominance of each quality.

शक्तिशाली ब्रह्माजीने उस त्रिगुणात्मक वीर्यसे चतुर्विध प्राणिसमुदायको जन्म दिया। उनके वीर्यका जो रजोमय अंश था, उससे जगत्में तैजस प्रवृत्तिप्रधान जंगम प्राणियोंकी उत्पत्ति हुई ।। १०२ ।।

तमोमय अंशसे तामस पदार्थ – स्थावर वृक्ष आदि प्रकट हुए और जो सात्त्विक अंश था, वह राजस और तामस दोनोंमें अन्तर्भूत हो गया। वह सत्त्वगुण अर्थात् प्रकाशस्वरूपा बुद्धिका नित्यस्वरूप है और आकाश आदि सम्पूर्ण विश्व भी उस बुद्धिका कार्य होनेसे उसका ही स्वरूप है

अतः सम्पूर्ण भूतोंमें जो सत्त्वगुण तथा उत्तम तेज है, वह प्रजापतिके उस शुक्रसे ही प्रकट हुआ है। प्रभो ! ब्रह्माजीके वीर्यकी जब अग्निमें आहुति दी गयी तब उससे तीन शरीरधारी पुरुष उत्पन्न हुए, जो अपने-अपने कारणजनित गुणोंसे सम्पन्न थे ।। १०४३

The powerful Brahma, through his threefold Trigunatmaka Tejas (creative energy), gave birth to the fourfold categories of living beings. From the rajas-dominant portion of his virya, the tejas-filled and activity-oriented mobile beings (creatures that move) came into existence in the world.

From the tamas-dominated portion (of Brahma's Tejas), tamasic entities—such as immobile beings like trees and other stationary forms—manifested. The sattvic portion, however, became interwoven into both the rajas and tamas. This sattva guna, which is the essence of light and consciousness (buddhi), is eternal in nature. Furthermore, the entire cosmos—comprising space (akasha) and all elements—is a manifestation of that buddhi, and thus, an expression of that very sattvic essence.

Therefore, O Lord, the sattva guna and the supreme radiance present in all beings have originated from that very Tejas of Brahma

When Brahma's Tejas (creative essence) was offered into the fire as an oblation, three embodied beings (shariradhari purushas) emerged from it. Each of them was endowed with qualities arising from the specific guna (fundamental trait) that had caused their creation.

3. Bizarre Creations of Brahma

📚Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.20.23📚
Lord Brahma then gave birth to the demons from his buttocks, and they were very fond of sex. Because they were too lustful, they approached him for copulation."

📚Shrimad Bhagavatam 3.12.26📚
Lust and desire became manifested from the heart of Brahma, anger from between his eyebrows, greed from between his lips, the power of speaking from his mouth, the ocean from his penis, and low and abominable activities from his anus, the source of all sins."

Refutation–

Coming to Srimad Bhagavatam 3.20.23 nd Brahmanda Purana I.2.8.25 Pandit

Madhvacharya Shastri had explained in his book Purana Digdarshan page 429/788

अर्थात् – ब्रह्मा जी ने अपने जघन भाग से अतीव लोलुप असुरों को उत्पन्न किया, वे लौल्य के कारण उसे ही ग्राम्यधर्म के लिए चाहने लगे । निर्लज्ज असुरों ने घृणापूर्वक हंसते हुए ब्रह्मा जी का पीछा किया और ब्रह्मा जी क्रोधावेश एवं भय से गिर पड़े। तब भक्तों की पीड़ा को हरण करने वाले श्री विष्णु भगवान् की शरण में जाकर ब्रह्माजी ने प्रार्थना की कि हे भगवन् ! आपकी आज्ञा से में प्रजा रच रहा हूँ, परन्तु ये पापिष्ठ असुर मेरा पीछा करते हैं अतः आप रक्षा कीजिए । तब भगवान् का संकेत पाकर ब्रह्मा जी ने अपना वह कलेवर तत्काल छोड़ दिया । जो अनेक वस्त्र और भूषणों से सुसज्जित स्त्री के रूप में असुरों के सामने दीख पड़ने लगा। और वे असुर उसके रूप लावण्य पर लग हो गये। इस प्रकार मूढ़ बुद्धि वाले असुरों ने सायंकाल की संध्या को मदभरी औरत के समान प्रलोभन करती हुई देखकर उसे अपना लिया ।
उपर्युक्त श्राख्यायिका के वैदिक और पौराणिक स्वरूपों की आक्षरिक समता सुस्पष्ट है, अतः कुछ अधिक लिखना व्यर्थ है। इस कथा में 'अन्धकार-विज्ञान' के निरूपण के साथ २ आसुरी वृत्ति का सच्चा चित्र खींचते हुए असुरों की अपने दादा ब्रह्मा जी के साथ जो अत्यन्त निन्दनीय चेष्टा प्रकट की है, न जाने उससे यार लोगों को ब्रह्मा जी के महत्त्व पर क्या शंका हो गई है? यदि कोई नालायक छोकरा अपने बूढ़े दादा का अपमान करने पर तुल जाये तो इससे शास्त्र और संसार की दृष्टि में बेटे की ही महा नीचता व्यक्त होगी दादा की नहीं !
रहा आत्मरक्षा के लिये ब्रह्मा जी का विष्णु से प्रार्थना करना -सो यदि कोई गुण्डा किसी जज साहिब पर आक्रमण करे तो वह पुलिस में ही इसकी शिकायत करेगा क्योंकि मुजरिम को हथकड़ियों में जकड़ना जज का काम नहीं, बल्कि पुलिस इन्चार्ज का काम है। इसका यह अर्थ कदापि नहीं हो सकता कि जो जज अपनी भी आत्मरक्षा नहीं कर सकता और दौड़ा २ पुलिस में इत्तिला देता है वह भला दूसरों की कानून से क्या रक्षा कर सकता है ? इसी प्रकार जगत् की रक्षा का भार श्रीविष्णु भगवान् पर निर्भर है। असुरों द्वारा किसी भी देवी देवता के सताये जाने पर उसकी शिकायत विष्णु भगवान् से ही की जानी चाहिये इसमें

निर्बलता या सबलता का सवाल नहीं, बल्कि अधिकार और प्रबन्ध व्यवस्था का आदर्श है। यह कतिपय पंक्तियें मनुष्य दृष्टि को सामने रखकर लिखी गई हैं, अब इसका वास्तविक भाव समझना चाहिए। ब्रह्मा रूप सूर्य के जघन अधोभाग से अन्धकार रूप असुरगण की उत्पत्ति हुई है। जिस प्रकार वेदशास्त्र में सूर्य के आगे २ उषा का चलना बताया जाता है उसी प्रकार सूर्य के पीछे २ अन्धकार चलता है। अर्थात् जिस २ प्रदेश में सूर्य अस्ताचल को लांघता जाता है वहीं-वहीं अन्धकार का साम्राज्य छा जाता है। यही असुरों का ब्रह्मा जी के पीछे दौड़ने का तात्पर्य है। जब विष्णु रूप नियामक शक्ति के तारतम्य से सूर्य रूप ब्रह्मा अपने अन्धकाराक्रान्त कलेवर को त्याग देता है तब वही सूर्य की उन्मुक्त रश्मियें लालिमा लावण्य से परिपूरत होकर सायं संध्या के रूप में प्रकट हो जाती हैं और अन्धकार क्रमशः उस संध्या को आत्मसात् कर लेता है। यही इस कथा का आलंकारिक तात्पर्य है, जो इस कथा के उपसंहार में मूल में ही श्रीवेदव्यास जी ने 'इति सायंतनीं संध्याम्' आदि श्लोक द्वारा प्रकट कर दिया है।

Meaning: Lord Brahmā created extremely lustful demons from his lower body. Due to their intense craving, they desired even him for base pleasures. Shamelessly, they laughed and chased Brahmā, who, overwhelmed by anger and fear, fell down. Seeking protection, Brahmā approached Lord Viṣṇu—the remover of devotees' suffering—and prayed: "O Lord! I am creating beings by your command, but these sinful demons are pursuing me. Please protect me."

At Lord Viṣṇu's signal, Brahmā immediately abandoned that form. The discarded body appeared before the demons as a woman adorned with many garments and ornaments. The demons, captivated by her beauty, became infatuated. Thus, the foolish demons mistook the evening twilight (sāyaṁ sandhyā)—which appeared like a seductive woman—for an object of desire and embraced it.

The Vedic and Purāṇic versions of this story are clearly aligned, so further elaboration is unnecessary. This tale not only illustrates the concept of "darkness-science" (andhakāra-vijñāna) but also paints a vivid picture of demonic tendencies. The disgraceful behavior of the demons toward their grandfather Brahmā should not cast doubt on Brahmā's greatness. If a worthless grandson insults his elderly grandfather, it reflects the grandson's depravity—not the grandfather's dignity.

As for Brahmā seeking protection from Viṣṇu—it's like a judge being attacked by a criminal and reporting it to the police. Arresting criminals isn't the judge's job; it's the police's responsibility. This doesn't mean the judge is weak or incapable of upholding the law. Similarly, the protection of the universe rests with Lord Viṣṇu. When any deity is troubled by demons, it is proper to appeal to Viṣṇu—not a matter of strength, but of divine roles and cosmic order.

These lines are written from a human perspective, but the deeper meaning must be understood. The demons, born from the lower part of Brahmā (symbolizing the sun), represent darkness. Just as the Vedas describe dawn (uṣā) preceding the sun, darkness follows it. Wherever the sun sets, darkness spreads—this is the symbolic meaning of the demons chasing Brahmā.

When, through the regulating power of Viṣṇu, Brahmā (as the sun) discards his darkness-covered form, the liberated rays of the sun emerge as the beautiful evening twilight (sāyaṁ sandhyā). The demons then absorb this twilight, mistaking it for a seductive woman. This is the allegorical essence of the story, which Sage Vyāsa himself reveals in the concluding verse: "iti sāyaṁtanīṁ sandhyām."

असुरों का ब्रह्मा से बलात्कार

३ कई मित्र जिनमें ब्रह्मा के चरित्र पर तीसरा आक्षेप यह भी किया जाता है कि—ब्रह्मा ने असुरों को बनाया, असुर लोग ब्रह्मा का रूप देखकर मोहित हो गये और अपनी पाप वासना मिटाने के लिए ब्रह्मा के ऊपर चढ़ गये तथा ... करना प्रारम्भ किया। तत्पश्चात् ब्रह्मा भाग कर विष्णु की शरण में आ गया और विष्णु जी के कहने से उस अशुद्ध शरीर को छोड़ दिया। यह लीला अत्यन्त अश्लील है, तथा ब्रह्मा की निर्लज्जता की द्योतक है।

अर्थात्—ब्रह्मा जी ने अपने जघन भाग से अतीव लोलुप असुरों को

उत्पन्न किया, वे लोभ के कारण उसे ही [illegible] के लिए दौड़ने लगे। निर्लज्ज असुरों ने धृष्टतापूर्वक हँसते हुए ब्रह्मा जी का पीछा किया और ब्रह्मा जी क्रोध;भूख एवं भय से घिर गये। तब भक्तों की पीड़ा को हरण करने वाले श्री विष्णु भगवान् की शरण में जाकर ब्रह्माजी ने प्रार्थना की कि हे भगवन्! आपकी आज्ञा से मैं प्रजा रच रहा हूँ, परन्तु ये पापिष्ठ असुर मेरा पीछा करते हैं अतः आप रक्षा कीजिए। तब भगवान् का संकेत पाकर ब्रह्मा जी ने अपना वह कलेवर तत्काल छोड़ दिया। जो अनेक वस्त्र और भूषणों से सुसज्जित स्त्री के रूप में असुरों के सामने [illegible] चलने लगा। और वे असुर उसके रूप लावण्य पर लट्टू हो गये। इस प्रकार मूढ़ बुद्धि वाले असुरों ने सायंकाल की संध्या को मदभरी औरत के समान अठखेलियां करती हुई देखकर उसे अपना लिया।

उपर्युक्त आख्यायिका के वैदिक और पौराणिक रहस्यों की आधारिक समता सुस्पष्ट है, अतः कुछ अधिक लिखना व्यर्थ है। इस [illegible] में 'अन्धकार-विज्ञान' के [illegible] आसुरी वृत्ति का सच्चा चित्र खींचते हुए असुरों की अपने दादा ब्रह्मा जी के साथ भी [illegible] निन्दनीय चेष्टा प्रकट की है, न जाने उसके बाद लोगों की ब्रह्मा जी के महत्त्व पर क्या शंका हो गई है? यदि कोई नालायक छोकरा अपने बूढ़े दादा का अपमान करने पर तुल जाये तो इससे समाज और संसार की दृष्टि में बेटे की ही महा नीचता व्यक्त होगी दादा की नहीं!

रक्षा आत्मरक्षा के लिये ब्रह्मा जी का विष्णु से प्रार्थना करना—जो यदि कोई गुण्डा किसी भद्र व्यक्ति पर आक्रमण करे तो वह पुलिस में ही इसकी शिकायत करेगा; क्योंकि गुण्डों की हाथापाइयों में [illegible] का काम नहीं, बल्कि पुलिस इन्सपेक्टर का काम है। इसका यह अर्थ कदापि नहीं हो सकता कि जो भद्र अपनी भी आत्मरक्षा नहीं कर सकता

और होता २ पुलिस में रिपोर्ट देता है वह भला दूसरों की कानून से क्या रक्षा कर सकता है? इसी प्रकार जगत् की रक्षा का भार श्री विष्णु भगवान् पर निर्भर है। असुरों द्वारा किसी भी देवी देवता के सताये जाने पर उनकी शिकायत विष्णु भगवान् से ही की जानी चाहिये इसमें निर्बलता या मजबूरी का सवाल नहीं, बल्कि अधिकार और उत्तम व्यवस्था का आदर्श है। यह कतिपय पंक्तियाँ प्रमुख दृष्टि को सामने रखकर लिखी गई हैं, अब इसका वास्तविक भाव समझना चाहिए।

ब्रह्मा रूप सूर्य के जघन = अधोभाग से अन्धकार रूप असुरगण की उत्पत्ति हुई है। जिस प्रकार वेदशास्त्र में सूर्य के आगे २ उषा का चलना बताया जाता है उसी प्रकार सूर्य के पीछे २ अन्धकार चलता है। अर्थात्—जिस २ प्रदेश से सूर्य अस्ताचल को चला जाता है वहीं-वहीं अन्धकार का साम्राज्य छा जाता है। यही असुरों का ब्रह्मा जी के पीछे दौड़ने का तात्पर्य है। जब विष्णु रूप नियामक शक्ति के तारतम्य से सूर्य रूप ब्रह्मा अपने अन्धकाराक्रान्त कलेवर को त्याग देता है तब वही सूर्य की ताम्र रश्मियाँ कालिमा-लालिमा से परिपूरित होकर सायं संध्या के रूप में प्रकट हो जाती हैं और अन्धकार क्रमशः उस संध्या को आत्मसात् कर लेता है। यही इस कथा का आलंकारिक तात्पर्य है, जो इस कथा के उपसंहार में मूल में ही श्रीवेदव्यास जी ने 'इति तामसानि संध्याम्' आदि श्लोक द्वारा प्रकट कर दिया है।

THE TRUE CHARACTER OF BRAHMA JI FROM SRIMAD BHAGAVATAM

Brahma Ji is the master of all his senses, never speaks falsehood, never strays from the righteous path, and remains ever devoted to penance and austerities.

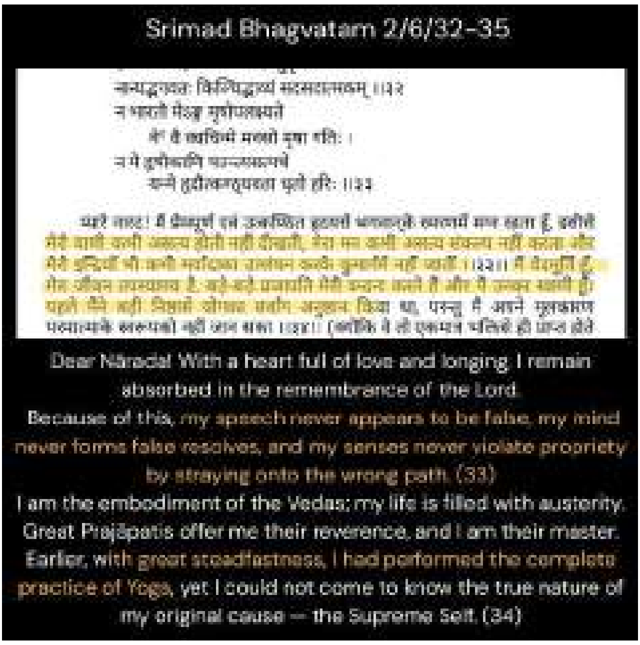
Srimad Bhagvatam 2/6/32-35

प्यारे नारद ! मैं प्रेमपूर्ण एवं उत्कण्ठित हृदयसे भगवान्‌के स्मरणमें मग्न रहता हूँ, इसीसे मेरी वाणी कभी असत्य होती नहीं दीखती, मेरा मन कभी असत्य संकल्प नहीं करता और मेरी इन्द्रियाँ भी कभी मर्यादाका उल्लंघन करके कुमार्गमें नहीं जातीं ।। ३३ ।। मैं वेदमूर्ति हूँ, मेरा जीवन तपस्यामय है, बड़े-बड़े प्रजापति मेरी वन्दना करते हैं और मैं उनका स्वामी पहले मैंने बड़ी निष्ठासे योगका सर्वांग अनुष्ठान किया था

Dear Nārada! With a heart full of love and longing, I remain absorbed in the remembrance of the Lord.
Because of this, my speech never appears to be false, my mind never forms false resolves, and my senses never violate propriety by straying onto the wrong path. (33)
I am the embodiment of the Vedas; my life is filled with austerity.
Great Prajāpatis offer me their reverence, and I am their master.
Earlier, with great steadfastness, I had performed the complete practice of Yoga, yet I could not come to know the true nature of my original cause the Supreme Self. (34)



Srimad Bhagvatam 2/9/3-8 Geeta Press Gorakhpur

ब्रह्माजीकी निष्कपट तपस्यासे प्रसन्न होकर भगवान्ने उन्हें अपने रूपका दर्शन कराया और आत्म-तत्त्वके ज्ञानके लिये उन्हें परम सत्य परमार्थ वस्तुका उपदेश किया (वही बात मैं तुम्हें सुनाता हूँ) ।।४।।
तीनों लोकोंके परम गुरु आदिदेव ब्रह्माजी अपने जन्मस्थान कमलपर बैठकर सृष्टि करनेकी इच्छासे विचार करने लगे . ब्रह्माजी तपस्वियोंमें सबसे बड़े तपस्वी हैं। उनका ज्ञान अमोघ है। उन्होंने उस समय एक सहस्र दिव्य वर्षपर्यन्त एकाग्र चित्तसे अपने प्राण, मन, कर्मेन्द्रिय और ज्ञानेन्द्रियोंको वशमें करके ऐसी तपस्या की, जिससे वे समस्त लोकोंको प्रकाशित करनेमें समर्थ हो सके ।।८।।

Pleased with Brahmā's sincere and guileless austerity, the Lord granted him a vision of His own form and instructed him in the Supreme Truth – the ultimate reality so that he might gain knowledge of the Self. (4)
The supreme preceptor of the three worlds, the primordial deity Brahmā, seated upon the lotus – his place of birth – began to contemplate with the desire to create the universe.
Brahmā is the greatest of all ascetics. His knowledge is unfailing. At that time, for a thousand divine years, with a concentrated mind, he brought his life-breath, mind, organs of action, and organs of perception under control, performing such austerity that he became capable of illuminating all the worlds. (8)

Srimad Bhagvatam 3/9/34-37 Geeta Press Gorakhpur

ब्रह्माजी ! नाना प्रकारके कर्मसंस्कारोंके अनुसार अनेक प्रकारकी जीवसृष्टिको रचनेकी इच्छा होनेपर भी तुम्हारा चित्त मोहित नहीं होता, यह मेरी अतिशय कृपाका ही फल है ।।३४।। तुम सबसे पहले मन्त्रद्रष्टा हो। प्रजा उत्पन्न करते समय भी तुम्हारा मन मुझमें ही लगा रहता है, इसीसे पापमय रजोगुण तुमको बाँध नहीं पाता ।।३५।। तुम मुझे भूत, इन्द्रिय, गुण और अन्तःकरणसे रहित समझते हो; इससे जान पड़ता है कि यद्यपि देहधारी जीवोंको मेरा ज्ञान होना बहुत कठिन है, तथापि तुमने मुझे जान लिया है ।।३६।। 'मेरा आश्रय कोई है या नहीं' इस सन्देहसे तुम कमलनालके द्वारा जलमें उसका मूल खोज रहे थे, सो मैंने तुम्हें अपना यह स्वरूप अन्तःकरणमें ही दिखलाया है ।।३७।।
O Brahmā! Even though, according to various karmic impressions, you have the desire to create many kinds of living beings, your mind is not deluded this is solely the result of My supreme grace. (34)

You are the very first seer of the mantras. Even while producing the creation, your mind remains fixed on Me; therefore, the sinful quality of rajas cannot bind you. (35)
You understand Me to be devoid of elements, senses, qualities, and the inner organ (mind); this shows that, although it is extremely difficult for embodied beings to know Me, you have indeed realized Me. (36)
When you wondered, “Do I have a source or not?” and searched for its root in the water through the stalk of the lotus, I revealed this very form of Mine to you within your own heart. (37)

ब्रह्मचर्य का पालन करने वाला पुरुष दीप्ति वाले वेदरूपी ब्रह्म को धारण करता है. उस वेद से सभी देव संबंधित हैं. देवों का निवास बना हुआ ब्रह्मचारी प्राण और अपान के बाद ज्ञान को, मन, वाणी, हृदय और मेधा को उत्पन्न करता है

A man who practices Brahmacharya attains the Brahm in the form of the Veda which is full of light. All the Devas are related to that Veda. Brahmacharya is the abode of the Devas it produces knowledge, mind, speech, heart and intelligence after Prana and Apan.

Satapatha Brahmana 2/1/3/4 says अपहतपाप्मानो देवा अप पाप्मानं हतेऽमृता देवा नामृतत्वस्याशास्ति। that is Devas do not do any sinful activity and Devas attained immortality by destroying Sins

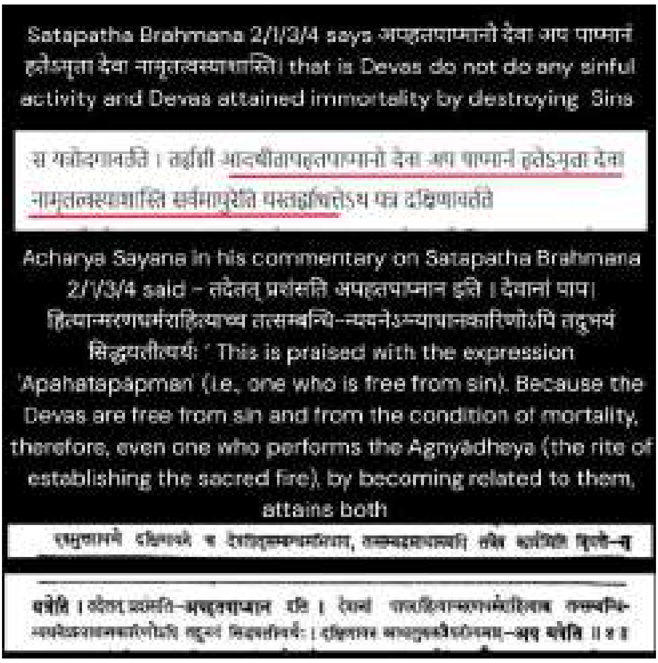
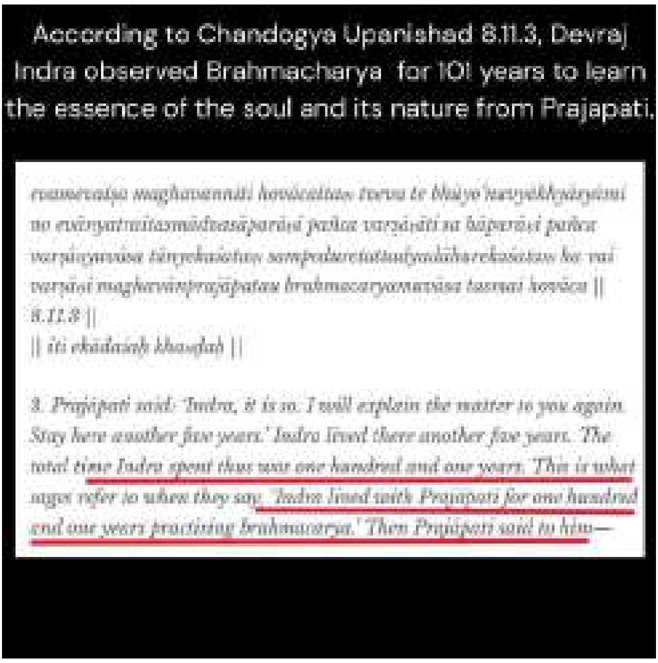
Acharya Sayana in his commentary on Satapatha Brahmana 2/1/3/4 said – तदेतत् प्रशंसति अपहतपाप्मान इति । देवानां पाप। हित्यान्मरणधर्मराहित्याच्च तत्सम्बन्धि-न्ययनेऽग्न्याधानकारिणोऽपि तदुभयं सिद्ध्यतीत्यर्थः ' This is praised with the expression 'Apahatapāpman' (i.e., one who is free from sin). Because the Devas are free from sin and from the condition of mortality, therefore, even one who performs the Agnyādheya (the rite of establishing the sacred fire), by becoming related to them, attains both



According to Chandogya Upanishad 8.11.3, Devraj Indra observed Brahmacharya for 101 years to learn the essence of the soul and its nature from Prajapati.

Prajāpati said: 'Indra, it is so. I will explain the matter to you again. Stay here another five years.' Indra lived there another five years. The total time Indra spent thus was one hundred and one years. This is what sages refer to when they say, 'Indra lived with Prajāpati for one hundred and one years practising brahmacarya.' Then Prajapati said to him-



Garuda Purana Chapter 94 says that One who follows Brahmacharya should subjugate his senses and eat only one type of food except in times of distress and He must avoid eating honey, meat, wine and any impure substances.

ब्रह्मचार्य्यास्थितो ब्राह्मण काममश्नीयाच्छ्राद्धे व्रतमपीडयन् ॥ १८॥
A Brāhmaṇa who has subjugated his senses, and leads the life of a Brahmacārin, is at liberty to take a full meal of boiled rice on the occasion of a Śrāddha ceremony, without incurring the risk of breaking his vow of asceticism.
मधु मांसं तथा स्विन्नमित्यादि परिवर्जयेत्।। स गुरुर्यः क्रियाः कृत्वा वेदमस्मै प्रयच्छति ॥ १९॥
A Brahmaṇa shall forego the use of wine, meat, curdled milk and its preparations. He is the Guru, who having initiated the pupil into the mysteries of spiritualism, makes him conversant with the knowledge of the Vedas.

Sex occurs in 8 ways – thinking, discussing, dalliance, looking, secret talks, decision, attempt & intercourse. Brahmchārī should avoid all – Dakhsa Samhita chapter 7

ब्रह्मचर्य की सदा रक्षा करे । मैथुन अपने आप में आठ प्रकार का है।
स्त्री का स्मरण करना, उसकी चर्चा करना, उसके साथ क्रीडा करना, उसे देखते रहना, उसके साथ छुप कर बातें करना, उसके साथ संभोग का विचार करना, उसके साथ संभोग के लिये प्रयास करना, और संभोग के कार्य को निष्पन्न करना – विचारक लोग यह आठ प्रकार का मैथुन बताते हैं ।

[A Yogin] should always preserve his Brahma-charyya [celibacy]. Sexual intercourse is of eight sorts:-vis, thinking of a woman, talking [about it], dalliance with a woman, looking at a woman with an impure desire), speaking to her secretly, determination [for holding a sexual congress), persistent endeavour [for doing it) and the actual deed. The learned hold that these are the eight divisions of sexual inter-course. (31-32).

[A Yogin] should always preserve his Brahmacharyya [celibacy]. Sexual intercourse is of eight sorts:—viz., thinking of a woman, talking [about it], dalliance with a woman, looking [at a woman with an impure desire], speaking to her secretly, determination [for holding a sexual congress], persistent endeavour [for doing it] and the actual deed. This should never be thought or spoken of, nor should it ever be done. One, who has mastered all these propensities, is a Yatin, and none else. (33)

All these Rules and Restrictions like behaving free from sin , Non-violence, celibacy, truth, simplicity, absence of anger, renunciation of fault-finding, restraint of the senses and not to gossip and keeping senses under control and behaving friendly with everyone, forgiving and avoiding intoxicants, meat, perfumes, garlands, and pleasurable foods, as well as all fermented substances and violence towards living beings and avoiding contact with Parstree are part of Brahmacharya and practiced by all Devas including Devraj Indra as part of their vow of Brahmacharya which gives them their powers and Devatva

Atharva Veda Brahmacharya Sukta 11/7 – ब्रह्मचर्य रूपी तप के द्वारा देवों ने मृत्यु का हनन कर दिया अर्थात् देव अमर हो गए. इंद्र ने ब्रह्मचर्य के द्वारा देवों के लिए स्वर्ग पर अधिकार किया . Through the penance of Brahmacharya , the Devas defeated death, that is, the Devas became immortal. Indra took control of Swarga for the Devas through Brahmacharya.

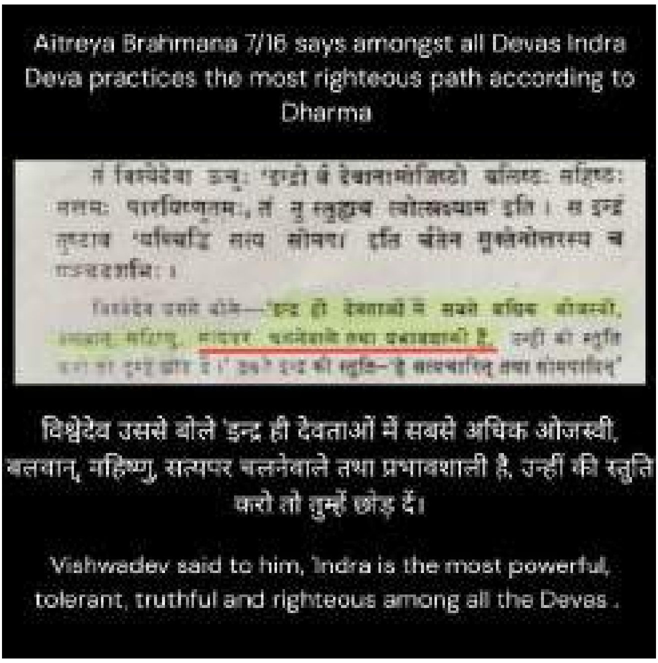
Aitreya Brahmana 7/16 says amongst all Devas Indra Deva practices the most righteous path according to Dharma

विश्वेदेव उससे बोले 'इन्द्र ही देवताओं में सबसे अधिक ओजस्वी, बलवान्, महिष्णु, सत्यपर चलनेवाले तथा प्रभावशाली है, उन्हीं की स्तुति करो तो तुम्हें छोड़ दें।

Vishwadev said to him, 'Indra is the most powerful, tolerant, truthful and righteous among all the Devas .



These pramans must be enough to prove that Indra Deva cannot be lusty or adulterous with other men wives or commit any unrighteous act because that will violate his Brahmacharya path and path of righteousness make him fall from the Indrapad and take away his immortality and powers

Next there is a small confusion on Indra in Vedic Mantras and Indra in Itihasaas . If Indra is a Devta created by Ishwar then why is Indra Described Supreme in Various places in Rig Veda and other Vedic Mantras

Who is the real self of Indrā, Mitrā, Varunā etc Dieties of Vedas? Shatapatha Brahmana 6.1.1.5 says that ~ This same vital air in the midst doubtless is Indra. He, by his power, kindled those (other) vital airs from the midst; and inasmuch as he kindled (indh), he is the kindler (indha): the kindler Indeed,– him they call 'Indra' mystically (esoterically), for the gods love the mystic.

Hence the name "Indra" is nothing more than an etymological name Given to the Supreme Brahm Narayana. Then comes the Rig Veda which clearly says all names denote supreme brahman now I am going to narrate the story of Rambha to you, Rambha was born in the land of Bharata as daughter of Sucandara..the king Sucandara gave away his daughter in marriage to Janamejaya along with several riches… The king enjoyed her company at several places. Once the king started and Asvamedha sacrifice. At that point of time Indra stole away the sacrificial horse and concealed himself in the royal palaces. Thinking that the Sacrificial horse would be quite beautiful she went to the stable alone playfully. On reaching the horse, Indra appeared on the scene and forcibly. enjoyed her company. He had sex with her in spite of her objecting to it. After the performance, Indra was fainted and he lost the senses about the day or night. The beautiful ladies coming in touch with Indra ended her life and Indra getting terrified from the king went back to the heaven.”

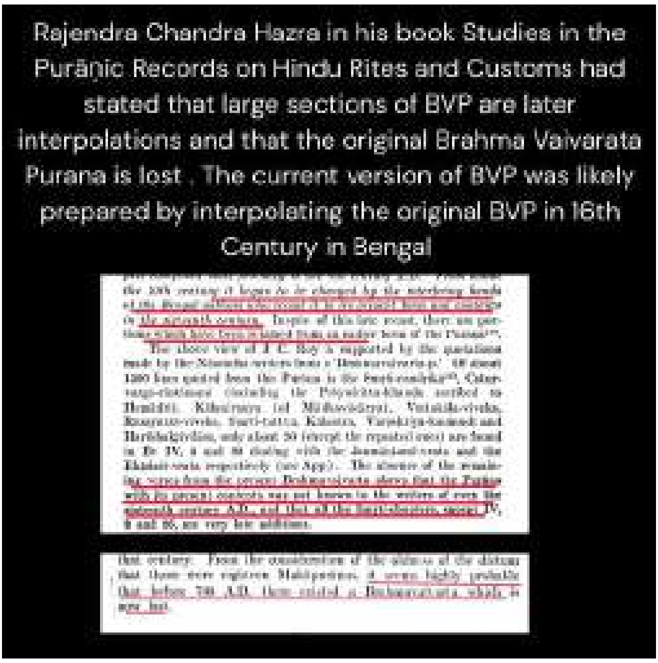
Refutation-

Rajendra Chandra Hazra in his book Studies in the Purāṇic Records on Hindu Rites and Customs had stated that large sections of BVP are later interpolations and that the original Brahma Vaivarata Purana is lost. The current version of BVP was likely prepared by interpolating the original BVP in 16th Century ı Bengal.



Archaelogical survey of India prepared a critical edition of Brahma Vaivarat Purana based on the different manuscripts found all over India and prepared a critical edition in which they removed all those interpolated chapters and portions. I am providing the link of Critical edition Brahma Vaivarata Purana Volume 1 and 2 translated by Ram Sharma Acharya QR code provided here

The question, both in the tradition and in modern scholarship, whether the Devībhāgavata° or the Vaiṣṇava Bhāgavata° is the true and original Śrīmad-bhāgavata° has been discussed under the Bhāgavata°. It should be noted in this connection that the term Devībhāgavata° appears only in the chapter colophons, and in the text of the last two skandhas; elsewhere in the text the purāṇa refers to itself either as Bhāgavata° or Śrīmadbhāgavata°, once as Satī° (1.3.41). The text also repeatedly refers to itself as "the best of purāṇas" (purāṇottama), and declares that "there are many other purāṇas devoted to Hari and Rudra, but they are not worth one-sixteenth part of this Devībhāgavata" (12.13.25–26).

Hazra[174] sees arguments both for the Devībhāgavata° having been composed in Bengal and outside Bengal. He therefore concludes that "the author of the Devī-bhāgavata was a Smārta Śākta Brahmin of Bengal and . . . he migrated to Benares (probably because it was the best place of residence for a Devī-worshipper), lived there for a long time, and then wrote the Devī-bhāgavata."

Ramachandran[175] dated the Devībhāgavata° "not later than the 6th century A.D.," based on his belief that the story of the penance of Nara and Nārāyaṇa, as related in the fourth skandha, inspired the relief in the Gupta temple at Deogarh. His arguments did not find acceptance with other scholars,[176] and, in general, the text has been dated much later. Farquhar[177] assigned it to his A.D. 900–1350 period. Hazra[178] narrowed the period down to "the eleventh or twelfth century A.D." Lalye[179] proposes a gradual growth of the text, through five different stages which cannot be dated separately; in any case the final stage must have been reached in the eleventh century.
